IV.5711. Jack Lunn and Caddick each accepted an invitation to tender for the contract for a residential development at Napier Street, Sheffield. However, SB of Jack Lunn stated 'when we received the tender documents it was extremely onerous, difficult method of construction and a very expensive method of construction. We'd never worked with the architect before, we'd never worked with the structural engineer before, and as a result of other opportunities coming into the estimating department, we decided very early on, despite us pushing for it, it wasn't really a job for ourselves'.

IV.5712. Caddick completed the estimating process for the tender for this contract and it appears that it submitted a bid with the hope of winning the work. This is shown by the price submitted by Caddick being the lowest received and the fact it won the contract.

IV.5713. Both AM and SB of Jack Lunn confirmed that Jack Lunn received a cover price from MM at Caddick. Once the tenders had been received by the client on 25 October 2004, the two lowest tenderers, Caddick and Jack Lunn, were each asked by the client to submit their contract sum analysis. At this point, according to SB of Jack Lunn, 'We had to get further help off Caddicks to make it appear to the client that we had actually created a bona fide tender'.

IV.5714. The OFT understands that Jack Lunn decided to seek information from Caddick in order to provide the client with a contract sum analysis for the project. A contemporaneous email found at Jack Lunn shows that MM of

⁷⁴²⁹ Written representations of Caddick, 24 June 2008, paragraph 29(b).

Caddick, sent an email to AM of Jack Lunn, on 1 November 2004, regarding the Napier Street tender. Attached to this email was a 'Tender Summary' ending with Jack Lunn's tender figure, '6,169,422', and including a breakdown of figures.

IV.5715. This contemporaneous evidence shows that MM of Caddick supplied AM of Jack Lunn with a contract sum analysis, with the figures adjusted to reflect the cover figure given by Caddick to Jack Lunn. The OFT considers in the light of the contemporaneous evidence from Jack Lunn, in addition to SB and AM's admissions and explanations of that contemporaneous evidence, that Caddick supplied Jack Lunn with a cover price for this tender and in addition provided Jack Lunn with additional pricing information in the form of a contract sum analysis.

IV.5716. Both companies have admitted to bid rigging in relation to this tender. The OFT notes that Caddick admitted that the party with whom it engaged in bid rigging was Jack Lunn, without being shown the OFT's evidence that Jack Lunn was involved. This provides additional independent corroboration of the OFT's evidence in respect of this tender.

IV.5717. The OFT also notes that the tender submitted by Jack Lunn was higher than the tender submitted by Caddick, the pattern consistent with a cover price having been provided. The OFT further notes that Caddick was the only party to submit a tender bid below Jack Lunn's tender bid, and that Jack Lunn could therefore only have obtained a cover price from Caddick for this tender.

IV.5718. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between Jack Lunn and Caddick. The OFT also concludes that Caddick supplied a figure to Jack Lunn for a cover bid.

IV.5719. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.5695 to IV.5718 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.⁷⁴³⁰ In particular:

- (a) the provision of a figure for a cover bid from Caddick to Jack Lunn was not unilateral⁷⁴³¹, and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;⁷⁴³²
- (b) Jack Lunn can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from Caddick (i.e. the cover price) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process;⁷⁴³³ and
- (c) Caddick can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from Jack Lunn (i.e. that Jack Lunn did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its conduct in the tendering process.⁷⁴³⁴

had the object of bid rigging in relation to the tender for a residential development at Napier Street, Sheffield, tender deadline 25 October 2004.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.5721. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.5722. In respect of this tender, the OFT became aware of bid rigging activities by virtue of the information obtained during the visit under section 28 to Jack Lunn on 21 March 2006. Jack Lunn will not therefore receive 100 per cent immunity in respect of this tender. However, Jack Lunn will receive its normal leniency percentage reduction from the fine that the OFT is imposing in respect of this tender.

Infringement 206: Incubator Office Units, Colburn – 26 October 2004
Client: Richmondshire Council
Parties: Bluestone and Wright (Hull)

IV.5723. On 29 September 2004, Richmondshire Council, through its consultants Turner & Townsend, sought tenders for construction of Incubator Office Units at Colburn. The following five companies were invited to tender: Bluestone, Wright (Hull), Walter Thompson, W Birch and Randell Orchard. The deadline for the receipt of tenders was noon on 26 October 2004.⁷⁴³⁵

IV.5724. Richmondshire Council received the following tender returns:⁷⁴³⁶

Company	Date and time tender received	Amount of tender	Awarded contract
Bluestone	26 October 2004 at noon	£1,260,744	Yes
Wright (Hull)	26 October 2004 at noon	£1,399,535
Walter Thompson	26 October 2004 at noon	£1,614,190
W Birch	26 October 2004 at noon	£1,620,087
Randell Orchard	26 October 2004 at noon	£1,637,271

Evidence of agreement and/or concerted practice

Contemporaneous documentary evidence from leniency applicant Bluestone – Tender Summary Sheet, Tender list, emails and handwritten notes

IV.5725. During the OFT's inspection at Bluestone's premises in Leeds, a Tender Summary Sheet under the main heading 'Bluestone plc Tender Finalisation Sheets', was found for this tender.⁷⁴³⁷ This contained the following entry:

⁷⁴³⁵ Information from client, OFT Document Reference 13266.

⁷⁴³⁶ Information from client, OFT Document Reference 13266.

⁷⁴³⁷ Tender Summary Sheet, OFT Document Reference B0308.

PROJECT :- Incubator Office Units – Colburn'

IV.5726. The version of the Tender Summary Sheet mentioned in the paragraph above, recorded a provisional tender sum and contract figure of £1,280,064 and margin of 7.59%. As part of its leniency application, Bluestone provided two further versions of the Tender Summary Sheet. The first of these sheets recorded the same tender and competition details as above, however, the letter 'A' does not appear in the entry marked 'Revision'. This Tender Summary Sheet recorded a provisional tender sum of £1,286,257 and margin of 6.00%.⁷⁴³⁸ A third version of the Tender Summary Sheet, provided in Bluestone's leniency application, again recorded the same tender and competition details as in the paragraph above. This Tender Summary Sheet recorded a provisional tender sum and bid figure of £1,260,744 and margin of 6.00%.⁷⁴³⁹

IV.5727. Also found at Bluestone's premises during the OFT's inspection, was a spreadsheet of tenders, marked 'Results for 2004', which contained the following entry:⁷⁴⁴⁰

Post Date Month MTH REF	LOCATION	PROJECT	CLIENT	RESULT

IV.5728. During the OFT's inspection at Bluestone's premises, an email communication was found. The email was dated and timed 27 October 2004 at 17:46, sent from Philip Dyer ('PD') of Wright (Hull) to David Williamson ('DW') of Bluestone.⁷⁴⁴¹ The subject of the email was 'FW: 27.10.04 Letter with clarifications Colburn Digital Cluster' and contained the message 'David for your records faxed e-mailed and posted to T & T Phil'.

IV.5729. This email enclosed the contents of a separate email dated and timed 27 October 2007 at 17:44, sent from PD of Wright (Hull) to Joseph Freeman of Turner & Townsend. The enclosed email lists a total of 15 points of clarification on the subject of the tender for 'Colburn – Digital Cluster'.

IV.5730. A page of handwritten notes was also found during the OFT's inspection of Bluestone's office at Leeds, as follows:⁷⁴⁴²

Evidence from leniency applicant Bluestone

IV.5731. As part of its leniency application, Bluestone provided a general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.204 to IV.228 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.5732. Bluestone compiled a spreadsheet entitled 'Table A - Definite instances of cover pricing'. On pages 16 to 17 of the spreadsheet is the following entry:⁷⁴⁴⁴

⁷⁴⁴³ Handwritten note, OFT Document Reference B0342. In addition, there is a handwritten arrow, pointing from the letters 'PQS' to the word 'told'.

			Wrights may have come back to Bluestone for a breakdown of the cover price. Wrights asked if there were any qualifications it should be made aware of for its covered bid.

IV.5733. Following the issue of the Statement, Bluestone did not submit any written or oral representations specifically in respect of this Infringement.

Witness evidence from leniency applicant Bluestone

IV.5734. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, Bluestone's employees provided further general explanation of its participation in and recording of cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.204 to IV.228 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.5735. Pre-Construction Manager DW, Director Michael Hesp ('MH') and senior estimator David Smith ('DS') were interviewed and provided accounts of their recall of this tender and explanations of the documents listed in the above paragraphs.

IV.5736. In interview, DW confirmed the tender deadline date and said 'we received a phone call one day from Wright's asking if we would help them out with a cover price because they were not interested in tendering for the project'. He confirmed that the telephone call was made directly to Bluestone by PD of Wright (Hull).⁷⁴⁴⁵

⁷⁴⁴⁵ Interview transcript, OFT Document Reference 12674, page 9.

IV.5737. Referring to the subsequent email exchange between himself and PD, DW said 'I would imagine that we probably had to put in, looking at this, a detailed cost breakdown and tender information. He would have had to put in supporting information in written form to corroborate his bid, to make it look legitimate'. DW added 'it may well have been a telephone conversation to me and it looks like he's e-mailed that to me presumably just to make us aware of what he's done...I think he was probably trying to be helpful'.⁷⁴⁴⁶

IV.5738. DW also referred to the manuscript notes, which he agreed were in his handwriting. DW explained that the notes contained his instructions to PD of Wright (Hull) to 'make a note in their tender...he's been asked questions by the employer's agent and these are his answers to those questions...as we'd given him a cover, so that he can answer the right answers. So that he wouldn't be pursued any further'.⁷⁴⁴⁷ DW added 'unwittingly their price was second even though they took a cover from us. Wright's didn't want the job...By being second it meant that if the client was not happy with Bluestone's offer then they might win the project and they don't want to do it'.⁷⁴⁴⁸ DW confirmed that he provided the cover figure of £1,399,535 to Wright (Hull) and that the letter 'C' in brackets on the Tender Summary Sheet 'means cover' and that it was likely that the entry was made by the designated estimator DS.⁷⁴⁴⁹

IV.5739. Director MH recalled that Bluestone provided a genuine price to the client and that it won the tender exercise and completed the contract. He said that he was 'aware that we were giving a cover'.⁷⁴⁵⁰ Referring to the entry of the letter 'C' in brackets next to the word 'Wrights' on the Tender Summary Sheet, MH said 'at the top of the page was the name of the contractors, and Wrights and the estimator slipped up here and actually written on the form that we were giving a cover'.⁷⁴⁵¹ MH also recalled that a cover price had been given to Wright (Hull) and that pre-construction manager DW 'dealt with the cover' and that Bluestone's tender had been prepared by senior estimator DS. He confirmed that the letter 'C' shows 'that we have given Wrights...or at the point in time, Wrights asked us for a cover and we were going to give them one'.⁷⁴⁵²

IV.5740. Referring to the email exchange between DW and PD of Wright (Hull), MH said that although he wasn't aware of the content at the time, he could explain the circumstances. He said 'when you're bidding a job, and we clearly were here...and there's a phrase, call in your bills, the client will ring up and ask for more details, because obviously it's not enough, that part, you just bang in a figure, that he's going to use as a comparison to try and look at the other, we subsequently had the called back from Wrights saying can we help them out with some breakdown, which is a strong inference that...Wright's has become the second placed man, when you tend to think, oh right, what have we done wrong then, because there's nobody in-between, we were obviously too cheap, or it just sends that shockwave through you, bloody hell, we could have put some more money on that job...we subsequently went on to do the job and made money, but it...does send that cold shiver down you...having helped somebody out with a price, if somebody asked for a bit of a breakdown, we would give them a bit of a breakdown, because that's a devil if you like, you're sat down with a number and don't have a clue what it is'.⁷⁴⁵³

IV.5741. MH confirmed that the information provided to the client's representatives in the email suggested to him that 'obviously there was conversation, correspondence...between the two guys, where we were trying to give him a little bit more information to help him out with certain embarrassing questions the guy were being asked'.⁷⁴⁵⁴ MH also confirmed that the information about the tender contained within the email from Wright (Hull) to Turner & Townsend, would have been obtained from Bluestone.⁷⁴⁵⁵

IV.5742. Senior estimator DS confirmed that he prepared Bluestone's internal documentation before submitting a bid to the client. He could not recall the amount of Bluestone's bid but explained differences in tendered amounts on Tender Summary Sheets as follows: 'we go through a process whereby if there are post tender negotiations...we amend the tender book to show the agreed contract figure. So it will be an internal...process, getting from the submitted tender figure to the actual contract figure which took account of post tender negotiations'.⁷⁴⁵⁶ DS confirmed that the letter 'C' in brackets shows a cover price had been given to Wright (Hull) and the entry would have been made by him at the time.⁷⁴⁵⁷

Evidence from other companies – Wright (Hull)

IV.5743. The OFT wrote to Wright (Hull) on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that Wright (Hull) had participated in bid rigging on this tender. In response, Wright (Hull), through its legal representatives, wrote to the OFT⁷⁴⁵⁸ and admitted 'We engaged in bid rigging activities on this tender but cannot recall details of the other party/parties involved'.⁷⁴⁵⁹

IV.5744. The OFT subsequently wrote to Wright (Hull)'s ultimate parent company at the time of this Infringement, T Wright Holdings, on 5 November 2007, asking it to comment on Wright (Hull)'s response to the OFT's Fast Track Offer, given that the OFT intended to hold T Wright Holdings jointly and severally liable for any infringements committed by Wright (Hull) in respect of which the OFT ultimately decided to impose financial penalties. In response to this letter, T Wright Holdings said 'We have been made fully aware of the situation by our subsidiary and at this stage have no further comment to make'.⁷⁴⁶⁰

IV.5745. Wright (Hull), confirmed in its response to the Statement that Wright (Hull) '...has admitted, and continues to admit, to having sought or offered a cover price in respect of the three Alleged Infringements...[and]...that its involvement in each of the three Alleged Infringements constituted a breach of the Chapter I prohibition.⁷⁴⁶¹

The OFT's analysis of the evidence and finding

IV.5747. Bluestone and Wright (Hull) each accepted an invitation to tender for Incubator Office Units, Colburn.

IV.5748. Wright (Hull) was unable to submit a tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this contract. Bluestone completed the estimating process for the tender for this contract and it appears that it submitted a bid with the hope of winning the work. This is shown by the price submitted by Bluestone being the lowest received and the fact that it won the contract.

IV.5749. Bluestone recorded four competitors who were also invited to tender for this contract on a Tender Summary Sheet, namely 'Walter Thompson, Randall Orchard, W Birch' [and] 'Wrights'. The letter 'C' in brackets is noted next to the name 'Wrights'.

IV.5750. The OFT notes that although four competitors have been recorded on the Tender Summary Sheet, the letter 'C' in brackets is only noted alongside the entry for 'Wrights'. This indicates that a conscious decision was made to differentiate 'Wrights' from the other known competitors. Three employees from Bluestone have all agreed that this shows that a cover price was given to Wright (Hull) by Bluestone, and designated estimator DS confirmed that he would have made the entry at the time. The letter 'C' is commonly used within the construction industry as an abbreviation to indicate cover prices. Bluestone director MH conceded that the estimator had 'slipped up' by recording the letter 'C' on the Tender Summary Sheet. From this, the OFT infers that Bluestone would normally have made some effort to conceal any evidence of contact with its competitors and the exchange of a cover price.

IV.5751. Two further contemporaneous documents from Bluestone provide additional corroboration of a cover price having been given to Wright (Hull) from Bluestone. Firstly, an email from PD of Wright (Hull) to DW of Bluestone clearly shows a direct information exchange between the two companies on the day after the tender deadline. The email incorporates clarifying details of the tender, sent from Wright (Hull) to the client's representatives. This would normally be confidential information between bidder and client and would not be disclosed to a third party, and in particular, not to another competitor invited to tender for the same contract.

IV.5752. When interviewed, both DW and MH explained that the email exchange was as a result of a conversation, which took place between DW and PD of Wright (Hull) after the tender deadline. Additional information was requested by the client from the two lowest bidders on the day following the tender deadline. This information would not have been known by Wright (Hull) because it had not submitted a genuine tender and it had 'unwittingly' finished second in the tender process. The OFT notes that Bluestone was the only company whose

IV.5753. A contemporaneous record of at least one of the conversations between DW and PD was also made on a handwritten note by DW. This shows the amount of the cover price provided to Wright (Hull) by Bluestone, PD's contact details, and additional information which appears to have been required by the client. On the same note, there is a record of another competitor invited to tender, namely 'Birch'. There is however, no evidence that a cover price was provided by Bluestone to this company or that 'Birch' was involved in bid rigging on this tender.

IV.5754. The client Richmondshire Council received a tendered amount of £1,260,744 from Bluestone, which is the same figure as that recorded on one of Bluestone's Tender Summary Sheets. The client also received a tender of £1,399,535 from Wright (Hull), which is higher than the amount tendered by Bluestone. This fits into the pattern consistent with a cover price having been provided from Bluestone to Wright (Hull).

IV.5755. Finally, Wright (Hull) has also admitted to bid rigging on this tender, without being shown the contemporaneous evidence from Bluestone.

IV.5756. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between Bluestone and Wright (Hull) and that Bluestone supplied a figure to Wright (Hull) in order that it could submit a bid to the client that was not intended to win the contract.

IV.5757. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.5725 to IV.5756 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.⁷⁴⁶² In particular:

- (a) the provision of a figure for a cover bid from Bluestone to Wright (Hull) was not unilateral⁷⁴⁶³, and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;⁷⁴⁶⁴
- (b) Wright (Hull) can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from Bluestone (i.e. the cover price) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process;⁷⁴⁶⁵ and
- (c) Bluestone can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from Wright (Hull) (i.e. that Wright (Hull) did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process.⁷⁴⁶⁶

IV.5758. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that an agreement and/or concerted practice was in place between Bluestone and Wright (Hull) in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the contract for Incubator Office Units at Colburn, tender deadline 26 October 2004.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.5759. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.5760. In respect of this tender, the OFT became aware of bid rigging activities by virtue of information obtained during the visit under section 28 to Bluestone on 23 February 2006. Bluestone will not therefore receive 100 per cent immunity in respect of this tender. However, Bluestone will receive its normal leniency percentage reduction from the fine that the OFT is imposing in respect of this tender.

Infringement 207: Fire Reinstatement Works at 63 Westgate, Mansfield – 11 November 2004

Client: Geoffrey Nicholls Associates
Parties: ARG and Dukeries

IV.5761. On 13 October 2004, Geoffrey Nicholls Associates sought tenders for fire damage reinstatement works to existing retail/mixed use premises, 63 Westgate Mansfield, Notts. The following five companies were invited to tender: ARG, Bodill, Dukeries, Greenwood and Richards & Co (Mansfield). The tender deadline was 12:00 noon on 11 November 2004.⁷⁴⁶⁷

IV.5762. Geoffrey Nicholls Associates received the following tender returns:⁷⁴⁶⁸

Company	Date Tender Received	Amount of tender	Awarded contract
ARG	11 November 2004	£71,778
Bodill	11 November 2004	£120,186
Dukeries	11 November 2004	£76,919
Greenwood	Declined to tender	N/A
Richards & Co (Mansfield)	11 November 2004	£79,760

IV.5763. Geoffrey Nicholls Associates was unaware which contractor won the contract. Geoffrey Nicholls Associates stated 'Tender returns submitted to our clients/ the building owners. GNA not involved in any further capacity'.⁷⁴⁶⁹

IV.5764. Geoffrey Nicholls Associates also stated that Bowmer & Kirkland Property Services (BKPS) was invited to tender for the contract on 19 November 2004. BKPS tendered £110,665.00 for this contract.

⁷⁴⁶⁷ Information from client, OFT Document Reference 8123.

⁷⁴⁶⁹ Information from client, OFT Document Reference 8123.

Dukeries admitted 'We engaged in bid rigging activities on this tender with ARG (Mansfield) Limited'.⁷⁴⁷⁴

IV.5770. The OFT subsequently wrote to Dukeries' ultimate parent company at the time of this Infringement, Gavco, on 5 November 2007, asking it to comment on Dukeries' response to the OFT's Fast Track Offer, given that the OFT intended to hold Gavco jointly and severally liable for any infringements committed by Dukeries in respect of which the OFT ultimately decided to impose financial penalties. In response to this letter Gavco stated 'Gavco has nothing to add to the previous responses made by Dukeries ...'.⁷⁴⁷⁵

IV.5771. In its response to the Statement, Dukeries confirmed that it had '...admitted to engaging in cover pricing in relation to one [this Infringement] of the three tenders identified by the OFT...'.⁷⁴⁷⁶

The OFT's analysis of the evidence and finding

IV.5773. ARG and Dukeries each accepted an invitation to tender for fire reinstatement works at 63 Westgate, Mansfield.

IV.5774. Both companies submitted a tender. Dukeries was unable to submit a competitive tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this contract.

IV.5775. A message book found at ARG records a message taken at 12:30 on 10 November 2004, which read 'FOR JUSTIN, FROM ADRIAN STOKES, OF DUKERIES, MESSAGE HE HAS LOOKED AT 63 WESTGATE AND HE IS NOT INTERESTED. PLEASE GIVE HIM ASSISTANCE'. AG confirmed that the note records that Adrian Stokes of Dukeries contacted Justin Marriott, an estimator at ARG, 24 hours before the tender was due to be returned and asked for a cover price. AG confirmed that later that day ARG would have contacted Dukeries and supplied them with a figure for a cover price.

IV.5776. Both companies have admitted to bid rigging in relation to this tender. The OFT notes that Dukeries admitted that the party with whom it engaged in bid rigging was 'ARG', without being shown the OFT's evidence that ARG was involved. This provides additional independent corroboration of the OFT's evidence in respect of this tender.

IV.5777. The OFT considers in the light of the contemporaneous evidence from ARG and AG's admission and explanation of that contemporaneous evidence, together with Dukeries' admission that it engaged in bid rigging activities on this tender with ARG, that ARG supplied Dukeries with a cover price for this tender.

IV.5778. The OFT further notes that the tender submitted by Dukeries was higher than the tender submitted by ARG, the pattern consistent with a cover price having been provided.

⁷⁴⁷⁶ Written representations of Dukeries, 27 June 2008, paragraph 3.

IV.5779. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between ARG and Dukeries. The OFT also concludes that ARG supplied a figure to Dukeries for a cover bid.

IV.5780. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.5765 to IV.5779 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.⁷⁴⁷⁷ In particular:

- (a) the provision of a figure for a cover bid ARG to Dukeries was not unilateral⁷⁴⁷⁸, and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;⁷⁴⁷⁹
- (b) Dukeries can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from ARG (i.e. the cover price) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process;⁷⁴⁸⁰ and
- (c) ARG can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from Dukeries (i.e. that Dukeries did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its conduct in the tendering process.⁷⁴⁸¹

IV.5781. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that an agreement and/or concerted practice was in place between ARG and Dukeries, in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the tender for fire reinstatement works at 63 Westgate, Mansfield, tender deadline 11 November 2004.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.5782. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.5783. In respect of this tender, the OFT became aware of bid rigging activities by virtue of the information obtained during the visit to ARG under section 28 on 28 June 2005. ARG will not therefore receive 100 per cent immunity in respect of this tender. However, ARG will receive its normal leniency percentage reduction from the fine that the OFT is imposing in respect of this tender.

IV.5785. Windsor Housing received the following tender returns:⁷⁴⁸⁵

Company	Date & Time tender received	Amount of tender	Awarded contract
Mansell	12 November 2004 8:55am	£395,850.00
Claude Fenton (Construction) Ltd	12 November 2004 11:42am	£216,880.00

Evidence of agreement and/or concerted practice

Contemporaneous documentary evidence from leniency applicant Mansell – tender spreadsheet

IV.5786. As part of its leniency application, Mansell’s legal representatives provided Barry Russ’s (‘BR’), a Mansell managing estimator, workload reports. The 2004 workload report for special projects contained the following entry:⁷⁴⁸⁶

Evidence from leniency applicant Mansell

IV.5787. As part of its leniency application, Mansell’s legal representatives provided a general explanation of its part in the process of cover pricing.⁷⁴⁸⁷ This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.470 to IV.502 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.5788. Mansell’s legal representatives also provided to the OFT a table showing information relating to tendering activities in which a calculated competitive bid was not submitted, for the Thames Valley Region (‘TVR’), which includes this tender. In respect of this tender the table shows that Mansell received a cover price from Francis and that this cover price was taken due to 'insufficient tender period: resource' at Mansell.⁷⁴⁸⁸

Witness evidence from leniency applicant Mansell

IV.5789. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, BR provided further general explanation of Mansell's participation in cover pricing in the TVR. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.481 to IV.489 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.5790. During an interview with the OFT on 1 May 2007, BR advised how he would record in the workload report when Mansell had taken a cover as detailed in paragraphs IV.482 to IV.485 above. In relation to this tender BR stated 'I mean we took a cover from Francis Brothers, by the looks of it...' and 'the figure in there [in the net bid column] would have been the one we would have gone in at'.⁷⁴⁸⁹ In its response to the Statement, Mansell clarified that BR's admission was based on the contemporaneous evidence rather than on independent recollection of taking the cover price.⁷⁴⁹⁰

Evidence from other companies – Francis

IV.5791. The OFT wrote to Francis on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that Francis had participated in bid rigging on this tender. In response to this letter Francis stated that it was 'unable to make the admissions' as it had been *'unable to find any evidence that it [Francis] has been guilty of the bid rigging activities alleged against it...'*⁷⁴⁹¹

IV.5792. The OFT subsequently wrote to Francis's ultimate parent company at the time of this Infringement, Barrett, on 6 November 2007, asking it to comment on Francis's response to the OFT's Fast Track Offer, given that the OFT intended to hold Barrett jointly and severally liable for any infringements committed by Francis in respect of which the OFT ultimately decided to impose financial penalties. In response to this letter Barrett stated 'Barrett has ... nothing to add to the comments that have already been made to you on behalf of Francis Construction'.⁷⁴⁹²

IV.5793. In their response to the Statement, however, Francis *'Francis does not contest the OFT's findings of infringement against Francis Construction'*⁷⁴⁹³ in respect of this Infringement.

The OFT's analysis of the evidence and finding

IV.5795. Mansell and Francis each accepted an invitation to tender for this contract.

⁷⁴⁹³ Written representations of Francis, 2 July 2008, paragraph 3.

IV.5796. Both companies submitted a tender. Mansell was unable to submit a tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this contract.

IV.5797. Mansell's 2004 workload report records '(Francis Bros)', in the Remarks column. Mansell confirmed that this shows that it took a cover price from the company noted. In addition, Mansell has confirmed that the lack of figures in the margin and percentage columns would also indicate a cover price had been taken.

IV.5798. The OFT further notes that the tender submitted by Mansell was higher than the tender submitted by Francis, the pattern consistent with a cover price having been provided.

IV.5799. In addition, Francis has now stated that it does not contest its involvement in cover pricing in respect of this Infringement.

IV.5800. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between Mansell and Francis. The OFT also concludes that Francis supplied a figure to Mansell for a cover bid.

IV.5801. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.5786 to IV.5800 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.⁷⁴⁹⁴ In particular:

- (a) the provision of a figure for a cover bid from Francis to Mansell was not unilateral⁷⁴⁹⁵, and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;⁷⁴⁹⁶
- (b) Mansell can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from Francis (i.e. the cover price) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process;⁷⁴⁹⁷ and
- (c) Francis can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from Mansell (i.e. that Mansell did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its conduct in the tendering process.⁷⁴⁹⁸

IV.5802. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that an agreement and/or concerted practice was in place between Mansell and Francis in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the tender for refurbishment to 10/12 Bowden Road, Sunninghill, tender deadline 12 November 2004.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.5803. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100

Infringement 209: Extensions and Alterations at Bleakhouse Junior School, Oldbury, West Midlands – 3 December 2004
Client: Sandwell Metropolitan Borough Council
Parties: Thomas Vale and Arthur M Griffiths

IV.5805. On 9 November 2004, Sandwell Metropolitan Borough Council ('Sandwell MBC') sought tenders for extensions and alterations at Bleakhouse Junior School, Oldbury, West Midlands. The following six companies were invited to tender: Adonis, Arthur M Griffiths, Wygar, Ashe Construction Ltd, Interclass and Thomas Vale. The deadline for the receipt of tenders was 12:00 noon on 3 December 2004.⁷⁴⁹⁹

IV.5806. Sandwell MBC received the following tender returns:⁷⁵⁰⁰

Company	Time and Date tender received	Amount of tender	Awarded contract
Adonis	11:22 3 December 2004	£498,316
Arthur M Griffiths	11:12 3 December 2004	£483,376

Thomas Vale	11:35 3 December 2004	£491,272

Evidence of agreement and/or concerted practice

Contemporaneous documentary evidence from leniency applicant Thomas Vale – Estimate Register, Tender Status spreadsheet and handwritten note

IV.5807. A handwritten Estimate Register was obtained from Thomas Vale during the section 27 visit to its premises on 24 January 2006, which contained the following entry:⁷⁵⁰¹

Gary Wildsmith

Gary Wildsmith

£491,272-00

Evidence from leniency applicant Thomas Vale

IV.5810. As part of its leniency application, Thomas Vale provided a general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence and, in particular, the use of the Tender Status spreadsheet is set out in paragraphs IV.689 to IV.717 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

⁷⁵⁰³ Handwritten note, OFT Document Reference 4604.

IV.5811. At Annex 14⁷⁵⁰⁴ of its leniency application, Thomas Vale’s legal representatives compiled a schedule setting out all tenders from 2000 to 2005 in respect of which Thomas Vale had either given or taken a cover price in the West Midlands region. The information on the schedule was based on all available tender and miscellaneous documentation indicating cover prices had been given or received, plus the recollections of staff. At page 12 of the schedule under Annex 14 and within the section for 2004 tenders is the following entry:⁷⁵⁰⁵

Tender No	Date	Client	Comments	Cover Given/Taken	Evidence
T5746	03 December	Sandwell MBC	Extension and Alterations, Bleakhouse School, Oldbury	Taken (AM Griffiths [...] [C], Gary Wildsmith, £491,272))	Yes (File Note; Estimate Register)

IV.5812. Thomas Vale also provided to the OFT a schedule listing key competitors with whom Thomas Vale frequently dealt in relation to cover pricing at Annex 5 of its leniency application⁷⁵⁰⁶ and ‘A M Griffiths’ appears on this list.

IV.5813. Following the issue of the Statement, Thomas Vale did not submit any written or oral representations specifically in respect of this Infringement.

Witness evidence from leniency applicant Thomas Vale

IV.5814. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, Thomas Vale’s employees provided further general explanation of its participation in and recording of cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.689 to IV.717 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender. In particular, Christopher Keith Trickett (‘CKT’), Chief Estimator at Thomas Vale, gave a detailed explanation of the use of the Tender Status spreadsheet to record cover prices from its competitors.

IV.5815. In respect of this tender, the OFT interviewed Nick Galliers (‘NG’), who was an estimator working in the Building and Maintenance Division of Thomas Vale at the time of this tender. NG explained that the ‘∇’ written in the ‘VALUE’ column of the Estimate Register obtained from Thomas Vale during the section 27 visit to its premises on 24 January 2006, indicated that Thomas Vale had taken a cover price on this tender.⁷⁵⁰⁷ NG further explained that he was not aware that CKT maintained an electronic spreadsheet of tenders and that he would not have informed CKT if he had taken a cover price on a job.⁷⁵⁰⁸

IV.5816. In respect of the handwritten note headed ‘a.m. Griffiths’, NG said that he did not recognise the handwriting but that he recalled that Bob Round and Gary Wildsmith were estimators who worked at Arthur M Griffiths.⁷⁵⁰⁹ In respect of the handwritten figure, ‘£491,272-00’, NG said ‘That’s the figure that they

And then that's the figure that they gave us'*.⁷⁵¹¹

Evidence from leniency applicant Arthur M Griffiths

IV.5817. As part of its leniency application, Arthur M Griffiths provided a general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.182 to IV.188 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.5818. In its response to the Statement, Arthur M Griffiths made no representations in respect of this Infringement.

Witness evidence from leniency applicant Arthur M Griffiths

IV.5819. In respect of this tender, in interview Gary Wildsmith ('GW'), Commercial Director of Arthur M Griffiths said he did not recall this job⁷⁵¹² and on being shown by the OFT the handwritten note headed 'a.m. Griffiths', GW said 'No idea why, why they [Thomas Vale] should put my name on that I'm sure...I've never given out a price...if they did ring up, and ...it was one of the phone calls that I had had, saying, are you pricing a certain job, we might need some help, I'd have just passed it down to Alan Griffiths'.⁷⁵¹³

IV.5820. Also in respect of this tender, in interview Maurice Walsh ('MW'), Managing Director of Arthur M Griffiths, said he did not recall this job⁷⁵¹⁴ and on being shown by the OFT the handwritten note headed 'a.m. Griffiths' and asked if Arthur M Griffiths provided a cover price to Thomas Vale, MW said 'I would doubt that very much indeed...I can't answer it but I would doubt that...maybe somebody sort of rang our office and spoke to Gary [Wildsmith] and said, have you got this job in, and Gary may well have said...yes we have... no, we haven't... or, you'll have to speak to Alan Griffiths'.⁷⁵¹⁵

IV.5821. The OFT was unable to interview Alan Griffiths about this tender as he died in January 2007.

The OFT's analysis of the evidence and finding

IV.5822. From the evidence presented above, the OFT draws the following conclusions.

IV.5823. Thomas Vale and Arthur M Griffiths each accepted an invitation to tender for this contract.

IV.5824. Thomas Vale was unable to submit a tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this contract.

- IV.5825. Thomas Vale's contemporaneous Estimate Register maintained in handwritten form records a '∇' next to the figure '491 272' under the column headed 'VALUE'. NG of Thomas Vale has confirmed that this symbol '∇' shows that Thomas Vale obtained a cover price on this tender. Under leniency Thomas Vale has confirmed that a cover price was received from Arthur M Griffiths for this tender.
- IV.5826. The handwritten note headed 'a.m. Griffiths' provides further corroboration that Thomas Vale contacted Arthur M Griffiths for a cover price for this tender. The figure written down on this handwritten note was the exact figure that Thomas Vale submitted for this tender. The three estimators named on the note are all employees (either current or former) of Arthur M Griffiths and the telephone number '[.....] [C]' is the telephone number of Arthur M Griffith as indicated on its company headed notepaper.⁷⁵¹⁶
- IV.5827. The OFT further notes that the tender submitted by Thomas Vale was higher than the tender submitted by Arthur M Griffiths, a pattern consistent with a cover price having been provided.
- IV.5828. Thomas Vale also admitted that 'A M Griffiths' was one of the 'key competitors' with whom it engaged in cover pricing activity.
- IV.5829. Although Arthur M Griffiths does not recall that it engaged in this bid rigging activity on this tender, the OFT considers that the contemporaneous evidence, together with Thomas Vale's admission and explanation of that evidence, shows that Arthur M Griffiths did indeed engage in bid rigging on this tender.
- IV.5830. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between Thomas Vale and Arthur M Griffiths, and that Arthur M Griffiths supplied a figure to Thomas Vale in order that it could submit a bid to the client that was not intended to win the contract.
- IV.5831. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.5807 to IV.5830 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.⁷⁵¹⁷ In particular:
- (a) the provision of a figure for a cover bid from Arthur M Griffiths to Thomas Vale was not unilateral⁷⁵¹⁸, and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;⁷⁵¹⁹
 - (b) Thomas Vale can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from Arthur M Griffiths (i.e. the cover price) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process;⁷⁵²⁰ and
 - (c) Arthur M Griffiths can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from Thomas Vale (i.e. that Thomas Vale did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process.⁷⁵²¹

IV.5832. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that an agreement and/or concerted practice was in place between Thomas Vale and Arthur M Griffiths in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the contract for extensions and alterations at Bleakhouse Junior School, Oldbury, West Midlands, tender deadline 3 December 2004.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.5833. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.5834. Thomas Vale informed the OFT of the bid rigging activities in respect of this tender before the OFT became aware of these activities from any other source. Thomas Vale will therefore receive 100 per cent immunity from the fine that the OFT is imposing in respect of this tender.

IV.5835. In respect of this tender, the OFT became aware of Arthur M Griffiths' involvement in bid rigging activities by virtue of the information provided by Thomas Vale. Arthur M Griffiths will not therefore receive 100 per cent immunity in respect of this tender. However, Arthur M Griffiths will receive its normal leniency percentage reduction from the fine that the OFT is imposing in respect of this tender.

Infringement 210: Three New Community Sports Complexes, Lincolnshire – 3 December 2004

Client: HBS Business Services (Group) Ltd

Parties: Mowlem and R G Building

IV.5836. On 8 November 2004⁷⁵²², HBS Business Services (Group) Ltd sought tenders for three new community sports complexes at Kirton Middlecot School, Grantham Central Technology College and Sports College and Long Sutton, The Peele School.⁷⁵²³ The following six companies were invited to tender: Clark Construction, Interserve, Linpave Building Ltd, Mowlem, North Midland and R G Building. The date and time of tender return was 3 December 2004 at 2:30 pm.⁷⁵²⁴

⁷⁵²² According to the information provided by the client, invitations to tender were sent to bidders on 8 November 2004. However, Mowlem's Tender Record notes that the tender was received on 28 October 2004 and an internal Mowlem email, dated 29 October 2004, also refers to this tender (Annexes 1 and 2 to witness statement, OFT Document References B1729 and B1731). The OFT concludes that, as this tender comprised three jobs grouped together, the invitations to tender for each job may have been staggered in time (albeit with the same closing date of 3 December 2004 for all three). It appears that the first set of tender documents were sent out by the client around 28 October 2004. In any event, the date on which the invitations to tender were issued by the client is not material to the OFT's finding of an infringement.

Contemporaneous documentary evidence from leniency applicant Carillion⁷⁵²⁶ – Manuscript notes

IV.5838. During the search of Mowlem’s Nottingham office, some manuscript notes belonging to Karl Chatburn, (‘KC’), an estimating manager⁷⁵²⁷ at Mowlem in the Nottingham office, were taken. On a page dated 25 November 2004 is an entry stating ‘③ * Cover – Lincolnshire sports complexes – Paul Whittall – [...] [C] *’.⁷⁵²⁸ On the next page there is another entry under the date 2 December 2004 which states ‘⑤ Keith – Cover – Lincoln schools ...’.⁷⁵²⁹

IV.5839. In its response to the Statement, R G Carter stated in respect of the entry of ‘③ * Cover – Lincolnshire sports complexes – Paul Whittall – [...] [C] *’ in KC’s notebook that this entry is dated 25 November 2004, whereas ‘[i]t was only on 2 December 2004 that R G Carter Building finalised its tender pricing on this tender; 25 November is a week before the tender was due to be submitted’.⁷⁵³⁰ The telephone number is that ‘...of R G Carter Building’s King’s Lynn office. This number was readily available in telephone directories, on the Company’s website and ... was actually published with reference to this tender by ABI Building Data Ltd’.⁷⁵³¹ This entry, they argued, could merely indicate that KC telephoned R G Building’s general number a week before the tender deadline and asked for the name of the estimator for this tender; it does not indicate any actual contact took place between KC and Paul Whittall (‘PW’).⁷⁵³²

IV.5840. In respect of the entry of ‘⑤ Keith – Cover – Lincoln schools ...’ in KC’s notebook which is dated 2 December 2004, R G Carter stated that this Infringement ‘does not relate to “Lincoln schools” but to community sports complexes at Grantham, Kirton and Long Sutton. The reference to Lincoln schools in the notebook may, therefore, refer to a completely different tender’.⁷⁵³³

IV.5841. The OFT considers the entries of ‘③ * Cover – Lincolnshire sports complexes – Paul Whittall – [.....] [C] *’ and ‘⑤ Keith – Cover – Lincoln schools ...’ in KC’s notebook to be contemporaneous evidence that Mowlem took a cover price from R G Building.

IV.5842. The OFT views KC’s recording of contact in his notes, firstly, a week before the tender was due (25 November 2004) and, secondly, on the day before the tender was due to be submitted (2 December 2004), as being consistent with the practice of obtaining a cover price as described in paragraph IV.512 above. An initial call would often be placed with a competitor bidding on the same tender asking ‘...them for help’ and closer to the tender submission date, once the competitor had finalised their price, the cover price would be provided. This is also supported by the witness evidence of KC, who stated in interview ‘... I spoke to a guy Paul Whittall, and we organised a cover ... for them, to give us a cover price, which they did nearer the time’.⁷⁵³⁴

IV.5843. The alternative explanation suggested by R G Carter does not account for the inclusion of the word ‘cover’ recorded on the same line as PW’s name and contact telephone number in KC’s notebook. The OFT considers that if KC had telephoned the company’s general telephone number and asked for the name of the estimator, it is likely he would have also either requested his direct telephone number or he would have requested that he be connected. As KC has not recorded any direct dial number in his notebook, the OFT considers the latter to be a more likely reflection of what happened, and therefore cannot accept R G Building’s assertion that the notebook entries do ‘...not mean there was any contact between Karl Chatburn and Paul Whittall’.

IV.5844. Nor does the OFT accept the suggestion that the entry ‘⑤ Keith – Cover – Lincoln schools ...’ related to a different tender as the present one did not relate to ‘Lincoln schools’. Though the OFT has described this Infringement as relating to ‘community sports complexes’, these projects were to be completed at a college in Grantham and schools in Kirton and Long Sutton. The OFT further notes that this entry was made on the same date as that on which R G Building have confirmed its own pricings were completed.

Evidence from leniency applicant Carillion

IV.5845. Carillion’s legal representatives provided to the OFT a witness statement of KC, which states in respect of this tender ‘...This was a tender which we had originally intended to price but after we had received the tender documents it became apparent that we did not have the resources to pursue it ... In consultation with Kevin Watson (the Regional Director at the time ...), it was however decided that we should ask a competitor for a cover price to avoid irritating the client. I therefore contacted a number of other possible bidders and established that RG Carter was bidding. RG Carter agreed to give me a cover price which we subsequently submitted. Unsurprisingly we did not win the tender ... There are a couple of references in my manuscript notes to taking a cover for the Lincolnshire County Council contract ... Keith Biltcliffe was the

Mowlem planner who submitted the tender based on the cover price on my instructions'.⁷⁵³⁵

IV.5846. In its response to the Statement, Mowlem stated that it '... does not contest that certain employees (and/or former employees) participated in each of the three Relevant Alleged Infringements nor does it contest its liability...'.⁷⁵³⁶

IV.5847. In its response to the Statement, R G Carter suggested that 'It is inconceivable that the purpose of his [KC's] call to that number of other bidders was merely to find out if R G Carter was bidding; it is far more likely that he was talking to those other contractors about their bids'.⁷⁵³⁷ The OFT considers that even if R G Carter's assertion that KC discussed the other contractors' bids with them is correct (noting that this is not supported by the available evidence) that would not undermine the finding that Mowlem obtained a cover price from R G Building. It is clear that KC did not receive a cover price from any of the other bidders, who all returned higher bids than Mowlem. The OFT also notes that this suggestion is contrary to KC's specific recollection that it was R G Building from whom he obtained a cover on this tender.

Witness evidence from leniency applicant Carillion

IV.5848. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, KC from the Nottingham office provided further general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.503 to IV.516 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.5849. During an interview with the OFT on 18 April 2007, KC advised how he would record when Mowlem had taken a cover as detailed in paragraphs IV.511 to IV.512 above. In relation to this tender KC explained his role, stating '... I was the estimating manager. And Richard Hubble was the actual estimator that was gonna price it'.⁷⁵³⁸ When asked to explain the entries, detailed above, in his notebooks, KC stated '... from what I recall, we set out, in good faith, to actually price this project, back in that year. Then, during the tender periods, it became quite clear that actually we didn't want to win the project, but because we'd gone so far down the line, we'd sent out enquiries, we'd been talking to the clients, a decision was taken, instead of just sending the project back, that we'd take a cover, so, RG Carter's, I think it was, we thought that they would be competitive in that area ... I spoke to a guy Paul Whitall, and we organised a cover ... for them, to give us a cover price, which they did nearer the time ... they went on to win the job, I think'.⁷⁵³⁹ KC explained that the decision to take a cover price would have been agreed with the regional director, Kevin Watson.⁷⁵⁴⁰

IV.5850. During an interview with the OFT on 17 April 2007, Richard Hubble ('RH'), who was an estimator at Mowlem in the Nottingham office, stated in respect of this tender 'We started pricing it, I was the estimator who was gonna price it, then during the tender period we, I think we has [sic] a couple of other big contracts, we hadn't got enough staff to cope if we won the job so it's decided to take a cover'. When asked who arranged the cover price, RH stated 'It were Karl Chatburn ... he actually arranged it'.⁷⁵⁴¹

IV.5851. In its response to the Statement, R G Carter suggested that there were inconsistencies between KC's witness statement described at paragraph IV.5845 above, and the evidence which he gave in interview. R G Carter suggested that KC's witness statement evidence that in respect of this tender a cover price had been taken 'to avoid irritating the client' was 'totally inconsistent with what Karl Chatburn himself describes [in his interview] as being Mowlem's standard procedure (to send back the tender documents...)'.⁷⁵⁴² The OFT does not accept that there is any inconsistency. During the same interview KC also stated that '... there'll have been times in the past when, ah, instead of sending tender documents back to upset the clients, that sort of thing, it, it was deemed more appropriate to, to take a cover'.⁷⁵⁴³ KC was not, therefore, describing any 'standard procedure' that was invariably followed when he referred to returning tenders. Further, KC is clear that the decision was taken not to return this particular tender because Mowlem had initially intended to price it, and had gone sufficiently far through the pricing process that it considered obtaining a cover price preferable. R G Carter suggested that this was inconsistent with the emails at Annex 2 of KC's witness statement which evidenced a decision on 3 November not to pursue the tender.⁷⁵⁴⁴ In fact, those emails show that KC was still in the process of pricing the tender at 12 November 2004⁷⁵⁴⁵ and the decision not to pursue it was only taken on 17 November 2004.⁷⁵⁴⁶ Given the initial documents in relation to this tender appear to have been received by Mowlem on 28 October 2004, the OFT considers this sufficient to substantiate KC's comment that they were 'far down the line' of pricing the tender.

IV.5852. R G Carter suggested that a further 'uncertainty' in KC's interview evidence was that 'When asked to explain the "cover – Lincolnshire sports complex" note in his notebook he is not clear, saying "so er, R G Carter's, I think it was [...we thought that they would be competitive in that area.]...." He goes on to say "We just thought R G Carter are...a biggish company from Lincolnshire, a competitive company from Lincoln." R G Carter Building has never been "from Lincoln"; nor has any other company in the R G Carter group'.⁷⁵⁴⁷

IV.5853. The OFT does not accept the assertion that there is uncertainty about this evidence. It is clear from both KC's witness statement⁷⁵⁴⁸ and his interview⁷⁵⁴⁹ that the tender being discussed was the Lincolnshire sports complexes. It also appears that KC's reference to R G Carter's location was to the company's area of operation generally rather than the location of any particular office and that he refers to 'Lincoln' as shorthand for 'Lincolnshire'.

