I was dismayed to hear that cineworld may be forced to sell Picturehouse in Bury St Edmunds. We had not been to the pictures for over 15 years until we discovered Picturehouse when we moved to Bury. It is a great small cinema, very friendly, lovely atmosphere, the majority of customers are older people and therefore there are no noisy youngsters to spoil the film. I think it would be very wrong of you to make this cinema close. If that happens we will certainly not go to the big complex cinema in Bury. The last time we went to a big cinema complex about 15 years ago we had to leave after 30 minutes as the soundtrack was so loud, presumably to overcome the noisy youngsters who could not sit quietly and watch a film, it gave us both a headache. If you destroy the small Picturehouse cinema in Bury we will not go to the pictures again.

Leave this perfect small cinema alone