Evidence from other companies – R G Building

IV.5854. The OFT wrote to R G Building's immediate parent company R G Construction Limited ('R G Construction') on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that R G Construction had participated in bid rigging on this tender.⁷⁵⁵⁰ In response to this letter R G Construction made no admission in respect of this tender and stated 'We have checked the tenders 2 to 20 referred to in your schedule, both paper and electronic, and have interviewed the relevant staff including former employees where possible. Our investigations have not disclosed any evidence of conduct to which you refer'.⁷⁵⁵¹

IV.5855. The OFT subsequently wrote to R G Building's ultimate parent company at the time of this Infringement, R G Holdings, on 6 November 2007, asking it to comment on R G Construction's response to the OFT's Fast Track Offer, given that the OFT intended to hold R G Holdings jointly and severally liable for any infringements committed by its subsidiaries in respect of which the OFT ultimately decided to impose financial penalties. In response to this letter, R G Holdings stated '... we write to advise we have nothing further to add'.⁷⁵⁵²

IV.5856. In its response to the Statement, R G Carter made general representations as to how, as a business, it ensures it has the resources to price the tenders it receives, and as to its success rate in invitations to tender.⁷⁵⁵³ The OFT accepts that the evidence currently available suggests that R G Building tend to price tenders properly. However, the present Infringement relates to the provision of a cover price, not the acceptance of one. Though the OFT has found, in paragraph IV.73 above, that the motive for providing cover prices was usually reciprocity, it notes that other motives, including facilitating a reduction in the number of competing bids, are also possible and it is not necessary to establish exactly, or even to speculate, what a company's motive might have been for providing a cover price. Where the evidence indicates that a cover price has been provided, the OFT considers that sufficient for a finding of an Infringement.

IV.5857. In its response to the Statement, R G Carter provided a witness statement from PW, who stated in respect of this tender 'I do not recognize the name Karl Chatburn. He is not someone I can recall ever having met, spoken to or heard of before. I have no recollection of him speaking to me (or me to him) in relation to this tender or at all...I did not provide cover prices as has been alleged in either of these cases [Infringements 210 and 222]'.⁷⁵⁵⁴

⁷⁵⁵⁰ The OFT made the Fast Track Offer to R G Construction on the basis of information available to it at the relevant time. As R G Building is a wholly owned subsidiary of R G Construction, the OFT does not consider it material that the Fast Track Offer was not addressed to R G Building itself. In any event, the companies in the R G Carter Group made joint representations in response to the Statement, and stated that no evidence had been found to suggest that a cover price had been provided to a competitor. The OFT concludes that none of the companies making up the R G Carter Group were willing to admit participation in bid rigging activities in relation to this tender.

IV.5858. The OFT notes the direct contradiction between this witness evidence and the contemporaneous documentary evidence and overall explanation provided by KC in respect of his notebook and his specific explanation of the entry relating to this tender. On balance, the OFT considers the latter to be more compelling. KC's evidence is consistent with the markings in his notebook, in particular with the entry 'Cover' for which R G Building has not provided an alternative plausible explanation. In light of those factors, the OFT considers that the contemporaneous documentary evidence and explanation of KC should be preferred to that of PW.

IV.5859. In its response to the Statement, R G Carter also noted in respect of this Infringement '[w]hen Karl Chatburn was asked specifically about cover pricing, he said that, when taking a cover price, the result is "So you finish third or fourth"; in the tender... Mowlem came a very close second, not third or fourth'.⁷⁵⁵⁵ During an interview with the OFT on 18 April 2007, KC advised '...instead of sending tender documents back up to clients, that sort of thing, it, it was deemed appropriate to, to take a cover. Um. So you finish third or fourth, but at least in the client's minds it, it was quite competitive so they'd put you on the tender list next time...'.⁷⁵⁵⁶ The OFT regards this statement as evidence of Mowlem's general expectations in respect of a tender outcome, that if it obtained a cover price for a bid, it expected to appear 'competitive' to the client yet would probably come third or fourth after the companies who were actually bidding competitively. To be certain of being ranked in a particular position, however, would have required collusion between all or most of the tender bidders, an activity which has not been alleged in respect of this Infringement. The OFT notes that, across this investigation, although those who have accepted cover prices have often come third or fourth, it is by no means unusual for them to have come second.

IV.5860. R G Carter further stated '...the percentage difference between R G Carter's winning bid and the cover price that R G Carter is alleged to have provided to Mowlem (which R G Carter denies), ranges from 1.5% to 3.25%. This difference is totally inconsistent with all the evidence given in the Statement of Objections relating to the calculation of cover prices'.⁷⁵⁵⁷ It also stated that in his witness statement KC 'went on to make the point that, when giving a cover price, "...you'd usually add 5% on to the price....and then tell them to add a little more on, if, if needs be"... the difference between the Mowlem tender price and the R G Carter Building tender price was substantially less than that 5%'.⁷⁵⁵⁸

IV.5861. The OFT has not alleged that Mowlem provided a cover price in respect of this Infringement and as such considers the methods Mowlem employed to calculate the cover prices it supplied to competitors irrelevant to this Infringement. The OFT is unable to comment on the cover price calculation methodology of a non-leniency party, such as R G Building. In any event, although it was often the practice for companies to provide a cover price and for the recipient to add on four to five per cent, there were in fact many instances where the difference between the figure submitted on the basis of a cover price and the figure submitted by the provider of the cover price was significantly higher or lower than four to five per cent. Accordingly, the OFT does not consider a difference of approximately one to three per cent to be indicative that cover pricing did not take place. In addition, the OFT notes that although the percentage difference between R G Building's and Mowlem's bids may be small, nonetheless in real terms the difference between the bids is just over £100,000, which is a significant margin. The OFT notes that in respect of Infringement 222 the price submitted by the acceptor of a cover from R G Building is also approximately £100,000 more than R G Building's own bid.

The OFT's analysis of the evidence and finding

IV.5862. From the evidence and arguments presented above, and having taken into account the representations made by the Parties, the OFT draws the following conclusions.

IV.5863. Mowlem and R G Building each accepted an invitation to tender for this contract.

IV.5864. Both companies submitted a tender. Mowlem was unable to submit a tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this contract. It appears that R G Building completed the estimating process for this tender and that it submitted a bid with the hope of winning the work. This is shown by its bid being the lowest and the fact that it won the contract.

IV.5865. Extracts from a contemporaneous notebook found at Mowlem, belonging to the then estimating manager, KC, show '⊗ * Cover – Lincolnshire sports complexes – Paul Whitall – [.....] [C] *' and '⊗ Keith – Cover – Lincoln schools ...'. Mowlem has stated that this shows that it took a cover price from PW of R G Carter. KC confirmed in interview that he spoke to PW of R G Carter and obtained a cover price from him for this tender.

IV.5866. In addition, the telephone number noted is listed on R G Building's website as the telephone number for R G Building, Kings Lynn.⁷⁵⁵⁹

IV.5867. The OFT further notes that the tender submitted by Mowlem was higher than the tender submitted by R G Building, the pattern consistent with a cover price having been provided.

IV.5868. In its response to the Statement R G Carter stated that 'The evidence that the tender submitted by Mowlem was higher than the tender submitted by R G Carter, which the OFT suggests as being consistent with a cover price having been provided by R G Carter, is not persuasive as representing evidence that R G Carter provided a cover price'.⁷⁵⁶⁰ The OFT notes that this analysis is not relied upon in evidence and merely sets out that the pattern of the tender bids was consistent with a cover price having been provided by R G Building to Mowlem.

IV.5869. In addition the OFT notes that R G Building's tender figure is the only figure below Mowlem's tender figure, for both the individual and aggregate tender sums, and the OFT is therefore satisfied that Mowlem could only have received a cover figure from R G Building.

⁷⁵⁶⁰ Written representations of R G Carter Group, 27 June 2008, paragraph 2.97.

IV.5870. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between Mowlem and R G Building. The OFT also concludes that R G Building supplied a figure to Mowlem for a cover bid.

IV.5871. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.5838 to IV.5870 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.⁷⁵⁶¹ In particular:

- (a) the provision of a figure for a cover bid from R G Building to Mowlem was not unilateral⁷⁵⁶², and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;⁷⁵⁶³
- (b) Mowlem can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from R G Building (i.e. the cover price) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process;⁷⁵⁶⁴ and
- (c) R G Building can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from Mowlem (i.e. that Mowlem did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its conduct in the tendering process.⁷⁵⁶⁵

IV.5872. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that an agreement and/or concerted practice was in place between Mowlem and R G Building in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the tender for three new community sports complexes, tender deadline 3 December 2004.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.5873. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.5874. The OFT became aware of the bid rigging activities by virtue of documents found on a section 28 visit to the Nottingham premises of Carillion. Mowlem will not therefore receive 100 per cent immunity in respect of this tender. However, Mowlem will receive its normal leniency percentage reduction from the fine that the OFT is imposing in respect of this tender.

Contemporaneous documentary evidence from leniency applicant York House – Email from Caddick with attachments

IV.5877. During the search with consent at York House on 28 March 2006 an electronic image of data was taken and this image was analysed at a later date at the OFT. An email subject title 'Royd Court, Mirfield' was sent on 10 December 2004 by Alan Fitzsimons-Brown ('AF'), Senior Estimator at Caddick, to Arthur Richardson ('AR'), Estimating Director at York House.⁷⁵⁶⁸ Sent with this email was a two-page spreadsheet containing a breakdown of costs and a total tender figure for both sections of the contract.⁷⁵⁶⁹ In the first paragraph of the email, AF wrote, *'Most important; Do not forward on electronically as it is possible to trace the history of a document (don't ask me how) and if they do, they will find that this spreadsheet was originally generated by Caddick. I'll forward a complete list of qualifications on Monday but the most important ones are; No design fees included (other than £2000 as advised to warrant the design) due to the lack of co-ordination between the design team, therefore we had no idea how much to allow. They should really be advising us what to allow...'*⁷⁵⁷⁰ The email continued with details of removal of material and diversion of services. The email attachment was titled 'Contract Sum Analysis, York House.xls'.⁷⁵⁷¹ The total of the two 'Total to form of Tender' figures set out on the two page spreadsheet provided by Caddick, matches exactly the total amount submitted for this tender by York House.

Evidence from leniency applicant York House

IV.5878. As part of its leniency application, York House provided a general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.743 to IV.751 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.5879. In a typewritten table summarising York House's cover pricing activity, prepared as part of York House's leniency application, it is stated that York House received a cover from Caddick.⁷⁵⁷² In addition, in a further handwritten table summarising York House's Cover Pricing activity, also prepared as part of York House's leniency application, it is stated that York House received a cover from Caddick.⁷⁵⁷³

IV.5880. In its response to the Statement, York House stated '[i]t is not disputed that York House participated in cover pricing during the relevant period set out in the Statement.'⁷⁵⁷⁴

Witness evidence from leniency applicant York House

IV.5881. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, York House's employees provided further general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.743 to IV.751 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.5882. In respect of this tender, in interview AR confirmed, 'Yes we took a cover from Caddick'⁷⁵⁷⁵ and '... I organised the cover price I took the cover price'.⁷⁵⁷⁶ Specifically in relation to the email from AF at Caddick, AR stated, 'That email has come about as result of us having to produce a breakdown of our price. Obviously on that occasion Caddick's must have been in a poor position and we must have been in a close position and they [the client] have requested information obviously we cannot provide because we haven't gone through the motions, so on that occasion Caddick have willingly helped us out and we've passed on this information.... because I haven't priced it and Caddick's have helped us out'.⁷⁵⁷⁷

IV.5883. AR also stated, '.....as I have explained we have took a cover, we have been asked [by the client] for a breakdown of our tender summary, we were unable to provide them and we have gone back to Caddick's and Caddick's have sent me that email...'⁷⁵⁷⁸ and 'That there whatever Caddick's price was will be less than that on their appraisal and they have factored figures in there to come up with the cover price they've given us, helping us provide the client with what he was after on that occasion'.⁷⁵⁷⁹

Contemporaneous documentary evidence from leniency applicant Hobson & Porter – Tender Information Sheet

IV.5884. The Form of Tender documentation for this tender was in two parts and stated that Hobson & Porter's submitted figure was £6,912,400.00⁷⁵⁸⁰ for extra care flats and shell construction of the ground floor south west wing and £327,960.00⁷⁵⁸¹ for the fitting out of the ground floor of the south west wing. The two figures added together give a total tender submitted of £7,240,360.

Evidence from leniency applicant Hobson & Porter

IV.5885. As part of its leniency application, Hobson & Porter provided a general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.391 to IV.407 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.5886. In Hobson & Porter's Summary of Cover Pricing Activity (Major Works), prepared as part of its leniency application, it is stated that Hobson & Porter received a cover from Caddick, and that the individual contact at Caddick was AF.⁷⁵⁸²

IV.5887. In its response to the Statement, Hobson & Porter stated that it '...does not contest the OFT's findings of infringement'.⁷⁵⁸³

Witness evidence from leniency applicant Hobson & Porter

IV.5888. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, Hobson & Porter's employees provided further general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.391 to IV.407 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.5889. In respect of this tender, in interview Russell Horner ('RH'), Major Works Estimating Director at Hobson & Porter, confirmed that Hobson & Porter received a cover from Caddick. RH recalled that, 'This [Form of Tender] will have been in our file where we keep all our covers, all covers that we have taken andwhere you [the OFT] got a copy of this document from and you know from recollection when we sat down and went through the lists of everything we had done we seem to recall it was Caddick's who we took it from'.⁷⁵⁸⁴ Michael Haywood, an estimator in Major Works, confirmed that he helped with the documentation to sub-contractors on this tender, but did not recall any involvement in taking a cover price on this tender.⁷⁵⁸⁵

Evidence from other companies – Caddick

IV.5890. The OFT wrote to Caddick on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that Caddick had participated in bid rigging on this tender. In response to this letter, Caddick admitted that *'We engaged in bid rigging (cover pricing) activities on this tender with York House (and one other, possibly, Eric Wrights'*⁷⁵⁸⁶ (emphasis in original document). The OFT notes that 'Eric Wrights' was not invited to tender for this contract and therefore could not have been involved in cover pricing.

IV.5891. The OFT subsequently wrote to Caddick's ultimate parent company at the time of this Infringement, Caddick Group, on 5 November 2007, asking it to comment on Caddick's response to the OFT's Fast Track Offer, given that the OFT intended to hold Caddick Group jointly and severally liable for any infringements committed by Caddick in respect of which the OFT ultimately decided to impose financial penalties. In response to this letter, Caddick Group said it had no issues to raise in respect of its subsidiary Caddick.⁷⁵⁸⁷

IV.5892. In their response to the Statement, Caddick and Caddick Group confirmed that *'...it [Caddick] provided a cover price to York House because it reacted to a request by them ... [and] ... also believes that it is likely that it provided a cover price to Hobson & Porter following a request by them.'*⁷⁵⁸⁸

IV.5894. York House, Hobson & Porter and Caddick each accepted an invitation to tender for this contract.

IV.5895. It appears that Caddick completed the estimating process for this contract and that it submitted a bid with the hope of winning the work. This is shown by the price submitted by Caddick being the lowest received by the client, and the fact that Caddick won the contract.

IV.5896. York House and Hobson & Porter were unable to submit tenders by the return date and/or did not want to win this tender.

IV.5897. In regard to Caddick, York House has confirmed that it received a cover price from Caddick. AR confirmed that he made the contact with Caddick to 'organise the cover price', providing corroboration that York House contacted Caddick in order to obtain a cover price.

IV.5898. In regard to the email sent on 10 December 2004 by AF of Caddick to AR at York House, AR explained that York House had been asked by the client for a breakdown of its tender summary. AR explained that as York House had not priced this tender, since it was taking a cover price, it was unable to produce breakdown figures of its own accord. AR therefore went back to Caddick, who had provided York House with the cover price, and Caddick sent an email with an attached spreadsheet which gave the requested breakdown of figures to AR. AR further explained that the figures provided by Caddick were costs based on the cover price given to York House by Caddick.

⁷⁵⁸⁸ Written representations of Caddick, 24 June 2008, paragraphs 6.4(c)(iv) and (v).

- IV.5899. The OFT further notes that no other company submitted a bid lower than Caddick's, and that only Caddick could therefore have given York House a cover in respect of this tender.
- IV.5900. Caddick has admitted engaging in bid rigging activities with York House on this tender, in response to the OFT's letter of 22 March 2007. The OFT notes that Caddick admitted that the party with whom it engaged in bid rigging was York House, without being shown the OFT's evidence that York House was involved. This provides additional independent corroboration of the OFT's evidence in respect of this tender.
- IV.5901. The OFT notes in addition that the tender submitted by York House was higher than the tender submitted by Caddick, a pattern consistent with a cover price having been provided.
- IV.5902. In respect of the email sent to York House by Caddick, the OFT notes that AF of Caddick said, 'Most important; Do not forward on electronically as it is possible to trace the history of a document (don't ask me how) and if they do, they will find that this spreadsheet was originally generated by Caddick'. This shows that Caddick was providing York House with a breakdown of figures based on the cover price provided, and that it did not want the client to be aware that York House's breakdown of figures was actually created by Caddick.
- IV.5903. Also, in regard to Caddick, Hobson & Porter has confirmed that it received a cover price from Caddick and that the contact at Caddick was AF. RH has also confirmed that the form of tender documentation for this contract was placed in a file 'where we keep all our covers, all covers that we have taken'. The OFT notes the separate corroboration from Caddick at IV.5892 above that it is likely that it supplied a cover price to Hobson & Porter. The OFT notes that Caddick admitted that it had engaged in cover pricing with another company in addition to York House on this tender, and that there was no other company besides Hobson & Porter bidding for the tender.
- IV.5904. The OFT notes in addition that the tender submitted by Hobson & Porter was higher than the tender submitted by Caddick, a pattern consistent with a cover price having been provided.
- IV.5905. All three companies have admitted to bid rigging in relation to this tender. The OFT concludes from the above evidence that contact took place between Caddick and York House, and between Caddick and Hobson & Porter. The OFT also concludes that Caddick supplied figures to each of York House and Hobson & Porter for cover bids. The OFT notes that all three companies that submitted bids for this tender were involved in bid rigging, and that the client for this project therefore received no independently prepared tenders. The OFT also notes the exhortation from one of the bidders not to pass on its email to the client, confirming that it wanted its bid rigging actively kept secret from the client.
- IV.5906. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.5877 to IV.5905 above amount in law to agreements and/or concerted practices contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.⁷⁵⁸⁹ In particular:

⁷⁵⁸⁹ See paragraphs III.3 and III.89 to III.126 of the Legal Background section.

- (a) the provision of figures for cover bids from Caddick to each of York House and Hobson & Porter was not unilateral⁷⁵⁹⁰, and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;⁷⁵⁹¹
- (b) York House and Hobson & Porter can each be presumed to have taken account of the information received from Caddick (i.e. the respective cover prices) when determining their own respective conduct in the tendering process;⁷⁵⁹² and
- (c) Caddick can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from York House and Hobson & Porter (i.e. that neither of them intended to submit competitive bids) when determining its conduct in the tendering process.⁷⁵⁹³

IV.5907. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that agreements and/or concerted practices were in place between Caddick and York House, and between Caddick and Hobson & Porter, in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, each of which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the tender for a new build extra care housing development on Huddersfield Road, tender deadline 8 December 2004.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.5908. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.5909. In respect of this tender, the OFT became aware of York House's involvement in bid rigging activities by virtue of the information obtained during the search with consent at York House's premises on 28 March 2006 conducted as part of its leniency application made on 23 March 2006. York House will therefore receive 100 per cent immunity from the fine that the OFT is imposing in respect of this tender.

IV.5910. Also, in respect of this tender, the OFT became aware of the bid rigging activities by virtue of the information obtained during the visit under section 28 to Hobson & Porter on 28 March 2006. Hobson & Porter will not therefore receive 100 per cent immunity in respect of this tender. However, in accordance with paragraph VI.386 of Section VI (Enforcement), the OFT is not imposing any financial penalty on Hobson & Porter in respect of this Infringement.

Infringement 212: Gotham Primary School, Gotham, Nottingham – 14 December 2004

Client: Nottinghamshire County Council

Parties: Clegg and Willmott Dixon

IV.5911. On 15 November 2004, Nottinghamshire County Council sought tenders for Gotham Primary School, involving the construction of a new single-storey primary school, services installation and site works. The following six companies were invited to tender: Wildgoose, Linford, Clegg, Linpave Building, Sol and Willmott Dixon.⁷⁵⁹⁴ The deadline for the receipt of tenders was 10:00 on 14 December 2004.

IV.5912. Nottinghamshire County Council received the following tender returns:⁷⁵⁹⁵

Company	Time & Date tender received	Amount of tender	Awarded contract
Wildgoose	14 December 2004 by 10:00	£1,685,366
Linford	14 December 2004 by 10:00	£1,598,556	Yes
Clegg	14 December 2004 by 10:00	£1,698,491
Linpave Building	14 December 2004 by 10:00	£1,764,925
Sol	14 December 2004 by 10:00	£1,714,625
Willmott Dixon	14 December 2004 by 10:00	£1,824,093

Evidence from leniency applicant Clegg

IV.5914. As part of its leniency application, Clegg provided a general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is outlined in paragraphs IV.274 to IV.292 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.5915. In Schedule A of its leniency application, Clegg set out a summary of all tenders from March 2000 to July 2005 that were 'Definites – projects where cover pricing has taken place and evidence is available together with estimator's corroboration of evidence'.⁷⁵⁹⁷ The information in the summary was based on all available tender and miscellaneous documentation indicating cover prices had been given or received, plus the recollections of staff. At page four of the summary within Schedule A and within the section for 2004 tenders is the following entry extract:⁷⁵⁹⁸

Evidence enclosed OFT/26 – estimators handwritten note '(C) £1,824,093' against Wilmott Dixon in other tenderers list and estimators recollection of giving a cover to Wilmott Dixon.

IV.5916. In the above table 'OFT/26 – estimators handwritten note' refers to the Tender Details & Summary report discussed in paragraph IV.5913 above.

IV.5917. Clegg also provided to the OFT as part of an Executive Summary a list of key competitors with whom Clegg exchanged information. The name 'Wilmott Dixon Limited' appears on this list.⁷⁵⁹⁹

IV.5918. In its response to the Statement, Clegg stated '[i]t is not disputed that Clegg participated in cover pricing during the relevant period set out in the Statement'.⁷⁶⁰⁰

Witness evidence from leniency applicant Clegg

IV.5919. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, Clegg's employees provided general explanation of its participation in and recording of cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.274 to IV.292 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

⁷⁶⁰⁰ Written representations of Clegg, 27 June 2008, paragraph 51.

IV.5920. In particular estimator Leslie Hunt ('LH'), the senior estimator for Clegg, who dealt with this tender noted during interview that on Tender Details & Summary reports a 'C' next to a competitor's name means that Clegg gave that company a cover price.⁷⁶⁰¹ LH was interviewed in regard to this contract and confirmed he was the estimator that dealt with it. LH referred to the entry on the Tender Details & Summary report, and said that the fact that it has a small 'C' next to Willmott Dixon and an exact figure gave him the impression that it was a cover price given to Willmott Dixon by Clegg. LH explained that as the Tender Details & Summary report included an exact figure of £1,824,093 this indicated this was the figure Clegg gave as a cover price rather than something it found out after the bidding process.⁷⁶⁰² LH confirmed that if the information had been received after the bidding process had completed, he would have written a more approximate figure such as '1.8 or 1.82'. LH could not recall dealing with anyone from Willmott Dixon but referred to an entry in his personal contact book⁷⁶⁰³ for Willmott Dixon and the name 'Reg Chester' and the telephone number '[.....] [C]'.⁷⁶⁰⁴

IV.5921. In its response to the Statement, Willmott Dixon's legal representatives stated *'[n]or does the appearance of the letter "c" next to the bid submitted by our client constitute "strong and compelling" evidence of the existence of cover-pricing. It is equally plausible that the letter "c" could refer to "Chester", the surname of the consultant, or that it might refer to "competitor", to identify a business known to be pricing keenly. Our client cannot accept that there is no other "plausible" explanation for the appearance of the letter "c", other than an agreement on cover-pricing.'*⁷⁶⁰⁵

IV.5922. The OFT does not accept Willmott Dixon's alternative explanations for the Clegg Tender Details & Summary Report entry 'WILMOTT DIXON (C) £1,824,093' as the alternatives are inconsistent with, and unsupported by, the contemporaneous written evidence and the corroborating witness statements. LH of Clegg confirmed in interview that where a 'C' was recorded next to a competitor's name, this meant that Clegg gave that company a cover price.

IV.5923. In its response to the Statement, Willmott Dixon also stated *'...Mr. Chester was not employed by [Willmott Dixon] at the time but was working on a freelance basis as a self employed consultant for various construction companies (including [Willmott Dixon]). While operating in this capacity, Mr. Chester spent some time in [Willmott Dixon's] office and had the use of a "hot desk", which explains why the telephone number referred to in the [Statement] (being [Willmott Dixon's] Birmingham office) appears in the contact book.'*⁷⁶⁰⁶ It further stated '...as Mr. Chester was working on a freelance basis for [Willmott Dixon] (as well as for other contractors), we doubt very much whether he would ever have been instructed or requested to obtain a cover price on behalf of [Willmott Dixon]'.⁷⁶⁰⁷

IV.5924. It is not the OFT's case that the cover price was definitely given to Mr Chester rather than to any other employee at Willmott Dixon and the existence of an infringement is not based on that assumption. However, it appears to the OFT that Mr Chester, in working as a consultant for Willmott Dixon, working in Willmott Dixon's office and having a Willmott Dixon telephone number, would in all likelihood have been acting as agent for Willmott Dixon and therefore formed part of the same undertaking (see further paragraphs III.28 to III.36 of Legal Background above). Thus the OFT does consider that, even if the cover price was transmitted to Mr Chester rather than any employee of Willmott Dixon, that would not undermine the finding of Willmott Dixon's participation in and liability for the Infringement.

IV.5925. In its response to the Statement, Willmott Dixon further stated '[Willmott Dixon] believes it would have been strongly disinclined to take a cover price for this particular tender, not only because there are so few instances of cover-pricing ever having occurred in relation to [Willmott Dixon] but also because the tendering authority in this case (Nottinghamshire County Council) is a major partner of [Willmott Dixon] and education is one of [Willmott Dixon's] primary sectors.'⁷⁶⁰⁸

IV.5926. The OFT does not consider the client's 'major partner', status to undermine the analysis that Willmott Dixon took a cover price from Clegg in respect of this tender. On the contrary, the OFT considers the fact that the client was a 'major partner' of Willmott Dixon to have been a strong incentive for Willmott Dixon to have obtained a cover price and submit that cover price as its bid, rather than decline to bid or submit a unilateral price that was uncompetitive but potentially unrealistic.

IV.5927. In its response to the Statement, Willmott Dixon also submitted '...that it is not uncommon for parties to become aware of prices tendered after the bids have gone in and this seems to offer a perfectly plausible explanation as to why the figure of £1,824,093 appears on Clegg's report. Nor does it seem at all implausible to suggest that an individual might record an exact figure, as opposed to a more approximate number.'⁷⁶⁰⁹ The OFT notes that the witness evidence of LH, as outlined above at IV.5920, clearly explains Clegg's ordinary business practice in respect of recording cover prices and prices post tender. Therefore, the available evidence, in totality, does not support Willmott Dixon's assertions in respect of Clegg's internal price recording procedure.

IV.5928. Willmott Dixon further submitted that the number written on the Tender Details & Summary Report is exactly the same as the bid it submitted, whereas, it argued, if the number was a cover price it would be expected that the submitted bid would have been inflated. Whilst the OFT notes that companies taking cover prices sometimes inflate those numbers when they submit their bids, it is also recognised that this does not always happen and the absence of a further inflation by the party taking cover cannot be taken as an indication that the recorded figure was not a cover price.

Evidence from other companies – Willmott Dixon

IV.5929. The OFT wrote to Willmott Dixon on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission

⁷⁶⁰⁸ Written representations of Willmott Dixon, 27 June 2008, paragraph 28.

⁷⁶⁰⁹ Written representations of Willmott Dixon, 27 June 2008, paragraph 29.

that Willmott Dixon had participated in bid rigging on this tender. Willmott Dixon, represented by Berwin Leighton Paisner LLP, indicated via email and telephone message on 26 April 2007 and subsequently by letter on 27 April 2007 that it would not be taking up this offer.⁷⁶¹⁰

IV.5930. The OFT subsequently wrote to Willmott Dixon's ultimate parent company at the time of this Infringement, Willmott Dixon Limited, on 6 November 2007, asking it to comment on Willmott Dixon's response to the OFT's Fast Track Offer, given that the OFT intended to hold Willmott Dixon Limited jointly and severally liable for any infringements committed by Willmott Dixon in respect of which the OFT ultimately decided to impose financial penalties. In response to this letter, Willmott Dixon Limited stated '... the decision was taken by the subsidiary, and is now confirmed by the parent, not to accept the reduction in penalty offer ...'.⁷⁶¹¹

IV.5931. In its response to the Statement, Willmott Dixon stated '...whilst we do not contest the facts as set out in the [Statement] in relation to the Gotham tender, we do question the legal inferences that the OFT proposes to draw from this set of facts, in particular, the suggestion that the evidence as stated constitutes "strong and compelling" evidence of cover-pricing'.⁷⁶¹²

IV.5933. Clegg and Willmott Dixon each accepted an invitation to tender for this contract. Willmott Dixon was unable to submit a tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this tender.

IV.5934. Clegg's contemporaneous Tender Details & Summary report, a document completed by hand by estimators, in this case noting the estimator for the tender as being LH, records under the heading 'Other Tenderers' five competitors who were also invited to tender for this contract, namely Wildgoose, Linpave, Linford, Willmott Dixon and Sol. Where Willmott Dixon has been written, next to it is '(C) £1,824,093', which Clegg has confirmed shows that a cover price was given to Willmott Dixon. The report was completed on 13 December 2004, a day before the tender return deadline.

IV.5935. The OFT notes that although five competitors have been recorded on the Tender Details & Summary report, only one of these has a 'C' and a price figure next to it, i.e. Willmott Dixon. This shows that Clegg specifically recorded that an exchange of information took place with that company out of all those that submitted a tender bid. The OFT further notes that the price figure noted against Willmott Dixon's name on Clegg's document is identical to the bid submitted by Willmott Dixon.

IV.5936. In its leniency application Clegg admitted in respect of this particular tender that the estimator recalled giving a cover price to Willmott Dixon.⁷⁶¹³ When questioned regarding this tender, LH had knowledge of Willmott Dixon and in interview noted that a 'C' with a figure next to it would indicate a cover price and the company to whom it had been given. LH noted that an exact figure being present by the name Willmott Dixon indicated Clegg had provided that figure as a cover price. In his contact book LH also has the name of a contact at Willmott Dixon and the telephone number '[.....] [C]'. This number [.....] [C] is a publicly listed telephone number of Willmott Dixon.⁷⁶¹⁴ Furthermore, Clegg admitted that Willmott Dixon was one of the competitors with whom it engaged in the exchange of information.⁷⁶¹⁵

IV.5937. In addition, the OFT notes that Nottinghamshire County Council received a tendered amount of £1,824,093 from Willmott Dixon, which is higher than the amount tendered by Clegg. This fits into the pattern consistent with a cover price having been given from Clegg to Willmott Dixon.

IV.5938. Although Willmott Dixon has not admitted engaging in this bid rigging activity, the OFT notes that it was not the successful party for this tender and as such may not have any records. The OFT notes that while Willmott Dixon does not consider the OFT's evidence to be strong and compelling, it has stated that it does not contest the facts in respect of this tender.

IV.5939. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between Clegg and Willmott Dixon. The OFT also concludes that Clegg supplied a figure to Willmott Dixon for a cover bid.

IV.5940. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.5913 to IV.5939 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.⁷⁶¹⁶ In particular:

- (a) the provision of a figure for a cover bid from Clegg to Willmott Dixon was not unilateral⁷⁶¹⁷, and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;⁷⁶¹⁸
- (b) Willmott Dixon can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from Clegg (i.e. the cover price) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process;⁷⁶¹⁹ and
- (c) Clegg can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from Willmott Dixon (i.e. that Willmott Dixon did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process.⁷⁶²⁰

IV.5941. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that an agreement and/or concerted practice was in place between Clegg and Willmott Dixon in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the tender for Gotham Primary School, involving the construction of a new single-storey primary school, services installation and site works, date of tender 14 December 2004.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.5942. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.5943. Clegg informed the OFT of the bid rigging activities in respect of this tender before the OFT became aware of these activities from any other source. Clegg will therefore receive 100 per cent immunity from the fine that the OFT is imposing in respect of this tender.

Infringement 213: New Warehouse, Green Road, Penistone, Sheffield – 15
December 2004
Client: Carr Lynch Partnership
Parties: Totty Building⁷⁶²¹ and T & C Williams

IV.5944. On 24 November 2004, the Carr Lynch Partnership sought tenders for a new warehouse, Green Road, Penistone, Sheffield. The return date for the tender was 15 December 2004 and four companies were invited to tender: T & C Williams, C R Gibbs & Sons Ltd, Totty Building and Jarvale Construction Ltd.⁷⁶²²

IV.5945. The Carr Lynch Partnership received the following tenders before 12:00 noon on 15 December 2004:⁷⁶²³

Company	Date and Time tender received	Amount of tender	Awarded the tender
T & C Williams	Before 12:00 noon 15 December 2004	£195,809
C R Gibbs & Sons Ltd	Before 12:00 noon 15 December 2004	£181,320
Totty Building	Before 12:00 noon 15 December 2004	£215,486
Jarvale Construction Ltd	Before 12:00 noon 15 December 2004	£157,909	Yes

Contemporaneous documentary evidence from leniency applicant Propensity – form of tender, tender appraisal sheet and handwritten note

IV.5946. Three documents were taken during the section 28 visit at Propensity's premises on 22 March 2006: a Form of Tender, a tender appraisal sheet and a handwritten note. The Form of Tender states that Totty Building's tender was £215,486.⁷⁶²⁴

⁷⁶²¹ Totty Building is a subsidiary of Propensity and at the time of this tender was known as Totty Building Services Ltd. Propensity was the intermediate parent company of Totty Building. The ultimate parent company, from 17 December 2002, was Propensity Group.

Evidence from leniency applicant Propensity

IV.5949. As part of its leniency application, Propensity provided a general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.537 to IV.566 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.5950. In particular, Propensity provided to the OFT a table of cover pricing from 1 January 2000 and in respect of this tender stated that Propensity 'possibly took a cover, though do not know from whom'.⁷⁶²⁸ Propensity also provided a table of analysis of documents taken by the OFT during its section 28 visit on 22 March 2006, and in respect of this tender Alan Loveday ('AL'), a commercial manager at Totty Building, said that he thought that Totty Building took a cover price on this tender.⁷⁶²⁹

IV.5951. Propensity also spoke to AL and reported in respect of this contract that, 'Alan Loveday thinks that Totty did take a cover price on this project. He has some recollection of doing so'.⁷⁶³⁰

IV.5952. In respect of an electronic search, Propensity provided a report which included the following comments:

'AL explained that this tender had come in via Carr Lynch, the quantity surveyors, but it had come in much later than they were led to believe it would be. AL explained that this had placed a lot of pressure on the Estimating Department and they found that they couldn't price it. AL stated that they took a cover price and supplied the cover price to the client. AL thought that the handwritten price on the form of tender in document EJF/85 [A0544] had been given to them by a competitor.

AL explained that Lotus, C R Gibbs, T & C Williams and Parkland Lodge were all main contractors and he stated that John Hardy was an Estimator at T & C Williams. AL confirmed that the cover might have been taken from T & C Williams, however, he could not confirm this.

AL confirmed that the signature on the Form in document EJF/85 [A0544] was Tim Lavin's, who is a Senior Estimator at Totty Building Services Ltd. AL stated that Tim Lavin would have contacted the other contractor and obtained the cover price. However, AL stated that Tim Lavin would have spoken to him about it as well although he could not confirm that he actually did but the decision to put in a cover price would have been cleared by him.

In respect of document EJF/86 [A0546], AL confirmed that the handwritten note "not pricing" was his own'.⁷⁶³¹

IV.5953. In its response to the Statement, Propensity stated '...Propensity Group has made admissions in relation to all instances of cover pricing it uncovered as part of its leniency application'.⁷⁶³²

Witness evidence from leniency applicant Propensity

IV.5954. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, Propensity's employees provided further general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.537 to IV.566 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.5955. AL confirmed in interview that the handwriting on document A0547 was Tim Lavin's.⁷⁶³³ AL also said in respect of the handwritten entries 'T & C Williams – John Hardy – [.....] [C]' and '£215,400.00' that, 'The fact he's got T & C Williams phone number down there does suggest to me that that figure 215400 has come from T & C Williams' and '..it's an unwritten rule that if somebody gives you a cover price that's the minimum price that you put in. And generally speaking we always stick with that price so that when a tender result is issued to everyone once the contract's awarded, which is common practice by the client, then you can see that people have actually maintained the position that you gave them'.⁷⁶³⁴

IV.5956. AL confirmed that he made the handwritten entry 'Not Pricing' on document A0546, and that it shows that, 'we're taking a cover. Not pricing it to the extent that you go through a full process'.⁷⁶³⁵ AL also confirmed that he was fully aware that Tim Lavin was taking a cover price on this tender, and that 'He would do that under my direction'.⁷⁶³⁶

Evidence from leniency applicant T & C Williams

IV.5957. As part of its leniency application, T & C Williams provided a general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.635 to IV.649 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.5958. In its response to the Statement, T & C Williams stated 'T&C Williams does not dispute the factual basis of the allegations'⁷⁶³⁷ in respect of the Infringements.

Witness evidence from leniency applicant T & C Williams

IV.5959. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, T & C Williams's employees provided further general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.635 to IV.649 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.5960. In respect of this tender John Hardy ('JH'), the estimator at T & C Williams, recalled that, '...it's a project which I do remember we ended up third on it, it was a job that we thought we were competitive on because we had, we'd done the previous phase and we thought we'd priced it competitively but we ended up third'.⁷⁶³⁸ On being shown by the OFT the handwritten Totty Building document A0547, JH said that, '...if it says they got it [the cover price] from me, then I can only assume that I did but I can't recall doing it'.⁷⁶³⁹

IV.5961. Brian Barker ('BB'), the Managing Director at T & C Williams, on being shown by the OFT the handwritten notes described in paragraph IV.5948 above, said that, 'It's got T & C Williams and John Hardy and the telephone number on it, that's our telephone number yes but then there's a figure written down at the bottom....'.⁷⁶⁴⁰ He said that he could not be sure that T & C Williams provided cover.

The OFT's analysis of the evidence and finding

IV.5962. From the evidence presented above, the OFT draws the following conclusions.

IV.5963. Totty Building and T & C Williams each accepted an invitation to tender for this contract.

IV.5964. Totty Building was unable to submit a tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this tender.

IV.5965. T & C Williams completed the estimating process for the tender for this contract and it appears that it submitted a bid with the hope of winning the work. This is shown by T & C Williams saying that 'we thought we'd priced it competitively' in respect of its submitted price.

- IV.5966. In regard to T & C Williams, the handwritten note found at Propensity states, 'T & C Williams – John Hardy – [.....] [C]' and '£215,400.00'. Propensity has confirmed that this shows that it received a cover price from T & C Williams. Totty Building recorded the figure £215,400.00 on the handwritten note, and Totty Building submitted a figure only £486 higher than this.
- IV.5967. The OFT notes that in respect of the cover price provided by T & C Williams to Totty Building, AL confirmed that Totty Building would stick with, or near to the cover price provided when submitting its bid for this tender.
- IV.5968. Furthermore, Propensity has confirmed that it spoke to an estimator at T & C Williams, John Hardy, in order to obtain the cover price. This telephone number, [.....] [C], is a telephone number for T & C Williams, providing further corroboration that T & C Williams was telephoned by Totty Building in connection with this tender.
- IV.5969. Totty Building's tender appraisal sheet for this tender is marked 'Not Pricing' and 'Not able to price', consistent with obtaining a cover price for this tender.
- IV.5970. The OFT notes that T & C Williams said that it priced the job competitively and that JH accepted that he might have provided Totty Building with a cover price for this tender.
- IV.5971. The OFT notes in addition that the tender submitted by Totty Building was higher than the tender submitted by T & C Williams, a pattern consistent with a cover price having been provided.
- IV.5972. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between T & C Williams and Totty Building. The OFT also concludes that T & C Williams supplied a figure to Totty Building for a cover bid.
- IV.5973. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.5946 to IV.5972 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.⁷⁶⁴¹ In particular:
- (a) the provision of a figure for a cover bid from T & C Williams to Totty Building was not unilateral⁷⁶⁴², and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;⁷⁶⁴³
 - (b) Totty Building can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from T & C Williams (i.e. the cover price) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process;⁷⁶⁴⁴ and
 - (c) T & C Williams can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from Totty Building (i.e. that Totty Building did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its conduct in the tendering process.⁷⁶⁴⁵

⁷⁶⁴¹ See paragraphs III.3 and III.89 to III.126 of the Legal Background section.

⁷⁶⁴² See paragraph IV.73 of the General comments on cover pricing section.

⁷⁶⁴³ See paragraphs III.48 to III.51 and III.93 to III.94 of the Legal Background section.

⁷⁶⁴⁴ See paragraphs III.58, III.95 to III.96, and III.125 of the Legal Background section.

⁷⁶⁴⁵ See paragraphs III.58, III.95 to III.96, and III.125 of the Legal Background section.

IV.5974. In its response to the Statement, T & C Williams stated in respect of this Infringement '...[w]ithout knowledge or contact with the other tenderers, and given T & C Williams' undisputed desire to win the tender, it cannot be safely presumed that T & C Williams would have modified its conduct in any way on the basis of having given a cover to one other tenderer...'.⁷⁶⁴⁶

IV.5975. The OFT notes that the presumption that an undertaking involved in an exchange of information with a competitor and who acts on the market, for example by submitting a tender, is a legal presumption⁷⁶⁴⁷ and that therefore the OFT is not required to adduce evidence in support of this. The OFT does not consider that T & C Williams has rebutted the application of the presumption in this case. To the extent that T & C Williams submits that this Infringement should not be treated as serious because no effects have been shown, this point is addressed in Step 1 of Section VI (Enforcement) below.

IV.5976. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that an agreement and/or concerted practice was in place between Totty Building and T & C Williams, in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the tender for a new warehouse, Green Road, Penistone, Sheffield, tender deadline 15 December 2004.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.5977. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.5978. In respect of this tender, the OFT became aware of the bid rigging activities by virtue of the information obtained during the visit under section 28 to Propensity on 22 March 2006. Propensity will not therefore receive 100 per cent immunity in respect of this tender. However, Propensity will receive its normal leniency percentage reduction from the fine that the OFT is imposing in respect of this tender.

IV.5979. In respect of this tender, the OFT became aware of T & C Williams's involvement in bid rigging activities by virtue of the information obtained during the visit to Propensity. T & C Williams will not therefore receive 100 per cent immunity in respect of this tender. However, T & C Williams will receive its normal leniency percentage reduction from the fine that the OFT is imposing in respect of this tender.

Infringement 214: Humanities Research Institute, University of Sheffield – 23
December 2004
Client: University of Sheffield
Parties: Admiral and Quarmby

IV.5980. On 11 November 2004, the University of Sheffield sought tenders for the Humanities Research Institute at the University of Sheffield. The return date for the tender was 23 December 2004 and five companies were invited to tender: Admiral, Interserve, Quarmby, William Birch & Sons and Simpson Construction.⁷⁶⁴⁸

IV.5981. The University of Sheffield received the following tender returns by 23 December 2004:⁷⁶⁴⁹

Company	Date tender received	Amount of tender	Awarded the tender
Admiral	By 23 December 2004	£1,527,272
Interserve	By 23 December 2004	£1,396,890

Evidence from leniency applicant Admiral

IV.5984. As part of its leniency application, Admiral provided a general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.166 to IV.173 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.5985. In particular, Admiral provided to the OFT an analysis of its projects since January 2000 and in respect of this tender, Admiral confirmed that it received a cover price from Quarmby.⁷⁶⁵² Furthermore, Admiral provided a schedule which lists names and companies who it contacted about tenders. This schedule includes D Harrison at Quarmby.⁷⁶⁵³

IV.5986. Following the issue of the Statement, Admiral did not make any specific written or oral representations in respect of this Infringement.

IV.5987. In its response to the Statement, Quarmby questioned the reliability of the schedule of projects which formed Appendix 1 of Admiral's leniency application, on the basis that AC's 'recollections would have been of critical importance in compiling' that document, and yet if he was unable to recall the tender when interviewed then his compilation of Appendix 1 must be called into question.⁷⁶⁵⁴ The OFT disagrees that there is anything inherently unacceptable in an individual refreshing their memory from available contemporaneous documentation, or on a corporate leniency application being drawn up based on documentary sources. Whilst the OFT does not accord leniency documents such as this the same evidential weight as contemporaneous documents and witness testimony, it does consider there is some evidential value in a statement such as this compiled and submitted to represent the conclusions of a leniency applicant's internal investigations. The OFT considers that if Appendix 1 were compiled with the assistance of the contemporaneous documents, rather than solely from AC's recollection, that would in fact provide a sounder basis on which to conclude that Appendix 1 is reliable than would a document compiled purely from an individual's memory 13 months after the event.

Witness evidence from leniency applicant Admiral

IV.5988. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, Admiral's employees provided further general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.166 to IV.173 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.5989. AC confirmed in interview that it is his handwriting on the two handwritten documents.⁷⁶⁵⁵ In respect of the handwritten note headed, 'HUMANITIES BUILDING'⁷⁶⁵⁶, AC explained that, 'I must have rung up a subcontractor, or material supplier, the usual story, have you priced this particular contract for anyone? Ah yes, we have and these are the names that they gave me'.⁷⁶⁵⁷

IV.5990. In respect of the handwritten note headed 'BT Phone Disc Standard Version'⁷⁶⁵⁸ AC said in respect of the reference to 'David Harrison' that 'I would have rung Quarmby's anyway; David Harrison may have been the chap I spoke to.....I would have rung him and said, are you pricing this? He must have said yes. Ah, then when you have your figure ready, give me a ring at 4:30 on Wednesday...'.⁷⁶⁵⁹

IV.5991. AC said that 'when I rang him back, he obviously gave me one or two things that I needed to put into our bid, or our tender, which was to say that there was no work outside the site boundary included within the figure'.⁷⁶⁶⁰ AC said that the 'suggested Contingency excluded by 60k', was suggested by David Harrison and that the column of handwritten text on the left hand side of the document ending in 'O/H & Profit' were the items that David Harrison said were included in the Quarmby tender figure.⁷⁶⁶¹

IV.5992. In respect of the entry 'not SiLLY Distance away', AC explained that 'He [David Harrison] must have told me our figure wasn't a lot ofwell, wasn't a great distance away from their figure that they were going in at.⁷⁶⁶² AC said he suspected that the figure of '£1,487,250' was 'a figure that he gave me as our figure, as our cover figure, and it looks, and I may be wrong, but it looks as if I've then added 40,000 to that, probably based on the information that he said, you're not a silly distance away'.⁷⁶⁶³ AC further corroborated that the handwritten note '+40KACL', was the £40,000 added to the cover price given by Quarmby and that 'ACL' stood for Admiral.⁷⁶⁶⁴ AC also confirmed that David Harrison told him to 'Include £2000 PROV SUMS EMPLOYERS', 'Not include fees' and 'Excluded contingency' in respect of Admiral's tender figure.⁷⁶⁶⁵

IV.5993. In its response to the Statement, Quarmby stated that AC had no specific recollection of the tender for this project, but 'merely reconstructs' from Appendix 1 of Admiral's leniency application and the contemporaneous documentation.⁷⁶⁶⁶ The OFT notes that AC was able to explain the contemporaneous documents both of which were in his handwriting. The OFT considers this a valid verification of the contents of those documents and is satisfied that the documents themselves, taken together with AC's explanation of them, is strong and compelling evidence that a cover price was provided.

Evidence from other companies – Quarmby

IV.5994. The OFT wrote to Quarmby on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that Quarmby, had participated in bid rigging on this tender. The OFT telephoned the Managing Director of Quarmby on 6 June 2007 to inform him that due to Quarmby's lack of response to the OFT's letter dated 22 March 2007, the OFT were treating this as a rejection of the OFT's Fast Track Offer. The Managing Director confirmed this.⁷⁶⁶⁷

IV.5995. The OFT subsequently wrote to Quarmby's ultimate parent company at the time of this Infringement, St James Securities, on 6 November 2007, asking it to comment on Quarmby's response to the OFT's Fast Track Offer, given that the OFT intended to hold St James Securities jointly and severally liable for any infringements committed by Quarmby in respect of which the OFT ultimately decided to impose financial penalties. In response to this letter, St James Securities said it did not intend to respond to the matters referred to in the OFT's letter.⁷⁶⁶⁸

IV.5996. Following the issue of the Statement, St James Securities did not submit any written or oral representations in respect of this Infringement.

IV.5997. In its response to the Statement, Quarmby stated in respect of the BT Phone Disc document (described at paragraph IV.5983 above) that it '...is annotated with the words "Not Lowest" and "not silly distance away". These annotations are inconsistent with the OFT's inference that the document related to any pre-bid discussions. By contrast, these annotations are entirely consistent with a post-bid note'.⁷⁶⁶⁹ The OFT notes that AC stated in interview *'I don't know why that's on there, I genuinely don't'*⁷⁶⁷⁰ in respect of the words 'Not Lowest' and explained, as outlined in IV.5992 above, the meaning of the words 'not silly distance away'. The OFT does not accept Quarmby's assertion that the entries on this document were made post bid as AC confirmed in interview that they were made before the tender was submitted.⁷⁶⁷¹

IV.5998. Moreover, other annotations, such as 'suggested contingency' and the qualification relating to works outside the site boundary are incompatible with an explanation of solely post-tender contact. Similarly, the sums by which Admiral reached its tender figure cannot be explained by this being a post-tender document. In any event, even if the entry 'Not Lowest' was made at a different time from the remainder of the entries (and the OFT notes from the document that this entry is set apart from other entries and in different style), the timing of this particular entry does not change the fact that there is no satisfactory alternative explanation for the remaining entries on the document and that the document should therefore be regarded as a contemporaneous record of Quarmby providing a cover price to Admiral in respect of this tender.

IV.5999. In its response to the Statement, Quarmby noted that the allegations against it do not include the taking of cover prices, only the giving. This is stated to be 'important circumstantial evidence in support of QCC's contention that it has not and does not give cover prices...to merely give cover prices would be to confer on one's competitors a benefit without any advantage to oneself and consequently would be commercially inexplicable and irrational'.⁷⁶⁷²

IV.6000. First, the OFT notes that only three alleged infringements were pursued against each non-leniency party, out of a wider pool of evidence available to the OFT⁷⁶⁷³ and so the fact that the three allegations in the Statement regarding Quarmby related only to the giving of cover prices cannot be taken as meaningful evidence of Quarmby's pattern of behaviour. Second, the OFT does not accept that the giving of a cover price confers a benefit on competitors without any benefit to the firm in question.

IV.6001. Moreover, the OFT notes that in addition to the evidence from Admiral relating to it taking a cover price from Quarmby on this tender, the OFT also has strong and compelling evidence relating to Strata taking a cover price from Quarmby (Infringement 6) and York House taking a cover price from Quarmby (Infringement 233). The OFT considers it highly improbable that all three of these companies would have mistakenly identified Quarmby as a participant in cover pricing if indeed Quarmby never gave cover prices.

IV.6002. In its response to the Statement, Quarmby asserted that it neither gave nor took cover prices as a matter of its corporate policy, and provided witness evidence in support of this assertion.⁷⁶⁷⁴ The OFT notes in this regard the evidence of Roger Nelson, Quarmby's Commercial Director, who described becoming aware of the illegality of cover pricing in 2004, and went on to state:

⁷⁶⁶⁹ Written representations of Quarmby, 26 June 2008, paragraph 2.12(b)(ii)(B).

⁷⁶⁷⁰ Interview transcript, OFT Document Reference 13299, page 44.

⁷⁶⁷¹ Interview transcript, OFT Document Reference 13299, pages 43, 44 and 45.

⁷⁶⁷² Written representations of Quarmby, 27 June 2008, paragraph 2.7

⁷⁶⁷³ See paragraph II.1470 of Section II (The OFT's Investigation).

⁷⁶⁷⁴ Written representations of Quarmby, 27 June 2008, paragraph 2.8.

'David Jones [Quarmby's Managing Director] and I agreed that even though we thought it highly unlikely cover price had occurred or was occurring at QCC (because it was not our practice to do so) we should take measures to reinforce the message that no-one within QCC was engaged in the practice of cover pricing or would be in future'.⁷⁶⁷⁵

IV.6003. The OFT takes from this evidence that despite Quarmby's stated policy of not engaging in cover pricing activities, the Commercial Director and Managing Director were not certain that staff were not engaging in cover pricing, but only thought that it was 'highly unlikely' and that this uncertainty justified taking further action to prevent Quarmby's engagement in cover bidding. The OFT therefore considers that any such policy held by Quarmby does not undermine the evidence presented in relation to the giving of cover by Quarmby in this instance.

IV.6004. In its response to the Statement, Quarmby stated its Chief Estimator at the time, David Harrison ('DH'), has a specific recollection of this particular tender, and that *'[i]t is reasonable to assume that if David Harrison recollects submitting a tender as he affirms, he would also recollect giving a cover price, which he affirms he does not...'*⁷⁶⁷⁶ The OFT notes firstly that DH states only that he 'vaguely recalls this tender' and that he does not *'believe that Quarmby gave a cover price to Admiral'*⁷⁶⁷⁷, statements which fall short of a denial of engaging in cover pricing activity. Second, it does not accept Quarmby's assertion that DH would necessarily have recalled giving a cover price even if he did clearly recall submitting a tender in respect of this Infringement. The OFT notes that the work involved in compiling a tender is much more significant than the brief contact(s) required to provide a cover price to a fellow bidder and therefore considers that the compilation of a tender is more likely to be recalled than the giving of a cover price.

IV.6005. In its response to the Statement, Quarmby contended *'...that the submission by ACL of a price that is 14% greater than the competitive tender is; inconsistent with the rationale for submitting a cover price for the bid (as it would be so much higher than the other competitive bidders as to lack credibility): and is inconsistent with ACL's approach of adding 4-5% to a price when giving a cover price...'*⁷⁶⁷⁸ The OFT notes that there was no exact range or standard formula used by the construction industry for the calculation of cover prices. The OFT does not accept Quarmby's assertion that the price difference between its submitted bid and the bid submitted by Admiral was too high for Admiral's price to have been a cover price provided by Quarmby; it is consistent with Quarmby providing an enhanced figure by way of cover, and Admiral themselves enhancing it further before onward transmission to the client. Indeed, according to AC's evidence at interview, explaining the contemporaneous documentation, Admiral added the sum of £40,000 to the cover price given to it by Quarmby, such that the figure of £1,487,250 provided to Admiral by Quarmby was only 11 per cent above Quarmby's own bid.

The OFT's analysis of the evidence and finding

IV.6006. From the evidence and arguments presented above, and having taken into account the representations made by the Parties, the OFT draws the following conclusions.

IV.6007. Admiral and Quarmby each accepted an invitation to tender for this contract.

IV.6008. Admiral was unable to submit a tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this tender.

IV.6009. In regard to Quarmby, Admiral has confirmed that it received a cover price from Quarmby. AC's handwritten note records 'David Harrison' above the printed name, address and telephone number for Quarmby, providing evidence that contact was made between the two parties. AC made a handwritten annotation of the cover price provided by Quarmby, £1,487,250 and that this was 'not a silly distance away' from Quarmby's own bid. AC then apparently added some £40,000 to this cover price and this was the figure, £1,527,272 that Admiral submitted as its tender figure.

IV.6010. Also, in regard to the Admiral handwritten note 'Ring 4.30 Wednesday', the OFT considers more specifically that Admiral was to phone Quarmby's estimator on the day before the date for submitting the tender, in order to obtain a cover price. The OFT takes this to mean Wednesday 22 December 2004, the day before the date for return of tenders, and notes that this is consistent with the pattern of cover pricing (with transmission of figures frequently taking place at the last minute). AC also made a note of a number of items that DH at Quarmby apparently said were included in Quarmby's tender figure.

IV.6011. Admiral also provided a schedule which lists names and companies who it contacted about tenders. This schedule lists D Harrison at Quarmby, providing further corroboration that Admiral contacted DH at Quarmby about cover pricing in respect of tenders. DH has confirmed that he was Estimating Manager at Quarmby from 1998 until 2006.⁷⁶⁷⁹

IV.6012. The OFT notes in addition that the tender submitted by Admiral was higher than the tender submitted by Quarmby, a pattern consistent with a cover price having been provided.

IV.6013. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between Quarmby and Admiral. The OFT also concludes that Quarmby supplied a figure to Admiral for a cover bid.

IV.6014. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.5982 to IV.6013 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.⁷⁶⁸⁰ In particular:

- (a) the provision of a figure for a cover bid from Quarmby to Admiral was not unilateral⁷⁶⁸¹, and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;⁷⁶⁸²

⁷⁶⁷⁹ Witness statement of David Harrison, paragraphs 3 to 5.

⁷⁶⁸⁰ See paragraphs III.3 and III.89 to III.126 of the Legal Background section.

- (b) Admiral can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from Quarmby (i.e. the cover price) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process;⁷⁶⁸³ and
- (c) Quarmby can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from Admiral (i.e. that Admiral did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its conduct in the tendering process.⁷⁶⁸⁴

IV.6015. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that an agreement and/or concerted practice was in place between Admiral and Quarmby, in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the tender for the Humanities Research Institute at the University of Sheffield, tender deadline 23 December 2004.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.6016. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.6017. Admiral informed the OFT of the bid rigging activities in respect of this tender before the OFT became aware of these activities from any other source. Admiral will therefore receive 100 per cent immunity from the fine that the OFT is imposing in respect of this tender.

Infringement 215: 14 Redlands Road – 28 January 2005
Client: University of Reading
Parties: Mansell and A H Willis

IV.6018. On 10 December 2004 the University of Reading sought tenders for the conversion to flats, 14 Redlands Road.⁷⁶⁸⁵ The following six companies were invited to tender: A H Willis, Cavendish Construction, Crown Construction & Interiors Ltd, Francis, H N Edwards & Partners Ltd and Mansell. The date and time of tender return was 28 January 2005 at 12:00 noon.⁷⁶⁸⁶

IV.6019. The University of Reading received the following tender returns:⁷⁶⁸⁷

Evidence of agreement and/or concerted practice

Contemporaneous documentary evidence from leniency applicant Mansell – tender spreadsheet

IV.6020. As part of its leniency application, Mansell's legal representatives provided workload reports of Barry Russ ('BR'), a Mansell managing estimator. The 2005 workload report for special projects contained the following entry:⁷⁶⁸⁸

EST NO.	LOCATION/DESCRIPTION	OUR BID
		BID	NET	LESS PROV.	%	MARGIN
02-00289	Reading Univ – 14 Redlands Road		299855	299855

OTHER BIDS			RESULT		REMARKS
LOWEST	SECOND	HIGHEST	POSN.	POSS.%
230293	263148	310505	5/6	-23.20%	(AH Willis)

IV.6021. In its response to the Statement, A H Willis submitted that the workload reports were unreliable because, based on BR's explanation of his record keeping practices, i.e. that the entry might have been made weeks in advance⁷⁶⁸⁹, it was possible that an entry was made prior to obtaining cover and then not corrected if a cover was actually received from a different company other than that indicated in the workload report.⁷⁶⁹⁰

IV.6022. The OFT notes that the accuracy of similar markings in BR's workload reports indicating that a cover price was obtained has been corroborated by evidence or admissions from other Parties in respect of other Infringements.⁷⁶⁹¹ In particular, the OFT notes that A H Willis has itself effectively corroborated the accuracy of the workload reports in respect of Infringement 224, where it has admitted that Cyril Elbourn, the estimator for A H Willis on Infringement 224, gave a cover price to Mansell in respect of that tender as indicated in the workload report. The OFT does not, therefore, see any reason to doubt the inference it has drawn in respect of this Infringement, namely that the workload report is an accurate reflection of the source of the cover price obtained by Mansell.

Evidence from leniency applicant Mansell

IV.6023. As part of its leniency application, Mansell's legal representatives provided a general explanation of its part in the process of cover pricing.⁷⁶⁹² This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.470 to IV.502 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.6024. Mansell's legal representatives also provided to the OFT a table showing information relating to tendering activities in which a calculated competitive bid was not submitted, for the Thames Valley Region ('TVR'), which includes this tender. In respect of this tender the table shows that Mansell received a cover price from A H Willis and that this cover price was taken due to 'insufficient tender period: resource' at Mansell.⁷⁶⁹³

IV.6025. In its response to the Statement, A H Willis proposed that this table could not be relied upon as evidence as it 'appears to have been based on the workload report rather than any other evidence'.⁷⁶⁹⁴ While the OFT is not according the same evidential weight to Mansell's table provided under leniency as it is to contemporaneous documents and witness testimony, the OFT considers this document to be robust as it resulted from extensive investigation by Mansell prior to its creation (as described in Mansell's leniency application⁷⁶⁹⁵). This table provides evidence of Mansell's position as to its engagement in cover pricing on this tender, and as such constitutes evidence additional to the available contemporaneous records and witness evidence.

Witness evidence from leniency applicant Mansell

IV.6026. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, BR provided further general explanation of Mansell's participation in cover pricing in the TVR. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.481 to IV.489 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.6027. During an interview with the OFT on 1 May 2007, BR advised how he would record when Mansell had taken a cover as detailed in paragraphs IV.482 to IV.485 above. In relation to this tender BR stated '... in this instance we didn't, or weren't able to ... actually put a bid together so we, we took some help from Willis, by the looks of it'.⁷⁶⁹⁶ In its response to the Statement, Mansell clarified that BR's admission was based on the contemporaneous evidence rather than on independent recollection of taking the cover price.⁷⁶⁹⁷

IV.6028. In its response to the Statement, A H Willis suggested that BR's witness evidence could not be relied upon as evidence because 'it is apparent that Mr Russ has no direct personal recollection of the tenders in question, but is instead proceeding on the basis of his workbook entries'.⁷⁶⁹⁸ The OFT notes that the weight that it places on BR's evidence is commensurate with its explanatory nature, accepting that it does not constitute independent recollection of the events surrounding this tender. Nonetheless, such explanation is of evidential value. Though BR may not recall the details of the exchange of cover pricing, BR provides an explanation of the document he used to record cover prices taken, which the OFT relies upon in support of the contemporaneous evidence.

Evidence from other companies – A H Willis

IV.6029. The OFT wrote to A H Willis on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that A H Willis had participated in bid rigging on this tender. In response to this letter A H Willis stated that, in respect of this tender, there was 'no evidence of bid rigging and the allegation is therefore denied'.⁷⁶⁹⁹

IV.6030. In its response to the Statement, A H Willis suggested that the strength of the evidence in relation to this Infringement falls below that found in Infringement 158 with regard to Allenbuild and Wildgoose, where the OFT had made no preliminary finding of infringement in relation to those parties, and therefore considered that this Infringement should not be pursued.⁷⁷⁰⁰ The OFT does not find these arguments persuasive, noting that in the case of Allenbuild and Wildgoose there was an absence of contemporaneous documentation, whereas in relation to this Infringement the OFT relies not only on the contemporaneous workload reports, but also supporting witness testimony.

IV.6031. Additionally, in its response to the Statement, A H Willis suggested 'it is apparent that the only evidence of AH Willis being involved in providing a cover price to Mansell is in fact the entry in Mr Russ' workbook'.⁷⁷⁰¹ As the CAT stated in Claymore Dairies, cartels by their nature are hidden and secret, and that a single item of evidence may be sufficient to meet the required standard.⁷⁷⁰² For this particular Infringement, the OFT relies not only on the contemporaneous workload report, but also supporting witness testimony which taken together the OFT considers provide strong and compelling evidence that A H Willis gave a cover price to Mansell.

IV.6032. A H Willis also suggested that *'the OFT needs to show that if a cover price was provided it was by an individual in respect of whose actions AH Willis is legally responsible'*⁷⁷⁰³ as opposed to a third party contractor without authority to enter into agreements on behalf of A H Willis. As discussed in paragraphs III.28 to III.36 above, and in Infringement 224, a company is legally responsible for an agent acting on its behalf, in particular where the agent has ostensible authority to do so. Furthermore, nothing in the evidence available in respect of this Infringement suggests that Mansell received a cover price from a third party contractor. Nor is the OFT required to ascertain individual participants in an arrangement in order to establish an infringement between undertakings.

⁷⁷⁰¹ Written representations of A H Willis, 27 June 2008, paragraph 12, and oral representations of A H Willis, 16 July 2008, page 12.

⁷⁷⁰² See paragraph III.203 of the Legal Background section.

⁷⁷⁰³ Written representations of A H Willis, 27 June 2008, paragraph 15.

IV.6033. A H Willis further suggested that the OFT did not provide sufficient information to allow it to effectively defend itself.⁷⁷⁰⁴ The OFT considers the information as set out in the Statement together with the evidence from the OFT's file provided with the Statement was sufficient for A H Willis to review its records and locate the necessary information for its own defence. It appears that to the extent that A H Willis is not able to adduce evidence in its defence this is a product of it not having kept records in respect of this tender, rather than the OFT's case being insufficient. The OFT has no reason to doubt A H Willis' statement that it is unable to find any records relating to this particular Infringement. However, the absence of documentary records cannot of itself exculpate A H Willis from an Infringement where other evidence is available which the OFT considers implicates it, and indeed is sufficient to substantiate its involvement.

IV.6034. In its response to the Statement, A H Willis stated the OFT would 'need to show that Mansell informed AH Willis that it would not be submitting a competitive bid before AH Willis submitted its own bid'⁷⁷⁰⁵, in essence arguing that it should not be presumed to have acted in the market on the basis of the information that Mansell would not be submitting a competitive bid.⁷⁷⁰⁶

IV.6035. The OFT notes that, as stated in paragraphs III.53 to III.54 above, the mere receipt of information that Mansell would not be bidding competitively may be sufficient to establish a concerted practice.⁷⁷⁰⁷ Further, as stated in paragraph III.58, the ECJ has held that 'subject to proof to the contrary, which it is for the economic operators concerned to adduce, there must be a presumption that the undertakings participating in concerting arrangements and remaining active on the market take account of the information exchanged with their competitors when determining their conduct on the market...'⁷⁷⁰⁸

IV.6036. On that basis, the OFT does not need to show that A H Willis inflated its bid (or otherwise altered its conduct) in response to the knowledge that Mansell had accepted a cover price in order to establish that there has been an infringement of the Chapter I prohibition. It is entitled to rely on a presumption that A H Willis has acted on the information received.

IV.6037. The OFT notes that although Mansell's general practice was to receive the actual cover the day before or the morning the tender was due, it usually arranged for the exchange of cover within a few days after receiving the tender.⁷⁷⁰⁹ The OFT also notes that A H Willis submitted its tender on the morning of the tender return date (see paragraph IV.6019) and it is therefore unlikely that Mansell could have requested a cover price from A H Willis after the latter's bid had been submitted. The OFT does not therefore accept that A H Willis has satisfactorily rebutted the legal presumption that it acted upon the knowledge that Mansell had accepted a cover price.

IV.6038. Moreover, an undertaking may 'take account' of the information it receives from a competitor in a number of ways when determining its conduct in relation to this or future tenders, so even if the OFT were to accept A H Willis's assertion that the cover pricing did not affect its actual price submitted (which is not the case), that would be insufficient to demonstrate that the conduct fell short of an agreement and/or concerted practice in breach of the Chapter I prohibition.

The OFT's analysis of the evidence and finding

IV.6039. From the evidence and arguments presented above, and having taken into account the representations made by the Parties, the OFT draws the following conclusions.

IV.6040. Mansell and A H Willis each accepted an invitation to tender for this contract.

IV.6041. Both companies submitted a tender. Mansell was unable to submit a tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this contract.

IV.6042. Mansell's 2005 workload report records '(AH Willis)', in the Remarks column. Mansell confirmed that this shows that it took a cover price from the company noted. In addition, Mansell has confirmed that the lack of figures in the margin and percentage columns would also indicate a cover price had been taken.

IV.6043. The OFT further notes that the tender submitted by Mansell was higher than the tender submitted by A H Willis, the pattern consistent with a cover price having been provided.

IV.6044. In its response to the Statement, A H Willis stated 'While Mansell's bid was higher than that prepared by AH Willis, this provides no evidence that Mansell obtained a cover price from AH Willis...'.⁷⁷¹⁰ The OFT notes that this analysis is not relied upon in evidence and merely sets out that the pattern of the tender bids was consistent with a cover price having been provided by A H Willis to Mansell.

IV.6045. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between Mansell and A H Willis. The OFT also concludes that A H Willis supplied a figure to Mansell for a cover bid.

IV.6046. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.6020 to IV.6045 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.⁷⁷¹¹ In particular:

- (a) the provision of a figure for a cover bid from A H Willis to Mansell was not unilateral⁷⁷¹², and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;⁷⁷¹³

⁷⁷¹⁰ Written representations of A H Willis, 27 June 2008, paragraph 12.c.

⁷⁷¹¹ See paragraphs III.3 and III.89 to III.126 of the Legal Background section.

- (b) Mansell can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from A H Willis (i.e. the cover price) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process;⁷⁷¹⁴ and
- (c) A H Willis can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from Mansell (i.e. that Mansell did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its conduct in the tendering process.⁷⁷¹⁵

IV.6047. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that an agreement and/or concerted practice was in place between Mansell and A H Willis in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the tender for 14 Redlands Road, tender deadline 28 January 2005.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.6048. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.6049. Mansell informed the OFT of the bid rigging activities in respect of this tender before the OFT became aware of these activities from any other source. Mansell will therefore receive 100 per cent immunity from the fine that the OFT is imposing in respect of this tender.

Infringement 216: New Education Centre, George Eliot Hospital, Nuneaton – 14 February 2005
Client: George Eliot Hospital NHS Trust
Parties: Thomas Vale and Shaylor

IV.6050. On 21 and 23 December 2004, George Eliot Hospital NHS Trust ('George Eliot Hospital') sought tenders for a new education centre at George Eliot Hospital, Nuneaton. The following seven companies were invited to tender: Interserve, G F Tomlinson, Thomas Vale, Stepnell Ltd, Marriott Construction, Shaylor and Galliford Try.⁷⁷¹⁶ The deadline for the receipt of tenders was 14 February 2005.⁷⁷¹⁷

IV.6051. George Eliot Hospital received the following tender returns:

Evidence of agreement and/or concerted practice

Contemporaneous documentary evidence from leniency applicant Thomas Vale – Tender Status spreadsheet and tender lists

IV.6052. As part of its leniency application, Thomas Vale provided a contemporaneous Tender Status spreadsheet, which contained the following entry:⁷⁷¹⁸

TENDER NO	DIV	CLIENT	DESCRIPTION	Approx £	EST
T5772	B	George Eliot Hosp NHS Trust	New Education Centre, Geo Eliot Hosp, Nuneaton	3,300,000	CKT

The Tender Status spreadsheet was maintained at Thomas Vale's head office by Christopher Keith Trickett ('CKT'), Chief Estimator at Thomas Vale, who kept a *'little black book'*⁷⁷¹⁹ of contacts, the use of which is referred to in the general explanation of cover pricing at paragraphs IV.689 to IV.717 above. Within this contact list, there is an entry for Shaylor plus names and a telephone number.⁷⁷²⁰

IV.6054. Thomas Vale also maintained an internal list of tenders in progress, the use of which is referred to in the general explanation of cover pricing at paragraphs IV.689 to IV.717 above. Thomas Vale provided three tender lists referring to this tender, for weeks commencing 10 January 2005,⁷⁷²¹ 31 January 2005 and 7 February 2005.⁷⁷²² They are identical except the entry for 10 January 2005 has no entry in the Category column whereas the letter 'B' appears in this column for the entries dated 31 January 2005 and 7 February 2005. The tender list for the week commencing 7 February 2005 is shown below:

Evidence from leniency applicant Thomas Vale

IV.6055. At Annex 14⁷⁷²³ of its leniency application, Thomas Vale's legal representatives compiled a schedule setting out all tenders from 2000 to 2005 in respect of which Thomas Vale had either given or taken a cover price in the West Midlands region. The information on the schedule was based on all available tender and miscellaneous documentation indicating cover prices had been given or received, plus the recollections of staff. At page three of the schedule under Annex 14 and within the section for 2005 tenders is the following entry:⁷⁷²⁴

Tender No	Date	Client	Comments	Cover Given/Taken	Evidence
T5772	14 February	George Eliot Hosp NHS Trust	New Education Centre, Geo Eliot Hosp, Nuneaton	Taken (Shaylor)	Yes (Tender Spreadsheet; Tender List)

IV.6056. The Tender Spreadsheet in the last column is the Tender Status spreadsheet referred to in the general explanation of cover pricing at paragraphs IV.689 to IV.717 above and the Tender List is the internal tender list referred to in that explanation.

IV.6057. Thomas Vale also provided to the OFT a schedule listing key competitors with whom Thomas Vale frequently dealt in relation to cover pricing at Annex 5 of its leniency application⁷⁷²⁵ and Shaylor appears on this list.

IV.6058. Following the issue of the Statement, Thomas Vale did not submit any written or oral representations specifically in respect of this Infringement.

Witness evidence from leniency applicant Thomas Vale

IV.6059. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, Thomas Vale's employees provided further general explanation of its participation in and recording of cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.689 to IV.717 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender. In particular, CKT gave a detailed explanation of the use of the Tender Status spreadsheet to record cover prices from its competitors.

IV.6060. CKT admitted that the initials 'CKT' which appear in the estimator column for this tender were his own and that the letter 'B' which appears in the column marked 'DIV' stands for Building division (also known as Traditional), for which CKT was the estimating manager.⁷⁷²⁶ In interview, CKT referred to the entry for this tender in the Tender Status spreadsheet as follows: 'CKT the estimator, Category B indicating a cover, tender return date 14 February 2005, Thomas Vale tender £4,189,731. Shaylor in bold indicating Shaylor gave us a cover'.⁷⁷²⁷

Evidence from other companies – Shaylor

IV.6061. The OFT wrote to Shaylor on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that Shaylor had participated in bid rigging on this tender. In response, Shaylor stated 'We engaged in non-collusive cover pricing activities on this tender with Thomas Vale'.⁷⁷²⁸

IV.6062. In its response to the Statement, Shaylor stated 'Shaylor is not withdrawing any of these admissions or proposing to challenge the evidence in relation to any of the three alleged infringements'.⁷⁷²⁹

The OFT's analysis of the evidence and finding

IV.6064. Thomas Vale and Shaylor each accepted an invitation to tender for a new education centre at George Eliot Hospital, Nuneaton.

IV.6065. It appears that Shaylor completed the estimating process for this tender and that it submitted a bid with the hope of winning the work. This is shown by the price submitted by Shaylor being the lowest received and the fact that it won the contract.

IV.6066. Thomas Vale was unable to submit a tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this contract. Thomas Vale categorised this as a Category B tender, which indicated that this was a cover price. Thomas Vale had not allocated the category of this tender by week commencing 10 January 2005. However, by week commencing 31 January 2005, the letter 'B' had been inserted into the category column. This indicates that a conscious decision was made in the time leading up to the tender deadline to register this as a tender for which Thomas Vale would not be submitting a competitive bid.

IV.6067. Thomas Vale's contemporaneous Tender Status spreadsheet, maintained in electronic format by Chief Estimator CKT, records four competitors who were also invited to tender for this contract, namely 'Stepnell, Shaylor, Marriot [and Interserve'. Shaylor is marked in bold lettering which Thomas Vale has confirmed shows that a cover price was received from that company and that the spreadsheet would have been updated as soon as the cover price had been arranged by CKT. Thomas Vale's bid to the client on the Tender Status spreadsheet was £4,189,731 which matches the amount recorded by the client George Eliot Hospital.

- IV.6068. George Eliot Hospital also received a tendered amount of £3,997,100 from Shaylor, which is lower than the amount tendered by Thomas Vale. This fits into the pattern consistent with a cover price having been provided from Shaylor to Thomas Vale.
- IV.6069. The OFT notes that although four competitors have been recorded on the Tender Status spreadsheet, only one of these is highlighted in bold, i.e. Shaylor. This indicates that a conscious decision was made to differentiate Shaylor from the other known competitors. In addition, the fact that the tender had been allocated to CKT, who was responsible for the maintenance of the spreadsheet, means that it is likely that the entry was accurate and that CKT had personal knowledge of the decision to receive a cover price at the time. It also indicates that CKT himself made contact with Shaylor.
- IV.6070. Thomas Vale admitted that Shaylor was one of the key competitors with whom it engaged in cover pricing activity. In interview, CKT confirmed that the entry in the Tender Status spreadsheet shows that a cover price was received by Thomas Vale from Shaylor.
- IV.6071. Finally, both parties admit to bid rigging activities on this tender. The OFT notes that Shaylor admitted that the party with whom it engaged in bid rigging was Thomas Vale, without being shown the OFT's evidence that Thomas Vale was involved. This provides additional independent corroboration of the OFT's evidence in respect of this tender.
- IV.6072. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between Thomas Vale and Shaylor. The OFT also concludes that Shaylor supplied a figure to Thomas Vale for a cover bid.
- IV.6073. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.6052 to IV.6072 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.⁷⁷³⁰ In particular:
- (a) the provision of a figure for a cover bid from Shaylor to Thomas Vale was not unilateral⁷⁷³¹, and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;⁷⁷³²
 - (b) Thomas Vale can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from Shaylor (i.e. the cover price) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process;⁷⁷³³ and
 - (c) Shaylor can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from Thomas Vale (i.e. that Thomas Vale did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process.⁷⁷³⁴

IV.6074. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that an agreement and/or concerted practice was in place between Thomas Vale and Shaylor in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the contract for a new education centre at George Eliot Hospital, Nuneaton, tender deadline 14 February 2005.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.6075. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.6076. Thomas Vale informed the OFT of the bid rigging activities in respect of this tender before the OFT became aware of these activities from any other source. Thomas Vale will therefore receive 100 per cent immunity from the fine that the OFT is imposing in respect of this tender.

Infringement 217: Replacement Primary School, Elbury Mount, Worcester – 15 February 2005

Client: Worcestershire County Council
Parties: Thomas Vale and Speller-Metcalf

IV.6077. On 12 January 2005, Worcestershire County Council ('Worcestershire CC') sought tenders for a new primary school at Elbury Mount, Worcester. The following six companies were invited to tender: Weaver, Thomas Vale, E Manton, Moss, Frank Galliers and Speller-Metcalf.⁷⁷³⁵ The deadline for the receipt of tenders was 15 February 2005 at 12:00 noon.⁷⁷³⁶

IV.6078. Worcestershire CC received the following tender returns:

Company	Date tender received	Amount of tender	Awarded contract
Weaver	15 February 2005	£3,827,557.00
Thomas Vale	15 February 2005	£3,722,119.00
E Manton	Declined to tender 1 February 2005	n/a
Moss	15 February 2005	£3,949,897.00
Frank Galliers	15 February 2005	£3,928,676.97

Evidence of agreement and/or concerted practice

Contemporaneous documentary evidence from leniency applicant Thomas Vale – Tender Status spreadsheet and tender list

IV.6079. As part of its leniency application, Thomas Vale provided a contemporaneous Tender Status spreadsheet, which contained the following entry:⁷⁷³⁷

Evidence from leniency applicant Thomas Vale

IV.6081. As part of its leniency application, Thomas Vale provided a general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence and, in particular, the use of the Tender Status spreadsheet is set out in paragraphs IV.689 to IV.717 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.6082. At Annex 14⁷⁷³⁹ of its leniency application, Thomas Vale’s legal representatives compiled a schedule setting out all tenders from 2000 to 2005 in respect of which Thomas Vale had either given or taken a cover price in the West Midlands region. The information on the schedule was based on all available tender and miscellaneous documentation indicating cover prices had been given or received, plus the recollections of staff. At page two of the schedule under Annex 14 and within the section for 2005 tenders is the following entry:⁷⁷⁴⁰

T5780	10 February	Worcestershire CC	Replacement Primary School, Elbury Mount, Worcester	Taken (Speller Metcalfe)	Yes (Tender Spreadsheet; Tender List)

IV.6083. The Tender Spreadsheet in the last column is the Tender Status spreadsheet referred to in the general explanation of cover pricing at paragraphs IV.689 to IV.717 above and the Tender List is the internal tender list referred to in that explanation.

IV.6084. Thomas Vale also provided to the OFT a schedule listing key competitors with whom Thomas Vale frequently dealt in relation to cover pricing at Annex 5 of its leniency application.⁷⁷⁴¹ Speller-Metcalfe appears on this list.

IV.6085. Following the issue of the Statement, Thomas Vale did not submit any written or oral representations specifically in respect of this Infringement.

Witness evidence from leniency applicant Thomas Vale

IV.6086. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, Thomas Vale's employees provided further general explanation of its participation in and recording of cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.689 to IV.717 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender. In particular, Christopher Keith Trickett ('CKT'), Chief Estimator at Thomas Vale, gave a detailed explanation of the use of the Tender Status spreadsheet to record cover prices from its competitors.

IV.6087. CKT admitted that the initials 'CKT' which appear in the estimator column for this tender were his own and that the letter 'B' which appears in the column marked 'DIV' stands for Building division (also known as Traditional), for which CKT was the estimating manager.⁷⁷⁴² In interview, CKT referred to the entry for this tender in the Tender Status spreadsheet as follows: 'CKT, the estimator, Category B indicating a cover, tender return date 10 February 2005, Thomas Vale tender £3,722,190, Speller-Metcalfe involved indicating that Speller-Metcalfe gave us a cover'.⁷⁷⁴³

Evidence from other companies – Speller-Metcalfe

IV.6088. The OFT wrote to Speller-Metcalfe on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that Speller-Metcalf had participated in bid rigging on this tender. In response to this letter, Speller-Metcalf admitted that it 'engaged in bid rigging (COVER PRICING) activities on this tender with Thomas Vale, Stourport on Severn'. It added that 'we were approached for a cover price by Thomas Vale on the days leading up to the tender deadline and confirm that we provided them with a cover price figure'.⁷⁷⁴⁴

IV.6089. In its response to the Statement, Speller-Metcalf stated *'Speller-Metcalf has accepted the OFT's Fast Track Offer and does not contest the OFT's findings of infringement'*⁷⁷⁴⁵ in respect of this Infringement.

The OFT's analysis of the evidence and finding

IV.6090. From the evidence presented above, the OFT draws the following conclusions.

IV.6091. Thomas Vale and Speller-Metcalf each accepted an invitation to tender for the replacement primary school at Elbury Mount, Worcester.

IV.6092. Thomas Vale was unable to submit a tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this contract. Thomas Vale categorised this as a Category B tender, which indicated that a cover price was sought.

IV.6093. Speller-Metcalf completed the estimating process for this contract and it appears that it submitted a bid with the hope of winning the work. This is shown by the price submitted by Speller-Metcalf being the lowest received and the fact that it won the contract.

IV.6094. Thomas Vale's contemporaneous Tender Status spreadsheet, maintained in electronic format by Chief Estimator CKT, records four competitors for this tender, namely 'Moss, Speller Metcalfe, Manton [and] Weaver'. Speller-Metcalf is marked in bold lettering which Thomas Vale has confirmed shows that a cover price was received from that company and that the spreadsheet would have been updated at the time the cover price was arranged by CKT. Thomas Vale's bid is recorded by the client as £3,722,119 which matches the figure recorded by Thomas Vale on the Tender Status spreadsheet.

IV.6095. Worcestershire CC also received a tendered amount of £3,550,965.65 from Speller-Metcalf, which is lower than the amount tendered by Thomas Vale. This fits into the pattern consistent with a cover price having been provided from Speller-Metcalf to Thomas Vale. Speller-Metcalf is the only company whose figure is below that of Thomas Vale and so Thomas Vale could only have received cover from Speller-Metcalf.

IV.6096. The OFT notes that although four competitors have been recorded on Thomas Vale's Tender Status spreadsheet, only one company is highlighted in bold, i.e. Speller-Metcalf. This indicates that a conscious decision was made to differentiate Speller-Metcalf from the other competitors.

IV.6097. Thomas Vale admitted that Speller-Metcalf was one of the 'key competitors' with whom it engaged in cover pricing activity. In interview, CKT admitted that the entry in the Tender Status spreadsheet shows that a cover price had been sought and obtained by Thomas Vale from Speller-Metcalfe.

IV.6098. Both companies have admitted to bid rigging in relation to this tender. The OFT notes that Speller-Metcalfe admitted that the party with whom it engaged in bid rigging was Thomas Vale, without being shown the OFT's evidence that Thomas Vale was involved. This provides independent corroboration of the OFT's evidence in respect of this tender.

IV.6099. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between Thomas Vale and Speller-Metcalfe. The OFT also concludes that Speller-Metcalfe supplied a figure to Thomas Vale for a cover bid.

IV.6100. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.6079 to IV.6099 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.⁷⁷⁴⁶ In particular:

- (a) the provision of a figure for a cover bid from Speller-Metcalfe to Thomas Vale was not unilateral⁷⁷⁴⁷, and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;⁷⁷⁴⁸
- (b) Thomas Vale can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from Speller-Metcalfe (i.e. the cover price) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process;⁷⁷⁴⁹ and
- (c) Speller-Metcalfe can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from Thomas Vale (i.e. that Thomas Vale did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process.⁷⁷⁵⁰

IV.6101. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that an agreement and/or concerted practice was in place between Thomas Vale and Speller-Metcalfe in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the contract for the new primary school at Elbury Mount, Worcester, tender deadline 15 February 2005.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.6102. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.6103. Thomas Vale informed the OFT of the bid rigging activities in respect of this tender before the OFT became aware of these activities from any other source. Thomas Vale will therefore receive 100 per cent immunity from the fine that the OFT is imposing in respect of this tender.

Infringement 218: Fire Refuge, Wilberforce Building, Hull University – 26 February 2005
Client: Hull University
Parties: Hobson & Porter and Simons

IV.6104. On 1 February 2005 Hull University sought tenders for a fire refuge, Wilberforce Building, Hull University. The return date for the tender was 12:00 noon on 25 February 2005 and four companies were invited to tender: Geo Houlton, Hobson & Porter, Robinson & Sawdon and Simons.

IV.6105. Hull University received the following four tender returns by 12:00 noon on 25 February 2005:⁷⁷⁵¹

Company	Date and time tender received	Amount of tender	Awarded the tender
Geo Houlton	12:00 noon on 25 February 2005	£208,044
Hobson & Porter	12:00 noon on 25 February 2005	£208,516
Robinson & Sawdon	12:00 noon on 25 February 2005	£185,792	Yes
Simons	12:00 noon on 25 February 2005	£220,525

Evidence of agreement and/or concerted practice

Contemporaneous documentary evidence from leniency applicant Hobson & Porter – Tender Summary sheet and Form of Tender

IV.6106. The Minor Works Tender Summary sheet for this tender states that Hobson & Porter’s submitted figure was £208,515.77 and in the Known Competition section is written:⁷⁷⁵²

‘SIMONS – COVER £220,000.00’

IV.6107. The Form of Tender for this contract shows that Hobson & Porter submitted a price of £208,516.00 for this contract. The Form of Tender was signed by Paul Hairsine, an estimator/quantity surveyor at Hobson & Porter.⁷⁷⁵³

Contemporaneous documentary evidence from leniency applicant Simons – Tender Enquiry sheet and Form of Tender

IV.6108. As part of its leniency application, Simons provided a Tender Enquiry sheet for this tender. The Tender Enquiry sheet shows that Simons’s tender figure was £220,525.00 excluding VAT.⁷⁷⁵⁴

IV.6109. In particular, Simons provided its Form of Tender for this contract. The Form of Tender shows that Simons submitted a price of £220,525 for this tender. The Form of Tender was signed by Dave Moor, a ‘Foreman’ whose duties included estimating at Simons.

Evidence from leniency applicant Hobson & Porter

IV.6110. As part of its leniency application, Hobson & Porter provided a general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.391 to IV.407 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.6111. In Hobson & Porter's Summary of Cover Pricing Activity (Minor Works) it is stated that Hobson & Porter provided a cover to Dave Mourné [Moor] at Simons.⁷⁷⁵⁵

IV.6112. Following the issue of the Statement, Hobson & Porter did not submit any written or oral representations specifically in respect of this Infringement.

Witness evidence from leniency applicant Hobson & Porter

IV.6113. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, Hobson & Porter's employees provided further general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.391 to IV.407 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.6114. In respect of this tender, in interview Ian Gibbins ('IG'), Minor Works Director at Hobson & Porter, confirmed that this tender was priced by Paul Hairsine ('PH'), an estimator at Hobson & Porter. IG confirmed that the comment 'SIMONS – COVER £220,000.00' in the Known Competition section on the Minor Works Tender Summary sheet was in PH's handwriting. IG confirmed, '... I would be sure that he has given Simon's a cover. It actually says that there doesn't it in the region of £220,000 ... Sometimes somebody will give you a figure sometimes they will say go in above £220,000 and you will then put £220,659 to make it look as though it's not a round figure'.⁷⁷⁵⁶ IG confirmed that he would have been made aware that Hobson & Porter had provided Simons with a cover price, 'Even if I didn't necessarily know at the moment it went in I would have known about it when I came back into the office'.⁷⁷⁵⁷

Witness evidence from leniency applicant Simons

IV.6115. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, Simons' employees provided further general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.567 to IV.592 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.6116. During an interview conducted on 15 March 2007 in connection with its leniency application Dave Moor ('DM'), a foreman at Simons, was asked if he could recollect this tender. DM stated 'Yeah ... I did it in a hurry. I probably did it in a day'.⁷⁷⁵⁸ DM was shown the Minor Works Tender Summary sheet found at Hobson & Porter and the reference to a cover price given to Simons. DM stated, '... to be quite honest I remember going to Binks Timber and pricing it quick, and getting a lot of pricing for doors. That's what I can remember doing'.⁷⁷⁵⁹ DM said that he could not remember giving a cover price for this tender. When pressed by the interviewer, noting that the evidence suggested Simons had taken cover, DM replied 'I can't remember giving a cover and this all I can say'.⁷⁷⁶⁰

IV.6117. The OFT notes that although DM declined to give a direct answer as to whether he took a cover price, he did not deny that he did take a cover on this tender. He merely recalls obtaining some pricing information, which is not inconsistent with a decision to take a cover price at some point prior to the tender deadline. The OFT further notes that although DM was interviewed in his capacity as a former employee of Simons, at the time of DM's interview he worked for Hobson & Porter, hence his response 'this is all I can say' may therefore relate to his unwillingness to give evidence directly implicating his new employers.

Evidence from leniency applicant Simons

IV.6118. In its response to the Statement, Simons acknowledged its participation in this infringement and stated that it '...does not contest the OFT's findings of infringement of the Competition Act 1998 in [this case] in either fact or law'.⁷⁷⁶¹

The OFT's analysis of the evidence and finding

IV.6120. Hobson & Porter and Simons each accepted an invitation to tender for this contract.

IV.6121. Hobson & Porter completed the estimating process for the tender for this contract. It appears that Hobson & Porter wanted to win the tender for this contract and submitted a bid with the hope of winning the work.

IV.6122. It appears that Simons was unable to submit a tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this tender.

IV.6123. In regard to Simons, Hobson & Porter's Minor Works Tender Summary sheet records 'SIMONS – COVER £220,000.00'. Hobson & Porter has confirmed that this shows that it gave the company in question a cover price. In addition, IG of Hobson & Porter said 'I would be sure that he [PH] has given Simons a cover'.

IV.6124. The OFT notes that the figure Hobson & Porter recorded on the tender sheet, £220,000, is similar to the tender price Simons submitted, which was £220,525. IG of Hobson & Porter further stated 'Sometimes somebody will give you a figure sometimes they will say go in above £220,000 and you will then put £220,659 to make it look as though it's not a round figure'.

IV.6125. The OFT notes in addition that the tender submitted by Simons was higher than the tender submitted by Hobson & Porter, a pattern consistent with a cover price having been provided.

⁷⁷⁶¹ Written representations of Simons, 26 June 2008, paragraph 4.1.

IV.6126. The OFT notes that both Parties have now acknowledged their participation in this Infringement.

IV.6127. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between Simons and Hobson & Porter. The OFT also concludes that Hobson & Porter supplied a figure to Simons for a cover bid.

IV.6128. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.6104 to IV.6127 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.⁷⁷⁶² In particular:

- (a) the provision of a figure for a cover bid from Hobson & Porter to Simons was not unilateral⁷⁷⁶³, and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;⁷⁷⁶⁴
- (b) Simons can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from Hobson & Porter (i.e. the cover price) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process;⁷⁷⁶⁵ and
- (c) Hobson & Porter can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from Simons (i.e. that Simons did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its conduct in the tendering process.⁷⁷⁶⁶

IV.6129. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that an agreement and/or concerted practice was in place between Simons and Hobson & Porter, in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the tender for a fire refuge, Wilberforce Building, Hull University, tender deadline 25 February 2005.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.6130. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.6131. In respect of this tender, the OFT became aware of the bid rigging activities by virtue of the information obtained during the visit under section 28 to Hobson & Porter on 28 March 2006. Hobson & Porter will not therefore receive 100 per cent immunity in respect of this tender. However, Hobson & Porter will receive its normal leniency percentage reduction from the fine that the OFT is imposing in respect of this tender.

IV.6132. In respect of this tender, the OFT became aware of Simons' involvement in bid rigging activities by virtue of the information provided by Hobson & Porter. Simons will not therefore receive 100 per cent immunity in respect of this tender. However, Simons will receive its normal leniency percentage reduction from the fine that the OFT is imposing in respect of this tender.

Infringement 219: Eight New Dwellings, Appletree Close, Holt Heath, Worcestershire – 28 February 2005
Client: Festival Housing Group
Parties: Thomas Vale and J Harper⁷⁷⁶⁷

IV.6133. On 24 January 2005 Festival Housing Group sought tenders for the construction of eight new homes at Appletree Close, Holt Heath, Worcestershire. The following five companies were invited to tender: CJ Bayliss (Hereford) Ltd, E G Carter, Chase Norton, J Harper and Thomas Vale.⁷⁷⁶⁸ Tenders were invited for two alternatives of the project, designated A and B. The deadline for the receipt of tenders was noon on 28 February 2005.

IV.6134. Festival Housing Group received the following tender returns:

Company	Date tender received	Amount of tender	Awarded contract
CJ Bayliss (Hereford) Ltd	28 February 2005	A - £642,781 B - £660,058	Yes
E G Carter	25 February 2005	A - £804,048.26 B - no tender
Chase Norton	28 February 2005	A - £797,628 B - no tender
J Harper	25 February 2005	A - £687,925 B - £694,362
Thomas Vale	28 February 2005	A - £736,824 B - £752,064

Evidence of agreement and/or concerted practice

Contemporaneous documentary evidence from leniency applicant Thomas Vale – Tender Status spreadsheet and tender lists

IV.6135. As part of its leniency application, Thomas Vale provided a contemporaneous Tender Status spreadsheet, which contained the following entry:⁷⁷⁶⁹

kept a 'little black book'⁷⁷⁷⁰ of contacts, the use of which is referred to in the general explanation of cover pricing at paragraphs IV.689 to IV.717 above. Within this contact list, there is an entry for 'J. Harper' plus names and telephone numbers,⁷⁷⁷¹ which match those found on Harper's website.⁷⁷⁷²

IV.6137. Thomas Vale also maintained an internal list of tenders in progress, the use of which is referred to in the general explanation of cover pricing at paragraphs IV.689 to IV.717 above. Thomas Vale provided three tender lists referring to this tender, for weeks commencing 31 January 2005, 7 February 2005⁷⁷⁷³ and 21 February 2005.⁷⁷⁷⁴ They are identical except the entry for 31 January 2005 has no entry in the Category column whereas the letter 'B' appears in this column for the entries dated 7 February 2005 and 21 February 2005. The tender list for the week commencing 21 February 2005 is shown below:

Evidence from leniency applicant Thomas Vale

IV.6138. At Annex 14⁷⁷⁷⁵ of its leniency application, Thomas Vale's legal representatives compiled a schedule setting out all tenders from 2000 to 2005 in respect of which Thomas Vale had either given or taken a cover price in the West Midlands region. The information on the schedule was based on all available tender and miscellaneous documentation indicating cover prices had been given or received, plus the recollections of staff. At page five of the schedule under Annex 14 and within the section for 2005 tenders is the following entry:⁷⁷⁷⁶

Tender No	Date	Client	Comments	Cover Given/Taken	Evidence
T5791	28 February	Festival Housing Group	8 No Dwellings, Holt Heath, Worcestershire	Taken (Harper)	Yes (Tender Spreadsheet; Tender List)

IV.6139. The Tender Spreadsheet in the last column is the Tender Status spreadsheet referred to in the general explanation of cover pricing at paragraphs IV.689 to

IV.717 above and the Tender List is the internal tender list referred to in that explanation.

IV.6140. Thomas Vale also provided to the OFT a schedule listing key competitors with whom Thomas Vale frequently dealt in relation to cover pricing at Annex 5 of its leniency application⁷⁷⁷⁷ and 'Harpers' appears on this list.

IV.6141. Following the issue of the Statement, Thomas Vale did not submit any written or oral representations specifically in respect of this Infringement.

Witness evidence from leniency applicant Thomas Vale

IV.6142. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, Thomas Vale's employees provided further general explanation of its participation in and recording of cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.689 to IV.717 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender. In particular, CKT gave a detailed explanation of the use of the Tender Status spreadsheet to record cover prices from its competitors.

IV.6143. CKT admitted that the initials 'CKT' which appear in the estimator column for this tender were his own and that the letter 'H' which appears in the column marked 'DIV' stands for Housing division, for which CKT was the estimating manager.⁷⁷⁷⁸ In interview, CKT referred to the entry for this tender in the Tender Status spreadsheet as follows: 'the category B tender is a code that indicates a figure, a cover figure, the tender return date 28th of the 2nd 2005. There are two tender figures there, which I would guess were two options, though what the options were, obviously I don't recall, but the first option tender one is 736,824 and option two £752,064. The contractors listed on the right hand side, Harper is in bold, which indicates we took a cover figure from Harper'.⁷⁷⁷⁹

Evidence from other companies – J Harper

IV.6144. The OFT wrote to Harper Construction Group Limited, a sister company of J Harper on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that J Harper had participated in bid rigging on this tender. In response to this letter, Harper plc wrote to the OFT through its legal representatives on 4 May 2007⁷⁷⁸⁰ and admitted that J Harper had 'engaged in bid rigging activities on this tender but cannot recall details of the other party/parties involved'.⁷⁷⁸¹ In its response to the OFT's Fast Track Offer, Harper plc provided a list of tenders where no evidence of bid rigging was found, and this tender was not on that list.⁷⁷⁸² The OFT therefore infers that J Harper's admission for this tender was made based on some form of evidence and/or information in its possession.

IV.6145. In its response to the Statement, J Harper confirmed that it had accepted the OFT's Fast Track Offer and was not making any representations in respect of the Infringements.⁷⁷⁸³

The OFT's analysis of the evidence and finding

IV.6147. Thomas Vale and J Harper each accepted an invitation to tender for the construction of eight new houses at Holt Heath, Worcestershire.

IV.6148. Thomas Vale was unable to submit a tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this contract. Thomas Vale categorised this as a Category B tender, which indicated that this was a cover price.

IV.6149. Thomas Vale's contemporaneous Tender Status spreadsheet, maintained in electronic format by Chief Estimator CKT, records four competitors who were also invited to tender, namely 'Harper, Bayliss, E G Carter [and] Chase Norton'. Harper is marked in bold lettering which Thomas Vale has confirmed shows that a cover price was received from that company and that the spreadsheet would have been updated as soon as the cover price had been arranged by CKT. Thomas Vale's bid to the client on the Tender Status spreadsheet was £736,824 for Alternative A and £752,064 for Alternative B, which matches the amounts recorded by the client Festival Group Housing.

IV.6150. Festival Group Housing also received tendered amounts of £687,925 for Alternative A and £694,362 for Alternative B, from J Harper, which are lower than the amounts tendered by Thomas Vale. This fits into the pattern consistent with a cover price having been provided from J Harper to Thomas Vale.

IV.6151. The OFT notes that although four competitors have been recorded on the Tender Status spreadsheet, only one of these is highlighted in bold, i.e. Harper. This indicates that a conscious decision was made to differentiate Harper from the other known competitors. In addition, the fact that the tender had been allocated to CKT, who was responsible for the maintenance of the Tender Status spreadsheet, means that it is likely that the entry was accurate and that CKT had personal knowledge of the decision to receive a cover price at the time. It also indicates that CKT himself made contact with Harper.

IV.6152. Thomas Vale admitted that Harper was one of the key competitors with whom it engaged in cover pricing activity. CKT had an entry for J Harper in a contact book he used to telephone other contractors for the purpose of obtaining cover prices. In interview, CKT confirmed that the entry in the Tender Status spreadsheet shows that a cover price was received by Thomas Vale from Harper.

IV.6153. Finally, both parties admit to bid rigging activities on this tender.

IV.6154. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between Thomas Vale and J Harper. The OFT also concludes that J Harper supplied a figure to Thomas Vale for a cover bid.

⁷⁷⁸³ Written representations of J Harper, 27 June 2008, paragraph 4.

IV.6155. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.6135 to IV.6154 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.⁷⁷⁸⁴ In particular:

- (a) the provision of a figure for a cover bid from J Harper to Thomas Vale was not unilateral⁷⁷⁸⁵, and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;⁷⁷⁸⁶
- (b) Thomas Vale can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from J Harper (i.e. the cover price) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process;⁷⁷⁸⁷ and
- (c) J Harper can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from Thomas Vale (i.e. that Thomas Vale did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process.⁷⁷⁸⁸

IV.6156. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that an agreement and/or concerted practice was in place between Thomas Vale and J Harper in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the contract for a residential development at Holt Heath, Worcestershire, tender deadline 28 February 2005.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.6157. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.6158. Thomas Vale informed the OFT of the bid rigging activities in respect of this tender before the OFT became aware of these activities from any other source. Thomas Vale will therefore receive 100 per cent immunity from the fine that the OFT is imposing in respect of this tender.

Infringement 220: External Structural Refurbishment Works, 13 – 42 Claremont Close, London – 29 March 2005

Client: Newham London Borough Council

Parties: Mansell and Durkan Limited

IV.6159. On 25 February 2005⁷⁷⁸⁹ Newham London Borough Council sought tenders for external structural refurbishment works at 13 – 42 Claremont Close, London.⁷⁷⁹⁰ The following ten companies were invited to tender: Coffey Construction, Connaught, Dew Construction, Durkan Limited, Gunitite (Eastern)

Evidence of agreement and/or concerted practice

Contemporaneous documentary evidence from leniency applicant Mansell – The Builders’ Conference Interim Job Report

IV.6161. As part of its leniency application, Mansell’s legal representatives provided a Builders’ Conference Interim Job Report (‘the Report’) in respect of this tender.⁷⁷⁹³ The Report listed the contractors known to be competing as of 15 March 2005 and next to ‘Durkan Ltd’ is a handwritten cross. At the bottom of the Report is a handwritten note:

Brian Sharpe.	£1,306.000

IV.6162. In their response to the Supplementary Statement⁷⁷⁹⁴, Durkan Limited and Durkan Holdings noted that the figure on the Report was not written next to Durkan Limited's name, but rather at the bottom of the page.⁷⁷⁹⁵ The OFT notes that although the figure was not written next to Durkan Limited's name:

- there was a handwritten cross next to Durkan Limited’s name;
- there was no marking against any of the other company names on the Report;
- an amount almost identical to Mansell’s bid was written next to the name ‘Brian Sharpe’; and
- Durkan Limited has confirmed that Brian Sharpe (‘BS’) was its estimator for this tender.

⁷⁷⁹⁵ Oral representations of Durkan Holdings and Durkan Limited, 27 February 2009, page 6.

Evidence from leniency applicant Mansell

IV.6163. As part of its leniency application, Mansell's legal representatives also provided a general explanation of Mansell's part in the process of cover pricing.⁷⁷⁹⁶ This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.470 to IV.502 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.6164. Mansell's legal representatives provided a summary in respect of the City Road office, in the London Region, which dealt with this tender. In respect of this tender it states 'MSCL [Mansell Construction Services Ltd] found out late in the day that there were nine bidders and [not] four/five bidders as first thought. Four or five of the nine bidders were specialist contractors. A cover price was sought and the "X" marked on the printout from the Builders' Conference indicates from whom cover was sought'.⁷⁷⁹⁷

IV.6165. Mansell's legal representatives also provided the OFT with a schedule of cover prices for London specialised works, which includes this tender. In respect of this tender the table shows that Mansell received a cover price from Durkan Limited and states that the reason for the pricing decision was 'UNATTRACTIVE SCHEME'.⁷⁷⁹⁸

IV.6166. In its response to the Statement, Balfour Beatty stated it and its subsidiaries 'do not dispute the occurrence of the Alleged Infringements'.⁷⁷⁹⁹

Witness evidence from leniency applicant Mansell

IV.6167. During interviews conducted in connection with Mansell's leniency application, Peter Goodbun ('PG'), Estimating Manager of Mansell's City Road office⁷⁸⁰⁰, provided further general explanation of Mansell's participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.497 to IV.502 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.6168. During an interview with the OFT on 17 April 2007, PG explained that the handwritten notes on the Report were notes of Phil Hart ('PH'), an estimator that dealt with this tender who no longer works for Mansell.⁷⁸⁰¹ When asked to explain the handwritten notes on the Report, PG stated 'The x against the ... name would indicate the name that he [Phil Hart] approached ... the name of [the] individual is, i.e. Brian Sharpe at Durkan, and the figure is the figure ... that would have been given to us as to the guide [on] ... which to go on'. When asked if he knew what price Mansell submitted, PG stated 'It would have been slightly more than 1,306'.⁷⁸⁰²

IV.6169. In respect of the decision to take a cover price from Durkan Limited, PG stated 'My decision for going to Durkan [sic] on this one is that, with the exception of probably two others, all the others ... I would have regarded as specialist contractors who in previous years have ... acted as sub contractors to us

[Mansell] in that market and have now sort of moved in to main contracting ... that was the reason ... we elected to take cover on that scheme because there was just no way you were going to compete with specialist contractors'.⁷⁸⁰³

IV.6170. In their response to the Supplementary Statement, Durkan Limited and Durkan Holdings suggested that PG's evidence was only interpretation of the contemporaneous document and therefore not direct evidence of the exchange, based primarily on his statement that 'the x ... would indicate' an approach to Durkan Limited for a cover.⁷⁸⁰⁴ The OFT notes, however, that prior to the answer quoted above, PG was asked if he had knowledge of what the notes on the Report meant, to which he replied 'yes'. PG went on to give a detailed explanation of why he chose to approach Durkan for this particular contract, as quoted above in paragraph IV.6169, illustrating his firsthand knowledge of this contract and the contact and exchange of cover price between Mansell and Durkan Limited. It is within this context that his use of the words 'would indicate' cannot be said to imply that his statement was merely an interpretation of the document.⁷⁸⁰⁵ In any event, the OFT sees no reason to doubt the accuracy of the document, such that even if PG were merely giving an explanation of the contents of that document, that would still be of evidential value in explaining the significance of its contents.

IV.6171. In their response to the Supplementary Statement, Durkan Limited and Durkan Holdings also noted that the OFT did not interview PH, the estimator for this tender, such that there was nothing to indicate that this was not merely a 'manuscript note simply recording a name someone else gave him of the estimator at [Durkan Limited] responsible for the tender'.⁷⁸⁰⁶ The OFT considers that its interview with PG was sufficient to provide supporting evidence and explanation of the contemporaneous documentary evidence for this Infringement, given that PG had direct knowledge of the contact with Durkan Limited. The OFT considers the suggestion that the handwritten note merely records a name given to PH to be contrary to PG's evidence as to what this entry signifies, and also fails entirely to explain why the name has a figure written next to it that is almost identical to the amount bid by Mansell.

IV.6172. In their response to the Supplementary Statement, Durkan Holdings and Durkan Limited further suggested that the notations on the Report could not indicate a cover because PG had stated that Mansell did not record the giving or taking of cover prices.⁷⁸⁰⁷ They noted PG's use of the words 'invariably, no' in relation to the recording of cover exchanges. Durkan Holdings and Durkan Limited appear to have taken this out of context; the discussion to which they refer primarily related to the absence of a system of recording cover exchanges in Mansell's City Road office, which does not preclude the possibility of an estimator making a note on one of his own tender documents. In any event, PG's answer of 'invariably, no' was made in relation to Mansell giving, not receiving covers.⁷⁸⁰⁸ Additionally, PG's use of the word 'invariably' does not appear to exclude that there may have been exceptions, as, responding to another question later in interview, he stated 'Invariably, ah, the, on the morning that the tender went in, on rare occasions maybe the evening or late afternoon of the, the day before...'.⁷⁸⁰⁹

Contemporaneous documentary evidence from other companies – Durkan Limited – Tender Summary

IV.6173. During a section 27 inspection of Durkan's premises on 24 January 2007, a document relating to this tender was produced.⁷⁸¹⁰ The document shows that Durkan Limited finished fourth out of seven tenders and shows the name 'Brian Sharpe'.⁷⁸¹¹

Evidence from other companies – Durkan, Durkan Limited, and Durkan Holdings

IV.6174. The OFT had originally understood, mistakenly, that the company involved in this Infringement was another company, Durkan, and not Durkan Limited. The OFT, therefore, wrote to Durkan on 22 March 2007 offering it a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that Durkan had participated in bid rigging on this tender. In its response to this letter Durkan informed the OFT that it did not admit that it had engaged in bid rigging activities on this tender.⁷⁸¹² On 5 November 2007, the OFT subsequently wrote to Durkan's ultimate parent company at the time of this Infringement, Durkan Holdings, inviting it to comment on Durkan's response to the OFT's Fast Track Offer, given that the OFT intended to hold Durkan Holdings jointly and severally liable for any infringements committed by Durkan in respect of which the OFT ultimately decided to impose financial penalties. In response to this letter Durkan Holdings' legal representatives stated, 'Durkan Holdings will respect the terms of the acceptance made by Durkan Pudelek as described in paragraph 8 of your letter of 5 November 2007 ...'.⁷⁸¹³

IV.6175. Following the issue of the Statement, which named Durkan (and not Durkan Limited) as having been a party to this Infringement, the OFT received representations from Durkan Holdings⁷⁸¹⁴, as a result of which the OFT concluded that Durkan Limited, and not Durkan, was the Durkan Holdings subsidiary involved in this Infringement. Although Durkan Limited was not named in the Statement, Durkan Holdings' written response to the Statement nevertheless included representations to the effect that Durkan Limited had not engaged in bid rigging in respect of this tender. On 17 October 2008, the OFT therefore wrote to the solicitors acting for Durkan Holdings, Durkan and Durkan Limited to inform them that, in view of Durkan Holdings' representations to the effect that Durkan Limited had not engaged in bid rigging in respect of this tender, and Durkan Holdings' confirmation that it would respect the response that Durkan had given to the OFT's Fast Track Offer (which included a rejection of the OFT's Fast Track Offer in respect of this Infringement) the OFT did not propose to apply any reduction to any financial penalty that the OFT might impose in respect of Durkan Limited's conduct for this Infringement.⁷⁸¹⁵ A copy of this letter was sent directly to Durkan Limited.

IV.6176. The solicitors acting for all three companies responded on 3 November 2008 arguing that the OFT's Fast Track Offer had not been extended to Durkan Limited, or to Durkan Holdings in its capacity as Durkan Limited's ultimate parent company, for this Infringement and that the companies had not therefore had the opportunity either to accept or to reject the offer.⁷⁸¹⁶ However, the solicitors' response contained further representations clearly denying that Durkan Limited had engaged in bid rigging on this tender, and, in view of this, the OFT therefore explained in its reply to the companies' solicitors dated 25 November 2008, that as a consequence of this denial no reduction would be applied to any financial penalty that might be imposed on Durkan Limited or Durkan Holdings in respect of this Infringement.⁷⁸¹⁷ The OFT did not receive any response to this letter.

IV.6177. In their responses to the Supplementary Statement and the Statement, Durkan Limited and Durkan Holdings suggested that the cover pricing arrangement constituting this Infringement did not match Mansell's description of the usual process for cover exchange as per its leniency application, nor what the OFT described in the Statement as the most common way of calculating cover prices.⁷⁸¹⁸ Specifically, Durkan Limited and Durkan Holdings stated 'the alleged cover for the Claremont Close tender was not agreed by telephone "very, very close to the submission date" and was not recorded in a separate tender document with a "C" next to the name of the competitor – nor what is described by the OFT as the way of calculating cover pricing – e.g., usually 5% above the figure ultimately quoted to the customer'.⁷⁸¹⁹

IV.6178. The OFT does not consider these arguments valid for the following reasons. The evidence does not specify an exact date on which the cover was agreed, or the method by which it was agreed, and therefore Durkan Limited and Durkan Holdings' assertion that it does not tally with Mansell's 'usual process' (i.e. not by phone very close to the submission date) is without support. There is no reason to believe the 'usual process' was not followed in this case given the absence of any evidence indicating that it was not. The OFT notes that the section of the Statement referenced by Durkan Limited and Durkan Holdings in respect of this argument (equivalent to paragraph IV.500 above) is concerned with PG's description of when an agreement to exchange a cover was made, and not when the actual cover was provided or received. With regard to the absence of a 'C' on the contemporaneous evidence, the OFT notes that Mansell's leniency application made clear that the letter 'C' is only one of the possible ways in which a cover could be recorded.⁷⁸²⁰ Finally, although many companies may have provided covers at around five per cent above their final price to the client, that range could vary beyond that, as is evident from witness interviews including, for example, PG's evidence that Mansell may provide a cover anywhere between five and 15 per cent higher than the bid

Mansell submitted.⁷⁸²¹ As the figure in this Infringement is within a five to 15 per cent range, and the totality of the evidence seen by the OFT in connection with this investigation confirms that cover prices may vary as to the level of uplift applied – there is no ‘upper limit’ of 5 per cent or any other level – the OFT does not consider a difference of approximately ten per cent to be any kind of indication against cover pricing having taken place.

IV.6179. In their response to the Supplementary Statement, Durkan Holdings and Durkan Limited also suggested that the timeframe in which the bid would have been finalised did not allow for a cover price to have been given to Mansell.⁷⁸²² Specifically, they stated *'The tender ordinarily would be finalised between 9 and 10am and then dispatched by courier to arrive at its destination by the tender deadline of 12 noon. The amount tendered could change significantly from that table to approval by Brian Sharpe.'*⁷⁸²³ The OFT notes that BS was the contact recorded as providing cover to Mansell, and as the final bid was approved by him, he would have known Durkan Limited's final bid and been able to communicate a cover to Mansell. As covers were generally exchanged by phone, only one or two minutes would have been required to provide the necessary information to Mansell, which allowed Mansell sufficient time to submit its own bid.

IV.6180. Durkan Holdings and Durkan Limited also pointed out that, in their position, a company's only recourse is to provide sworn witness statements confirming that the company did not engage in bid rigging.⁷⁸²⁴ To that end, they have provided multiple witness statements from employees and ex-employees of Durkan Limited.⁷⁸²⁵ The OFT appreciates that a company would not often keep a record of giving a cover price, and in that instance recognises the need to assess the quality of evidence implicating the accused party. The OFT also recognises that where a cover price was given by a sole employee, other employees or directors of that company may not be aware whether or not such conduct took place.

IV.6181. In this case, the OFT considers the presence of a contemporaneous document with the name of Durkan Limited's estimator next to a figure consistent with a cover price, along with the explanation of that document by a Mansell employee and his recollection as to why Durkan Limited was approached for a cover on this tender to be sufficiently strong and compelling. The OFT notes the direct contradiction between the evidence given by PG and witness statements of Durkan Holdings and Durkan Limited employees, who deny that they engaged in bid rigging. However, unlike the Durkan Holdings and Durkan Limited witness evidence, PG's evidence is underpinned by contemporaneous documentation, and is consistent with the markings made on that documentation. Additionally, the OFT notes that BS, the only Durkan Limited employee directly implicated by the contemporaneous document, has declined to sign his witness statement under a statement of truth, although he has stated through his solicitors that he agreed with it.⁷⁸²⁶ In light of those factors the OFT considers, that, on balance, the contemporaneous evidence and explanation provided by PG should be preferred to the denial of Durkan Holdings and Durkan Limited.

The OFT's analysis of the evidence and finding

IV.6182. From the evidence and arguments presented above, and having taken into account the representations made by the Parties, the OFT draws the following conclusions.

IV.6183. Mansell and Durkan Limited each accepted an invitation to tender for this contract.

IV.6184. Both companies submitted a tender. Mansell was unable to submit a tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this contract. It appears that Durkan Limited completed the estimating process for this tender and that it submitted a bid with the hope of winning the work.

IV.6185. The Report provided by Mansell shows 'X', next to the entry for 'Durkan Ltd' and a handwritten note 'Brian Sharpe' and a figure '£1,306,000'. Mansell confirmed that this shows that it took a cover price from Durkan Limited and in interview PG confirmed that this was written by the estimator for this tender and that it shows that Mansell took a cover price from Durkan Limited.

IV.6186. PG confirmed that the figure '£1,306,000' was the cover price given by Durkan Limited and that Mansell added a small amount to this cover price in order to arrive at its tender figure. PG also confirmed that BS would have been the contact at Durkan Limited. The document provided by Durkan Limited also names BS, confirming that he was in some way connected at Durkan Limited to this tender.

IV.6187. The OFT further notes that the tender submitted by Mansell was higher than the tender submitted by Durkan Limited, the pattern consistent with a cover price having been provided.

IV.6188. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between Mansell and Durkan Limited. The OFT also concludes that Durkan Limited supplied a figure to Mansell for a cover bid.

IV.6189. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.6161 to IV.6188 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.⁷⁸²⁷ In particular:

- (a) the provision of a figure for a cover bid from Durkan Limited to Mansell was not unilateral⁷⁸²⁸, and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;⁷⁸²⁹
- (b) Mansell can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from Durkan Limited (i.e. the cover price) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process;⁷⁸³⁰ and ⁷⁸²⁷ See paragraphs III.3 and III.89 to III.126 of the Legal Background section.

⁷⁸²⁸ See paragraph IV.73 of the General comments on cover pricing section.

⁷⁸²⁹ See paragraphs III.48 to III.51 and III.93 to III.94 of the Legal Background section.

⁷⁸³⁰ See paragraphs III.58, III.95 to III.96, and III.125 of the Legal Background section.

- (c) Durkan Limited can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from Mansell (i.e. that Mansell did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its conduct in the tendering process.⁷⁸³¹

IV.6190. In its response to the Supplementary Statement, Durkan Limited and Durkan Holdings object to the OFT's reliance on presumptions, arguing that 'The facts relied on by the OFT are unreliable and inconclusive. This is why the OFT can use them as a basis for nothing more than a presumption on its part that [Durkan Limited] was engaged in cover pricing. An analysis of the OFT's interpretation of the facts shows that the OFT is wrong to make presumptions on the basis of the evidence it has adduced'.⁷⁸³² However, the OFT is satisfied on the evidence that Durkan Limited provided a cover price to Mansell (for reasons given above). As such, the OFT notes that the presumption that an undertaking involved in an exchange of information with a competitor and who acts on the market, for example by submitting a tender, is a legal presumption⁷⁸³³, and the OFT is therefore not required to adduce evidence in support of this. The OFT does not consider that Durkan Limited has rebutted the application of the presumption in this case.

IV.6191. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that an agreement and/or concerted practice was in place between Mansell and Durkan Limited in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the tender for external structural refurbishment at 13 – 42 Claremont Close, London, tender deadline 29 March 2005.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.6192. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.6193. Mansell informed the OFT of the bid rigging activities in respect of this tender before the OFT became aware of these activities from any other source. Mansell will therefore receive 100 per cent immunity from the fine that the OFT is imposing in respect of this tender.

Contemporaneous documentary evidence from leniency applicant Strata – Tracking document

Evidence from leniency applicant – Strata

IV.6197. As part of its leniency application, Strata provided to the OFT a list of covers prepared by reference to its contract information sheets, the file ‘Covers from Jan 2000 to Dec 2001’ and ‘contracts in hand’ documents. This list included the following entry:⁷⁸⁴⁰

Date	Project	Strata ref no	Cover to
01/04/2005	Extension and Refurb of Oaklands Sports Centre for York City Council	T02/05

Cover from	Company Name	Company Address

IV.6198. Following the issue of the Statement, Strata did not submit any written or oral representations specifically in respect of this Infringement.

Witness evidence from leniency applicant - Strata

IV.6199. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, Strata’s past and present employees provided further general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.617 to IV.634 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.6200. During an interview conducted on 28 March 2007 in connection with its leniency application Paul Throssell (‘PT’), estimator of Strata, was shown the estimating tracking document and the reference to ‘Cover taken from Parkinsons’ and was asked if this indicated that Strata had taken a cover price from F Parkinson. PT replied ‘Definitely’.⁷⁸⁴¹ PT also said that the cover price would have been obtained under the usual circumstances and could not recall anything about the contact except ‘other than the usual phone call ...’.⁷⁸⁴²

Evidence from other companies – F Parkinson

IV.6201. The OFT wrote to F Parkinson on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender in return for an admission that F Parkinson had participated in bid rigging on this tender. In response to this letter F Parkinson admitted ‘We engaged in bid rigging activities on this tender with Strata’.⁷⁸⁴³

IV.6202. The OFT subsequently wrote to F Parkinson’s ultimate parent company at the time of this Infringement, Mowbray, on 5 November 2007, asking it to comment on F Parkinson’s response to the OFT’s Fast Track Offer, given that the OFT intended to hold Mowbray jointly and severally liable for any infringements committed by F Parkinson in respect of which the OFT ultimately decided to impose financial penalties. During a telephone call in response to this letter, Colin Oakley, a Director of Mowbray stated that he was aware of the original Fast Track letter and F Parkinson's response and fully supported the position of its subsidiary, F Parkinson.⁷⁸⁴⁴

IV.6203. In its response to the Statement, F Parkinson confirmed that they have '...accepted the OFT's Fast Track Offer and does not contest the OFT's findings of infringement [in respect of this Infringement]'.⁷⁸⁴⁵

The OFT's analysis of the evidence and finding

IV.6205. Strata and F Parkinson each accepted an invitation to tender for the contract for an extension and refurbishment at Oaklands Sports Centre, York.

IV.6206. Both companies submitted a tender. Strata was unable to submit a competitive tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this contract.

IV.6207. Strata's tracking document records '£1,249,850.00 (Cover Taken from Parkinsons)', typed in the tender value column. Also 'C' is typed in the estimator column. Strata confirmed that the 'C' typed in the estimator column and the note in the tender value column records that it received a cover price from F Parkinson. The OFT considers in the light of the contemporaneous evidence from Strata and PT's admission and explanation of the contemporaneous evidence that F Parkinson supplied Strata with a cover price for this tender.

IV.6208. Both companies have admitted to bid rigging in relation to this tender. The OFT notes that F Parkinson admitted that the party with whom it engaged in bid rigging was Strata, without being shown the OFT's evidence that Strata was involved. This provides additional independent corroboration of the OFT's evidence in respect of this tender.

IV.6209. The OFT further notes that the tender submitted by Strata was higher than the tender submitted by F Parkinson, the pattern consistent with a cover price having been provided.

IV.6210. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between Strata and F Parkinson. The OFT also concludes that F Parkinson supplied a figure to Strata for a cover bid.

IV.6211. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.6196 to IV.6211 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.⁷⁸⁴⁶ In particular:

- (a) the provision of a figure for a cover bid from F Parkinson to Strata was not unilateral⁷⁸⁴⁷, and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;⁷⁸⁴⁸

⁷⁸⁴⁷ See paragraph IV.73 of the General comments on cover pricing section.

⁷⁸⁴⁸ See paragraphs III.48 to III.51 and III.93 to III.94 of the Legal Background section.

- (b) Strata can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from F Parkinson (i.e the cover price) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process;⁷⁸⁴⁹ and
- (c) F Parkinson can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from Strata (i.e. that Strata did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its conduct in the tendering process.⁷⁸⁵⁰

IV.6212. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that an agreement and/or concerted practice was in place between F Parkinson and Strata, in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the tender for the extension and refurbishment at Oaklands Sports Centre, York, tender deadline 1 April 2005.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.6213. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.6214. In respect of this tender, the OFT became aware of bid rigging activities by virtue of the information obtained during the visit under section 28 on 6 and 7 July 2005. Strata will not therefore receive 100 per cent immunity in respect of this tender. However, Strata will receive its normal leniency percentage reduction from the fine that the OFT is imposing in respect of this tender.

Infringement 222: Refurbishment of Old Hall, Dersingham, Kings Lynn, Norfolk – 4 April 2005

Client: Pigeon Holdings Ltd

Parties: Jackson⁷⁸⁵¹ and R G Building⁷⁸⁵²

IV.6215. On 22 February 2005, Pigeon Holdings Ltd sought tenders for the Refurbishment of Old Hall, Dersingham, Kings Lynn, Norfolk. The return date for the tender was 4 April 2005 and six companies were invited to tender: Chalcroft Construction, R G Building, Jackson, Barnes Construction, Kier Eastern (a trading division of Kier) and J S Hay.

IV.6216. Pigeon Holdings Ltd received the following tender returns by 12:00 noon on 4 April 2005:⁷⁸⁵³

⁷⁸⁴⁹ See paragraphs III.58, III.95 to III.96, and III.125 of the Legal Background section.

⁷⁸⁵⁰ See paragraphs III.58, III.95 to III.96, and III.125 of the Legal Background section.

⁷⁸⁵¹ Jackson is a subsidiary of Propensity.

⁷⁸⁵² R G Building and R G Carter are both subsidiaries of R G Holdings. The OFT notes that the client's response indicated that 'R G Carter' tendered for this contract. However in its written representations on the Statement, R G Carter stated '[a]mong the six companies invited to tender for the works to refurbish Old Hall at Dersingham was R G Carter Building Limited' (27 June 2008, paragraph 2.104). In this Infringement description, the OFT has therefore referred to R G Building other than for the replication of contemporaneous evidence. However for the avoidance of doubt, where R G Building appears in the description of this Infringement and the OFT's consequent findings, this should be taken to mean R G Carter or R G Building as appropriate, if they were the Participant Company. The OFT also notes that in any event, R G Carter and R G Building both formed part of the same undertaking, and the Party as defined in paragraph I.1 above would therefore be liable for their actions.

Evidence of agreement and/or concerted practice

Contemporaneous documentary evidence from leniency applicant Propensity – Jackson Tender Book

IV.6217. In Jackson's tender book provided by Propensity to the OFT as part of its leniency application, in respect of this tender, the following entries have been made, all of which are handwritten:⁷⁸⁵⁴

Enquiry Number	Date Received	Employer	Location	Description of Works
E3956	23.2.05		Dersingham	Conversion of Hall to Dwellings

Pos Out of	Lowest Tender	Jacksons	General Notes	Date for Return
3 Of 6	£1,608,058	£1,699,153 Cover from Carters	C	4.4. 23.3.05 JBS

IV.6218. In its response to the Statement, R G Carter stated 'clearly the tender book does not constitute "contemporaneous" evidence. According to John Rhodes' statement, the relevant details might have been added a month after the bid was submitted'.⁷⁸⁵⁵ The OFT accepts that John Rhodes ('JR') confirmed he would not necessarily write the cover price in the tender book at the exact same time it was received. However, JR did indicate that he would record the figure on Jackson's formal tender submission, and the amount tendered would then be reflected in the tender book.⁷⁸⁵⁶ There was therefore no lapse of time between receiving the figure and writing it down such as might cast doubt upon the accuracy of the written figure when it is reflected in the tender book. The interview evidence clearly shows that tender book was completed in the normal course of business at or around the time the tenders it recorded were submitted.

IV.6219. In its response to the Statement, R G Carter also stated '[t]he Jackson tender book states that the lowest tender was £1,608,058; in fact, the information provided to the OFT by the client indicates that the lowest tender was

*£1,587,538. There is no tender figure of £1,608,058. The entry of £1,608,058 is clearly not R G Carter Building's price (which was £1,600,890.07).*⁷⁸⁵⁷ The OFT accepts that the figure recorded in the 'lowest tender' column for this tender does not correspond to the lowest figure submitted to the client. However, it does not agree that this undermines the evidential value of the tender book. The OFT does not consider it necessary to speculate as to why this particular entry in the tender book may be inaccurate; it cannot see that any explanation of this inaccuracy would also account for the entry 'Cover from Carters' in respect of this tender, or render that entry inaccurate.

IV.6220. In respect of the entry 'Cover from Carters', R G Carter stated in its response to the Statement that it '...could mean that Jackson wished to obtain a cover from R G Carter, or that it sought a cover price from R G Carter or that it used information concerning R G Carter's bid to provide a cover. It does not, however, demonstrate that R G Carter provided a cover price...'⁷⁸⁵⁸ in respect of this Infringement.

IV.6221. The OFT does not accept this assertion, in view of JR's express confirmation in interview that the 'Cover from Carters' entry in the tender book meant that Jackson received a cover price from R G Building and submitted that cover price to the client⁷⁸⁵⁹ (see further below).

Evidence from leniency applicant Propensity

IV.6222. As part of its leniency application, Propensity provided a general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs above IV.537 to IV.566 and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

Witness evidence from leniency applicant Propensity

IV.6223. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, Propensity's employees provided further general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.537 to IV.566 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.6224. JR, Pre-Contracts Manager at Jackson, confirmed in interview that it is his handwriting in the tender book⁷⁸⁶⁰ and that in most instances he would have arranged the cover price.⁷⁸⁶¹ JR said in respect of the entry in the tender book for this tender, 'Jackson's entered a bid with some assistance from Carters at £1.7 million'.⁷⁸⁶² JR also confirmed that the price that Jackson submitted for this tender was the cover price received from R G Building.⁷⁸⁶³

IV.6225. In its response to the Statement, R G Carter noted that JR 'fails to express his own recollection of the alleged events in question: he simply appears to be *interpreting what was written in the tender register...*⁷⁸⁶⁴ and that PW, the estimator for this project at R G Buildings, had no knowledge of JR.⁷⁸⁶⁵

IV.6226. The OFT accepts that JR's evidence may not constitute independent recollection of the events surrounding this tender. However, to the extent that it does not, the OFT does not consider that that undermines his evidence. Given the number of tenders JR dealt with (as indicated by Jackson's tender book, maintained by JR⁷⁸⁶⁶), the OFT accepts that it is unlikely that he would remember every single tender in detail, particularly one that had been pre-determined not to be of high priority and therefore on which the least possible amount of effort had been expended. This does not preclude that he is able to provide an explanation of the contemporaneous documentation and in particular entries confirmed to be in JR's own handwriting. The weight placed by the OFT on JR's evidence is commensurate with its explanatory nature.

Evidence from other companies – R G Building

IV.6227. The OFT wrote to R G Building's immediate parent company R G Construction Limited ('R G Construction') on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that R G Construction had participated in bid rigging on this tender.⁷⁸⁶⁷ In response to this letter, R G Construction was unable to accept the OFT's offer and said that 'Our investigations have not disclosed any evidence of conduct to which you refer'.⁷⁸⁶⁸

IV.6228. The OFT subsequently wrote R G Building's ultimate parent company at the time of this Infringement, R G Holdings, on 6 November 2007, asking it to comment on R G Construction's response to the OFT's Fast Track Offer, given that the OFT intended to hold R G Holdings jointly and severally liable for any infringements committed by its subsidiaries in respect of which the OFT decided to impose financial penalties. In response to this letter, R G Holdings said it had '...nothing further to add'.⁷⁸⁶⁹

IV.6229. In its response to the Statement R G Carter made general representations as to how, as a business, it ensures it has the resources to price the tenders it receives, and as to its success rate in invitations to tender.⁷⁸⁷⁰ The OFT accepts that the evidence currently available suggests that R G Building tend to price tenders properly. However, the present Infringement relates to the provision of a cover price, not the acceptance of one. Though the OFT has found, in paragraph IV.73 above, that the motive for providing cover prices was usually

⁷⁸⁶⁶ Tender register, OFT Document Reference A0905.

⁷⁸⁶⁷ The OFT made the Fast Track Offer to R G Construction on the basis of information available to it at the relevant time. As R G Building is a wholly owned subsidiary of R G Construction, the OFT does not consider it material that the Fast Track Offer was not addressed to R G Building itself. In any event, the companies in the R G Carter Group made joint representations in response to the Statement, and stated that no evidence had been found to suggest that a cover price had been provided to a competitor. The OFT concludes that none of the companies making up the R G Carter Group were willing to admit participation in bid rigging activities in relation to this tender.

reciprocity, it notes that other motives, including facilitating a reduction in the number of competing bids, are also possible and it is not necessary to establish exactly, or even to speculate, what a company's motive might have been for providing a cover price. Where the evidence indicates that a cover price has been provided, the OFT considers that sufficient for a finding of an infringement.

IV.6230. In its response to the Statement, R G Carter provided a witness statement from PW, who stated in respect of this tender 'I do not recognise the name John Rhodes. He is not someone I can recall ever having met, spoken to or heard of before. I have no recollection of him speaking to me (or me to him) in relation to this tender or at all...I did not provide cover prices as has been alleged in either of these cases [Infringements 210 and 222]'.⁷⁸⁷¹

IV.6231. The OFT notes the direct contradiction between this witness evidence and the contemporaneous evidence and overall explanation provided by JR in respect of the tender book and his specific explanation of the entry relating to this tender. On balance, the OFT considers the latter to be more compelling. JR's evidence is consistent with the markings in the tender book, in particular with the entry 'Cover from Carter' for which R G Building have not provided an alternative plausible explanation. Further, in relation to certain other Infringements described in this Decision, the entries in Jackson's tender book indicating that cover prices were accepted have been confirmed to be correct by admissions (and sometimes independent corroborating evidence) from other Parties.⁷⁸⁷² The OFT further notes the possibility that the cover price may have been provided by someone at R G Building other than the estimator for the tender in question, PW. In light of those factors, the OFT considers that the contemporaneous evidence and explanation of JR should be preferred to that of PW.

IV.6232. From the evidence and arguments presented above, and having taken into account the representations made by the Parties, the OFT draws the following conclusions.

IV.6233. Jackson and R G Building each accepted an invitation to tender for this contract.

IV.6234. Jackson was unable to submit a tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this tender.

IV.6235. In regard to R G Building, Jackson's tender book states, '£1,699,153 Cover from Carters'. Propensity has confirmed that this shows that it received a cover price from R G Building. Jackson recorded in the tender book the figure '£1,699,153' as the tender figure and this was the figure that Jackson submitted for this tender.

IV.6236. The OFT notes in addition that the tender submitted by Jackson was higher than the tender submitted by R G Building, a pattern consistent with a cover price having been provided.

⁷⁸⁷² See, for example, Infringements 103, 119, 191 and 232.

IV.6237. In its response to the Statement R G Carter stated that 'The evidence that the tender submitted by Jackson was higher than the tender submitted by R G Carter, which the OFT suggests as being consistent with a cover price having been provided by R G Carter, is not persuasive as representing evidence that R G Carter provided a cover price'.⁷⁸⁷³ The OFT notes that this analysis is not relied upon in evidence and merely sets out that the pattern of the tender bids was consistent with a cover price having been provided by R G Building to Jackson.

IV.6238. R G Building also suggested that the pattern of bids was consistent with 'Jackson having obtained a cover price from parties other than R G Carter'.⁷⁸⁷⁴ The OFT accepts that the pattern would be also be consistent with Jackson having obtained a cover price from Chalcroft Construction rather than R G Building, but notes there is absolutely no evidence of this and that this alternative explanation is contrary to the tender book entry 'Cover from Carters'.

IV.6239. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between R G Building and Jackson. The OFT also concludes that R G Building supplied a figure to Jackson for a cover bid.

IV.6240. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.6217 to IV.6239 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.⁷⁸⁷⁵ In particular:

- (a) the provision of a figure for a cover bid from R G Building to Jackson was not unilateral⁷⁸⁷⁶, and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;⁷⁸⁷⁷
- (b) Jackson can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from R G Building (i.e. the cover price) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process;⁷⁸⁷⁸ and
- (c) R G Building can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from Jackson (i.e. that Jackson did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its conduct in the tendering process.⁷⁸⁷⁹

IV.6241. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that an agreement and/or concerted practice was in place between Jackson and R G Building, in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the tender for the Refurbishment of Old Hall, Dersingham, Kings Lynn, Norfolk, tender deadline 4 April 2005.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.6242. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.6243. Propensity informed the OFT of the bid rigging activities in respect of this tender before the OFT became aware of these activities from any other source. Propensity will therefore receive 100 per cent immunity from the fine that the OFT is imposing in respect of this tender.

Alleged Infringement 223: Not included in the Decision

Infringement 224: Refurbishment, 12 & 16 Redlands Road, Reading – 27 May 2005

Client: University of Reading
Parties: Mansell and A H Willis

IV.6244. On 5 May 2005 the University of Reading sought tenders for conversion to flats, 12 & 16 Redland Road.⁷⁸⁸⁰ The following five companies were invited to tender: A H Willis, Cavendish Construction, Crown Construction & Interiors Ltd, Francis and Mansell. The date and time of tender return was 27 May 2005 at 12:00 noon.⁷⁸⁸¹

IV.6245. The invitation to tender was addressed, amongst others, to 'Mark Willis, A H Willis & Sons'.⁷⁸⁸²

IV.6246. The University of Reading received the following tender returns:⁷⁸⁸³

Company	Date & Time tender received	Amount of tender	Awarded contract
A H Willis	27 May 2005 at 12:00 noon	£430,560.00	YES
Mansell	27 May 2005 at 12:00 noon	£455,705.00
Crown Construction & Interiors Ltd	27 May 2005 at 12:00 noon	£533,770.00
Cavendish Construction	27 May 2005 at 12:00 noon	£574,930.00
Francis	27 May 2005 at 12:00 noon	£603,298.00

IV.6247. The Form of Tender submitted by A H Willis consisted of a two page document. The first page was a typed standard-form offer to carry out works, with tender details such as the price, date of commencement of work and daywork rates completed in handwriting. The signature box at the bottom of the first page of the Form of Tender was completed as follows (printed entries are denoted in bold type, and manuscript entries in italics):⁷⁸⁸⁴

The second page consisted of a handwritten summary of costs, totalling £430,560.00. The handwriting on the first and second pages was consistent with that in the signature box.

IV.6248. The University of Reading's consultants subsequently requested full priced Schedules of Work from A H Willis and Mansell, which were received on 3 June 2005.⁷⁸⁸⁵

IV.6249. The Schedule of Works submitted by A H Willis consisted of a three-page cover document headed 'A H WILLIS & SONS, 12 – 16 REDLANDS ROAD, TENDER SUMMARY' which has a 'received' stamp, dated 3 June 2005, on the first page. This document was entirely handwritten and contained a list of figures for preliminaries, builders work, sub contractors and margin, giving a total tender amount.⁷⁸⁸⁶ Attached to this were two 24-page documents (one for 12 Redlands Road and one for 16 Redlands Road). Both documents consisted of a typed itemised lists of works with a column marked 'cost' on the right hand side of each page, in which figures were entered in handwriting. The handwriting is consistent throughout these three documents (save for the correction of several figures towards the end of the handwritten document) and corresponds to the handwriting on A H Willis's Form of Tender.⁷⁸⁸⁷

IV.6250. On 27 June 2005, the University's consultants wrote to Mark Willis at A H Willis, enclosing the contract documents for the project and requesting that Mark Willis sign and return them.⁷⁸⁸⁸

Evidence from leniency applicant Mansell

IV.6252. As part of its leniency application, Mansell’s legal representatives provided a general explanation of its part in the process of cover pricing.⁷⁸⁹⁰ This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.470 to IV.502 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.6253. Mansell’s legal representatives also provided to the OFT a table showing information relating to tendering activities in which a calculated competitive bid was not submitted, for the Thames Valley Region (‘TVR’), which includes this tender. In respect of this tender the table shows that Mansell received a cover price from A H Willis and that this cover price was taken due to ‘insufficient tender period: resource’ at Mansell.⁷⁸⁹¹

IV.6254. Following the issue of the Statement, Mansell did not submit any written or oral representations specifically in respect of this Infringement.

Witness evidence from leniency applicant Mansell

IV.6255. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, BR provided further general explanation of Mansell’s participation in cover pricing in the TVR. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.481 to IV.489 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.6256. During an interview with the OFT on 1 May 2007, BR advised how he would record when Mansell had taken a cover as detailed in paragraphs IV.482 to IV.485 above. In relation to this tender BR stated ‘... Willis were approached and they helped us out with a cover’.⁷⁸⁹²

Evidence from other companies – A H Willis

IV.6257. The OFT wrote to A H Willis on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that A H Willis had participated in bid rigging on this tender. In response to that letter A H Willis stated that it ‘does not believe that it has been involved in bid rigging on any of these projects’.⁷⁸⁹³

IV.6258. As part of its response to that letter A H Willis described its relationship with Cyril Elbourn ('CE'), as follows:

'Cyril is a freelance costs estimator/quantity surveyor who works for a number of clients, though it would be fair to say that most of his time is in fact spent working for [A H Willis]. He has been working for [A H Willis] for the past 4 years'.⁷⁸⁹⁴

IV.6259. In respect of this tender, A H Willis advised that:

'The directors' enquiries reveal that a few days before the deadline date for bid submission, Cyril received a telephone call from someone named Barry Russ at Mansells. He asked if AHW [A H Willis] were bidding on this particular project. Cyril confirmed that they were. Mr Russ asked Cyril how he was "getting on". Cyril said that he had nearly finished preparing their bid. Mr Russ said that he was in great difficulty due to pressure of other work and asked Cyril if he would "help" by writing to the University's architect asking for a 7 day extension of the deadline, as Mr Russ himself intended to do. Cyril refused. A short while later Mr Russ called again. He indicated that he had discussed the matter with the University's architect and had been told that it was not going to be possible to grant even a short extension of the deadline. He again asked Cyril how far he had progressed with the preparation of the tender documentation. On behalf of AHW, Cyril indicated that this had now been completed and submitted. Mr Russ asked Cyril if he would "help" Mr Russ by preparing some figures for Mansells' bid. He said to Cyril that Mansells did not really want the job and he would "want you to put me well away". As he had already completed and submitted AHW's bid, Cyril agreed to help and prepared some figures for Mansells' use.

Subsequently AHW was advised that its bid was the lowest and it was invited to provide a fuller breakdown of that bid, which it duly did. Cyril then received another telephone call from Mr Russ in which he was told that Mansells' bid had in fact been the second lowest and they too had been invited to provide a breakdown of their bid. Mr Russ pointed out that he was in difficulty doing this as he had not calculated their original bid. He asked Cyril to help him once more. Cyril then provided Mr Russ with a photostat of the breakdown that he had produced for his own bid and submitted to the University. He did not produce a further breakdown for Mr Russ' use'.⁷⁸⁹⁵

IV.6260. In summary A H Willis's solicitors advised that the activities of CE in respect of this tender 'does not amount to bid rigging by our client'. They stated '...Cyril is a freelance contractor. He is not an officer or even an employee of our client company'.⁷⁸⁹⁶

IV.6261. In its response to the Statement, A H Willis repeated the information provided in its response to the OFT's Fast Track Offer in respect of CE's capacity, to the effect that 'as a third party contractor who was hired by A H Willis on a job by job basis, CE was entitled to (and would in the ordinary course of business) provide estimating services to parties other than A H Willis'.⁷⁸⁹⁷ A H Willis went on to state that CE assisted Mansell in preparing figures for their bid having already completed work on A H Willis' bid, and without A H Willis' knowledge that he was doing so.⁷⁸⁹⁸

- IV.6262. The OFT notes that the evidence from Mansell (at IV.6253 and IV.6256 above) is that a cover price was taken. It is not that CE was engaged to prepare a bid for Mansell to submit. A H Willis accepts that the further breakdown of figures provided by A H Willis to the client was also copied to Mansell such that Mansell submitted to the client figures based on A H Willis' bid rather than on its own genuine cost information. The OFT therefore considers there to be strong and compelling evidence that information was disclosed by CE to Mansell, and A H Willis does not appear to contest this.
- IV.6263. As to whether CE disclosed the information to Mansell with the knowledge of A H Willis, the OFT does not accept that this is the relevant legal test. The question is rather whether CE did so as an agent of A H Willis. The OFT considers that in this case CE acted with the ostensible authority of A H Willis and does not accept A H Willis' arguments in its response to the Fourth Supplementary Statement to the contrary.⁷⁸⁹⁹ In particular, the OFT notes BR's recollection that 'Willis', rather than CE, was approached for a cover and the fact that Mansell's 2005 workload report records '(AH Willis)', in the Remarks column, to indicate that Mansell had taken a cover from A H Willis, rather than CE acting on his own behalf. Thus the source of the cover price is given as A H Willis. In addition, according to A H Willis's own account of events, Mansell originally asked CE to request an extension from the client. This provides further evidence that Mansell considered that CE represented A H Willis, as there would otherwise be no value in CE (on his own behalf) requesting an extension from the client. On that basis the OFT considers it clear that Mansell considered CE to have the ostensible authority of A H Willis in its dealings with him.
- IV.6264. In its response to the OFT's Fast Track Offer, A H Willis also stated that *'the bid was keenly priced because our client was convinced that that represented its only chance of beating Crown Construction'*⁷⁹⁰⁰ who had already been awarded a contract in respect of buildings in the same street and who, it was anticipated, would have logistical and cost advantages in bidding for this contract.
- IV.6265. Further, in its response to the Statement, A H Willis repeated that its tender bid had been submitted to the University of Reading prior to giving Mansell a cover price, in essence arguing that (to the extent that it could be liable for CE's actions) it should not be presumed to have acted in the market on the basis of the information that Mansell would not be submitting a competitive bid.⁷⁹⁰¹
- IV.6266. The OFT notes that, as stated in paragraphs III.53 to III.54 above, the mere receipt of information that Mansell would not be bidding competitively may be sufficient to establish a concerted practice.⁷⁹⁰² Further, as stated in paragraph ⁷⁸⁹⁸ Written representations of A H Willis, 27 June 2008, paragraph 19.g to i.

See also Apex Asphalt and Paving Co Limited v OFT [2005] CAT

III.58, the ECJ has held that 'subject to proof to the contrary, which it is for the economic operators concerned to adduce, there must be a presumption that the undertakings participating in concerting arrangements and remaining active on the market take account of the information exchanged with their competitors when determining their conduct on the market...'.⁷⁹⁰³

IV.6267. On that basis, the OFT does not need to show that A H Willis inflated its bid (or otherwise altered its own conduct) in response to the knowledge that Mansell had accepted a cover price in order to establish that there has been an infringement of the Chapter I prohibition. It is entitled to rely on a presumption that A H Willis has acted (either directly or through its agent) on the information received.

IV.6268. The OFT notes that on A H Willis' own account 'a few days before the deadline date for bid submission, Cyril received a telephone call from someone named Barry Russ at Mansells ... Cyril said that he had nearly finished preparing their bid ... A short while later Mr Russ called again ... Cyril agreed to help' (emphasis added) the second telephone call from Mansell requesting a cover price appears to have been made prior to the date of the tender deadline. The OFT does not therefore accept that A H Willis has satisfactorily rebutted the legal presumption that it acted upon the knowledge that Mansell had accepted a cover price.

IV.6269. Moreover, an undertaking may 'take account' of the information it receives from a competitor in a number of ways when determining its conduct in relation to this or future tenders, so even if the OFT were to accept A H Willis's assertion that the cover pricing did not affect its actual price submitted (which is not the case), that would be insufficient to demonstrate that the conduct fell short of an agreement and/or concerted practice in breach of the Chapter I prohibition. In this regard, the OFT also notes that CE, the individual who received the information from Mansell and whom the OFT considers to form part of one undertaking together with A H Willis, continued to prepare tenders on behalf of A H Willis until at least 2007 (see paragraph IV.6258).

IV.6270. From the evidence and arguments presented above, and having taken into account the representations made by the Parties, the OFT draws the following conclusions.

Cyril Elbourn and A H Willis formed part of the same undertaking

IV.6271. CE was engaged by A H Willis as a costs/estimator/quantity surveyor in relation to the preparation of this tender and other tenders in the period 2003 to 2007.⁷⁹⁰⁴

- IV.6272. A H Willis explicitly consented to CE generating and signing tender returns on its behalf⁷⁹⁰⁵, and CE did in fact generate and sign tender returns on behalf of A H Willis, including that submitted to the University of Reading in relation to this tender. This is demonstrated by the fact that the invitation to tender for this project was addressed to Mark Willis, but the tender return was filled in and signed by CE and, following a subsequent request from the client, CE also completed a Schedule of Works and Tender Summary. A H Willis therefore authorised CE in advance to act on its behalf in dealing with the client. In addition, by entering into the contract with the client, A H Willis ratified CE's actions in submitting tender documentation to the client.
- IV.6273. In its response to the Supplementary Statement⁷⁹⁰⁶, A H Willis stated that although CE was authorised to submit tenders on its behalf on a case by case basis, CE had no discretion and no authority to negotiate or conclude contracts on its behalf.⁷⁹⁰⁷ However, the submission of a tender is an offer to the customer to perform services at a given price and the tender documentation is typically incorporated by reference into the final contract. As such, the OFT considers that by authorising CE to sign and submit tender returns on its behalf, A H Willis was involving him in the process of negotiating and concluding a contract with a customer.
- IV.6274. The OFT concludes that A H Willis expressly or impliedly consented to CE communicating with third parties on its behalf, including through the submission of tender documentation which forms part of the negotiation of a contract for services between A H Willis and a client. As such, the OFT concludes that CE acted as an agent of A H Willis. In its response to the Supplementary Statement, A H Willis stated that CE *'was not ... a sales agent, since his role was not to negotiate or conclude contracts on behalf of A H Willis for the sale or purchase of goods or services...'*⁷⁹⁰⁸ Regardless of whether or not CE was a 'sales agent', the OFT consider the principles set out in paragraphs III.28 to III.36 are relevant to the assessment of whether two legal persons have an agency relationship such that they form part of the same undertaking, and are therefore applicable in the present circumstances.
- IV.6275. In addition, as indicated above, the OFT considers that in providing Mansell with a cover price and a breakdown of A H Willis' bid, CE acted with the ostensible authority of A H Willis, and that A H Willis is therefore liable for his actions as his principal. The fact that CE exceeded his authority by disclosing confidential bid information does not prevent A H Willis from being liable for his actions.
- IV.6276. CE assumed no financial or commercial risk in relation to the contract services, he formed part of the same undertaking as A H Willis.⁷⁹⁰⁹
- IV.6277. In its response to the Supplementary Statement, A H Willis made extensive representations regarding the level of risk assumed by CE with regard to his estimating business.⁷⁹¹⁰ However, the relevant risk is not that assumed in ⁷⁹⁰⁵ Written representations of A H Willis, 21 April 2009, paragraph 17.

⁷⁹⁰⁶ On 30 March 2009, the OFT issued a Supplementary Statement of Objections to A H Willis and Mansell. It is referred to in this Infringement as the Supplementary Statement.

⁷⁹⁰⁷ Written representations of A H Willis, 21 April 2009, paragraphs 5(e), 10 to 11, 16(d).

⁷⁹⁰⁸ Written representations of A H Willis, 21 April 2009, paragraph 15.

⁷⁹⁰⁹ See paragraphs III.34 of the Legal Background section.

⁷⁹¹⁰ Written representations of A H Willis, 21 April 2009, paragraphs 14 and 20.

respect of the services provided by the contractor to the principal, but rather that assumed as between the agent and the third party with whom CE was interacting as a representative of the principal, see paragraphs III.28 to III.36 above. Although A H Willis provided an example whereby CE would be liable to A H Willis if A H Willis made a loss as a result of an error by CE⁷⁹¹¹, it has not argued that CE would be personally liable to the client after acting as a representative of A H Willis.

IV.6278. As such, A H Willis cannot avoid liability for the actions of CE by claiming that his actions in giving a cover bid to Mansell were unauthorised.⁷⁹¹² References to A H Willis in paragraphs IV.6285 to IV.6289 below are therefore in its capacity as principal of CE, and forming a single undertaking together with CE, and reflect A H Willis' liability for CE's actions.

Cover pricing

IV.6279. Mansell and A H Willis each accepted an invitation to tender for this contract.

IV.6280. Both companies submitted a tender. Mansell was unable to submit a tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this contract.

IV.6281. The invitation to A H Willis to tender was addressed to Mark Willis, but A H Willis's tender return and summary of costs was completed and signed by CE 'on behalf of A H Willis'. CE also subsequently created a Tender Summary document and filled in a Schedule of Works on behalf of A H Willis, both of which were submitted to the client.

IV.6282. Mansell's 2005 workload report records 'AH Willis', in the Remarks column. Mansell confirmed that this shows that it took a cover price from the company noted. In addition, Mansell has confirmed that the lack of figures in the margin and percentage columns would also indicate a cover price had been taken.

IV.6283. BR of Mansell contacted CE (working on behalf of A H Willis) to request a cover price, and CE subsequently provided that cover price to BR.

IV.6284. In addition, A H Willis advised, in response to the OFT's letter of 22 March 2007, that CE, who was working for A H Willis in relation to this tender, did provide a cover price to Mansell in respect of this tender prior to the deadline for the receipt of tenders, and that he subsequently also provided a breakdown of A H Willis's bid to Mansell.

IV.6285. The OFT further notes that the tender submitted by Mansell was higher than the tender submitted by A H Willis, the pattern consistent with a cover price having been provided.

⁷⁹¹¹ Written representations of A H Willis, 21 April 2009, paragraph 20.

⁷⁹¹² See paragraph III.36 of the Legal Background section.

IV.6287. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between Mansell and A H Willis. The OFT also concludes that A H Willis supplied a figure to Mansell for a cover bid.

IV.6288. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.6247 to IV.6287 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.⁷⁹¹³ In particular:

- (a) the provision of a figure for a cover bid from A H Willis to Mansell was not unilateral⁷⁹¹⁴, and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;⁷⁹¹⁵
- (b) Mansell can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from A H Willis (i.e. the cover price) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process;⁷⁹¹⁶ and
- (c) A H Willis can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from Mansell (i.e. that Mansell did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its conduct in the tendering process.⁷⁹¹⁷

IV.6289. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that an agreement and/or concerted practice was in place between Mansell and A H Willis in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the tender for refurbishment, 12 & 16 Redlands Road, Reading, tender deadline 27 May 2005.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.6290. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.6291. Mansell informed the OFT of the bid rigging activities in respect of this tender before the OFT became aware of these activities from any other source. Mansell will therefore receive 100 per cent immunity from the fine that the OFT is imposing in respect of this tender.

Infringement 225: Swinnow Flats, Energy Efficiency Works – 8 June 2005
Client: Leeds City Council
Parties: Strata, Richardson Projects and P Casey

IV.6292. On 13 May 2005, Leeds City Council sought tenders for energy efficiency works and general upgrading including re-wiring and external security lighting to five blocks of three-storey Wimpey no-fines flats. The following six companies were invited to tender: Frank Haslam Milan, Connaught, Seddon, Strata,

Richardson Projects and P Casey. The tender deadline was 12:00 noon on 8 June 2005.⁷⁹¹⁸

IV.6293. Leeds City Council received the following tender returns:⁷⁹¹⁹

Company	Time & Date Tender Received	Amount of tender	Awarded contract
Frank Haslam Milan	Before 12:00 noon on 8 June 2005	£921,406.00	Yes
Connaught	No Tender Returned	N/A
Seddon	Before 12:00 noon on 8 June 2005	£1,033,366.45
Strata	Before 12:00 noon on 8 June 2005	£1,068,421.00
Richardson Projects	Before 12:00 noon on 8 June 2005	£995,922.00
P Casey	Before 12:00 noon on 8 June 2005	£1,053,672.00

IV.6294. The scheme was cancelled and re-tendered at a later date as the lease holders were not informed prior to the tenders being sent.⁷⁹²⁰

Evidence of agreement and/or concerted practice

Contemporaneous documentary evidence from leniency applicant Strata – Estimating Tracking document

IV.6295. During the OFT's search of Strata's premises a number of 'Estimating Tracking' documents were found.⁷⁹²¹ The tracking document contained the following entries in respect of this tender:

Contemporaneous documentary evidence from Richardson Projects - Tender Summary and Form of Tender

IV.6296. During the OFT's search of Richardson Project's premises a Tender Summary for this contract was found.⁷⁹²² The following entries were found on this Tender Summary:

3 J & S Seddon
4 Casey ©	1,053,672.00	5.80%	57,749.90
5 Strata ©	1,068,421.00	7.28%	72,498.90'

IV.6297. The Form of Tender for this contract was also found during the OFT's visit. The Form of Tender was signed by T Fratzczak and stated that Richardson Projects submitted a tender price of £995,922.00 on 8 June 2005 for this contract.⁷⁹²³

Evidence from leniency applicant - Strata

IV.6298. As part of its leniency application, Strata provided to the OFT a list of covers prepared by reference to its contract information sheets, the file 'Covers from Jan 2000 to Dec 2001' and 'Contracts in hand' documents. This list included the following entry:⁷⁹²⁴

⁷⁹²² Tender Summary sheet, OFT Document Reference A0013.

⁷⁹²³ Form of Tender, OFT Document Reference A0012.

⁷⁹²⁴ Leniency Schedule, OFT Document Reference 4058.

IV.6299. Following the issue of the Statement, Strata did not submit any written or oral representations specifically in respect of this Infringement.

Witness evidence from leniency applicant Strata

IV.6300. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, Strata's past and present employees provided further general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.617 to IV.634 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.6301. During an interview conducted on 28 March 2007 in connection with its leniency application, Paul Throssell ('PT'), an estimator at Strata, was shown the estimating tracking document and the reference to 'energy efficiency works at five blocks of flats, Swinnow Leeds' and asked if he could recall anything about that contract. PT replied, '...I don't to be honest with you, no, it wasn't a particularly big contract as far as we're concerned now ... so that's probably why we decided to take a cover'.⁷⁹²⁵ PT confirmed that the entry 'cover taken from Richardson Proj' indicates that Strata took a cover price from Richardson Projects.⁷⁹²⁶ PT also confirmed that £1,068,421.00 was the figure supplied by Richardson Projects as a cover figure.⁷⁹²⁷

Evidence from other companies – Richardson Projects

IV.6302. The OFT wrote to Richardson Projects on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender in return for an admission that Richardson Projects had participated in bid rigging on this tender. In response to this letter Richardson Projects admitted 'We engaged in bid-rigging/cover pricing on this tender with Strata & Casey'.⁷⁹²⁸

IV.6303. In its response to the Statement, Richardson Projects confirmed that it '...accepted the OFT's Fast Track Offer and does not contest the OFT's findings of infringement [in respect of this Infringement].⁷⁹²⁹

⁷⁹²⁹ Written representations of Richardson Projects, 25 June 2008, paragraph 4.

Evidence from other companies – P Casey

IV.6304. The OFT wrote to P Casey on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that P Casey had participated in bid rigging on this tender. In response to this letter P Casey admitted 'We engaged in bid rigging (cover pricing) activities on this tender but cannot recall details of the other party/parties involved'.⁷⁹³⁰ P Casey added that 'The Company has few hard copy documents relating to the suspect tenders and does not maintain electronic tender documents. The estimator employed during the period of the suspect tenders emigrated to New Zealand in 2005 and has been unable to provide any reliable recollections of the tenders in question. For these reasons, the Company has only been able to consider incomplete records and it neither has evidence to indicate that cover pricing activity occurred nor an evidential basis upon which to challenge the allegations...'.⁷⁹³¹

IV.6305. The OFT subsequently wrote to P Casey's ultimate parent company at the time of this Infringement, The Casey Group, on 6 November 2007, asking it to comment on P Casey's response to the OFT's Fast Track Offer, given that the OFT intended to hold The Casey Group jointly and severally liable for any infringements committed by P Casey in respect of which the OFT ultimately decided to impose financial penalties. In response to this letter The Casey Group admitted 'We engaged in bid rigging (cover pricing) activities on this tender but cannot recall details of the other party/parties involved. We have no actual knowledge nor evidence of cover pricing having occurred in relation to this tender ...'.⁷⁹³² The Casey Group also stated 'We also submit that all of the tenders should fall to be dealt with by The Casey Group Limited as the relevant parent company'.⁷⁹³³

IV.6306. In its response to the Statement, P Casey stated that it had *'... not been able to establish any further facts concerning the alleged infringements referred to in the [Statement, including this Infringement] and consequently can provide no additional assistance to the Office of Fair Trading.'*⁷⁹³⁴

IV.6308. Strata, Richardson Projects and P Casey each accepted an invitation to tender for energy efficiency works at five blocks of flats, Swinnow, Leeds.

IV.6309. All three companies submitted a tender. Strata and P Casey were unable to submit a competitive tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this contract.

IV.6310. In regard to Richardson Projects, Strata's Estimating Tracking document records '£1,068,421.00 (Cover Taken from Richardson Proj)', typed in the Tender Value column. Also a 'C' is typed in the estimator column. PT confirmed that the note in the tender value column records that Strata received a cover price from Richardson Projects. PT also confirmed that the value recorded is the cover figure given to Strata by Richardson Projects. In addition to this Richardson Projects' Tender Summary sheet records 'Strata © 1,068,421.00, 7.28%, 72,498.90'. This figure is the same as the tender figure submitted by Strata for the contract. The OFT considers in the light of the contemporaneous evidence from Strata and PT's admission and explanation of that contemporaneous evidence, and the fact that the tender summary from Richardson Projects provides independent corroborating evidence, that Richardson Projects supplied Strata with a cover figure for this tender.

IV.6311. The OFT also notes that Richardson Projects admitted that the party with whom it engaged in bid rigging was Strata, without being shown the OFT's evidence that Strata was involved. This provides additional independent corroboration of the OFT's evidence in respect of this tender.

IV.6312. In regard to P Casey, Richardson Projects' tender summary sheet records 'Casey © 1,053,672.00, 5.80%, 57,749.90'. Richardson Projects confirmed that it engaged in bid rigging/cover pricing on this tender with P Casey. Again, this figure is the same as the tender figure submitted by P Casey for the contract. The OFT considers in the light of the contemporaneous evidence (the Tender Summary sheet from Richardson Projects) and Richardson Projects' admission to engaging in cover pricing with P Casey, that Richardson Projects also supplied P Casey with a cover figure for this tender.

IV.6313. All three companies, Strata, P Casey and Richardson Projects, have admitted to bid rigging in relation to this tender.

IV.6314. The OFT further notes that the tenders submitted by Strata and P Casey were higher than the tender submitted by Richardson Projects, the pattern consistent with cover prices having been provided.

IV.6315. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between Strata and Richardson Projects and between P Casey and Richardson Projects. The OFT also concludes that Richardson Projects supplied figures to Strata and to P Casey for cover bids.

IV.6316. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.6295 to IV.6315 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.⁷⁹³⁵ In particular:

- (a) the provision of figures for cover bids from Richardson Projects to Strata and from Richardson Projects to P Casey was not unilateral⁷⁹³⁶, and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;⁷⁹³⁷
- (b) Strata and P Casey can each be presumed to have taken account of the information received from Richardson Projects (i.e. the respective cover

⁷⁹³⁵ See paragraphs III.3 and III.89 to III.126 of the Legal Background section.

⁷⁹³⁶ See paragraph IV.73 of the General comments on cover pricing section.

- prices) when determining their own conduct in the tendering process;⁷⁹³⁸ and
- (c) Richardson Projects can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from each of Strata and P Casey (i.e. that each of Strata and P Casey did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process.⁷⁹³⁹

IV.6317. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that agreements and/or concerted practices were in place between Strata and Richardson Projects and between P Casey and Richardson Projects, in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, each of which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the tender for the energy efficiency works to five blocks of Wimpey flats, Swinnow, Leeds, tender deadline 8 June 2005.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.6318. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.6319. In respect of this tender, the OFT became aware of bid rigging activities by virtue of the information obtained during the visit under section 28 on 6 and 7 July 2005. Strata will not therefore receive 100 per cent immunity in respect of this tender. However, Strata will receive its normal leniency percentage reduction from the fine that the OFT is imposing in respect of this tender.

Infringement 226: New Library, Centurian Way, Brough – 8 June 2005
Client: East Riding of Yorkshire Council
Parties: Hobson & Porter and Geo Houlton

IV.6320. On 4 May 2005 East Riding of Yorkshire Council ('East Riding') sought tenders for a new library, Centurian Way, Brough. The return date for the tender was 12:00 noon on 8 June 2005 and six companies were invited to tender: Clark Construction Ltd, Topcon (Builders & Contractors) Ltd, Hobson & Porter, Geo Houlton, Wright (Hull) and F Parkinson.

IV.6321. East Riding received the following five tender returns on 8 June 2005.⁷⁹⁴⁰

Evidence of agreement and/or concerted practice

Contemporaneous documentary evidence from leniency applicant Hobson & Porter – Tender information sheet

IV.6322. The tender information sheet for this tender states that Hobson & Porter's submitted figure was £1,566,631 and in the competition section is written, 'HOULTON 'C' 1,646,400'.⁷⁹⁴¹ Three other competitors are written in that section, 'Topcon, Clark and Parkinson'⁷⁹⁴², but none of these have any markings or figures against them.

Evidence from leniency applicant Hobson & Porter

IV.6323. As part of its leniency application, Hobson & Porter provided a general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.391 to IV.407 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.6324. In Hobson & Porter's Summary of Cover Pricing Activity (Major Works) it is stated that Hobson & Porter provided a cover to Geo Houlton and that the individual contact at Geo Houlton was Trevor Townsend.⁷⁹⁴³

IV.6325. In its response to the Statement, Hobson & Porter stated that it '...does not contest the OFT's findings of infringement'.⁷⁹⁴⁴

Witness evidence from leniency applicant Hobson & Porter

IV.6326. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, Hobson & Porter's employees provided further general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.391 to IV.407 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.6327. In respect of this tender, in interview David Watson ('DW'), Managing Director of Hobson & Porter, recalls that he gave the cover price to Trevor Townsend of Geo Houlton, 'He phoned us up and asked for a cover I said yes we will give him one and obviously nearer the date when we calculated our price I rang him back and gave him a cover'.⁷⁹⁴⁵ DW added that the 'C' written next to Geo Houlton on the tender information sheet was probably written by Michael Haywood ('MH'), an estimator in Major Works,⁷⁹⁴⁶ although MH has no specific recollection of this particular tender.⁷⁹⁴⁷

Evidence from other companies – Geo Houlton

IV.6328. The OFT wrote to Geo Houlton on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that Geo Houlton had participated in bid rigging on this tender. In response to this letter, Geo Houlton admitted 'We engaged in bid rigging activities on this tender but cannot recall details of the other party/parties involved'.⁷⁹⁴⁸

IV.6329. The OFT subsequently wrote to Geo Houlton's ultimate parent company at the time of this Infringement, Geo Houlton Holdings, on 5 November 2007, asking it to comment on Geo Houlton's response to the OFT's Fast Track Offer, given that the OFT intended to hold Geo Houlton Holdings jointly and severally liable for any infringements committed by Geo Houlton in respect of which the OFT ultimately decided to impose financial penalties. In response to this letter, Geo Houlton Holdings said it had no comments to make.⁷⁹⁴⁹

IV.6330. In its response to the Statement, Geo Houlton stated '[i]t is not disputed that Houlton participated in cover pricing during the relevant period set out in the Statement'.⁷⁹⁵⁰

The OFT's analysis of the evidence and finding

IV.6332. Hobson & Porter and Geo Houlton each accepted an invitation to tender for this contract.

IV.6333. Hobson & Porter completed the estimating process for the tender for this contract. Hobson & Porter wanted to win the tender for this contract and submitted a genuine bid.

IV.6334. Geo Houlton was unable to submit a tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this tender.

IV.6335. In regard to Geo Houlton, Hobson & Porter's tender information sheet records 'HOULTON 'C' 1,646,400'. Hobson & Porter has confirmed that this indicates that it gave the company in question a cover price. Hobson & Porter recorded on the tender information sheet the figure £1,646,400 against Geo Houlton, a figure that was identical other than the addition of £22, to the tender price that Geo Houlton submitted, which was £1,646,422. Furthermore, DW has confirmed that Trevor Townsend contacted Hobson & Porter to ask for a cover price as set out in paragraph IV.6327 above.

IV.6336. The OFT notes in addition that the tender submitted by Geo Houlton was higher than the tender submitted by Hobson & Porter, a pattern consistent with a cover price having been provided. Furthermore, both parties have admitted engaging in bid rigging on this tender.

IV.6337. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between Geo Houlton and Hobson & Porter. The OFT also concludes that Hobson & Porter supplied a figure to Geo Houlton for a cover bid.

IV.6338. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.6322 to IV.6337 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.⁷⁹⁵¹ In particular:

- (a) the provision of a figure for a cover bid from Hobson & Porter to Geo Houlton was not unilateral⁷⁹⁵², and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;⁷⁹⁵³
- (b) Geo Houlton can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from Hobson & Porter (i.e. the cover price) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process;⁷⁹⁵⁴ and
- (c) Hobson & Porter can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from Geo Houlton (i.e. that Geo Houlton did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its conduct in the tendering process.⁷⁹⁵⁵

IV.6339. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that an agreement and/or concerted practice was in place between Geo Houlton and Hobson & Porter, in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the tender for a new library, Centurian Way, Brough, tender deadline 8 June 2005.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.6340. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.6341. In respect of this tender, the OFT became aware of the bid rigging activities by virtue of the information obtained during the visit under section 28 to Hobson & Porter on 28 March 2006. Hobson & Porter will not therefore receive 100 per cent immunity in respect of this tender. However, in accordance with paragraph VI.386 of Section VI (Enforcement), the OFT is not imposing any financial penalty on Hobson & Porter in respect of this Infringement.

Infringement 227: Burngreave Facelifts 2005/06 – Contract 1 – 13 June 2005
Client: Sheffield City Council
Parties: Strata and Ackroyd & Abbott

IV.6342. On 20 May 2005, Sheffield City Council sought tenders for the refurbishment of 67 council-owned properties of various types.⁷⁹⁵⁶ The following six companies were invited to tender: Ackroyd & Abbott, A. Baldwin & Co (Builders) Ltd, Henry Boot, Burngreave Building Co, Richardson Projects and Strata.⁷⁹⁵⁷ The tender deadline was 12:00 noon on 13 June 2005.⁷⁹⁵⁸

IV.6343. Sheffield City Council received the following tender returns:⁷⁹⁵⁹

Company	Time & Date Tender Received	Amount of tender	Awarded contract
Ackroyd & Abbott	Prior to 12:00 noon on 13 June 2005	£631,953.00
A. Baldwin & Co (Builders) Ltd	Prior to 12:00 noon on 13 June 2005	£481,276.52
Henry Boot	Prior to 12:00 noon on 13 June 2005	£593,733.00
Burngreave Building Co	Prior to 12:00 noon on 13 June 2005	£323,636.00	Yes
Richardson Projects	Prior to 12:00 noon on 13 June 2005	£695,933.00
Strata	Prior to 12:00 noon on 13 June 2005	£686,317.00

Evidence of agreement and/or concerted practice

Contemporaneous documentary evidence from leniency applicant Strata - Estimating Tracking document

IV.6344. During the OFT’s search of Strata’s premises a number of ‘Estimating Tracking’ documents were found.⁷⁹⁶⁰ The tracking document contained the following entries in respect of this tender:

⁷⁹⁵⁶ Information from client, OFT Document Reference 9344.

⁷⁹⁵⁷ Information from client, OFT Document Reference 9344.

⁷⁹⁵⁸ Information from client, OFT Document Reference 9344.

Evidence from leniency applicant - Strata

IV.6345. As part of its leniency application, Strata provided to the OFT a list of covers prepared by reference to its contract information sheets, the file 'Covers from Jan 2000 to Dec 2001' and 'contracts in hand' documents. This list contained the following entry:⁷⁹⁶¹

Date	Project	Strata ref no	Cover to
13/06/2005	Burngreave Facelifts 2005/06 for Sheffield City Council	T21/05

Cover from	Company Name	Company Address
✓	Ackroyd & Abbott	Sheffield

IV.6346. Following the issue of the Statement, Strata did not submit any written or oral representations specifically in respect of this Infringement.

Witness evidence from leniency applicant Strata

IV.6347. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, Strata's past and present employees provided further general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.617 to IV.634 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.6348. During an interview conducted on 28 March 2007 in connection with its leniency application Paul Throssell ('PT'), an estimator at Strata, was shown the 'Estimating Tracking' document and the reference to Burngreave Facilities and asked in general whether the word 'cover' and a reference to another company recorded somewhere on the estimating tracking document would indicate that Strata had taken a cover from that company noted. PT confirmed that this was correct.⁷⁹⁶²

IV.6349. PT further clarified the sequence of events in a fax received by the OFT on 15 August 2007.⁷⁹⁶³ PT stated that the enquiry came 'out of the blue' and was one that Strata was not interested in winning.⁷⁹⁶⁴ PT confirmed that the presence of a 'C' in the Estimator column of the 'Estimating Tracking' document refers to a cover taken by Strata.⁷⁹⁶⁵ PT explained that the reference to 'Cover taken from Ackroyd & Abbot' typed in the tender value column shows that 'Ackroyd & Abbott provided us with a price above their own tender figure to submit as our tender price for the contract'.⁷⁹⁶⁶ PT had 'no recollection of who, at Strata sought the cover price'. PT claimed that it might well have been himself, although he could not find any records to substantiate this.⁷⁹⁶⁷

IV.6350. PT also confirmed that 'The price would have been arranged by telephone in advance of the Tender return deadline, usually by two calls, one at the beginning of the tender period to request the figure and a second at the end of the tender period to receive the price'.⁷⁹⁶⁸ PT added that there would not have been any contact with any other competitor regarding this contract.

Evidence from other companies – Ackroyd & Abbott

IV.6351. The OFT wrote to Ackroyd & Abbott on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that Ackroyd & Abbott had participated in bid rigging on this tender. In response to this letter Ackroyd & Abbott stated 'It has not been possible to uncover any documentary evidence other than the documents that were seized by the OFT. The individuals that were interviewed had some recollection of all the tenders on the OFT's list but were simply not able to recall whether they had given or taken a cover price ...'.⁷⁹⁶⁹ Ackroyd & Abbott did not admit to engaging in cover pricing on this contract.⁷⁹⁷⁰

IV.6352. In its response to the Statement, Ackroyd & Abbott stated that it had '...seen the evidence available and accept[s] that Ackroyd & Abbott Construction participated in cover pricing in the Alleged Infringements [including this Infringement]'.⁷⁹⁷¹

⁷⁹⁷¹ Written representations of Ackroyd & Abbott, 2 July 2008, paragraph 76.

- IV.6354. Strata and Ackroyd & Abbott each accepted an invitation to tender for the contract for Burngreave Facelifts 2005/06.
- IV.6355. Both companies submitted a tender. Strata was not interested in winning the contract as it was not its type of work and the value was below the level where it felt that it could be competitive, and estimating resources were fully employed on other, more attractive contracts.
- IV.6356. Strata's 'Estimating Tracking' document records '£686,317.00 (cover taken from Ackroyd & Abbot)', typed in the tender value column. Also a 'C' is typed in the estimator column. PT confirmed that the note in the tender value column records that Strata received a cover price from Ackroyd & Abbott and the 'C' refers to a cover received by Strata. The OFT considers in the light of the contemporaneous evidence from Strata and PT's admission and explanation of that contemporaneous evidence that Ackroyd & Abbott supplied Strata with a cover figure for this tender.
- IV.6357. The OFT further notes that the tender submitted by Strata was higher than the tender submitted by Ackroyd & Abbott, the pattern consistent with a cover price having been provided.
- IV.6358. The OFT notes that both Parties have now admitted their involvement in cover pricing in respect of this Infringement.
- IV.6359. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between Strata and Ackroyd & Abbott. The OFT also concludes that Ackroyd & Abbott supplied a figure to Strata for a cover bid.
- IV.6360. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.6344 to IV.6359 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.⁷⁹⁷² In particular:
- (a) the provision of a figure for a cover bid from Ackroyd & Abbott to Strata was not unilateral⁷⁹⁷³, and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;⁷⁹⁷⁴
 - (b) Strata can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from Ackroyd & Abbott (i.e the cover price) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process;⁷⁹⁷⁵ and
 - (c) Ackroyd & Abbott can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from Strata (i.e. that Strata did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its conduct in the tendering process.⁷⁹⁷⁶
- IV.6361. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that an agreement and/or concerted practice was in place between Strata and Ackroyd & Abbott in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the tender for Burngreave Facelifts 2005/06, tender deadline 13 June 2005.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.6362. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.6363. In respect of this tender, the OFT became aware of bid rigging activities by virtue of the information obtained during the visit under section 28 on 6 and 7 July 2005. Strata will not therefore receive 100 per cent immunity in respect of this tender. However, Strata will receive its normal leniency percentage reduction from the fine that the OFT is imposing in respect of this tender.

Infringement 228: Extensions to Workshops, Leeds College of Art & Design, Blenheim Walk, Leeds – 20 June 2005

Client: Leeds College of Art & Design

Parties: Totty⁷⁹⁷⁷ and GMI

IV.6364. On 7 April 2005 Leeds College of Art & Design sought tenders for extensions to Workshops, Leeds College of Art & Design, Blenheim Walk, Leeds. The return date for the tender was midday on 20 June 2005 and five companies were invited to tender: GMI, Interserve, NU Construction Ltd, Quarmby and Totty.⁷⁹⁷⁸

IV.6365. Leeds College of Art & Design received the following tender returns by midday on 20 June 2005:⁷⁹⁷⁹

Company	Date tender received	Time tender received	Amount of tender	Awarded the tender
GMI	7 April 2005	20 June 2005	£4,795,210
Interserve	7 April 2005	20 June 2005	£4,190,601
NU Construction Ltd	7 April 2005	20 June 2005	£3,806,543	Yes
Quarmby	7 April 2005	Declined to tender
Totty	7 April 2005	20 June 2005	£4,604,432

Evidence of agreement and/or concerted practice

Contemporaneous documentary evidence from leniency applicant Propensity – Totty tender sheet

IV.6366. The tender final summary sheet for this tender states that Totty's submitted figure was £4,604,432 and in the competition section is handwritten, 'GMI (cover) £4,795'.⁷⁹⁸⁰ Three other competitors are type-written in that section, ⁷⁹⁷⁷ Totty is a subsidiary of Propensity.

'Quarmby SP, NewCon' and 'Interserve', but none of these have any markings or figures against them.

Evidence from leniency applicant Propensity

IV.6367. As part of its leniency application, Propensity provided a general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.537 to IV.566 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.6368. Following the issue of the Statement, Propensity did not submit any written or oral representations specifically in respect of this Infringement.

Witness evidence from leniency applicant Propensity

IV.6369. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, Propensity's employees provided further general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.537 to IV.566 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.6370. Martin Miller ('MM'), who at the time of the tender was a Bid Manager in the Commercial Division of Totty, confirmed in interview that this was one of the tenders for which he was responsible⁷⁹⁸¹ and that the handwriting 'GMI (cover) £4,795', on the tender final summary sheet was his.⁷⁹⁸² MM confirmed that, 'GMI received a cover from Totty Construction'⁷⁹⁸³ and that he made the handwritten annotations, 'pre tender date'.⁷⁹⁸⁴

IV.6371. In its response to the Statement, GMI submitted that as MM does not remember ever having spoken personally to GMI, and could not recall who at Totty spoke to GMI, his recollection that a cover price was given to GMI is unreliable.⁷⁹⁸⁵ The OFT does not accept that submission. MM clearly recalled that a cover price was given to GMI, notwithstanding his lack of recollection as to which of the estimators in the officer made the call to GMI. MM had a specific recollection of making a note of the cover price on the tender document himself and it is in his handwriting.⁷⁹⁸⁶

Evidence from other companies – GMI

IV.6372. The OFT wrote to GMI on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that GMI had participated in bid rigging on this tender. In response to this letter, GMI rejected the OFT's Fast Track Offer.⁷⁹⁸⁷

IV.6373. The OFT subsequently wrote to GMI's ultimate parent company at the time of this Infringement, GMI Construction Holdings, on 6 November 2007, asking it to comment on GMI's response to the OFT's Fast Track Offer, given that the OFT intended to hold GMI Construction Holdings jointly and severally liable for any infringements committed by GMI in respect of which the OFT ultimately decided to impose financial penalties. In response to this letter, GMI Construction Holdings said it had no comments to make.⁷⁹⁸⁸

IV.6374. In its response to the Statement, GMI stated that it '...submitted its competitive tender by the return date. GMI subsequently contacted Totty after the return date to establish how much Totty had tendered in order that GMI could establish whether it was likely to win the work. GMI and Totty exchanged their tendered prices which explains why Martin Miller of Totty added the entry referred to in the [Statement, also set out at paragraph IV.6366 above] to the tender register. It is noted that this entry is hand written whereas the remainder of the tender register revealed by the OFT is typed which GMI submits is because Martin Miller added the entry after the tender had been submitted'.⁷⁹⁸⁹

IV.6375. In a witness statement attached to GMI's response, its Chief Executive stated '...John Naylor, our Estimating Director, recalls that at some point after the date of return for tenders he telephoned Totty's Estimating Department, whom we knew were also submitting a bid, with a view to exchanging prices to check our bid was competitive. Whilst there were other contractors tendering for this project, he chose Totty as being a similar size company and very competitive like ourselves, and John Naylor thought that this would give us a good indication of the likely result of the tender'.⁷⁹⁹⁰

IV.6376. The OFT notes the direct contradiction between the evidence of John Naylor and MM as to whether the 'GMI (cover) £4,795' entry was added to the Totty tender sheet before or after the tender return date had passed. In particular, the OFT notes that MM in responding to the interview question '...when you put GMI cover, was that written down pre tender?' replied 'Yes, pre tender date, yes'.⁷⁹⁹¹ The OFT considers that GMI's suggested alternative version of events is not supported by the wording of the document, including the word '(cover)' recorded by Totty against GMI's name. On balance the OFT therefore prefers the contemporaneous evidence and witness explanation of MM to the evidence of Mr Naylor, which is unsupported by any other evidence.

IV.6377. In its response to the Statement GMI submitted that it was unlikely that Totty would have offered a cover price to GMI as it was a competitor that it did not know well.⁷⁹⁹² However the fact that it was unusual to give a cover price in those circumstances does not mean that it did not happen in this case and the OFT considers this argument to be insufficient to undermine its conclusions in relation to the evidence. Moreover, the OFT notes the explanation given by John Naylor when describing a post-tender approach to Totty, as set out at paragraph IV.6375 above, in particular that Totty was 'a similar size company and very competitive like ourselves'. The OFT considers that this explanation could equally apply when deciding which other bidder to approach for a cover price, and would explain why GMI made contact with Totty even if the two competitors did not know one another well.

⁷⁹⁹² Written representations of GMI, 26 June 2008, paragraphs 66.9 to 66.10.

IV.6378. In its response to the Statement, GMI also stated '...in the circumstances of the case, Martin Miller of Totty is likely to have considered himself under considerable pressure to provide information to the OFT which would result in his company and his personal conduct being viewed in the best possible light in the hope and expectation that the degree of leniency offered to and subsequently obtained by Totty would be the most substantial possible'.⁷⁹⁹³ The OFT does not accept GMI's assertion that Totty might have changed or fabricated evidence as part of a strategy to cooperate with the OFT and implicate its competitors. Indeed the document described at paragraph IV.6366 above was obtained during the OFT's search of Totty's premises and can confirm that it is a faithful facsimile of the original document. Any suggestion that either MM or Totty sought to obtain an advantage by fabricating evidence cannot be sustained and has not been supported by any contemporaneous evidence contradicting the OFT's case.

IV.6379. GMI also submitted in its response to the Statement that the fact that it sought quotes from sub-contractors for the work shows that they intended to, and did, submit a competitive tender.⁷⁹⁹⁴ The OFT does not accept this assertion. It is equally plausible that after initial enquiries GMI concluded that it did not wish to complete the full estimation process. The OFT notes that a decision to take a cover price may have been taken after work had begun to seek prices from sub-contractors, for example because the firm in question had won other tenders and would have been unable to take on the tendered works but did not wish to offend the client by returning the tender, or because the sub-contractor prices or other research led the firm to conclude late in the process that the job was unattractive. It is not the OFT's case that either of these or any other particular reason for deciding to take cover price applied in the case of GMI, it only notes that there are a number of plausible explanations for this scenario. The evidence of GMI's initial enquiries to sub-contractors does not therefore undermine the OFT's conclusion that cover pricing took place in relation to this tender.

IV.6380. In its response to the Statement, GMI claimed there was no reason for it to participate in cover pricing as it clearly had a policy of declining tenders where, for whatever reason, it felt unable to submit a tender, noting that an example of this can be found in the description of Infringement 211 where GMI was an invited bidder but declined to tender.⁷⁹⁹⁵ The OFT notes that the present Infringement relates to the provision of a cover price, not the acceptance of one, which is compatible with a policy of declining tenders. Though the OFT has found, in paragraph IV.73 above, that a common motive for providing cover prices was reciprocity, it notes that the undertaking concerned may have other motives, such as facilitating the reduction in competitive bids for a tender which it wishes to win. Therefore, any evidence of GMI declining tenders has no bearing on the finding that it gave a cover price to a competitor.

IV.6381. From the evidence and arguments presented above, and having taken into account the representations made by the Parties, the OFT draws the following conclusions.

⁷⁹⁹³ Written representations of GMI, 26 June 2008, paragraph 66.13.

⁷⁹⁹⁵ Written representations of GMI, 24 June 2008, paragraphs 68 to 71.

- IV.6382. Totty and GMI each accepted an invitation to tender for this contract.
- IV.6383. Totty completed the estimating process for the tender for this contract. Totty wanted to win the tender for this contract and it appears that it submitted a bid with the hope of winning the work.
- IV.6384. GMI was unable to submit a tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this tender.
- IV.6385. In regard to GMI, Totty's tender information sheet records 'GMI (cover) £4,795'. Propensity has confirmed that this shows that it gave the company in question a cover price. No amounts are recorded against any other companies on Totty's tender information sheet. The figure that Totty recorded against GMI on the tender final summary sheet, '£4,795', was a figure that was identical to the first four numbers of the tender price that GMI submitted.
- IV.6386. The OFT notes in addition that the tender submitted by GMI was higher than the tender submitted by Totty, a pattern consistent with a cover price having been provided. The OFT further notes that no other company submitted a bid higher than Totty's bid, and that Totty could not therefore have given cover to anyone else in respect of this tender.
- IV.6387. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between GMI and Totty. The OFT also concludes that Totty supplied a figure to GMI for a cover bid.
- IV.6388. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.6364 to IV.6387 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.⁷⁹⁹⁶ In particular:
- (a) the provision of a figure for a cover bid from Totty to GMI was not unilateral⁷⁹⁹⁷, and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;⁷⁹⁹⁸
 - (b) GMI can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from Totty (i.e. the cover price) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process;⁷⁹⁹⁹ and
 - (c) Totty can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from GMI (i.e. that GMI did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its conduct in the tendering process.⁸⁰⁰⁰
- IV.6389. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that an agreement and/or concerted practice was in place between GMI and Totty, in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the tender for Extensions to Workshops, Leeds College of Art & Design, Blenheim Walk, Leeds, tender deadline 20 June 2005.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.6390. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.6391. Propensity informed the OFT of the bid rigging activities in respect of this tender as part of its leniency application and was granted immunity from penalty in respect of those activities. The OFT now notes that it did in fact have some information on the bid rigging activities from documents obtained on its earlier visit to Propensity's premises (see paragraph IV.6366 above), but noting the contents of the Statement and the OFT's leniency agreement with Propensity, the OFT will not impose a penalty on Propensity in respect of this Infringement.

Infringement 229: Alterations to Law Faculty Offices, Fielding Johnson Building, University of Leicester – 24 June 2005

Client: University of Leicester

Parties: Phoenix and B & A

IV.6392. On 3 June 2005 the University of Leicester sought tenders for alterations to law faculty offices at the Fielding Johnson Building. The return date for the tender was 12:00 noon on 24 June 2005 and four companies were invited to tender: Brown & Kirby Ltd, Brown & Shaw, Phoenix and B & A.⁸⁰⁰¹

IV.6393. The University of Leicester received the following four tender returns before 12:00 noon on 24 June 2005:⁸⁰⁰²

Company	Time and Date tender received	Amount of tender	Awarded the tender
Brown & Kirby Ltd	Before 12 noon 24 June 2005	£19,973.82	Yes
Brown & Shaw	Before 12 noon 24 June 2005	£29,739.25
Phoenix	Before 12 noon 24 June 2005	£28,493.75
B & A	Before 12 noon 24 June 2005	£32,714.35

Evidence of agreement and/or concerted practice

Contemporaneous documentary evidence from leniency applicant Phoenix

IV.6394. A number of documents relevant to this tender were obtained by the OFT during the visit under section 27 to Phoenix's premises on 25 January 2006. The first of these was the invitation to tender letter which has the handwritten entries, '7/6 B & A, - Martin – Help. [.....] [C]' and '8/6/ Brown & Shaw⁸⁰⁰³ also pricing tender'.⁸⁰⁰⁴

⁸⁰⁰¹ Information from client, OFT Document Reference 13837.

⁸⁰⁰² Information from client, OFT Document Reference 13837.

⁸⁰⁰³ The OFT has no evidence that Brown & Shaw was a party to bid rigging on this tender.

⁸⁰⁰⁴ Invitation to tender letter, OFT Document Reference 4144.

IV.6395. Secondly, the Form of Tender shows that Phoenix's submitted price was £24,250 exclusive of VAT and £28,493.75 including VAT, and that this tender was submitted by senior estimator Matt Pickering ('MP').⁸⁰⁰⁵

IV.6396. Thirdly, a 'Tender Abstract document' has the handwritten entry 'covers given at 25k to 26k'.⁸⁰⁰⁶

Evidence from leniency applicant Phoenix

IV.6397. As part of its leniency application, Phoenix provided a general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.527 to IV.536 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.6398. In Phoenix's Table of Cover Pricing Activity provided under leniency it is stated that Phoenix provided a cover to B & A at £25k to £26k and that the individual contact at B & A was Martin.⁸⁰⁰⁷

IV.6399. In its response to the Statement, Phoenix stated that '...Phoenix has accepted that it engaged in cover pricing in breach of the Chapter 1 prohibition.'⁸⁰⁰⁸

Witness evidence from leniency applicant Phoenix

IV.6400. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, Phoenix's employees provided further general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.527 to IV.536 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.6401. In respect of this tender, in interview MP believed that the handwriting on the invitation to tender letter, '7/6 B & A, - Martin - Help. [.....] [C]' was that of Roger Grace ('RG'), an ex-employee of Phoenix. He confirmed, 'So they, [B & A] it basically says they want a cover price'.⁸⁰⁰⁹ MP said that RG would have prepared the submission, but he would have submitted the tender.⁸⁰¹⁰

IV.6402. MP explained that this was a record of the initial contact made with B & A, 'Yeah, they'd ring around to the usual mob who'd tender for the work, because they either don't want the job, or can't price it in the time. And just wanted a cover price to ... so they could submit a tender, and really, stay on the tender list'.⁸⁰¹¹ MP confirmed that he would have had subsequent telephone contact with B & A, 'probably the day before or the morning of the submission, I'd have got a phone call from B and A begging for a figure, basically. And, that's when I would have given it [the cover price]'.⁸⁰¹²

IV.6403. MP confirmed that the handwriting 'covers given at 25k to 26k', on the 'Tender Abstract document' was his and that based on the Phoenix tender figure (before VAT) of £24,250, Phoenix could provide a cover price between

£25,000 and £26,000.⁸⁰¹³ MP said, 'Yeah, you know, to say if they make up their own figure between that, then they wouldn't look silly, but they wouldn't get the job'.⁸⁰¹⁴

Evidence from other companies – B & A

IV.6404. The OFT wrote to B & A on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that B & A had participated in bid rigging on this tender. B & A did not respond to this letter and on 8 May 2007 confirmed in a telephone conversation with the OFT that it was rejecting the OFT's Fast Track Offer.⁸⁰¹⁵

IV.6405. However, in its response to the Statement, B & A stated that as the individual estimators involved had left the company in 2007, are now not contactable, and B & A does not have records in respect of this tender '...B&A has no means of challenging the evidence now presented by the OFT in support of its allegations in relation to cover pricing, and therefore admits liability for the cover pricing infringements alleged by the OFT'.⁸⁰¹⁶

IV.6406. B & A also confirmed in its response that one of the individual estimators employed at the time of this infringement (and who has since left) was an individual named Martin Alderson 'who must be the "Martin" referred to in relation to infringement 229'.⁸⁰¹⁷

Evidence from D & B small business centre website

IV.6407. The company information obtained for B & A gives the contact number for B & A as '[.....] [C]'.⁸⁰¹⁸

The OFT's analysis of the evidence and finding

IV.6409. Phoenix and B & A each accepted an invitation to tender for this contract.

IV.6410. Phoenix completed the estimating process for the tender for this contract. Phoenix wanted to win the tender for this contract and submitted a genuine bid.

IV.6411. B & A was unable to submit a tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this tender.

IV.6412. In regard to B & A, the invitation to tender document has the handwritten entry '7/6 B & A, - Martin – Help. [.....] [C]'. Phoenix has confirmed that this shows that B & A asked Phoenix to provide it with a cover price. MP explained in interview that this would have been a record of an initial contact on 7 June during which B & A would have requested a cover price and that there would have been a second contact, probably on the morning of the tender submission, when the cover price would have been given by Phoenix to B & A.

IV.6413. MP recorded on the 'Tender Abstract document' 'covers given at 25k to 26k', as a figure that B & A could submit for this tender without winning the tender. This shows that a cover price was given to B & A of the amount noted. The OFT believes that these figures are exclusive of VAT and notes that B & A's price submitted for this tender was £32,714.35. The OFT considers it likely that B & A added a further figure to the figure supplied by Phoenix in order to ensure that it did not win the contract. The OFT notes that the telephone number in 'Martin – Help. [.....] [C]' is the telephone number for B & A and provides further corroboration that Phoenix made subsequent contact with B & A to provide a cover price. B & A has confirmed that the 'Martin' referred to must be Martin Alderson, who worked at B & A at the time of this infringement.

IV.6414. The OFT notes in addition that the tender submitted by B & A was higher than the tender submitted by Phoenix, a pattern consistent with a cover price having been provided.

IV.6415. Both B & A and Phoenix have admitted engaging in cover pricing in respect of this tender for alterations to law faculty offices at the Fielding Johnson Building.

IV.6416. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between B & A and Phoenix. The OFT also concludes that Phoenix supplied a figure to B & A for a cover bid.

IV.6417. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.6394 to IV.6416 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.⁸⁰¹⁹ In particular:

- (a) the provision of a figure for a cover bid from Phoenix to B & A was not unilateral⁸⁰²⁰, and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;⁸⁰²¹
- (b) B & A can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from Phoenix (i.e. the cover price) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process;⁸⁰²² and
- (c) Phoenix can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from B & A (i.e. that B & A did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its conduct in the tendering process.⁸⁰²³

IV.6418. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that an agreement and/or concerted practice was in place between B & A and Phoenix, in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the tender for alterations to law faculty offices at the Fielding Johnson Building, University of Leicester, tender deadline 24 June 2005.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.6419. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.6420. In respect of this tender, the OFT became aware of the bid rigging activities by virtue of the information obtained during the visit under section 27 to Phoenix on 25 January 2006. Phoenix will not therefore receive 100 per cent immunity in respect of this tender. However, Phoenix will receive its normal leniency percentage reduction from the fine that the OFT is imposing in respect of this tender.

Infringement 230: 34 Residential Apartments at 71 - 75 Wright Street, Hull – 25 July 2005

Client: Kingscourt Developments Limited

Parties: Hobson & Porter and Wright (Hull)

IV.6421. On 13 June 2005 Kingscourt Developments Limited ('Kingscourt') sought tenders for 34 residential apartments at 71 - 75 Wright Street, Hull. The return date for the tender was 25 July 2005 and four companies were invited to tender: Hobson & Porter, MR Builder Limited, Wright (Hull) and Hall.⁸⁰²⁴

IV.6422. Kingscourt received the following four tender returns on 25 July 2005:⁸⁰²⁵

Company	Date tender received	Time tender received	Amount of tender	Awarded the tender
Hobson & Porter	25 July 2005	09:00	£2,367,982
MR Builder Limited	25 July 2005	09:00	£2,847,513
Wright (Hull)	25 July 2005	09:00	£2,496,218
Hall	25 July 2005	09:00	£2,370,850	Yes

Evidence of agreement and/or concerted practice

Contemporaneous documentary evidence from leniency applicant Hobson & Porter – Tender information sheet

IV.6423. The tender information sheet for this tender states that Hobson & Porter's submitted figure was £2,367,982 and in the competition section is written, 'WRIGHTS'C'.⁸⁰²⁶ One other competitor is written in this section, 'HALLS', but does not have any marking or figure against it. On page three of the tender information sheet is written 'WRIGHT £2,496,218'.

⁸⁰²⁵ Information from client, OFT Document Reference 8058.

Evidence from leniency applicant Hobson & Porter

IV.6424. As part of its leniency application, Hobson & Porter provided a general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.391 to IV.407 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.6425. In Hobson & Porter's Summary of Cover Pricing Activity (Major Works) it is stated that Hobson & Porter provided a cover to Wright (Hull) and that the individual contact at Wright (Hull) was Chris Davis.⁸⁰²⁷

IV.6426. In its response to the Statement, Hobson & Porter stated that it '...does not contest the OFT's findings of infringement'.⁸⁰²⁸

Witness evidence from leniency applicant Hobson & Porter

IV.6427. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, Hobson & Porter's employees provided further general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.391 to IV.407 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.6428. In respect of this tender, in interview Russell Horner ('RH'), Major Works Estimating Director, recalled that Michael Haywood ('MH'), an estimator at Hobson & Porter, priced the tender and that he would have completed the tender information sheet and added the 'C' next to 'WRIGHTS'.⁸⁰²⁹ RH confirmed that Hobson & Porter provided cover to Wright (Hull). David Watson ('DW'), Managing Director, confirmed that Hobson & Porter gave 'a cover to Wrights'.⁸⁰³⁰

IV.6429. MH confirmed that he priced this tender and added the 'C' next to 'WRIGHTS' on the tender information sheet. MH also stated that 'at some stage I was aware that Wrights had taken a cover'.⁸⁰³¹ but that he could not confirm that the cover price was provided by Hobson & Porter.

IV.6430. MH was interviewed a second time about this contract and said, 'I believe we gave the cover to Wrights, and Halls were successful in winning the contract'.⁸⁰³² In respect of the handwritten annotation 'WRIGHT £2,496,218' on page three of the tender information sheet, MH said that it was his handwriting and that, 'I would imagine that is the figure [the cover price] I gave to Wright Construction'.⁸⁰³³ MH also confirmed that he made this handwritten annotation before Hobson & Porter submitted its tender.⁸⁰³⁴

alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that Wright (Hull) had participated in bid rigging on this tender. In response to this letter, Wright (Hull) admitted 'We engaged in bid rigging activities on this tender but cannot recall details of the other party/parties involved'.⁸⁰³⁵

IV.6432. The OFT subsequently wrote to Wright (Hull)'s ultimate parent company at the time of this Infringement, T Wright Holdings, on 5 November 2007, asking it to comment on Wright (Hull)'s response to the OFT's Fast Track Offer, given that the OFT intended to hold T Wright Holdings jointly and severally liable for any infringements committed by Wright (Hull) in respect of which the OFT ultimately decided to impose financial penalties. In response to this letter, T Wright Holdings said 'We have been made fully aware of the situation by our subsidiary and at this stage have no further comment to make'.⁸⁰³⁶

IV.6433. In its response to the Statement, Wright (Hull) confirmed that it *'...has admitted to engaging in "cover pricing" on this tender, but cannot recall details of the other party/parties involved.'*⁸⁰³⁷

The OFT's analysis of the evidence and finding

IV.6435. Hobson & Porter and Wright (Hull) each accepted an invitation to tender for this contract.

IV.6436. Hobson & Porter completed the estimating process for the tender for this contract. Hobson & Porter wanted to win the tender for this contract and submitted a bid with the hope of winning the work.

IV.6437. Wright (Hull) was unable to submit a tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this tender.

IV.6438. In regard to Wright (Hull), Hobson & Porter's tender information sheet records 'WRIGHTS 'C''. RH of Hobson & Porter has confirmed that this indicates that it gave Wright (Hull) a cover price. DW of Hobson & Porter has also confirmed that Hobson & Porter gave a cover price to Wright (Hull). MH has confirmed that the 'C' written next to 'WRIGHT' on the tender information sheet, indicates that Wright (Hull) received a cover price from Hobson & Porter.

IV.6439. In regard to the handwritten annotation 'WRIGHT £2,496,218' on page three of the tender information sheet, MH has confirmed that this is a record, made by him, of the cover price that Hobson and Porter supplied to Wright (Hull), providing further corroboration of contact between Hobson & Porter and Wright (Hull) in respect of this tender. This figure was identical to the tender that Wright (Hull) submitted for the work.

IV.6440. The OFT notes in addition that the tender submitted by Wright (Hull) was higher than the tender submitted by Hobson & Porter, a pattern consistent with a cover price having been provided. Furthermore, both companies have admitted to engaging in bid rigging on this tender.

⁸⁰³⁷ Written representations of Wright (Hull), 27 June 2008, paragraph 44.

IV.6441. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between Wright (Hull) and Hobson & Porter. The OFT also concludes that Hobson & Porter supplied a figure to Wright (Hull) for a cover bid.

IV.6442. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.6423 to IV.6441 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.⁸⁰³⁸ In particular:

- (a) the provision of a figure for a cover bid from Hobson & Porter to Wright (Hull) was not unilateral⁸⁰³⁹, and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;⁸⁰⁴⁰
- (b) Wright (Hull) can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from Hobson & Porter (i.e. the cover price) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process;⁸⁰⁴¹ and
- (c) Hobson & Porter can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from Wright (Hull) (i.e. that Wright (Hull) did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its conduct in the tendering process.⁸⁰⁴²

IV.6443. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that an agreement and/or concerted practice was in place between Wright (Hull) and Hobson & Porter, in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the tender for 34 residential apartments at 71 - 75 Wright Street, Hull, tender deadline 25 July 2005.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.6444. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.6445. In respect of this tender, the OFT became aware of the bid rigging activities by virtue of the information obtained during the visit under section 28 to Hobson & Porter on 28 March 2006. Hobson & Porter will not therefore receive 100 per cent immunity in respect of this tender. However, Hobson & Porter will receive its normal leniency percentage reduction from the fine that the OFT is imposing in respect of this tender.

Infringement 231: Phase 3 Office Development, Park Lane, Allerton Bywater – 29 July 2005
Client: Elmfield Business Parks
Parties: Irwins and Holroyd

IV.6446. On 24 June 2005, SDA Architects & Designers on behalf of Elmfield Business Parks⁸⁰⁴³ sought tenders for three two-storey buildings with associated external works at Park Lane, Allerton Bywater.⁸⁰⁴⁴ Each tenderer was required to provide costings for building the project in three phases.⁸⁰⁴⁵ This Infringement relates to Phase 3. The following seven companies were invited to tender: William Birch & Sons, Bluestone, Irwins, Stainforth, Ham Construction Ltd, Houseman & Falshaw Ltd and Holroyd.⁸⁰⁴⁶ The deadline for receipt of tenders was changed from Monday 25 July 2005 to noon on Friday 29 July 2005 following requests from various tenderers to extend the tender deadline due to staff shortages over the holiday period.⁸⁰⁴⁷

IV.6447. SDA Architects & Designers received the following tender returns for Phase 3 of the project.⁸⁰⁴⁸

Company	Time & Date tender received	Amount of tender
William Birch and Sons	Prior to 29 July 2005	£1,888,779.89
Bluestone	Returned un-priced on 30 June 2005
Irwins	Prior to 29 July 2005	£1,527,670.00
Stainforth	Prior to 29 July 2005	£1,533,406.00
Ham Construction Ltd	Prior to 29 July 2005	£1,361,750.00
Houseman & Falshaw Ltd	Prior to 29 July 2005	£1,446,708.00
Holroyd	Prior to 29 July 2005	£1,391,498.00

IV.6448. On 3 October 2005 a letter was sent to all tenderers stating that the project was over budget and that the client had decided to defer the project.⁸⁰⁴⁹

Evidence of agreement and/or concerted practice

Contemporaneous documentary evidence from leniency applicant Irwins – Tender Register

IV.6449. During the OFT's search of Irwins' premises a 'Tender Register' was found.⁸⁰⁵⁰ The tender register contained the following entry in respect of this tender:

Evidence from leniency applicant – Irwins

IV.6450. As part of its leniency application, Irwins’ legal representatives provided a general explanation of its participation in cover pricing.⁸⁰⁵¹ This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.408 to IV.419 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.6451. In addition to its leniency application, Irwins provided to the OFT two schedules, one each for ‘Covers Taken’ and ‘Covers Given’, which detail projects/contracts identified by the company during the course of an internal investigation conducted by Ivan Peter Nelson (‘IPN’), Estimating Director at Irwins, into potential cover prices. At number 116 of the ‘Covers Taken’ schedule is the following entry:⁸⁰⁵²

⁸⁰⁵² Extract from Covers Taken schedule, OFT Document Reference A0718, page 10.

IV.6452. Irwins also provided to the OFT a schedule listing its competitors' contact details. The name of Holroyd appears on the list and Andrew Waldon is named as the contact point.⁸⁰⁵³

IV.6453. Following the issue of the Statement, Irwins did not submit any written or oral representations specifically in respect of this Infringement.

Witness evidence from leniency applicant Irwins

IV.6454. During an interview with the OFT on 8 March 2007 conducted in connection with Irwins' leniency application, IPN provided further general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.408 to IV.419 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.6455. Also during this interview, IPN was shown the 'Tender Register'⁸⁰⁵⁴ and in particular the reference to the entry for an office development at Allerton Bywater and was asked if he could recall anything about that contract. IPN replied 'Yeah, This is one that, um, we set about to price and then gathered that it wouldn't go ahead anyway and so...'⁸⁰⁵⁵ 'I think that perhaps one of the reasons, when you've got it all and, I mean, you're halfway through and you find out from someone who's in for it and then you think, well, we're just wasting our time'.⁸⁰⁵⁶ IPN explained that the presence of a 'C' in the fourth column on the tender register shows that Irwins took a cover in relation to that contract.⁸⁰⁵⁷ When it was pointed out by the OFT that there was an '*' against Holroyd's name in the 'Competition' column IPN further confirmed that Holroyd was the company which gave Irwins a cover price, 'yeah, I used Holroyd'.⁸⁰⁵⁸ IPN also stated in respect of another tender during interview that '[.....] [C]' was the telephone number of Andrew Waldren at Holroyd.⁸⁰⁵⁹ In respect of the present tender, IPN confirmed again that the number was Holroyd's.⁸⁰⁶⁰

Evidence from other companies – Holroyd

IV.6456. The OFT wrote to Holroyd on 21 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that Holroyd had participated in bid rigging on this tender. Holroyd did not respond to this letter and on 8 May 2007 the OFT informed the Managing Director of Holroyd that a failure to respond to the Fast Track letter denoted a rejection. The Managing Director of Holroyd confirmed that Holroyd had rejected the OFT's Fast Track Offer.⁸⁰⁶¹

Note that in interview IPN was asked to confirm that [.....] [C] was Andrew Waldon's phone number, however the document referred to during this part of the interview states [.....] [C] and the OFT is satisfied that IPN was confirming the latter number as being Holroyd.

⁸⁰⁶⁰ Interview transcript, OFT Document Reference 11255, pages 11 and 12.

⁸⁰⁶¹ File note of telephone conversation, OFT Document Reference 10412.

IV.6457. The OFT subsequently wrote to Holroyd's ultimate parent company at the time of this Infringement, Holroyd Group, on 5 November 2007, asking it to comment on Holroyd's response to the OFT's Fast Track Offer, given that the OFT intended to hold Holroyd Group jointly and severally liable for any infringements committed by Holroyd in respect of which the OFT ultimately decided to impose financial penalties. In response to this letter Holroyd Group stated 'the directors of Holroyd Construction Group Ltd will have nothing to add to any statements made by Holroyd Construction Ltd as it was not involved in the day to day management and operations of the business'.⁸⁰⁶²

IV.6458. Following the issue of the Statement, Holroyd did not submit any written or oral representations.

The OFT's analysis of the evidence and finding

IV.6460. Irwins and Holroyd each accepted an invitation to tender for the contract for Phase 3 of an office development at Allerton Bywater. Irwins was unable to submit a tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this contract.

IV.6461. Holroyd appears to have completed the estimating process for the tender for this contract and came second lowest in the tender process.

IV.6462. Irwins' tender register records *'Stainforth, Holroyd, W Birch, Andrew ?? [.....] [C]', typed in the final column. IPN confirmed that the presence of an '*' next to 'Holroyd' and also the name 'Andrew' and the telephone number [.....] [C] shows that the cover price was received from Holroyd and more specifically Andrew Waldren, an estimator at Holroyd. The OFT notes that [.....] [C] was a Holroyd telephone number. Also a 'C' is typed in the type of work/ percentage difference column. IPN confirmed that the 'C' typed in this column shows that Irwins sought a cover price in relation to this contract. The OFT considers in the light of the contemporaneous evidence from Irwins and IPN's admission and explanation of the contemporaneous evidence, that Holroyd supplied Irwins with a cover price for this tender.

IV.6463. The OFT also notes that the only companies whose submitted tender figures were below that of Irwins were Holroyd, Ham Construction Ltd and Houseman & Falshaw Ltd. Irwins could therefore only have received a cover figure from one of those three companies, and the OFT further notes that Holroyd is the only one of those three companies recorded on Irwins' tender register. The OFT therefore considers that this provides further evidence that Irwins received a cover figure from Holroyd.

IV.6464. The OFT also notes that neither Ham Construction Ltd nor Houseman & Falshaw Ltd appear on the schedule that Irwins provided to the OFT, listing their competitors' contact details. The OFT considers that this is a further indication that Irwins would not have approached either of those two companies for a cover price.

IV.6465. In addition the OFT notes that the tender submitted by Irwins was higher than the tender submitted by Holroyd, the pattern consistent with a cover price having been provided.

IV.6466. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between Irwins and Holroyd. The OFT also concludes that Holroyd supplied a figure to Irwins for a cover bid.

IV.6467. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.6449 to IV.6466 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.⁸⁰⁶³ In particular:

- (a) the provision of a figure for a cover bid from Holroyd to Irwins was not unilateral⁸⁰⁶⁴, and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;⁸⁰⁶⁵
- (b) Irwins can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from Holroyd (i.e. the cover price) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process;⁸⁰⁶⁶ and
- (c) Holroyd can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from Irwins (i.e. that Irwins did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its conduct in the tendering process.⁸⁰⁶⁷

IV.6468. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that an agreement and/or concerted practice was in place between Irwins and Holroyd, in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the tender for Phase 3 of an office development at Park Lane, Allerton Bywater, tender deadline 29 July 2005.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.6469. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.6470. In respect of this tender, the OFT became aware of bid rigging activities by virtue of the information obtained during the visit under section 28 on 21 March 2006. Irwins will not therefore receive 100 per cent immunity in respect of this tender. However, Irwins will receive its normal leniency percentage reduction from the fine that the OFT is imposing in respect of this tender.

Infringement 232: New Build Agricultural Building, Crowe Hall, Stutton – 29 July 2005

Client: Church Manor Estates

Parties: Jackson⁸⁰⁶⁸ and Haymills

IV.6471. On 24 June 2005, Church Manor Estates sought tenders for a new build agricultural building (stable), Crowe Hall, Stutton. The return date for the tender was 29 July 2005 and six companies were invited to tender: Elliston Steady & Hawes, Haymills, Jackson, Rose Builders, R G Carter and Brooks & Wood.⁸⁰⁶⁹

IV.6472. Church Manor Estates received the following tender returns by 12:00 noon on 29 July 2005:⁸⁰⁷⁰

Company	Date tender received	Time tender received	Amount of tender	Awarded the tender
Elliston Steady & Hawes	29 July 2005	By 12:00 Noon	£905,800.00
Haymills	29 July 2005	By 12:00 Noon	£1,075,590.00
Jackson	29 July 2005	By 12:00 Noon	£1,118,846.00
Rose Builders	29 July 2005	By 12:00 Noon	£544,488.30	Yes
R G Carter	29 July 2005	By 12:00 Noon	£589,379.00
Brooks & Wood	Declined to tender 7 July 2005

Evidence of agreement and/or concerted practice

Contemporaneous documentary evidence from leniency applicant Propensity – Jackson Tender Book

IV.6473. In Jackson's tender book provided by Propensity to the OFT as part of its leniency application, in respect of this tender, the following entries have been made, all of which are handwritten.⁸⁰⁷¹

⁸⁰⁷⁰ Information from client, OFT Document Reference 7386.

⁸⁰⁷¹ Tender book, OFT Document Reference A0905, page 73.

Evidence from leniency applicant Propensity

IV.6474. As part of its leniency application, Propensity provided a general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.537 to IV.566 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.6475. In particular, Propensity provided to the OFT an analysis of Jackson's Tender Records Book since 4 January 2000 and in respect of this tender, Propensity confirmed that it received a cover price from Haymills.⁸⁰⁷²

IV.6476. In its response to the Statement, Propensity stated '...Propensity Group has made admissions in relation to all instances of cover pricing it uncovered as part of its leniency application'.⁸⁰⁷³

Witness evidence from leniency applicant Propensity

IV.6477. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, Propensity's employees provided further general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.537 to IV.566 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.6478. John Rhodes ('JR'), Pre-Contracts Manager at Jackson, confirmed in interview that it is his handwriting in the tender book⁸⁰⁷⁴ and that in most instances it would be himself that arranged the cover price.⁸⁰⁷⁵ JR said in respect of the entry for this tender in the tender book, that 'ST' stood for the estimator Stuart Talbot ('ST') and that the 'C' stood for 'competitive tender'.⁸⁰⁷⁶ JR further explained that ST was responsible for arranging the cover on this particular tender, which explains why the figure obtained from Haymills was not entered into the tender book.⁸⁰⁷⁷ Despite ST arranging the cover, JR was aware that Jackson was taking a cover price.⁸⁰⁷⁸

IV.6479. ST, a senior estimator at Jackson confirmed, 'that's one that I was involved in, and I did obtain a cover price on that project'.⁸⁰⁷⁹ ST said that Jackson decided that it could not deal with this tender, 'So rather than the embarrassment of sending it back after chasing it through, and also potentially upsetting a client that we wanted to do future works with, I got in touch with Haymill's, who we knew had worked there before. So I assumed they would be on the tender list, and obtained a cover price from them so that we could not secure the project, without the embarrassment of having to send the documents back'.⁸⁰⁸⁰ ST further confirmed that, 'That was the price that we put in, or they told me the figure not to go below, and I think we then would have calculated a figure above that' and the person he spoke to at Haymills, 'Yes, it was a chap called Nick Dye, who is the guy who gave me the cover price'.⁸⁰⁸¹

Evidence from other companies – Haymills

IV.6480. The OFT wrote to Haymills on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that Haymills had participated in bid rigging on this tender. In response to this letter, Haymills admitted 'We engaged in cover pricing (a form of bid rigging activities) on this tender with Jacksons'.⁸⁰⁸²

IV.6481. In its response Haymills enclosed a copy of its Tender Analysis Form for this tender and under the section headed 'Competition' is written 'JACKSONS (HELP REQUESTED) STUART TALBOT [.....] [C]'.⁸⁰⁸³ In addition, Haymills said in respect of this tender, after its internal enquiries and interviews, that 'Nick Dye, a Quantity Surveyor based at Haymills' Stowmarket office, has a specific recollection of providing a cover price in respect of the above contract to Stuart Talbot of Jacksons (a competitor building contractor). Stuart Talbot telephoned Haymills on several occasions requesting a cover price, which Nick Dye eventually gave after Haymills had finalised its own tender price ... The tender analysis form for this contract supports Nick Dye's recollection'.⁸⁰⁸⁴

IV.6482. The OFT subsequently wrote to Haymills' ultimate parent company at the time of this Infringement, Haymills Group, on 6 November 2007, asking it to comment on Haymills' response to the OFT's Fast Track Offer, given that the OFT intended to hold Haymills Group jointly and severally liable for any infringements committed by Haymills in respect of which the OFT ultimately decided to impose financial penalties. In response to this letter, Haymills Group said it had no comments to make.⁸⁰⁸⁵

IV.6483. In its response to the Statement, Haymills stated that it '...does not challenge its participation in cover pricing and its breach of the Chapter I prohibition in respect of ... [this Infringement]. Haymills Group regrets its participation in cover pricing and now operates a strict policy of competition law compliance'.⁸⁰⁸⁶

IV.6485. Jackson and Haymills each accepted an invitation to tender for this contract.

IV.6486. Haymills completed the estimating process for the tender for this contract and it appears that it submitted a bid with the hope of winning the work.

IV.6487. Jackson was unable to submit a tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this tender.

⁸⁰⁸⁶ Written representations of Haymills, 27 June 2008, paragraph 2.

- IV.6488. In regard to Haymills, Jackson's tender book states, 'Cover from Haymills'. Propensity has confirmed that this shows that it received a cover price from Haymills.
- IV.6489. The OFT notes in addition that the tender submitted by Jackson was higher than the tender submitted by Haymills, a pattern consistent with a cover price having been provided.
- IV.6490. Both companies have admitted to bid rigging in relation to this tender. Both companies also specifically recall the details of the contact with regard to the provision of the cover price for this tender. Jackson's estimator dealing with the tender was ST, who specifically recalled requesting a cover price from Nick Dye at Haymills. Similarly, Haymills has confirmed that its estimator dealing with the tender was Nick Dye, who specifically recalled giving a cover price to ST at Jackson.
- IV.6491. The OFT notes that Haymills admitted that the party with whom it engaged in bid rigging was Jackson, and that Jackson's estimator dealing with this tender was ST, without being shown the OFT's evidence that Jackson was involved. This provides additional independent corroboration of the OFT's evidence in respect of this tender.
- IV.6492. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between Haymills and Jackson. The OFT also concludes that Haymills supplied a figure to Jackson for a cover bid.
- IV.6493. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.6473 to IV.6492 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.⁸⁰⁸⁷ In particular:
- (a) the provision of a figure for a cover bid from Haymills to Jackson was not unilateral⁸⁰⁸⁸, and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;⁸⁰⁸⁹
 - (b) Jackson can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from Haymills (i.e. the cover price) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process;⁸⁰⁹⁰ and
 - (c) Haymills can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from Jackson (i.e. that Jackson did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its conduct in the tendering process.⁸⁰⁹¹
- IV.6494. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that an agreement and/or concerted practice was in place between Jackson and Haymills, in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the tender for the new build agricultural building (stable), Crowe Hall, Stutton, tender deadline 29 July 2005.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.6495. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.6496. Propensity informed the OFT of the bid rigging activities in respect of this tender before the OFT became aware of these activities from any other source. Propensity will therefore receive 100 per cent immunity from the fine that the OFT is imposing in respect of this tender.

Infringement 233: Eastbrook Hall, Little Germany, Bradford – 8 August 2005
Client: Aldersgate Estates Ltd
Parties: York House and Quarmby

IV.6497. During June and July 2005, Aldersgate Estates Ltd sought tenders for new build construction inside the retained facade of Eastbrook Hall (Listed Building). The return date for the tender was 12:00 noon on 8 August 2005 and five companies were invited to tender: Ham, Myddelton, Quarmby, Stainforth and York House.⁸⁰⁹²

IV.6498. Aldersgate Estates Ltd received the following tender returns on 8 August 2005:⁸⁰⁹³

Company	Date tender received	Time tender received	Amount of tender	Awarded the contract
Ham	8 August 2005	Pre Noon	£8,264,409	Yes
Myddelton	8 August 2005	Pre Noon	£8,644,210
Quarmby	8 August 2005	Pre Noon	£9,140,967
Stainforth	8 August 2005	Pre Noon	£7,790,969
York House	8 August 2005	Pre Noon	£9,852,263

Contemporaneous documentary evidence from York House – Original Documents

IV.6499. As part of its leniency application, York House provided an Estimating Programme Printout relating to several tenders.⁸⁰⁹⁴ In section 16 the following typed and handwritten entries were made:⁸⁰⁹⁵

IV.6500. At the time of its leniency application York House was in the process of computerising its estimating procedures. A further document was produced as a result of an I.T. sift of its computer system. A partial extract of the information contained in that document reads as follows:⁸⁰⁹⁶

IV.6501. On 28 March 2006, a search with consent was undertaken at the premises of York House and in the course of the search the managing director Mr Andrew Bruce produced a handwritten list of covers.⁸⁰⁹⁷ The entry relating to Eastbrook Hall reads as follows:⁸⁰⁹⁸

[From/]	Cover
	Given	Taken	To who
'5080 Eastbrook Hall Bradford	X	✓	QUARMBY'

IV.6502. As part of its leniency application, York House provided a general explanation of its participation in cover pricing.⁸⁰⁹⁹ This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.743 to IV.751 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.6503. In particular, York House provided to the OFT a schedule of covers given and taken. The schedule confirms that York House received a cover price from Quarmby in relation to Eastbrook Hall. The individual contact named in the schedule is David Harrison, with a contact number of [...] [C].⁸¹⁰⁰

IV.6504. In its response to the Statement, York House did not make any submissions in respect of this Infringement.

Witness evidence from leniency applicant York House

IV.6505. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, York House employees provided further general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.743 to IV.751 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.6506. Additional evidence in relation to this tender comes from the interview of Arthur Richardson ('AR'), the estimator for York House. His response to questions concerning this tender were as follows:⁸¹⁰¹

- S. 'Facade retention. Right again I am going to show you some documents. What do you recall about the contract first of all.
- C. Well again it's not our type of work and a nightmare scenario if you don't get it right.
- S. Is that a very specialist job.
- A. Yes
- Q Was there an estimator allocated to it.
- A. No'

Questions relating to a computerised estimating register⁸¹⁰²

- Q. '.....it's got here 15 C.O.V 0580 Eastbrook Hall, Bradford 136 hours Monday 47205 and it says at the very beginning C.O.V
- A. Yes
- Q. Now I asked you earlier in the interview...
- A. That means cover'

IV.6507. In its response to the Statement, Quarmby contended in respect of AR's interview that he '...does not however, recollect taking a cover from [Quarmby] in respect of this tender and only agrees that a cover was taken from [Quarmby] when the OFT interviewer asks the leading question "do you admit taking a cover from Quarmby"? [AR]'s response was "Again if you show me...". The OFT interviewer proceeded to show [AR] two OFT documents A1595 and A0490. Both of these documents identify that York House submitted a cover price but neither document identifies [Quarmby] as the giver of such cover price'.⁸¹⁰³

IV.6508. The OFT notes that, contrary to Quarmby's assertion, OFT document A0490 does in fact identify Quarmby as the provider of the cover price, see paragraph IV.6499 above. The OFT considers that the interview evidence, when taken together with the contemporaneous documents, is sufficient to conclude that Quarmby gave a cover price to York House in respect of this tender.

Evidence from other companies – Quarmby

IV.6509. The OFT wrote to Quarmby on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that Quarmby had participated in bid rigging on this tender. The OFT telephoned the Managing Director of Quarmby on 6 June 2007 to inform him that due to Quarmby's lack of response to the OFT's letter dated 22 March 2007, the OFT ⁸¹⁰² Interview transcript, OFT Document Reference 11457, page 26.

⁸¹⁰³ Written representations of Quarmby, 27 June 2008, paragraph 2.13(b)(i).

were treating this as a rejection of the OFT's Fast Track Offer. The Managing Director confirmed this.⁸¹⁰⁴

IV.6510. The OFT subsequently wrote to Quarmby's ultimate parent company at the time of this Infringement, St James Securities, on 6 November 2007, asking it to comment on Quarmby's response to the OFT's Fast Track Offer, given that the OFT intended to hold St James Securities jointly and severally liable for any infringements committed by Quarmby in respect of which the OFT ultimately decided to impose financial penalties. In response to this letter, St James Securities said it did not intend to respond to the matters referred to in the OFT's letter.⁸¹⁰⁵

IV.6511. Following the issue of the Statement, St James Securities did not submit any written or oral representations in respect of this Infringement.

IV.6512. In respect of this tender David Harrison ('DH'), Quarmby's former Estimating Manager, who was named as York House's contact in the evidence set out at paragraph IV.6503 above, stated 'I remember this project because the scheme involved a façade retention system. However, I did not price the project. It was in fact priced by my colleague and Senior Estimator at [Quarmby], Andrew Bucker. Andrew worked under me and reported to me on a day to day basis. My understanding is that Andrew priced the job properly in the usual way...to the best of my knowledge QCC did not give a 'cover price' for this contract to any other tenderers'.⁸¹⁰⁶ The OFT considers the fact that the estimator for this tender reported to DH on a day to day basis as clear evidence that DH would have had access to Quarmby's pricing information in respect of this tender.

IV.6513. In its response to the Statement, Quarmby also provided a witness statement from Andrew Buckler ('AB'), who stated that 'during [his] employment with QCC [he had] never given or taken a cover price' and confirmed that specifically in respect of the Eastbrook Hall tender he did not give a cover price to any other contractor.⁸¹⁰⁷

IV.6514. The OFT notes the evidence of these witnesses. However, it also notes that it requires to be balanced against the contemporaneous documentation and explanatory witness evidence from York House, which indicate the contrary. In this regard, the OFT notes in particular that no alternative plausible explanation has been given for the marking "COV" on the documents obtained from York House and that the explanation given for this marking by AR was clear. It is further noted that the only competitor's name which appears on York House's documents in relation to this tender is 'Quarmby'. Taking these factors, together with the remainder of the analysis set out below, into account, the OFT considers that on balance the documentary and witness evidence from York House should be preferred to that of AB and DH, each of whom may have been genuinely unaware as to whether a colleague supplied a cover price to York House.

IV.6515. In its response to the Statement, Quarmby asserted that it neither gave nor took cover prices as a matter of its corporate policy, and provided witness ⁸¹⁰⁶ Witness statement of David Harrison, paragraphs 16 to 17.

⁸¹⁰⁷ Witness statement of Andrew Buckler, paragraphs 6 and 8.

evidence in support of this assertion. The OFT notes in this regard the evidence of Roger Nelson ('RN'), Quarmby's Commercial Director, who described becoming aware of the illegality of cover pricing in 2004, and went on to state:

'David Jones [Quarmby's Managing Director] and I agreed that even though we thought it highly unlikely cover price had occurred or was occurring at QCC (because it was not our practice to do so) we should take measures to reinforce the message that no-one within QCC was engaged in the practice of cover pricing or would be in future'.⁸¹⁰⁸

IV.6516. The OFT takes from this evidence that despite Quarmby's stated policy of not engaging in cover pricing activities, the Commercial Director and Managing Director were not certain that staff were not engaging in cover pricing, but only thought that it was 'highly unlikely' and that this uncertainty justified taking further action to prevent Quarmby's engagement in cover bidding. The OFT therefore considers that any such policy held by Quarmby does not undermine the evidence presented in relation to the giving of a cover price by Quarmby in this instance.

IV.6517. In its response to the Statement, Quarmby questioned '...why York House would employ resources to complete the pre-qualification process in respect of a tender that it did not want and specifically was not, as it alleges, its type of work... [and] ...why York House would employ the resources of attending a meeting in relation to a tender it did not want to win'.⁸¹⁰⁹ It also relies on the evidence of Robert Hicks, who recollects attending a meeting with the client's agents on 7 July 2005 at which York House's representative was also present.⁸¹¹⁰ The OFT notes that AR explained in interview that a cover price '...means you don't have to go through the process of having to have all the bills taken off, all the enquiries sent out and there are occasions where we have actually gone to the expense of doing all that and found that we were too busy to actually put the prices together at the last minute'.⁸¹¹¹ The OFT considers that AR's description of cover pricing provides a plausible explanation as to why York House would have sought a cover price from Quarmby after it had completed the pre-qualification process; it may have been too busy to actually put the price together at the last minute. The OFT also considers that the evidence of David Jones on behalf of Quarmby that 'Even on the extended deadline, it would barely be enough time to prepare a tender that met the employer's requirements'⁸¹¹² tends to support this view. Likewise the evidence of RN on behalf of Quarmby that 'Many employers having gone through the process of selecting six contractors to price the work become extremely agitated if a contractor returns the documents unpriced and declines to tender having indicated to the employer during the pre-qualification process that he would price the contract if invited to do so'.⁸¹¹³ It is entirely feasible that York House initially intended to tender properly, and sought a cover price when the deadline approached and it became apparent that they would not be able to meet it. Accordingly, whilst the OFT makes no finding as to whether or not York House completed a pre-qualification process and/or attended a meeting with the client's agents, it considers that neither of those actions would preclude a finding that the party concerned engaged in cover pricing.

IV.6518. In its response to the Statement, Quarmby also questioned '...why York House would submit a cover price that was more than 7% greater than the competitive tender...contractors take cover prices to "maintain face" with the employer. A cover price of 4-5% above the winning tender price is consistent with this approach, and credible. In the case of York House, however, the alleged cover price is over 7% higher than the [Quarmby] price. This is not credible, and provides further circumstantial evidence that the [Quarmby] price was not a cover, or at least not a cover for [Quarmby]'.⁸¹¹⁴ The OFT notes that there was no exact range or standard formula used by the construction industry for the calculation of cover prices. The OFT does not accept Quarmby's assertion that the price difference between its submitted bid and the bid submitted by York House was too high for York House's price to have been a cover price provided by Quarmby; it is consistent with Quarmby providing an inflated figure by way of a cover price, and York House themselves increasing it further before onward transmission to the client. In any event the addition of a 7 per cent premium on a cover price provider's own bid price is consistent with industry practice on calculating a cover price as outlined in paragraphs IV.99 to IV.104 above.

IV.6519. In its response to the Statement, Quarmby noted that the allegations against it do not include the taking of cover prices, only the giving. This is stated to be 'important circumstantial evidence in support of QCC's contention that it has not and does not give cover prices...to merely give cover prices would be to confer on one's competitors a benefit without any advantage to oneself and consequently would be commercially inexplicable and irrational'.⁸¹¹⁵

IV.6520. First, the OFT notes that only three alleged infringements were pursued against each non-leniency party, out of a wider pool of evidence available to the OFT⁸¹¹⁶ and so the fact that the three allegations in the Statement regarding Quarmby related only to the giving of cover cannot be taken as meaningful evidence of Quarmby's pattern of behaviour. Second, the OFT does not accept that the giving of cover confers a benefit on competitors without any benefit to the firm in question.

IV.6521. Moreover, the OFT notes that in addition to the evidence from York House relating to it taking a cover price from Quarmby on this tender, the OFT also has strong and compelling evidence relating to Strata taking a cover price from Quarmby (Infringement 6) and Admiral taking a cover price from Quarmby (Infringement 214). The OFT considers it highly improbable that all three of these companies would have mistakenly identified Quarmby as a participant in cover pricing if indeed Quarmby never gave cover prices.

The OFT's analysis of the evidence and finding

IV.6522. From the evidence and arguments presented above, and having taken into account the representations made by the Parties, the OFT draws the following conclusions.

⁸¹¹⁴ Written representations of Quarmby, 27 June 2008, paragraph 2.13(a)(v)(C).

⁸¹¹⁵ Written representations of Quarmby, 27 June 2008, paragraph 2.7

⁸¹¹⁶ See paragraph III.203 of Section II (The OFT's Investigation).

- IV.6523. York House and Quarmby each accepted an invitation to tender for this contract.
- IV.6524. Quarmby appears to have completed the estimating process for the tender, and submitted a bid, with the intention of winning the work.
- IV.6525. York House was unable to submit a tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this contract.
- IV.6526. In regard to Quarmby, York House has confirmed that AR's handwritten entries 'COV' and 'Quarmby' on the Estimating Programme Printout⁸¹¹⁷, and the typed entry 'COV' on the Computerised Estimating Programme⁸¹¹⁸, show that it received a cover price from Quarmby. This was confirmed in interview by AR.
- IV.6527. DH, whom York House named as their contact for arranging a cover price in relation to this tender, worked as Estimating Manager at Quarmby between 1998 and 2006.⁸¹¹⁹ DH is also listed as being a contact at Quarmby, by a contact list obtained from the I.T. sift at the premises of Richardson Projects.⁸¹²⁰
- IV.6528. The OFT notes that 'Quarmby' is the only competitor's name noted on the contemporaneous document from York House, indicating that this was the only competitor bidding for the contract of whom York House was aware.
- IV.6529. The OFT further notes that the tender submitted by York House was higher than the tender submitted by Quarmby, an increase consistent with a cover price having been received.
- IV.6530. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between Quarmby and York House. The OFT also concludes that Quarmby supplied a figure to York House for a cover bid.
- IV.6531. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.6499 to IV.6530 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.⁸¹²¹ In particular:
- (a) the provision of a figure for a cover bid from Quarmby to York House was not unilateral⁸¹²², and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;⁸¹²³
 - (b) York House can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from Quarmby (i.e. the cover price) when determining its own respective conduct in the tendering process;⁸¹²⁴ and
 - (c) Quarmby can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from York House (i.e. that York House did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its conduct in the tendering process.⁸¹²⁵

IV.6532. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that an agreement and/or concerted practice was in place between Quarmby and York House, in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the tender for new build construction inside the retained facade of Eastbrook Hall, date of tender 8 August 2005.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.6533. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.6534. York House informed the OFT of the bid rigging activities in respect of this tender before the OFT became aware of these activities from any other source. York House will therefore receive 100 per cent immunity from the fine that the OFT is imposing in respect of this tender.

Infringement 234: Hillside Primary School, Classroom Extension – 24 August 2005
Client: Wokingham District Council
Parties: Mansell and Francis

IV.6535. In July 2005 Wokingham District Council sought tenders for Hillside Primary School, classroom extension.⁸¹²⁶ The following six companies were invited to tender: Ashe Construction, F. J. Lane, Feltham Construction, Francis, Mansell and Morris and Blunt. The date and time of tender return was 24 August 2005 at 2:30 pm.⁸¹²⁷

IV.6536. Wokingham District Council received the following tender returns:⁸¹²⁸

Company	Date & Time tender received	Amount of tender	Awarded contract
Francis	24 August 2005 12.55pm	£374,227.74
Morris and Blunt	24 August 2005 14.15pm	£341,456.00	YES

Evidence of agreement and/or concerted practice

Contemporaneous documentary evidence from leniency applicant Mansell – tender spreadsheet

IV.6538. As part of its leniency application, Mansell’s legal representatives provided Barry Russ’s (‘BR’), a Mansell managing estimator, workload reports. The 2005 workload report for special projects contained the following entry:⁸¹³⁰

EST NO.	LOCATION/DESCRIPTION	OUR BID
		BID	NET	LESS PROV.	%	MARGIN
02-00345	Lower Earley – Hillside Primary School – Classroom Extension

OTHER BIDS			RESULT		REMARKS
LOWEST	SECOND	HIGHEST	POSN.	POSS.%
341456	342619	419255	5/5		(Francis Construction)

Evidence from leniency applicant Mansell

IV.6539. As part of its leniency application, Mansell’s legal representatives provided a general explanation of its part in the process of cover pricing.⁸¹³¹ This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.470 to IV.502 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.6540. Mansell’s legal representatives also provided to the OFT a table showing information relating to tendering activities in which a calculated competitive bid was not submitted, for the Thames Valley Region (‘TVR’), which includes this tender. In respect of this tender the table shows that Mansell received a cover price from Francis and that this cover price was taken due to ‘insufficient tender period: resource’ at Mansell.⁸¹³²

IV.6541. In its response to the Statement, Mansell did not make any substantive oral or written representations specifically in respect of this Infringement.

Witness evidence from leniency applicant Mansell

IV.6542. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, BR provided further general explanation of Mansell’s participation in cover pricing in the TVR. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.481 to IV.489 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.6543. During an interview with the OFT on 1 May 2007, BR advised how he would record when Mansell had taken a cover as detailed in paragraphs IV.482 to IV.485 above. In relation to this tender BR stated *‘Francis Construction would have given us the figure..’*⁸¹³³ BR explained that although the figure had not been typed into the net column, because Mansell came fifth out of five contractors that Mansell bid was the figure shown in the column headed 'Highest' on the workload sheet⁸¹³⁴ which shows '419255'.⁸¹³⁵

IV.6544. The OFT wrote to Francis on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that Francis had participated in bid rigging on this tender. In response to this letter Francis stated that it was 'unable to make the admissions' as it had been *'unable to find any evidence that it [Francis] has been guilty of the bid rigging activities alleged against it...'*⁸¹³⁶

IV.6545. The OFT subsequently wrote to Francis's ultimate parent company at the time of this Infringement, Barrett, on 6 November 2007, asking it to comment on Francis's response to the OFT's Fast Track Offer, given that the OFT intended to hold Barrett jointly and severally liable for any infringements committed by Francis in respect of which the OFT ultimately decided to impose financial penalties. In response to this letter Barrett stated *'Barrett has ... nothing to add to the comments that have already been made to you on behalf of Francis Construction...'*⁸¹³⁷

IV.6546. In their response to the Statement, however, Francis and Barrett stated *'Francis does not contest the OFT's findings of infringement against Francis Construction'*⁸¹³⁸ in respect of this Infringement.

The OFT's analysis of the evidence and finding

IV.6548. Mansell and Francis each accepted an invitation to tender for this contract.

IV.6549. Both companies submitted a tender. Mansell was unable to submit a tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this contract.

IV.6550. Mansell's 2005 workload report records '(Francis Construction)', in the Remarks column. Mansell confirmed that this shows that it took a cover price from the company noted. In addition, Mansell has confirmed that the lack of figures in the margin and percentage columns would also indicate a cover price had been taken.

IV.6551. The OFT further notes that the tender submitted by Mansell was higher than the tender submitted by Francis, the pattern consistent with a cover price having been provided.

IV.6552. In addition, Francis has now stated that it does not contest its involvement in cover pricing in respect of this Infringement.

⁸¹³⁷ Response from Barrett, OFT Document Reference 14050.

⁸¹³⁸ Written representations of Francis and Barrett, 2 July 2008, paragraph 3.

IV.6553. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between Mansell and Francis. The OFT also concludes that Francis supplied a figure to Mansell for a cover bid.

IV.6554. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.6538 to IV.6553 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.⁸¹³⁹ In particular:

- (a) the provision of a figure for a cover bid from Francis to Mansell was not unilateral⁸¹⁴⁰, and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;⁸¹⁴¹
- (b) Mansell can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from Francis (i.e. the cover price) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process;⁸¹⁴² and
- (c) Francis can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from Mansell (i.e. that Mansell did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its conduct in the tendering process.⁸¹⁴³

IV.6555. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that an agreement and/or concerted practice was in place between Mansell and Francis in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the tender for Hillside Primary School, classroom extension, tender deadline 24 August 2005.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.6556. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.6557. Mansell informed the OFT of the bid rigging activities in respect of this tender before the OFT became aware of these activities from any other source. Mansell will therefore receive 100 per cent immunity from the fine that the OFT is imposing in respect of this tender.

Evidence from leniency applicant Propensity

IV.6562. As part of its leniency application, Propensity provided a general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.537 to IV.566 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.6563. In particular, Propensity provided to the OFT an analysis of its Tender Records Book since 4 January 2000 and in respect of this tender, Propensity confirmed that it received a cover price from Kier Eastern.⁸¹⁵⁰

IV.6564. In its response to the Statement, Propensity stated '...Propensity Group has made admissions in relation to all instances of cover pricing it uncovered as part of its leniency application'.⁸¹⁵¹

Witness evidence from leniency applicant Propensity

IV.6565. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, Propensity's employees provided further general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.537 to IV.566 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.6566. John Rhodes ('JR'), Pre-Contracts Manager at Jackson, confirmed in interview that it is his handwriting in the tender register⁸¹⁵² and that in most instances it would be himself that arranged the cover price.⁸¹⁵³ JR said in respect of the entry in the tender register for this tender, 'the bid submitted by Jackson's was in the region of £7¼ million, it was a competitive tender and some assistance was sought from Kier Eastern. The bid was submitted on 19 September 2005'.⁸¹⁵⁴

IV.6567. JR also confirmed that the handwriting on the tender sheet was his⁸¹⁵⁵ and that Ian Walsham was an estimator at Kier Eastern, with whom he spoke to obtain a cover price.⁸¹⁵⁶ JR further confirmed that the job was not allocated to an estimator at Jackson's because it decided at an early stage that it would seek help on the tender.⁸¹⁵⁷

Evidence from other companies – Kier

IV.6568. The OFT wrote to Kier on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that Kier had participated in bid rigging on this tender. In response to this letter, Kier said that it was unable to accept the OFT's Fast Track Offer.⁸¹⁵⁸ should be taken into account when calculating any penalty.⁸¹⁵⁹ Such points are addressed in Section VI (Enforcement) below.

The OFT's analysis of the evidence and finding

IV.6571. Jackson and Kier Eastern each accepted an invitation to tender for this contract.

IV.6572. Jackson was unable to submit a tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this tender.

IV.6573. In regard to Kier Eastern, Jackson's tender book states, 'Cover from Kier Eastern'. Propensity has confirmed that this shows that it received a cover price from Kier Eastern. Jackson recorded in the tender book the figure £7,256,430, as the tender figure and this was the figure that Jackson submitted. Furthermore, Jackson has confirmed that it spoke to an estimator at Kier Eastern, Ian Walsham, in order to obtain the cover price. This name is also recorded on Jackson's contemporaneous tender sheet for this tender, along with a telephone number, '[.....] [C]', which is a telephone number for Kier Eastern⁸¹⁶⁰, providing further corroboration that Kier Eastern was telephoned by Jackson in connection with this tender.

IV.6574. The OFT notes in addition that the tender submitted by Jackson was higher than the tender submitted by Kier Eastern, a pattern consistent with a cover price having been provided.

IV.6575. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between Kier Eastern and Jackson. The OFT also concludes that Kier Eastern supplied a figure to Jackson for a cover bid.

IV.6576. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.6560 to IV.6575 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.⁸¹⁶¹ In particular:

- (a) the provision of a figure for a cover bid from Kier Eastern to Jackson was not unilateral⁸¹⁶², and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;⁸¹⁶³
- (b) Jackson can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from Kier Eastern (i.e. the cover price) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process;⁸¹⁶⁴ and
- (c) Kier Eastern can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from Jackson (i.e. that Jackson did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its conduct in the tendering process.⁸¹⁶⁵

IV.6577. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that an agreement and/or concerted practice was in place between Jackson and Kier Eastern, in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the tender for the Adnams Distribution Centre, Reydon, Southwold, tender deadline 19 September 2005.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.6578. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.6579. Propensity informed the OFT of the bid rigging activities in respect of this tender before the OFT became aware of these activities from any other source. Propensity will therefore receive 100 per cent immunity from the fine that the OFT is imposing in respect of this tender.

Nursery School – 7 November 2005
Client: East Riding of Yorkshire Council
Parties: Hobson & Porter, Robinson & Sawdon and Hall

IV.6580. On 5 October 2005 East Riding of Yorkshire Council ('East Riding') sought tenders for a new build nursery, Bridlington Sure Start at Bridlington Nursery School. The return date for the tender was 7 November 2005 and six companies were invited to tender: Barker & Grantham, Brian Fell (Leven) Ltd, Hobson & Porter, Hall, Robinson & Sawdon and William Birch & Sons Ltd.⁸¹⁶⁶

IV.6581. East Riding received the following tender returns on 7 November 2005:⁸¹⁶⁷

Company	Date tender received	Time tender received	Amount of tender	Awarded the tender
Barker & Grantham	7 November 2005	11:35	£989,389	Yes
Brian Fell (Leven) Ltd	7 November 2005	11:05	£1,000,380
Hobson & Porter	7 November 2005	11:30	£1,006,597
Hall	7 November 2005	11:36	£1,056,370
Robinson & Sawdon	7 November 2005	11:20	£1,071,837
William Birch & Sons Ltd	7 November 2005	11:20	£1,088,444

Evidence of agreement and/or concerted practice

Contemporaneous documentary evidence from leniency applicant Hobson & Porter – Tender Information Sheet

IV.6582. The tender information sheet for this tender states that Hobson & Porter's submitted figure was £1,006,597 and in the competition section is written, 'HALLS 'C'' and 'Robinson & Sawdon 'C''. Two other competitors are written in this section, 'B FELL' and 'WILLIAM BIRCH', but they do not have any markings or figures against them.⁸¹⁶⁸

Evidence from leniency applicant Hobson & Porter

IV.6583. As part of its leniency application, Hobson & Porter provided a general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.391 to IV.407 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.6584. In Hobson & Porter's Summary of Cover Pricing Activity (Major Works) it is stated that Hobson & Porter provided a cover to Hall, and that the individual contact at Hall was John Grey. It is also stated that Hobson & Porter provided a cover to Robinson & Sawdon and that the individual contact at Robinson & Sawdon was Dave Marshall ('DM').⁸¹⁶⁹

IV.6585. In its response to the Statement, Hobson & Porter stated that it '...does not contest the OFT's findings of infringement'.⁸¹⁷⁰

Witness evidence from leniency applicant Hobson & Porter

IV.6586. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, Hobson & Porter's employees provided further general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.391 to IV.407 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.6587. In respect of this tender, in interview Russell Horner ('RH'), Major Works Estimating Director, confirmed that Hobson & Porter provided cover prices both to Hall and to Robinson & Sawdon, and that he signed off the provision.⁸¹⁷¹ David Watson ('DW'), Managing Director, confirmed that 'we will have given a cover to Hall's and to Robinson & Sawdon'.⁸¹⁷² Michael Haywood ('MH'), an estimator in Major Works, confirmed that he priced this tender and added the C's in next to 'HALLS' and 'Robinson & Sawdon' on the tender information sheet. MH said 'I would certainly have filled those C's in' and 'It records that Halls and Robinson & Sawdon in Hobson and Porters knowledge had received covers. Whether it was from Hobson and Porter, I can't recall'.⁸¹⁷³

IV.6588. The OFT wrote to Robinson & Sawdon on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that Robinson & Sawdon had participated in bid rigging on this tender. In response to this letter, Robinson & Sawdon admitted participating in bid rigging activities on this tender with Hobson & Porter.⁸¹⁷⁴

IV.6589. In its response, James Deacon ('JD'), the Managing Director of Robinson & Sawdon, said that he had conducted an internal investigation into the tendering process at Robinson & Sawdon. As part of this investigation Charles Robinson ('CR') was interviewed and confirmed that Robinson & Sawdon engaged in cover pricing.⁸¹⁷⁵ CR further confirmed in respect of this tender that a cover price was issued following conversations with Hobson & Porter.⁸¹⁷⁶ Also, as part of this investigation DM, completed a questionnaire about the tendering process. DM was Estimating Manager during the period under investigation. In the questionnaire, DM confirmed that Robinson & Sawdon was involved in the practice of cover pricing and that this was done with the knowledge of the directors of Robinson & Sawdon.⁸¹⁷⁷ DM separately confirmed that any cover price provided by him would have been on the basis of being instructed to do so by either Bob Sawdon or Mike Sawdon up to August 2004 and CR afterwards.⁸¹⁷⁸

IV.6590. Following the issue of the Statement, Robinson & Sawdon did not submit any specific written or oral representations in respect of this Infringement.

Evidence from other companies – Hall

IV.6591. The OFT wrote to Hall on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that Hall had participated in bid rigging on this tender. In response to this letter, Hall admitted 'We engaged in bid rigging activities on this tender but cannot recall details of the other party/parties involved'.⁸¹⁷⁹

IV.6592. In its response to the Statement, Hall confirmed that '[i]t is not disputed that Hall participated in cover pricing during the relevant period set out in the Statement'.⁸¹⁸⁰

The OFT's analysis of the evidence and finding

IV.6593. From the evidence presented above, the OFT draws the following conclusions.

IV.6594. Hobson & Porter, Robinson & Sawdon and Hall each accepted an invitation to tender for this contract.

IV.6595. Hobson & Porter completed the estimating process for the tender for this contract and it appears they submitted a bid with the hope of winning the work.

IV.6596. Robinson & Sawdon and Hall were unable to submit a tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this tender.

IV.6597. In regard to Robinson & Sawdon, Hobson & Porter's tender sheet records 'Robinson & Sawdon 'C''. RH and DW of Hobson & Porter have confirmed that this indicates that it gave Robinson & Sawdon a cover price. MH of Hobson & Porter has confirmed that the 'C' written next to Robinson & Sawdon on the tender sheet, indicates that Robinson & Sawdon received a cover price, but he cannot confirm if Hobson & Porter provided it. The OFT considers in the light of the weight of the evidence on this tender that the cover price must have been provided by Hobson & Porter. CR of Robinson & Sawdon has confirmed, in respect of this tender, that a cover price was issued following conversations with Hobson & Porter.

IV.6598. The OFT notes in addition that the tender submitted by Robinson & Sawdon was higher than the tender submitted by Hobson & Porter, a pattern consistent with a cover price having been provided. Furthermore, Robinson & Sawdon admitted engaging in bid rigging activities with Hobson & Porter on this tender.

IV.6599. In regard to Hall, Hobson & Porter's tender information sheet records 'HALLS C'. RH and DW of Hobson & Porter have confirmed that this indicates that it gave Hall a cover price. MH of Hobson & Porter has confirmed that the 'C' written next to 'HALLS' on the tender sheet, indicates that Hall received a cover price, but he cannot confirm if Hobson & Porter provided it. The OFT considers in the light of the weight of the evidence on this tender that the cover price must have been provided by Hobson & Porter.

IV.6600. The OFT notes in addition that the tender submitted by Hall was higher than the tender submitted by Hobson & Porter, a pattern consistent with a cover price having been provided. Furthermore, Hall admitted engaging in bid rigging activities on this tender.

IV.6601. All three companies have admitted to bid rigging in relation to this tender. The OFT notes that Robinson & Sawdon admitted that the party with whom it engaged in bid rigging was Hobson & Porter without being shown the OFT's evidence that Hobson & Porter was involved. This provides additional independent corroboration of the OFT's evidence in respect of this tender.

IV.6602. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between Robinson & Sawdon and Hobson & Porter, and between Hall and Hobson & Porter. The OFT also concludes that Hobson & Porter supplied figures to each of Robinson & Sawdon and Hall for cover bids.

IV.6603. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.6582 to IV.6602 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.⁸¹⁸¹ In particular:

- (a) the provision of figures for cover bids from Hobson & Porter to each of Robinson & Sawdon and Hall was not unilateral⁸¹⁸², and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;⁸¹⁸³
- (b) Robinson & Sawdon and Hall can each be presumed to have taken account of the information received from Hobson & Porter (i.e. the respective cover prices) when determining their own respective conduct in the tendering process,⁸¹⁸⁴ and ⁸¹⁸¹ See paragraphs III.3 and III.89 to III.126 of the Legal Background section.

⁸¹⁸² See paragraph IV.73 of the General comments on cover pricing section.

⁸¹⁸³ See paragraphs III.48 to III.51 and III.93 to III.94 of the Legal Background section.

⁸¹⁸⁴ See paragraphs III.58, III.95 to III.96, and III.125 of the Legal Background section.

- (c) Hobson & Porter can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from Robinson & Sawdon and Hall (i.e. that neither of them intended to submit competitive bids) when determining its conduct in the tendering process.⁸¹⁸⁵

IV.6604. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that agreements and/or concerted practices were in place between Robinson & Sawdon and Hobson & Porter, and between Hall and Hobson & Porter, in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, each of which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the tender for a new build nursery, Bridlington Sure Start at Bridlington Nursery School, tender deadline 7 November 2005.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.6605. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.6606. In respect of this tender, the OFT became aware of the bid rigging activities by virtue of the information obtained during the visit under section 28 to Hobson & Porter on 28 March 2006. Hobson & Porter will not therefore receive 100 per cent immunity in respect of this tender. However, Hobson & Porter will receive its normal leniency percentage reduction from the fine that the OFT is imposing in respect of this tender.

Infringement 237: Whetley Primary School Refurbishment – 14 November 2005
Client: Bradford Metropolitan Borough
Parties: Harlow & Milner and Lotus

IV.6607. In October 2005, the City of Bradford Metropolitan District Council ('CBMDC') sought tenders for refurbishment work to Whetley Primary School, Whetley Lane, Bradford, West Yorkshire. The following five companies were invited to tender: Whitaker & Leach, Harlow & Milner, Lotus, Calder Construction and Slimline Building.⁸¹⁸⁶ CBMDC did not provide deadline details for this tender nor the times it received tenders from the tendering undertakings.

IV.6608. The CBMDC received the following tender returns:⁸¹⁸⁷

Company	Date tender received	Amount of tender	Awarded tender
Whitaker & Leach	14 November 2005	£54,208.00
Harlow & Milner	14 November 2005	£57,638.00
Lotus	14 November 2005	£51,854.00	Yes
Calder Construction	14 November 2005	£73,959.70
Slimline Building	14 November 2005	£73,000.00

IV.6609. In its response to the Statement, Lotus stated that contrary to the information provided by CBMDC, it did not win the contract despite submitting the lowest

Evidence from leniency applicant Harlow & Milner

IV.6613. As part of its leniency application, Harlow & Milner provided a general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.352 to IV.362 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.6614. In particular, Harlow & Milner provided to the OFT an analysis of its tender sheets since March 2000. In respect of the tender for the Whetley Primary School refurbishment, dated 14 November 2005, Harlow & Milner confirmed that it received a cover price from Lotus.⁸¹⁹⁰

IV.6615. In its response to the Statement, Harlow & Milner accepted in respect of this Infringement ‘... that it requested and received a cover price from Lotus.’⁸¹⁹¹

Witness evidence from leniency applicant Harlow & Milner

IV.6616. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, Harlow & Milner’s employees provided further general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.352 to IV.362 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.6617. With regard to this particular tender, Chris Smithson (‘CS’), Chief Estimator, was asked to explain the handwritten note described in paragraph IV.6610 to IV.6612 above. He said, ‘I would hazard a guess that if the form of tender has a break down on it, those could well show the figures from certain sections of a bill [of quantities] I would think’. When asked to explain Lotus Thurs 51-00 he said, ‘It would be Lotus Construction, probably contacted on Thursday, or [we were] given the price on Thursday and I would guess 51,000 is the figure that we’ve been given’ [by Lotus].⁸¹⁹²

IV.6618. CS further explained, ‘Usually when you’re given a cover, you would just add a bit extra on really to make sure so I’m assuming they [the Tender Adjudication Board, headed by Richard Milner] just added a bit more to make sure they’re [the Board] away from other contractors’.⁸¹⁹³

IV.6619. When asked to explain the figure ‘57,638.00’, CS said, ‘I would assume that it’s the tender figure’.⁸¹⁹⁴ This figure is the same as that in the tender reply received by CBMDC from Harlow & Milner.⁸¹⁹⁵

Evidence from other companies – Lotus

IV.6620. The OFT wrote to Lotus on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty it might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender in return for an admission that Lotus had participated in bid rigging on this tender. In response to this letter, Lotus admitted 'We engaged in bid rigging activities on this tender but cannot recall details of other parties involved'.⁸¹⁹⁶

IV.6621. Lotus confirmed in its response to the Statement that '...Lotus is compelled ... to accept its participation in the Alleged Infringements...'.⁸¹⁹⁷

The OFT's analysis of the evidence and finding

IV.6623. Harlow & Milner and Lotus each accepted an invitation to tender for this contract.

IV.6624. It appears that Lotus completed the estimating process for this contract and that it submitted a bid with the hope of winning the work. This is shown by the price submitted by Lotus being the lowest received. CBMDC also informed the OFT that Lotus won the contract, although this information was later contradicted by Lotus – however, this is not material to the OFT's findings in respect of this Infringement.

IV.6625. Harlow & Milner was unable to submit a tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this tender.

IV.6626. Lotus was contacted by a member of Harlow & Milner's estimating team and asked to supply a figure for a cover bid. The handwritten note, discussed in paragraphs IV.6610 to IV.6612 above, contains the phrase, 'LOTUS Thurs 51 – 00'. Harlow & Milner has explained that this probably refers to a telephone call to Lotus on a Thursday and the provision of a cover figure by Lotus. The OFT notes the comment 'HM Price + 55K' at the foot of this note and considers it likely, given the figures submitted by both Lotus and Harlow & Milner, that Harlow & Milner was asked by Lotus to submit a price in excess of £55,000.

IV.6627. Harlow & Milner's handwritten note also contains various figures necessary to make a tender submission and the words 'Cover Figures Lotus'. The tender figure of £57,638 submitted by Harlow & Milner is in keeping with a cover price being sufficiently higher than the bid from Lotus to remain credible whilst also ensuring that the undertaking lost the tender.

IV.6628. Lotus, in its reply to the OFT's Fast Track Offer, admitted that it engaged in bid rigging activities in this tender but was unable to provide details or recall the parties involved. The OFT considers that this provides corroborating evidence that Harlow & Milner was supplied with a cover price by Lotus.

IV.6629. The OFT notes in addition that the tender figure submitted by Harlow & Milner was the same as that recorded on the handwritten note submitted in leniency and that Harlow & Milner submitted a tender which was some 11 per cent higher than the tender submitted by Lotus, the pattern consistent with a cover price having been provided.

IV.6630. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between Harlow & Milner and Lotus. The OFT also concludes that Lotus supplied a figure to Harlow & Milner for a cover bid.

IV.6631. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.6610 to IV.6630 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.⁸¹⁹⁸ In particular:

- (a) the provision of a figure for a cover bid from Lotus to Harlow & Milner was not unilateral⁸¹⁹⁹, and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;⁸²⁰⁰
- (b) Harlow & Milner can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from Lotus (i.e. the cover price) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process;⁸²⁰¹ and
- (c) Lotus can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from Harlow & Milner (i.e. that Harlow & Milner did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its conduct in the tendering process.⁸²⁰²

IV.6632. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that an agreement and/or concerted practice was in place between Lotus and Harlow & Milner, in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the contract for refurbishment work at Whetley Primary School, Whetley Lane, Bradford, West Yorkshire, tender deadline 14 November 2005.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.6633. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.6634. Harlow & Milner informed the OFT of the bid rigging activities in respect of this tender before the OFT became aware of these activities from any other source. Harlow & Milner will therefore receive 100 per cent immunity from the fine that the OFT is imposing in respect of this tender.

Infringement 238: Calder Link Building, University of Hull – 28 November 2005
Client: The University of Hull
Parties: Hobson & Porter and Robinson & Sawdon

November 2005 and three companies were invited to tender: Hobson & Porter, Geo Houlton and Robinson & Sawdon.⁸²⁰³

IV.6636. The University of Hull received the following three tender returns by 28 November 2005:⁸²⁰⁴

Company	Date tender received	Time tender received	Amount of tender	Awarded the tender
Hobson & Porter	28 November 2005		£602,498	Yes
Geo Houlton	28 November 2005		£635,536
Robinson & Sawdon	28 November 2005		£647,213

Evidence of agreement and/or concerted practice

Contemporaneous documentary evidence from leniency applicant Hobson & Porter

IV.6637. The tender information sheet shows that Hobson & Porter's submitted figure was £602,498 and in the competition section is written, 'Robinson & Sawdon 'C''.⁸²⁰⁵

Evidence from leniency applicant Hobson & Porter

IV.6638. As part of its leniency application, Hobson & Porter provided a general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.391 to IV.407 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.6639. In Hobson & Porter's Summary of Cover Pricing Activity (Major Works) it is stated that Hobson & Porter provided a cover to Robinson & Sawdon and that the contact at Robinson & Sawdon was Dave Marshall ('DM').⁸²⁰⁶

IV.6640. In its response to the Statement, Hobson & Porter stated that it '...does not contest the OFT's findings of infringement'.⁸²⁰⁷

Witness evidence from leniency applicant Hobson & Porter

IV.6641. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, Hobson & Porter's employees provided further general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.391 to IV.407 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.6642. In respect of this tender, in interview Russell Horner ('RH'), Major Works Estimating Director, recalls that Michael Haywood ('MH'), an estimator in Major Works, priced the tender and that he would have completed the Tender Information sheet and added the 'C' next to Robinson & Sawdon.⁸²⁰⁸ RH confirmed that Hobson & Porter provided cover to Robinson & Sawdon. MH confirmed that he priced this tender and added the 'C' next to Robinson & Sawdon on the Tender Information sheet. MH has spoken with DM of Robinson & Sawdon but cannot recall if he spoke to him about this specific tender. MH also stated that while he confirms that Robinson & Sawdon received a cover price, he could not confirm that the cover price was provided by Hobson & Porter.⁸²⁰⁹

IV.6643. The OFT wrote to Robinson & Sawdon on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that Robinson & Sawdon had participated in bid rigging on this tender. In response to this letter, Robinson & Sawdon admitted participating in bid rigging activities on this tender with Hobson & Porter.⁸²¹⁰

IV.6644. In the response, James Deacon ('JD'), the Managing Director of Robinson & Sawdon, said that the business of Robinson & Sawdon was sold by its owners, Bob Sawdon ('BS'), Michael Sawdon ('MS') and Charles Robinson ('CR'), to its current owners in October 2006. BS retired on 27 August 2004, MS retired on 2 August 2006, and CR resigned as a director (though remained an employee) in October 2006. David Marshall ('DM') remains employed as a Contracts Manager.

IV.6645. JD explained that he had conducted an internal investigation into the tendering process at Robinson & Sawdon. As part of this investigation CR was interviewed and confirmed that Robinson & Sawdon engaged in cover pricing.⁸²¹¹ CR further confirmed in respect of this tender that a cover price was issued following conversations with Hobson & Porter.⁸²¹² Also, as part of this investigation DM completed a questionnaire about the tendering process. DM was Estimating Manager during the period under investigation. In the questionnaire DM confirmed that Robinson & Sawdon was involved in the practice of cover pricing and that this was done with the knowledge of the directors of the company named at paragraph IV.6644 above.⁸²¹³

IV.6646. Following the issue of the Statement, Robinson & Sawdon did not submit any written or oral representations specifically in respect of this Infringement.

The OFT's analysis of the evidence and finding

IV.6648. Hobson & Porter and Robinson & Sawdon each accepted an invitation to tender for this contract.

IV.6649. Hobson & Porter completed the estimating process for the tender for this contract. Hobson & Porter wanted to win the tender for this contract and submitted a bid with the hope of winning the work. This is shown by the price submitted by Hobson & Porter being the lowest received by the client, and the fact that Hobson & Porter won the contract

IV.6650. Robinson & Sawdon was unable to submit a tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this tender.

IV.6651. In regard to Robinson & Sawdon, Hobson & Porter's tender sheet records 'Robinson & Sawdon 'C''. RH of Hobson & Porter has confirmed that this indicates that it gave Robinson & Sawdon a cover price. MH of Hobson & Porter has confirmed that the 'C' written next to Robinson & Sawdon on the tender sheet, indicates that Robinson & Sawdon received a cover price, but he cannot confirm if Hobson & Porter provided it. CR of Robinson & Sawdon has confirmed, in respect of this tender, that a cover price was submitted following conversations with Hobson & Porter.

IV.6652. Both companies have admitted to bid rigging in relation to this tender. The OFT notes that Robinson & Sawdon admitted that the party with whom it engaged in bid rigging was Hobson & Porter without being shown the OFT's evidence that Hobson & Porter was involved. This provides additional independent corroboration of the OFT's evidence in respect of this tender.

IV.6653. The OFT notes in addition that the tender submitted by Robinson & Sawdon was higher than the tender submitted by Hobson & Porter, a pattern consistent with a cover price having been provided.

IV.6654. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between Robinson & Sawdon and Hobson & Porter. The OFT also concludes that Hobson & Porter supplied a figure to Robinson & Sawdon for a cover bid.

IV.6655. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.6637 to IV.6654 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.⁸²¹⁴ In particular:

- (a) the provision of a figure for a cover bid from Hobson & Porter to Robinson & Sawdon was not unilateral⁸²¹⁵, and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;⁸²¹⁶
- (b) Robinson & Sawdon can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from Hobson & Porter (i.e. the cover price) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process;⁸²¹⁷ and
- (c) Hobson & Porter can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from Robinson & Sawdon (i.e. that Robinson & Sawdon did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its conduct in the tendering process.⁸²¹⁸

prohibition, which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the tender for Calder Link Building, University of Hull, tender deadline 28 November 2005.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.6657. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.6658. In respect of this tender, the OFT became aware of the bid rigging activities by virtue of the information obtained during the visit under section 28 to Hobson & Porter on 28 March 2006. Hobson & Porter will not therefore receive 100 per cent immunity in respect of this tender. However, Hobson & Porter will receive its normal leniency percentage reduction from the fine that the OFT is imposing in respect of this tender.

Infringement 239: Sydenham High School – 14 December 2005
Client: Girls’ Day Schools Trust
Parties: Bluestone and R Durtnell

IV.6659. On 16 November 2005, Girls’ Day Schools Trust (‘GDST’) sought tenders for a performing arts development at Sydenham High School, 19 Westwood Hill, London.⁸²¹⁹ The following six companies were invited to tender: R Durtnell, Neilcott Special Works, Barnes Webster & Sons, Bluestone, Bryen & Langley and Crispin and Borst. The deadline for the receipt of tenders was 12:00 noon on 14 December 2005.

IV.6660. GDST received the following tender returns:⁸²²⁰

Company	Date and time tender received	Amount of tender	Awarded contract
R Durtnell	14 December 2005 at noon	£1,645,405.00
Neilcott Special Works	14 December 2005 at noon	£1,479,166.05
Barnes Webster & Sons	14 December 2005 at noon	£1,326,746.20
Bluestone	14 December 2005 at noon	£1,692,746.00
Bryen & Langley	14 December 2005 at noon	£1,327,334.00	Yes
Crispin and Borst	14 December 2005 at noon	£1,351,640.00

Evidence of agreement and/or concerted practice

Contemporaneous documentary evidence from leniency applicant Bluestone – Extract from notebook

IV.6661. As part of Bluestone’s leniency application to the OFT, an extract from former estimator Geoff Hixon’s (‘GH’) notebook was provided, with the following entry:⁸²²¹ account of his recollection of this tender and an explanation of the notebook entry described above.

⁸²¹⁹ Information from client, OFT Document Reference 9637.

⁸²²⁰ Information from client, OFT Document Reference 9637.

IV.6667. GH said that he recalled the tender and had priced tenders for the same client on previous occasions. He said that GDST 'was a good client...they're quite a big organisation. They've got quite a few schools under their control...And they have always got plenty of work, ongoing. So they're very, very good clients, you would need to keep in with them'. GH recalled taking a cover price in respect of this tender and said 'Unfortunately I was pricing something else at the time and I wasn't able to fit it in...But I remember saying that, I would try and price it, try and fit it in. But at the end, after, I don't know, a few days, I said, Look it's not possible, I'm not going to be able to do it'.⁸²²⁴

IV.6668. GH explained that he communicated this to his estimating manager Owen Chad, who would have referred any decision as to what to do with the tender to his director Ashley Ward. GH said 'probably a couple of days later Owen came back and said, can you see if you can get some help on it?'. Referring to the entry in his notebook, GH confirmed that it was in his handwriting and said 'I record all telephone conversations I make in and out...It means that I spoke to Keith Allen from Durtnell and he gave me prices £1,690,000 and a period of 34 weeks, and it was for Sydenham High School...Which was due in two days later...Ian Price was probably the guy that I spoke to initially but he said Keith was doing it'.⁸²²⁵

IV.6669. GH said that he would have made a preliminary telephone call to R Durtnell before obtaining the cover figure, on 12 December 2005. Explaining the difference between the figure of £1,690,000 and Bluestone's bid to the client of £1,692,746, GH said he would have amended the figure provided by R Durtnell 'rather than a round number'.⁸²²⁶

Evidence from other companies – R Durtnell

IV.6670. The OFT wrote to R Durtnell on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that R Durtnell had participated in bid rigging on this tender. In response, R Durtnell wrote to the OFT on 26 April 2007⁸²²⁷ and stated 'We engaged in bid rigging activities on this tender but cannot recall details of the other party/parties involved'.⁸²²⁸ In its letter to the OFT, R Durtnell categorised this tender as 'Cover prices given...on the basis that we have retained detailed pricing notes for these contracts which demonstrate that we priced the schemes and therefore could not have taken a cover price'. R Durtnell stated 'an instruction was given to stop this practice on 25 July 2005 when a memorandum was issued to relevant estimating/other employees by the Chief Estimator, Ian Price'.⁸²²⁹

IV.6671. The OFT subsequently wrote to R Durnell's ultimate parent company at the time of this Infringement, Durnell Holdings, on 5 November 2007, asking it to comment on R Durnell's response to the OFT's Fast Track Offer, given that the OFT intended to hold Durnell Holdings jointly and severally liable for any infringements committed by R Durnell in respect of which the OFT ultimately decided to impose financial penalties. In response to this letter, Durnell Holdings said 'We confirm that the holding company adopts the operating company's position'.⁸²³⁰

IV.6672. R Durnell in its response to the Statement stated *'Durnell has accepted the OFT's Fast Track Offer and does not contest the OFT's findings of infringement...'*⁸²³¹ In respect of Infringement 239, they stated that *'...this is the 'one that got away', in that it occurred after Durnell had as a matter of company policy stopped participating in cover pricing...'*⁸²³²

IV.6674. Bluestone and R Durnell each accepted an invitation to tender for this contract.

IV.6675. Bluestone was unable to submit a tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this contract.

IV.6676. Based at Bluestone's Reigate office, senior estimator GH provided an extract from his notebook, which he stated was a record of 'all telephone conversations in and out'. The entry dated 12 December 2005, recorded a figure of £1,690,000 and a 34 week contract period. In addition, the contemporaneous note shows two contact names and a telephone number of [...] [C], which matches the telephone number for R Durnell.

IV.6677. The name 'Ian Price' recorded on this note corresponds with the reference to 'Chief Estimator, Ian Price' in R Durnell's response to the OFT's letter of 22 March 2007. In interview, GH recalled that he sought and received a cover price on this tender from Keith Allan of R Durnell because Bluestone was too busy to submit a genuine bid to the client.

IV.6678. The client GDST received a tendered amount of £1,692,746 from Bluestone, which matches the figure provided by Bluestone in its leniency application and is almost identical to the figure recorded in GH's notebook. The client also received a tender of £1,645,405 from R Durnell, which is lower than the amount tendered by Bluestone. This fits into the pattern consistent with a cover price having been provided from R Durnell to Bluestone.

IV.6679. Finally, both companies have admitted to bid rigging in relation to this tender. R Durnell has admitted to giving a cover price on this tender. The OFT notes that Bluestone was the only company whose figure was above that of R Durnell. Therefore R Durnell could only have given cover to Bluestone.

⁸²³⁰ Response from Durnell Holdings, OFT Document Reference 14020.

⁸²³² Written representations of R Durnell, 27 June 2008, paragraph 121.

IV.6680. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between Bluestone and R Durtnell, and that R Durtnell supplied a figure to Bluestone in order that it could submit a bid to the client that was not intended to win the contract.

IV.6681. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.6661 to IV.6680 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.⁸²³³ In particular:

- (a) the provision of a figure for a cover bid from R Durtnell to Bluestone was not unilateral⁸²³⁴, and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;⁸²³⁵
- (b) Bluestone can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from R Durtnell (i.e. the cover price) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process;⁸²³⁶ and
- (c) R Durtnell can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from Bluestone (i.e. that Bluestone did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process.⁸²³⁷

IV.6682. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that an agreement and/or concerted practice was in place between Bluestone and R Durtnell in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the contract for Sydenham High School, tender deadline 14 December 2005.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.6683. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.6684. Bluestone informed the OFT of the bid rigging activities in respect of this tender before the OFT became aware of these activities from any other source. Bluestone will therefore receive 100 per cent immunity from the fine that the OFT is imposing in respect of this tender.

Infringement 240: Redevelopment and Refurbishment of 45 – 46 South Molton Street, London – 2 February 2006
Client: City of London
Parties: BBRL and Durkan

IV.6685. On 7 December 2005, the City of London sought tenders for the redevelopment and refurbishment of 45 – 46 South Molton Street, London.⁸²³⁸ The following five companies were invited to tender: Allenbuild, BBRL, Durkan,

Galliford Try and Withey Contracts Ltd. The date and time of tender return was 2 February 2006 at 12:00 noon.⁸²³⁹

IV.6686. City of London received the tender returns set out in the table below.⁸²⁴⁰

Following the issue of the Statement and representations received from Durkan, the OFT contacted the City of London on 10 December 2008 and requested further documentation in respect of the bid it had received from Durkan, with a view to confirming which of Durkan Holdings' subsidiaries had submitted the tender return. On 11 December 2008⁸²⁴¹, the City of London provided the OFT with a copy of a letter dated 2 February 2006⁸²⁴² from Durkan under cover of which Durkan had submitted its bid for this tender, thereby confirming that it was Durkan that submitted the bid for this contract, as set out in the Statement.

Contemporaneous documentary evidence from leniency applicant Balfour Beatty – London Refurbishment Tenders/Prospects/Awards table

IV.6687. As part of its leniency application, Balfour Beatty's legal representatives provided a London Refurbishment Tenders/Prospects/Awards table for February 2006, which has an entry for this tender.⁸²⁴³

IV.6689. In respect of the contemporaneous evidence, Balfour Beatty's legal representatives provided an explanation of documents indicating cover pricing, stating 'BBRL Tender lists from March 2000 to March 2006.  indicates where BBRL has received a cover from a competitor'.⁸²⁴⁵

IV.6690. Following the issue of the Statement, Balfour Beatty did not submit any written or oral representations specifically in respect of this Infringement.

Witness evidence from leniency applicant Balfour Beatty

IV.6691. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, Cliff Davey ('CD'), a Pre-Contract Manager at BBRL, and Hugh McElhill ('HM'), a senior estimator at BBRL, provided further general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.199 to IV.203 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.6692. During an interview with the OFT on 30 March 2007, in respect of this tender, HM stated 'I think I was given it to look at'. HM explained that it was not a project which BBRL wanted to win because of problems with access to the site.⁸²⁴⁶ When asked whether he recalled a cover price being taken on this tender, HM stated 'Yes. I phoned Durkan and asked them for assistance'.⁸²⁴⁷

IV.6693. During an interview with the OFT on 29 March 2007, when asked what the two stars next to this tender in the London Refurbishment Tenders/Prospects/Awards table for February 2006 meant, CD stated 'That indicates a cover'. CD explained that it could show that either a cover price had been given or received, and confirmed that in respect of this tender BBRL had been provided with a cover price, by Durkan as indicated on the tender schedule.⁸²⁴⁸

Evidence from other companies – Durkan

IV.6694. The OFT wrote to Durkan on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participating in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that Durkan had participated in bid rigging on this tender. In response to this letter Durkan admitted 'We engaged in bid rigging activities on this tender but cannot recall details of the other party/parties involved'.⁸²⁴⁹

IV.6695. The OFT subsequently wrote to Durkan's ultimate parent company at the time of this Infringement, Durkan Holdings, on 5 November 2007, asking it to comment on Durkan's response to the OFT's Fast Track Offer, given that the OFT intended to hold Durkan Holdings jointly and severally liable for any infringements committed by Durkan in respect of which the OFT ultimately decided to impose financial penalties. In response to this letter Durkan Holdings stated 'Durkan Holdings will respect the terms of the acceptance made by Durkan Pudelek ...'.⁸²⁵⁰

IV.6696. In its response to the Statement, although Durkan made numerous points regarding the evidence for this Infringement (set out below), it referenced itself as giving a cover price to BBRL⁸²⁵¹, and confirmed in further correspondence with the OFT that it maintained its admission to cover pricing on this Infringement, under the terms of the OFT's Fast Track Offer.⁸²⁵²

IV.6697. In its response to the Statement, Durkan made the following comments on the evidence set out in paragraphs IV.6687 to IV.6693 above:

- (a) The interview of HM described at paragraph IV.6692 was imprecise because he was unfamiliar with the leniency and contemporaneous documents, he was shown the leniency document before confirming he approached Durkan for a cover, and he could not recall whom at Durkan he contacted;⁸²⁵³
- (b) No company is identified on the table set out at paragraph IV.6687 in connection with the stars;
- (c) CD, whose interview is described at paragraph IV.6693, like HM, was unable to recall the name of the person at Durkan whom he dealt with;⁸²⁵⁴ and
- (d) Neither HM or CD directly named Durkan in their interviews.⁸²⁵⁵

IV.6698. The OFT does not consider that any of these points undermine the strength of the evidence when viewed in its totality. In particular:

⁸²⁵¹ Written representations of Durkan, 27 June 2008, paragraphs 12(f)(iv) and 180 to 181.

⁸²⁵² Letter from Durkan, 4 March 2009.

⁸²⁵³ Written representations of Durkan, 16 April 2008, paragraphs 121 to 126.

⁸²⁵⁴ Written representations of Durkan, 16 April 2008, paragraph 126.

⁸²⁵⁵ Written representations of Durkan, 16 April 2008, paragraphs 125 and 126.

- (a) The OFT does not consider HM's interview to be unreliable. It is clear from the interview that HM had specific recollection of this tender, describing in detail the reasons BBRL did not want this job, and contacting Durkan for assistance. The clarity of his recollection in these respects stands in contrast to his answers on those points which he did not recollect. Further, HM had indicated earlier in interview that he would not know contacts at other companies when seeking a cover, and would ask for the estimator for the job.⁸²⁵⁶ On that basis the OFT does not consider it inconsistent with his recollection, or practice when obtaining covers, that he could not remember the name of the contact at Durkan;
- (b) The OFT does not consider that the absence of a name on the starred document undermines the evidential value of the document, with CD's explanation, as showing that a cover was taken in respect of this tender;
- (c) The OFT notes that HM confirmed that it was he who called Durkan for the cover, and there is therefore no reason why CD would be aware of or recall the individual contact at Durkan; and
- (d) Both HM and CD were giving their evidence by reference to a tender schedule which named 'Durkan Pudelek' as the source of the cover price. Given that both witnesses specifically recalled the tender the OFT considers it likely that had the tender schedule been inaccurate either one or both of them would have said so. In the absence of a reason to doubt the accuracy of the tender schedule, or a reason to doubt their recollection of the tender, the OFT does not accept there is any reason to doubt that their recollection of whom they obtained a cover from accorded with the tender schedule.

IV.6699. Moreover, Durkan has confirmed its admission of bid rigging in relation to this tender, which provides corroboration for the various items of evidence which are the subject of Durkan's comments.

IV.6700. Durkan suggested that the terms of the OFT's Fast Track Offer was 'confusingly inconsistent' with the terms of the Statement, the former having referred to 'South Molton Street' and 'the Corporation of London', whereas the latter referred more specifically to 'redevelopment and refurbishment of 45-46 South Molton Street' and 'the City of London'. Durkan also suggest that the OFT's evidence against it had been obtained after the OFT's Fast Track Offer letter was sent to it. The OFT does not accept these arguments. The OFT's Fast Track Offer, and its terms, were based on the contents of the tender schedule obtained from the leniency applicant Balfour Beatty before the OFT's Fast Track Offer was sent. The OFT further notes that Durkan did not request clarification of the tender referred to when it received the OFT's Fast Track Offer, nor has it retracted its admission of liability upon clarification becoming available. The OFT considers it is therefore clear that Durkan had sufficient information to enable it to determine whether or not it wished to accept the offer.

IV.6701. From the evidence and arguments presented above, and having taken into account the representations made by the Parties, the OFT draws the following conclusions.

IV.6702. BBRL and Durkan each accepted an invitation to tender for this contract.

IV.6703. Both companies submitted a tender. BBRL was unable to submit a tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this contract.

IV.6704. The London Refurbishment Tenders/Prospects/Awards table for February 2006 provided by Balfour Beatty shows '', next to the entry for this tender. Balfour Beatty confirmed that this shows that it received a cover price on this tender. In interview HM of BBRL recalled contacting Durkan for a cover price on this tender. He said 'I phoned Durkan and asked them for assistance'.

IV.6705. In addition, Durkan admitted engaging in bid rigging on this tender in response to the OFT's letter of 22 March 2007, and maintained that admission in response to the Statement and in subsequent correspondence.

IV.6706. The OFT further notes that the tender submitted by BBRL was higher than the tender submitted by Durkan, the pattern consistent with a cover price having been provided.

IV.6707. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between BBRL and Durkan. The OFT also concludes that Durkan supplied a figure to BBRL for a cover bid.

IV.6708. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.6687 to IV.6707 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.⁸²⁵⁷ In particular:

- (a) the provision of a figure for a cover bid from Durkan to BBRL was not unilateral⁸²⁵⁸, and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;⁸²⁵⁹
- (b) BBRL can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from Durkan (i.e. the cover price) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process;⁸²⁶⁰ and
- (c) Durkan can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from BBRL (i.e. that BBRL did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its conduct in the tendering process.⁸²⁶¹

IV.6709. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that an agreement and/or concerted practice was in place between BBRL and Durkan in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the tender for the redevelopment and

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.6710. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.6711. Balfour Beatty informed the OFT of the bid rigging activities in respect of this tender before the OFT became aware of these activities from any other source. Balfour Beatty will therefore receive 100 per cent immunity from the fine that the OFT is imposing in respect of this tender.

Infringement 241: 29 Houses, Rosemount Clifton Villas – 13 February 2006
Client: Firebird Homes Limited
Parties: Jack Lunn and Harlow & Milner

IV.6712. On 13 December 2005, Firebird Homes Limited sought tenders for 29 new build houses at Rosemount Clifton Villas.⁸²⁶² The following four companies were invited to tender: Richardson Projects, Strata, Jack Lunn and Harlow & Milner.⁸²⁶³ The deadline for receipt of tenders was 12:00 noon on 13 February 2006.⁸²⁶⁴

IV.6713. Firebird Homes received the following tender returns.⁸²⁶⁵

Contemporaneous documentary evidence from leniency applicant Jack Lunn – Handwritten Note

IV.6716. Jack Lunn provided to the OFT a piece of paper which contained the following handwritten notes in relation to Rosemount Clifton Villas:⁸²⁶⁸

⁸²⁶⁷ Handwritten note, OFT Document Reference A0450.
⁸²⁶⁸ Handwritten note, OFT Document Reference A0689.

IV.6717. A contact list found at Loach confirmed that Harlow & Milner's telephone number is '[.....] [C]'.⁸²⁶⁹

Evidence from leniency applicant – Harlow & Milner

IV.6718. As part of its leniency application, Harlow & Milner's legal representatives provided a general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.352 to IV.362 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.6719. In addition to its leniency application, Harlow & Milner provided to the OFT a schedule ('Combined Office of Fair Trading and Harlow & Milner Projects List') which detailed projects/contracts identified by the company during the course of an internal investigation into potential cover prices given and/or received, between January 2000 and February 2006. On page six of the 'Combined Office of Fair Trading and Harlow & Milner Projects List' is the following entry:⁸²⁷⁰

Evidence from leniency applicant – Jack Lunn

IV.6721. As part of its leniency application, Jack Lunn’s legal representatives provided a general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.431 to IV.440 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.6722. In addition to its leniency application, Jack Lunn provided to the OFT a Schedule (‘Jack Lunn Construction Cover Summary Schedule’) which detailed projects/contracts identified by the company during the course of an internal investigation conducted by Stephen Bradbury (‘SB’), Richard Bryan (‘RB’), Graham Lunn (‘GL’), Anthony Metcalf (‘AM’) and Keith Poskitt (‘KP’) into potential cover prices where it was considered cover prices had either been given or taken. At JLC2 of the ‘Jack Lunn Construction Cover Summary Schedule’ is the following entry:⁸²⁷²

IV.6723. Jack Lunn also provided supplementary information in relation to this contract in its leniency application. Jack Lunn stated 'No information has been retained relating to the cover price given by JLC to Harlow Milner Ltd. It is, however, the norm to provide a cover price of between 3 and 5% above JLC proposed submission price. By way of example of how little hard copy information is retained, Appendix 7 contains a sheet of A4 paper with an individual's name "Chris Smithson", a telephone number ([.....] [C]), and the name "Harlow Milner" with the word "HELP" on the same sheet. Also on this sheet are the words "STRATA" and "RICHARDSONS". This is the only paperwork suggesting that a cover was given'.⁸²⁷³

IV.6724. Following the issue of the Statement, Jack Lunn did not submit any written or oral representations specifically in respect of this Infringement.

Witness evidence from leniency applicant – Harlow & Milner

IV.6725. During an interview with Chris Smithson ('CS'), Chief Estimator at Harlow & Milner, CS was asked if he could recall anything in relation to the tender for 29 houses at Rosemount Clifton Villas. CS replied, 'That's definitely one I remember'.⁸²⁷⁴ CS was shown the handwritten note found at Harlow & Milner to which CS stated 'Yes, that's my handwriting, we found out that Strata Construction and Jack Lunn were pricing the scheme, I did approach Strata originally but they weren't keen on giving a cover. [...] [C]'.⁸²⁷⁵

IV.6726. CS was asked who at Jack Lunn he had contacted for a cover price. CS replied 'I've written Keith Poskitt down so I'm sure I would have spoken to Keith'.⁸²⁷⁶ CS confirmed that because of the nature of the project two cover prices were obtained from Jack Lunn, one for artificial materials and one for natural materials.⁸²⁷⁷ CS stated that the figures written on the sheet of paper were the figures provided by Jack Lunn as cover figures, however, 'we might not have actually gone on those figures... They might have been put up slightly, we'd never go down below somebody's cover price, we'd usually put a bit on, or go in at the price they've given, so they may not ... be the actual tender figure that we went in at'.⁸²⁷⁸

IV.6727. Also, during an interview with Richard Milner ('RM'), Managing Director at Harlow & Milner, RM was asked if he could recall anything in relation to the tender for 29 houses at Rosemount Clifton Villas. RM confirmed the events involving the obtaining of a cover price as described by CS above.⁸²⁷⁹ RM explained that the reason Harlow & Milner did not want to price the job was because 'we didn't have the resource to be able to actually execute the works and we were ..., I seem to remember it was during a period where we'd got people on holiday as well in the estimating department so we .. for 2 reasons, 1 we couldn't physically price it and 2 we didn't have the resource to execute the works even if we did price it, and we were very very conscious that if we fell out with Firebird Homes then we would be fallen out for a long time and it was ... obviously ... we're a local contractor and they're a local organization and we rely, very heavily, on repeat business'.⁸²⁸⁰

Witness evidence from leniency applicant – Jack Lunn

IV.6728. During an interview with the OFT on 8 March 2007, conducted in connection with Jack Lunn's leniency application, SB, AM and KP provided further general explanation of Jack Lunn's participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.431 to IV.440 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.6729. Also during this interview, KP was asked what he recalled about the exchange of cover prices in relation to the tender for 29 houses at Rosemount Clifton Villas. KP replied 'Not the actual sort of nitty gritty but I do recollect writing the sort of notes about help and the guy's name etc'.⁸²⁸¹ KP was shown the handwritten note that referred to 'CHRIS/SMITHSON HARLOW & MILNER [.....] [C] HELP' found during the OFT's search. KP confirmed that this was his handwriting and explained that the reference to CS refers to '... someone from Harlow & Milner I am not sure whether if he's an estimator or one of the managers'.⁸²⁸² When asked if '[.....] [C]' was Harlow & Milner's telephone number, KP replied, 'I can only believe so it's the way I contact Harlow'.⁸²⁸³ KP confirmed that he gave CS of Harlow & Milner a cover price, 'I actually think on this particular case, we were quite late with our tender and they also rung us about 3 or 4 times because they were closer and closer to the tender return time and then probably we would finally ring them with a number'.⁸²⁸⁴

Evidence from other companies – Strata

IV.6730. The OFT received a letter from Strata’s legal representatives on 24 February 2006 stating ‘in the week of 6 February 2006, Strata was contacted by a company called Harlow and Milner from Wakefield seeking a cover price for a scheme in Bradford. The contract is called 29 Houses, Rosemount, Clifton Villas. The client is Firebird Homes.

*Strata obviously declined to give a cover price advising them that they do not engage in such practices. It submitted its tender on 13 February 2006. The Strata estimator did not keep a record of the name of the person from this company who made contact. However, given the late stage of the request for a cover, Strata believes it is highly unlikely that this company could have priced the job itself. Moreover, it seemed desperate for a cover price. Strata therefore believes that if this company did submit a tender it must have been on the basis of a cover price. Harlow and Milner appeared to know that Jack Lunn Construction from Leeds was also pricing the job and Strata suspects that it would have sought a cover price from Jack Lunn following the call to it. Strata believes that Harlow came to it first for a cover as Strata had already won two contracts for the same client, and therefore was likely to be pricing the job’.*⁸²⁸⁵

IV.6732. Jack Lunn and Harlow & Milner each accepted an invitation to tender for the contract for 29 houses at Rosemount Clifton Villas. Harlow & Milner was unable to tender and/or did not want to win this contract.

IV.6733. A contemporaneous piece of paper found at Harlow & Milner records ‘Strata Construction [.....] [C] Rosemount Clifton Villas Bradford, Paul Donghue NO’. ‘[.....] [C]’ was a telephone number for Strata⁸²⁸⁶ and Paul Donhue was the name of an estimator at Strata.⁸²⁸⁷ CS of Harlow & Milner confirmed that he approached Strata in the first instance for a cover price but was told that it was unable to offer him assistance (as it no longer participated in cover pricing following the OFT’s visit and its leniency application). Strata contacted the OFT independently on 24 February 2006 and stated that it had been contacted by Harlow & Milner and asked to provide a cover price, to which it declined. Strata also stated that it suspected that Harlow & Milner would then approach Jack Lunn for a cover price.

IV.6734. The piece of paper also records ‘Jack Lunn [.....] [C] Keith Poskitt, Price Artificial Stone/Slate £4,211508-00, Price Natural Stone/Slate £4,406885-00’. CS confirmed that the note shows that he obtained cover prices (one each for artificial and natural stone) from KP of Jack Lunn. ‘[.....] [C]’ was a telephone number for Jack Lunn⁸²⁸⁸ and KP was an estimator at Jack Lunn.

IV.6735. Another contemporaneous piece of paper provided by Jack Lunn under leniency records ‘CHRIS SMITHSON [.....] [C] HARLOW & MILNER HELP

ART + STONE. KP of Jack Lunn confirmed that these notes were made by himself and show that he was contacted by CS of Harlow & Milner and asked for 'HELP' (in the form of cover prices) for both artificial and natural stone for the contract. KP confirmed that he did supply CS of Harlow & Milner with the figures for cover prices. '[.....] [C]' was a telephone number for Harlow & Milner⁸²⁸⁹ and CS was an estimator at Harlow & Milner.

IV.6736. The OFT considers in the light of the contemporaneous documentary evidence from Harlow & Milner, CS and RM's admissions and explanations of that contemporaneous evidence, and Jack Lunn's and KP's admissions and explanations of the corroborating contemporaneous documentary evidence from Jack Lunn, that Jack Lunn supplied Harlow & Milner with cover prices in relation to this tender.

IV.6737. The OFT also notes that the tender submitted by Harlow & Milner was higher than the tender submitted by Jack Lunn, the pattern consistent with a cover price having been provided.

IV.6738. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between Jack Lunn and Harlow & Milner. The OFT also concludes that Jack Lunn supplied figures to Harlow & Milner for cover bids.

IV.6739. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.6715 to IV.6738 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.⁸²⁹⁰ In particular:

- (a) the provision of figures for cover bids from Jack Lunn to Harlow & Milner was not unilateral⁸²⁹¹, and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;⁸²⁹²
- (b) Harlow & Milner can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from Jack Lunn (i.e the cover prices) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process;⁸²⁹³ and
- (c) Jack Lunn can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from Harlow & Milner (i.e. that Harlow & Milner did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its conduct in the tendering process.⁸²⁹⁴

IV.6740. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that an agreement and/or concerted practice was in place between Jack Lunn and Harlow & Milner, in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the tender for 29 houses, Rosemount, Clifton Villas, tender deadline 13 February 2006.

Immunity and leniency assessment

but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.6742. In respect of this tender, the OFT became aware of bid rigging activities by virtue of the information obtained from Strata's legal representatives, as part of its leniency application on 24 February 2006. Therefore neither Harlow & Milner nor Jack Lunn will receive 100 per cent immunity in respect of this tender. However, both Harlow & Milner and Jack Lunn will receive their normal leniency percentage reductions from the fines that the OFT is imposing in respect of this tender.

Infringement 242: Brookfield Manor, Hathersage – 13 February 2006
Client: Bamford Hall Holdings Ltd
Parties: T & C Williams and Quarmby (Special Projects)

IV.6743. On 16 January 2006, Barraclough English & Wright, on behalf of the client Bamford Hall Holdings Ltd sought tenders for alterations, refurbishment and extensions to Brookfield Manor, Hathersage. The return date for the tender was 12:00 noon on 13 February 2006 and five companies were invited to tender: Quarmby (Special Projects), Milward, Atlas Refurbishment (North) Ltd, Totty, and T & C Williams.⁸²⁹⁵

IV.6744. Barraclough English & Wright received the following tender returns on 13 February 2006.⁸²⁹⁶

Company	Date tender received	Time tender received	Amount of tender	Awarded the contract
Quarmby (Special Projects)	13 February 2006	Before 12:00 noon	£1,146,160.00	Yes
Milward	13 February 2006	Before 12:00 noon	£957,159.57
Atlas Refurbishment (North) Ltd	13 February 2006	Before 12:00 noon	£1,469,922.00
Totty	13 February 2006			Declined to tender
T & C Williams	13 February 2006	Before 12:00 noon	£1,230,463.00

Evidence of agreement and/or concerted practice

Contemporaneous documentary evidence from leniency applicant T & C Williams - Original Note

IV.6745. During the OFT's search of T & C Williams's premises a single sheet of A4 paper was recovered and copied. The following handwritten notations were on either side of the sheet. In interview John Hardy the estimator states he believes Side 1 to have been written by a receptionist. The figure on Side 2 is

IV.6746. As part of its leniency application, T & C Williams provided a 'Corporate Statement' giving a general explanation of its participation in cover pricing.⁸²⁹⁸ This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.635 to IV.649 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.6747. As a further part of its leniency application, T & C Williams also provided to the OFT an annex to the 'Corporate Statement' dealing with specific tenders.⁸²⁹⁹ Examination of the entry relevant to this tender, confirms that T & C Williams received a cover price.

Witness evidence from leniency applicant T & C Williams

IV.6748. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, T & C Williams' employees provided further general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.635 to IV.649 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.6749. Additional evidence in relation to this tender comes from the interview of John Hardy, the estimator for T & C Williams. His response to questions concerning this tender was as follows:

'I think it was design build project as well and at the end of the day.....I know it was a job that once we'd got it in we couldn't send it back because we'd already told the QS who we knew quite well that we were definitely pricing for it. We couldn't refuse to price it after that so yes I..... we took a cover and I believe it was from QSP'.⁸³⁰⁰

Evidence from other companies – Quarmby (Special Projects)

IV.6750. The OFT wrote to Quarmby (Special Projects) on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that Quarmby (Special Projects) had participated in bid rigging on this tender.

IV.6751. In a response to the OFT's Fast Track Offer the Managing Director of Quarmby (Special Projects) Mr C.D. Fielden stated:⁸³⁰¹

'We have no records or recollection of either giving or receiving cover prices for the projects you have listed in appendix A, with the exception of Brookfield Manor Item 6. On this project we can confirm that we were asked by T C Williams Ltd Sheffield to assist them with a Tender figure'.

IV.6752. Subsequently the OFT received a letter dated 1 May explaining '*...we did not feel comfortable signing a declaration that we had been involved in bid rigging, when the reason contractors request cover prices, is that severe pressure of work can make it impossible to submit a tender for work where willingness had previously been expressed for inclusion on a specific tender list'.*⁸³⁰² Quarmby (Special Projects) therefore did not accept the OFT's Fast Track Offer.

IV.6753. The OFT subsequently wrote to Quarmby (Special Projects)'s ultimate parent company at the time of this Infringement, Justgrade, on 6 November 2007, asking it to comment on Quarmby (Special Projects)'s response to the OFT's Fast Track Offer, given that the OFT intended to hold Justgrade jointly and severally liable for any infringements committed by Quarmby (Special Projects) in respect of which the OFT ultimately decided to impose financial penalties. In response to this letter, Justgrade confirmed the position of its subsidiary, Quarmby (Special Projects) in its rejection of the OFT's Fast Track Offer.⁸³⁰³

IV.6754. In its response to the Statement, Quarmby (Special Projects) stated '*...we would again confirm that your original correspondence was taken very seriously within our company structure. We also again confirm in that any conduct by our staff, that may have constituted an infringement or a breach of the Companies Act 1998 [sic] happened due to a genuine lack of knowledge and naivety of the Act. We trust you will accept our sincere apologies in this instance and we confirm that adequate steps have been taken within the company to ensure compliance with the law'.*⁸³⁰⁴

IV.6756. T & C Williams and Quarmby (Special Projects) each accepted an invitation to tender for this contract.

⁸³⁰¹ Response from Quarmby (Special Projects), OFT Document Reference 10765.

⁸³⁰² Response from Quarmby (Special Projects), OFT Document Reference 10768.

IV.6757. Quarmby (Special Projects) appears to have completed the estimating process for the tender and submitted a bid with the intention of winning the work, since it won the contract.

IV.6758. T & C Williams was unable to submit a tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this contract.

IV.6759. In regard to T & C Williams, the figure written on John Hardy's contemporaneous handwritten note, '£1,230,463 - 00', is confirmed as the cover price received by T & C Williams from Quarmby (Special Projects). This figure is identical to the tender figure received by Barraclough English & Wright on the tender return date.⁸³⁰⁵

IV.6760. The telephone number written on the contemporaneous handwritten note, '[.....] [C]', is the telephone number associated with Quarmby (Special Projects).⁸³⁰⁶ T & C Williams has confirmed that it took a cover on this tender and this document shows that contact was made with Quarmby (Special Projects) in connection with this tender.

IV.6761. The OFT further notes the initial admission from Quarmby (Special Projects), that it was asked to give a cover price to T&C Williams in relation to this tender.⁸³⁰⁷

IV.6762. The OFT notes in addition that the tender submitted by T & C Williams was higher than the tender submitted by Quarmby (Special Projects), a pattern consistent with a cover price having been received.

IV.6763. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between Quarmby (Special Projects) and T & C Williams. The OFT also concludes that Quarmby (Special Projects) supplied a figure to T & C Williams for a cover bid.

IV.6764. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.6745 to IV.6763 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.⁸³⁰⁸ In particular:

- (a) the provision of a figure for a cover bid from Quarmby (Special Projects) to T & C Williams was not unilateral⁸³⁰⁹, and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;⁸³¹⁰
- (b) T & C Williams can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from Quarmby (Special Projects) (i.e. the cover price) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process;⁸³¹¹ and
- (c) Quarmby (Special Projects) can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from T & C Williams (i.e. that T & C Williams did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its conduct in the tendering process.⁸³¹²

⁸³¹² See paragraphs III.58, III.95 to III.96, and III.125 of the Legal Background section.

IV.6765. In its response to the Statement, T & C Williams stated ‘...[t]here is no evidence of which T&C Williams is aware to suggest that Quarmby was in contact with any other tenderers; or ... that it modified its conduct after giving the cover to T&C Williams. Moreover, T&C Williams took a cover because it lacked the capacity for the work in question and may therefore not have tendered, or not have tendered competitively, had it not received a cover. Indeed, the contract was ultimately not awarded on the basis of price at all, given that the successful party, Quarmby, won the contract despite not having submitted the lowest tender’.⁸³¹³

IV.6766. The OFT notes that there is a legal presumption that an undertaking takes account of information received from a competitor when determining its own conduct⁸³¹⁴, which neither Quarmby (Special Projects) nor T & C Williams has adduced any evidence to rebut. The OFT is therefore not required to adduce evidence that one or both parties modified their conduct in order to establish an Infringement. To the extent that T & C Williams submits that this infringement should not be treated as serious because no effects have been shown, this point is addressed in step 1 of Section VI (Enforcement) below.

IV.6767. Moreover, the OFT does not accept T & C Williams’ assertion that the contract was not awarded ‘on the basis of price at all’. The price would have been a factor taken in to account by the client in awarding the tender. An unaffordable tender price, for example, submitted with a tender would more than likely be rejected by a client regardless of the other factors considered. The fact that the tender was not awarded to the bidder submitting the lowest price is therefore irrelevant to the OFT’s finding of infringement. In any event, T & C Williams’ argument that the agreement in question had no anti-competitive effects as the contract was ultimately not awarded on the basis of price, is therefore not relevant as it is not necessary to show anti-competitive effect in the case of an object infringement.

IV.6768. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that an agreement and/or concerted practice was in place between Quarmby (Special Projects) and T & C Williams, in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the tender for alterations, refurbishment and extensions to Brookfield Manor, date of tender 13 February 2006.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.6769. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.6770. In respect of this tender, the OFT became aware of the bid rigging activities by virtue of the information obtained during the visit under section 28 to T & C Williams on 28 March 2006. T & C Williams will not therefore receive 100 per cent immunity in respect of this tender. However, T & C Williams will receive its normal leniency percentage reduction from the fine that the OFT is imposing in respect of this tender.

Infringement 243: Digital Media Centre, Barnsley – 21 February 2006
Client: Barnsley Metropolitan Council
Parties: Bluestone and Willmott Dixon

IV.6771. On 3 January 2006, Barnsley Metropolitan Council ('Barnsley MC') sought tenders for a six storey office development, creating a digital media centre in Barnsley.⁸³¹⁵ The following six companies were invited to tender: Bluestone, Willmott Dixon, Henry Boot, HBG Construction, Miller Construction (UK) Ltd and ISG Interior Exterior plc. The deadline for the receipt of tenders was noon on 21 February 2006.

IV.6772. Barnsley MBC received the following tender returns:

Company	Date and time tender received	Amount of tender	Awarded contract
Bluestone	21 February 2006 at 11:30am	£7,988,226	Yes
Willmott Dixon	21 February 2006 at 11:30am	£8,681,322

Evidence of agreement and/or concerted practice

Contemporaneous documentary evidence from leniency applicant Bluestone – Tender register, agenda for tender settlement meeting and tender list

IV.6773. As part of Bluestone's leniency application to the OFT, a tender register⁸³¹⁶ was provided, listing full typed details of this tender, with handwritten annotations thereon. Extracts from the tender register are replicated below with manuscript annotations marked in italics and typed entries denoted in bold as below:

'Chris Evans/Bob/Mike Hesp/David Smith/SteveHart/Steve/GR/MH/MP/Scott.'

IV.6775. The OFT conducted an inspection of Bluestone's office at Garforth, Leeds, on 23 and 24 February 2006, two days after the deadline for this tender and a spreadsheet containing a total of five tenders dated January and February 2006, was found.⁸³¹⁸ Within the right hand column of this spreadsheet appear the handwritten words 'None Won Yet'. This spreadsheet contained the following entry:

Post Date	LOCATION	PROJECT	CLIENT
Month MTH REF
Jan 1 TM40G001	Barnsley	Digital Media Centre	Barnsley MBC

Evidence from leniency applicant Bluestone

IV.6776. As part of its leniency application, Bluestone provided a general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.204 to IV.228 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

⁸³¹⁷ Agenda for tender settlement meeting, OFT Document Reference B4079.

IV.6777. Bluestone compiled a spreadsheet entitled 'Table A - Definite instances of cover pricing'.⁸³¹⁹ On page 18 of the spreadsheet is the following entry, numbered 262:

Bluestone Region	Bluestone Area	Year	Tender No	Works	Client	Estimated Value of Contract
North East	Leeds	2005	TM40G001	Digital Media Centre, Barnsley	Barnsley MBC	£6,400,000

Documentary Evidence	Notes
Document 149 states "Z" against Willmott Dixon on Tender Register Form	As a result of giving the cover, competition was reduced from 3 to 2. (Bluestone had been told that the tender had originally been sent to 5-6 tenderers. Bluestone's intelligence, through the sub-contractors, told them only about two competitors: Henry Boot and Willmott Dixon.)
	Bluestone told the Willmott Dixon employee to put together some documents and a programme. Bluestone gave Willmott Dixon details of the programme, programme timetable and the cover figure. It is possible that Willmott Dixon was asked by the client to provide it with more details. Willmott Dixon was told by Bluestone that it would not provide it with any more details. The cover was given approximately a week before the OFT visits (around 16/17 February 2006.)

IV.6778. Following the issue of the Statement, Bluestone did not submit any written or oral representations specifically in respect of this Infringement.

Witness evidence from leniency applicant Bluestone

IV.6779. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, Bluestone's employees provided further general explanation of its participation in and recording of cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.204 to IV.228 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.6780. Commercial Director Martin Pitt ('MP'), Pre-Construction Director Michael Hesp ('MH'), Pre-Construction Manager David Williamson ('DW') and senior estimator

⁸³¹⁹ Spreadsheet of instances of cover pricing OFT Document Reference B2052.

David Smith ('DS') were interviewed and provided their recollection of this tender and explanations of the documents listed in the above paragraphs.

IV.6781. In interview, MP explained that the tender for this contract was one in which Bluestone was genuinely interested, and subsequently won. He attended a tender settlement meeting on 17 February 2006, prior to the tender deadline of 21 February 2006. MP also confirmed that he made the manuscript annotations on the tender register including the initials and names of Bluestone employees who attended the meeting and annotations made within the section marked 'Competition'. MP said 'in terms of these companies...there's some dialogue...and we do talk about it in each tender'.⁸³²⁰

IV.6782. MP confirmed that he made the annotations against the known competition during the tender settlement meeting and explained: 'in terms of HBG and Kier, those are crossed out. That...could mean that...they're not interested...or...we don't see them as big players for the job...Henry Boot I've got a tick against in terms of...they've been active in the marketplace'. Referring to the handwritten letters 'EOT' which appear next to the entry for Henry Boot, MP said 'they had been looking for an extension of time on the tender period...EOT'. MP also explained the appearance of the handwritten letter 'Z' next to the entry of Willmott Dixon as follows: 'That was in response to a question or a comment that...I think Dave Smith made at the meeting which was Willmott Dixon are looking for assistance'.⁸³²¹ MP confirmed that the letter 'Z' was used by Bluestone to indicate a cover price and meant 'zero interest'.⁸³²²

IV.6783. MH was also interviewed about this tender and he recalled that Bluestone provided a cover price to Willmott Dixon and that Bluestone won the contract. He said 'It was a nice job for us and we did give a cover to Willmott Dixon, and they did come on to us after the event, but that was a day or two, if not the same day when you were here, and we politely told them that we would not be able to give them any further information'.⁸³²³ MH confirmed that the date received on the tender register had been incorrectly recorded by Bluestone as 4 January 2005 instead of 4 January 2006.⁸³²⁴ MH also attended the tender settlement meeting on 17 February 2006 and said that he 'knew it was Willmott Dixon we were giving a cover out to'. He also recalled further contact from Willmott Dixon after the tender deadline and said 'I'd had a nasty shock on the morning when you gentlemen arrived, I went up the stairs...and somebody said, you're not going to believe this, we've just a phone call from Dixon...I can't tell you the exact words, but I know they were wanting, they'd been asked for a breakdown, clearly they hadn't got any, so they were a little worried'.⁸³²⁵

IV.6784. DW was the bid manager for this tender and confirmed that DS was the designated estimator. DW recalled that Willmott Dixon was provided with a cover price and that this was discussed internally at Bluestone. He also confirmed that the letter 'Z' on the tender register was an indication that cover was provided to Willmott Dixon.⁸³²⁶

IV.6785. Senior estimator DS was also interviewed and confirmed that he was the project estimator for this tender. He said 'the fact that there's a Z against Wilmot Dixon suggests that they had been in touch asking for a cover price...we were aware that Wilmot Dixon's were actively seeking a cover on the...bid'.⁸³²⁷ He could not recall who at Bluestone received contact and subsequently gave cover to Willmott Dixon.

Evidence from other companies – Willmott Dixon

IV.6786. The OFT wrote to Willmott Dixon on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that Willmott Dixon had participated in bid rigging on this tender. In response, Willmott Dixon, through its legal representatives, wrote to the OFT⁸³²⁸ and declined the Fast Track Offer.

IV.6787. The OFT subsequently wrote to Willmott Dixon's ultimate parent company at the time of this Infringement, Willmott Dixon Limited, on 6 November 2007, asking it to comment on Willmott Dixon's response to the OFT's Fast Track Offer, given that the OFT intended to hold Willmott Dixon Limited jointly and severally liable for any infringements committed by Willmott Dixon in respect of which the OFT ultimately decided to impose financial penalties. Willmott Dixon Limited stated 'the decision was taken by the subsidiary, and is now confirmed by the parent, not to accept the reduction in penalty offer'.⁸³²⁹

IV.6788. Willmott Dixon stated in their response to the Statement in respect of this Infringement that, although they considered the evidence to be *'less than strong and compelling'*⁸³³⁰ (a suggestion which the OFT entirely refutes), nevertheless *'...our client took the step, which it regrets, to approach another company (Bluestone) and obtain a cover price for the job...[and] ...in this case, our client admits that a cover price was obtained in relation to the tender for the Digital Media Centre in Barnsley.'*⁸³³¹

IV.6789. In its response to the Statement, Willmott Dixon also noted that 'the Council needed to have three tenders and specifically asked our client to provide one of them in the full knowledge that it would most likely be uncompetitive'.⁸³³² For the avoidance of doubt, the OFT emphasises that while there is no prohibition in competition law against a company unilaterally deciding to submit an inflated bid and calculating and submitting that inflated bid without any form of collusion with its competitors, it was a contravention of the Chapter I prohibition for Willmott Dixon to have approached Bluestone in order to obtain a cover price for this tender. There is no evidence that Willmott Dixon was asked by the client to collude with Bluestone in order to provide an uncompetitive tender bid.

IV.6791. Bluestone and Willmott Dixon each accepted an invitation to tender for this contract.

IV.6792. Willmott Dixon was unable to submit a tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this contract. Bluestone completed the estimating process for the tender for this contract and it appears that it submitted a bid with the hope of winning the work. This is shown by the price submitted by Bluestone being the lowest received and the fact that it won the contract.

IV.6793. Bluestone recorded four competitors who were also invited to tender for this contract on a tender register, namely 'HBG, Kier, Henry Boot [and] Willmott Dixon'. The letter 'Z' is noted next to the name of 'Willmott Dixon'. Bluestone has confirmed that this letter indicates 'zero interest' and that Willmott Dixon sought and received a cover price from Bluestone on this tender.

IV.6794. The OFT notes that although there are annotations by all four competitors on the tender register, the letter 'Z' only appears by the entry for Willmott Dixon. Four employees from Bluestone have all confirmed in interview that the letter 'Z' indicates that cover was given to Willmott Dixon and have a clear recollection that this took place. In addition, Commercial Director MP confirmed that he made the handwritten entries on the tender register, including the letter 'Z', from information obtained during the tender settlement meeting on 17 February 2006, where all relevant estimating and contract staff were in attendance. This meeting took place four days before the tender deadline.

IV.6795. Pre-Construction Director MH also had a clear recollection that soon after the tender deadline of 21 February 2006 Willmott Dixon made a telephone request to Bluestone for follow-up information about this tender, since Willmott Dixon was unable to provide the client with a breakdown of its tender figure. MH said that this telephone call was made while the OFT was in the process of carrying out an inspection under section 28 of Bluestone's premises at Leeds. The OFT's inspection at Bluestone's Leeds site took place on 23 and 24 February 2006.

IV.6796. The client Barnsley MBC received a tendered amount of £7,988,226 from Bluestone, which matches the figure provided by Bluestone in its leniency application. The client also received a tender of £8,681,322 from Willmott Dixon, which is higher than the amount tendered by Bluestone. This fits into the pattern consistent with a cover price having been provided from Bluestone to Willmott Dixon.

IV.6797. Finally, both Bluestone and Willmott Dixon have admitted engaging in cover pricing in respect of this tender for the six storey office development, creating a digital media centre in Barnsley.

IV.6798. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between Bluestone and Willmott Dixon, and that Bluestone supplied a figure to Willmott Dixon in order that it could submit a bid to the client that was not intended to win the contract.

IV.6799. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.6773 to IV.6798 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.⁸³³³ In particular:

- (a) the provision of a figure for a cover bid from Bluestone to Willmott Dixon was not unilateral⁸³³⁴, and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;⁸³³⁵
- (b) Willmott Dixon can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from Bluestone (i.e. the cover price) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process;⁸³³⁶ and
- (c) Bluestone can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from Willmott Dixon (i.e. that Willmott Dixon did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process.⁸³³⁷

IV.6800. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that an agreement and/or concerted practice was in place between Bluestone and Willmott Dixon in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the contract for a digital media centre in Barnsley, tender deadline 21 February 2006.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.6801. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.6802. Bluestone informed the OFT of the bid rigging activities in respect of this tender before the OFT became aware of these activities from any other source. Bluestone will therefore receive 100 per cent immunity from the fine that the OFT is imposing in respect of this tender.

Infringement 244: Extension to Tipton and Coseley Building Society, Tipton – 9 June 2006

Client: Building Design Practice Ltd

Parties: Thomas Vale and Arthur M Griffiths

IV.6803. On 25 May 2006 Building Design Practice Ltd sought tenders for an extension to Tipton and Coseley Building Society, Tipton. The following three companies were invited to tender: Arthur M Griffiths, Thomas Vale and McPhilips. The deadline for the receipt of tenders was 12:00 noon on 9 June 2006.

IV.6804. Building Design Practice Ltd received the following tender returns by 12:00 noon on 9 June 2006:⁸³³⁸

McPhilips	By 12:00 noon on 9 June 2006	£1,116,647

IV.6805. Building Design Practice Ltd abandoned this tender exercise and re-tendered on a scaled down project on 14 July and 12 September 2006. Following this re-tender exercise it was decided to cancel the project.

Evidence of agreement and/or concerted practice

Evidence from leniency applicant Arthur M Griffiths

IV.6806. As part of its leniency application, Arthur M Griffiths provided a general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.182 to IV.188 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.6807. Also as part of its leniency application made on 22 June 2006 Arthur M Griffiths provided information in respect of this tender. It is explained that Gary Wildsmith ('GW'), Commercial Director, was assigned to this tender but that due to work and holiday commitments, 'the tender would not be completed by submission date of Friday 09/06/06'.⁸³³⁹ It was further explained that, 'In MJW's [Maurice Walsh ('MW'), Managing Director] absence at the last minute as a desperate act of temporary insanity GJW [GW] contacted Thomas Vale City and Interiors to ask if they could assist us in submitting our tender. There was no one to answer the call so he contacted CT [Chris Trickett] at Thomas Vales Stourport Office. Having assessed the scheme was probably over a million pounds GJW suggested to CT that if AM Griffiths & Son Ltd were to submit a bid at around £1.17 million then we should not be the lowest bidder – this was confirmed by CT, nothing more was disclosed and we submitted our form of tender accordingly'.⁸³⁴⁰

IV.6808. The Form of Tender states that Arthur M Griffiths' submitted figure was £1,179,206.⁸³⁴¹

IV.6809. After an emergency board meeting of Arthur M Griffiths which took place on 9 June 2006, GW was ordered to withdraw the tender submission for this contract⁸³⁴² and the following policy statement was adopted 'With immediate effect following today's disclosures [in relation to this tender] it is now the policy of AM Griffiths & Son Ltd to not take or receive covers on tenders. No Exceptions'.⁸³⁴³

IV.6810. Following the issue of the Statement, Arthur M Griffiths did not submit any written or oral representations specifically in respect of this Infringement.

IV.6811. In respect of this tender, in interview GW said, 'as I saidrun out of time....you know, Alan [Griffiths] wasn't in at that time, Maurice [Walsh] was....away on a half term... so I thought, well, I'm left to get this job in, I've got to submit something, I didn't want to sort of not, not return anything, so I spoke to Chris [Trickett] about it. But to be fair, I mean I didn't actually get a figure of[f] Vales. I think, I knew it was a million pound budget. I think the conversation went, if I go sort of about 17% over the budget price, do you think that'll put us out of court? And I think Chris said, yeah, you should be safe with that. And I put a figure of about 17% over a million pound, as I remember, but that was it. No figures were ever discussed or exchanged'.⁸³⁴⁴

IV.6812. GW added 'I think he [Chris Trickett] was torn, a rock and a hard place... because we'd helped them a lot on this Wolverhampton Decent Homes project. He could see I was struggling. I think he felt duty bound to try and help me personally out of a ... because I said ... I'm in a hole here, I need ... help just to get out. I want to put a figure in, but ... I've not got the time to do it ... he said ... well, I shouldn't be doing this, but I'll see what I can do ... so he was doing it reluctantly'.⁸³⁴⁵

IV.6813. GW explained that he contacted Thomas Vale because he had been working at its office in Stourport for the previous month and 'felt quite at home there, and it was a, an easy, easy ask really'.⁸³⁴⁶

IV.6814. GW further explained that he subsequently had a conversation with MW who was unhappy with GW that Arthur M Griffiths was not going to price the job and had instead taken a cover price. GW said, '[MW] said, I shouldn't have done it really. I should have, I should have got a, I should have done the price proper'.⁸³⁴⁷

IV.6815. Also in respect of this tender, in interview MW said 'Gary [Wildsmith] was pricing that job, or I thought he was pricing that job, it, it transpired after the tender had been submitted that he'd run out of time, so apparently he spoke to somebody at Thomas Vale, I think ultimately it was Chris Trickett and said, look, you know, I'm struggling with this job, I think the budget's £1. whatever it is, £1. something, I'm thinking I'm going to go in at whatever it is, I don't want this job, do you think this would be okay, and I think Chris said, you know, you should be comfortable with that ... I came in and Gary obviously told me about this and I said, Gaz, we could be in trouble here, we had a sit down...we called a [board] meeting and we made the resolution that we wouldn't do that [give or take cover prices] because in honesty, at that stage, we knew that this [the OFT's investigation] was going on ... that there'd been problems elsewhere in the country...and I didn't want us to be in that position'.⁸³⁴⁸

IV.6816. As part of its leniency application, Thomas Vale provided a general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.689 to IV.717 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.6817. On 15 August 2006, further to its leniency application, Thomas Vale's legal representatives provided information to the OFT in respect of this tender and specifically details of discussions between Christopher Keith Trickett ('CKT'), Chief Estimator at Thomas Vale, and Arthur M Griffiths. Thomas Vale explained that GW of Arthur M Griffiths had contacted Thomas Vale on three separate occasions about this tender.⁸³⁴⁹ Firstly, during the week commencing 29 May 2006, CKT received a telephone call from GW requesting assistance (a cover price) for this tender. CKT refused at that stage to provide assistance but referred GW to Nigel Stone ('NS') of Thomas Vale. On 9 June 2006, GW telephoned NS to request assistance which was also refused by NS. Shortly after this telephone conversation, GW telephoned CKT again.

IV.6818. Thomas Vale's legal representatives stated: 'we understand that Chris Trickett was put under significant pressure to assist Griffiths based on: (a) Griffiths' claims that they were "desperate" and significantly under resourced; (b) the perceived legitimacy of the request given the "partnership" arrangement⁸³⁵⁰ in place between TVC [Thomas Vale] and Griffiths; and (c) his personal friendship with the directors of Griffiths'.⁸³⁵¹ After this third contact with GW, CKT contacted NS and obtained 'a "ballpark" figure for TVC's bid (i.e. in the region of £1 million)'.⁸³⁵² CT then contacted GW, 'simply to confirm that Griffiths' intended bid of £1.1 million would leave it "fully covered"'.⁸³⁵³

IV.6819. Thomas Vale explained that following CKT's conversations with GW, CKT was suspended on full pay and that a meeting was held with CKT on 22 June 2006. At this meeting CKT 'was informed that his dealings in this matter were in contradiction of clear company policy and amounted to "gross misconduct" worthy of dismissal'.⁸³⁵⁴

IV.6820. Thomas Vale also provided to the OFT a schedule listing key competitors with whom Thomas Vale frequently dealt in relation to cover pricing at Annex 5 of its leniency application and Arthur M Griffiths appears on this list.⁸³⁵⁵

IV.6821. Following the issue of the Statement, Thomas Vale did not submit any written or oral representations specifically in respect of this Infringement.

IV.6822. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, Thomas Vale's employees provided further general explanation of its participation in and recording of cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.689 to IV.717 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.6823. In interview CKT said 'the initial contact was when Gary Wildsmith spoke to me and asked for some assistance on that particular job, and obviously I said to him the company policy is that we don't do that, but I felt that if he perhaps spoke with Nigel Stone over at the Aston office, it may well be that he may have come across some other names of contractors who may also be tendering, which I'm sure he'd be happy to sort of oblige him with. And it was left at that at the time.

....on the day that the tender was due in, Gary actually spoke to me, and said that he still wanted some help, which put me in quite an awkward position to be perfectly honest. Really personal contact with them and then obviously the relationship with Thomas Vale and AM Griffiths at that particular time, with the partnering tender that was going as a joint tender submission from Thomas Vale and AM Griffiths for the Wolverhampton Decent Homes scheme. So he did put me in a little bit awkward position. I did actually speak to Nigel Stone who, as it says in the statement said they were still, hadn't defined the exact tender submission figure, but you know, the figure would be round about so and so.

I spoke then with Gary, I didn't actually give him any figure, but he was quite persistent. And we knew, well he knew and I knew from talk with Nigel that obviously the approximate figure was going to be so and so. We'd obviously been told that before the tender came out to or the tender document was issued, the approximate value of it. Near on a million and 75 thousand as it happens, or 1.07, and Gary asked me the question, well if I go in at that figure will I be ok? And I said yes, not telling him actually that he'd have been way way above....' ⁸³⁵⁶

IV.6825. Thomas Vale and Arthur M Griffiths each accepted an invitation to tender for this contract.

IV.6826. Arthur M Griffiths was unable to submit a tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this contract.

IV.6827. Thomas Vale completed the estimating process for the tender for this contract and submitted a bid with the hope of winning the work. This is shown by the price submitted by Thomas Vale being the lowest received by the client.

IV.6828. In respect of Arthur M Griffiths, the OFT notes that it has confirmed that it engaged in bid rigging activities with Thomas Vale in respect of this tender. GW of Arthur M Griffiths has provided a clear recollection of the events leading up to the final conversation with Thomas Vale on the day of the tender deadline. Although the bid rigging activity did not involve the actual provision of a specific cover price from Thomas Vale to Arthur Griffiths, Thomas Vale provided Arthur M Griffiths with information regarding the level of its tender price and with this information Arthur M Griffiths knew that it could submit its tender in the knowledge that it would not win the contract.

IV.6829. The OFT considers that Arthur M Griffiths would have realised that Thomas Vale had changed its policy on giving out cover prices at the time of this tender, and that this realisation would have influenced the timing of Arthur M Griffiths' leniency application to the OFT, and together with the withdrawal of its tender submission this shows that Arthur M Griffiths was aware that such bid rigging activity was anti-competitive.

IV.6830. In regard to Thomas Vale, the OFT notes that it has confirmed that it engaged in bid rigging activities with Arthur M Griffiths in respect of this tender. CKT of Thomas Vale has provided a clear recollection of his conversations with GW of Arthur M Griffiths. CKT has confirmed that he felt that GW had put him in 'an awkward position' in asking Thomas Vale for assistance on this tender and that in spite of this CKT did provide the requested assistance to Arthur M Griffiths.

IV.6831. Thomas Vale has admitted that Arthur M Griffiths was one of the 'key competitors' with whom it engaged in cover pricing activity. The OFT notes that both companies have admitted to bid rigging in relation to this tender.

IV.6832. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between Arthur M Griffiths and Thomas Vale, and that Thomas Vale supplied information to Arthur M Griffiths in order that it could submit a bid to the client that was not intended to win the contract.

IV.6833. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.6806 to IV.6832 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.⁸³⁵⁷ In particular:

- (a) the provision of cover pricing information from Thomas Vale to Arthur M Griffiths was not unilateral⁸³⁵⁸, and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;⁸³⁵⁹
- (b) Arthur M Griffiths can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from Thomas Vale when determining its own conduct in the tendering process;⁸³⁶⁰ and
- (c) Thomas Vale can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from Arthur M Griffiths (i.e. that Arthur M Griffiths did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process.⁸³⁶¹

IV.6834. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that an agreement and/or concerted practice was in place between Thomas Vale and Arthur M Griffiths in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the contract for an extension to Tipton and Coseley Building Society, Tipton, tender deadline 9 June 2006.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.6835. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.6836. Arthur M Griffiths and Thomas Vale each informed the OFT of the bid rigging activities in respect of this tender before the OFT became aware of these activities from any other source. Thomas Vale applied for leniency before Arthur M Griffiths and will therefore receive 100 per cent immunity from the fine that the OFT is imposing in respect of this tender.⁸³⁶²

IV.6837. As Thomas Vale applied for leniency first, Arthur M Griffiths will not receive 100 per cent immunity in respect of this tender. However, Arthur M Griffiths will receive its normal leniency percentage reduction from the fine that the OFT is imposing in respect of this tender.

⁸³⁶² The OFT notes that by engaging in cover pricing activity after its leniency application on 27 January 2006, Thomas Vale breached its duty under leniency to refrain from participation in further cartel activity. The OFT has considered this breach in the light of all the circumstances of this case and has concluded that on this occasion no action will be taken in respect of Thomas Vale. However, it should be clearly noted that this does not provide any sort of indication as to the OFT's likely decision should a similar situation occur in a future case.

SECTION V – LEGAL ASSESSMENT

A. Introduction

- V.1. The OFT sets out in this section its conclusions concerning the legal assessment of the conduct of the Parties described above.
- V.2. Parts B to I of this Section set out the OFT's conclusions concerning the requirements which must be fulfilled in order to establish a breach of the Chapter I prohibition.

B. Undertakings

- V.3. The meaning of the word 'undertaking' for the purposes of the Act is set out above at paragraphs III.10 to III.36 of the Legal Background section. The OFT has also set out in those paragraphs its reasoning for its conclusions on the concept of a single undertaking.
- V.4. For the reasons set out in each of the relevant parts of Section II.A above, the OFT considers that each of the Parties listed in paragraph I.1 of the Introduction constitutes an undertaking for the purposes of the Act.

C. Agreement and/or concerted practice

- V.5. The law on agreements and concerted practices, with particular reference to collusive tendering, whether through cover bidding, agreements on tender costs and/or compensation payments, is set out in detail at paragraphs III.38 to III.59, III.92 to III.96 and III.138 to III.142 of the Legal Background section above.
- V.6. On the basis of the facts and evidence set out in the Conduct of the Parties section above, and noting the concluding paragraphs set out in relation to each Infringement in that section, the OFT has decided that the conduct of the Parties amounted to agreements and/or concerted practices within the meaning of the Act.
- V.7. As stated in paragraphs III.38 to III.42 of the Legal Background section above, it is not necessary for the OFT to conclude as to whether the behaviour of the Parties specifically constituted an agreement or a concerted practice in order to demonstrate an infringement of the Chapter I prohibition.

D. Anti-competitive object

- V.8. As set out in paragraphs III.97 to III.114, III.127 to III.135 and III.143 to III.157 of the Legal Background section above, the OFT considers that collusive tendering, whether in the form of cover bidding, cover bidding in conjunction with a compensation payment arrangement, or compensation payment arrangements without cover bidding, constitutes an obvious restriction of competition, and thus has as its 'object' the prevention, restriction or distortion of competition.
- V.9. The OFT therefore considers that each of the agreements and/or concerted practices described in this Decision had as its object the prevention, restriction or distortion of competition.

E. Appreciability

- V.10. As set out in paragraph III.176 and III.182 of the Legal Background section above⁸³⁶³, the agreements and/or concerted practices described in this Decision involved bid rigging and/or price fixing and are therefore considered by the OFT to be capable of having an appreciable effect on competition whether or not the Parties' combined market share in the relevant market falls below 10 per cent.
- V.11. The OFT considers that each of the agreements and/or concerted practices specified in this Decision had the object of preventing, restricting and/or distorting competition to an appreciable extent.

F. Effect on trade within the UK

- V.12. As set out in paragraphs III.184 to III.190 of the Legal Background section above, the OFT considers that by its very nature, an agreement or concerted practice between competitors to rig bids and/or fix prices is likely to affect trade within the UK.
- V.13. The agreements and/or concerted practices referred to in this Decision operated in a part of the UK – England – and the Parties' conduct is therefore considered by the OFT to have affected trade within the UK. The Parties' bid rigging and/or price fixing agreements and/or concerted practices were capable of altering the structure of competition in a part of the UK by reducing competition in the competitive tendering process and altering the pattern of trade within the UK.
- V.14. The OFT therefore considers that the requirement of an effect on trade within the UK is satisfied in this case for all of the agreements and/or concerted practices specified in this Decision.

G. Effect on trade between Member States

- V.15. As stated at paragraph III.191 of the Legal Background section above, the OFT has a duty to consider whether trade between EC Member States may have been appreciably affected by the Infringements, in order to determine whether Article 81(1) is applicable as well as the Chapter I prohibition.
- V.16. The OFT does not consider that the agreements and/or concerted practices described in this Decision were capable, individually or in aggregate, of appreciably affecting trade between Member States for the reasons set out below.
- V.17. The Infringements were not cross-border by nature, in the sense that all of the relevant tenders and instances of bid rigging took place within England only. The OFT therefore considered whether the Infringements were capable of influencing cross-border trade.
- V.18. Out of the 103 Parties that are addressees of this Decision, only two undertakings involve non-UK legal entities. These are Ballast Nedam (the parent company of Ballast), registered in the Netherlands, and Sicon (the parent company of John Sisk), registered in the Republic of Ireland. The subsidiaries of those two entities that had direct involvement in the agreements and/or concerted practices described in this Decision, Ballast (in liquidation) and John Sisk, do not have business activities outside of the UK. Accordingly, the OFT does not consider that the infringing activities have resulted in a significant number of foreign undertakings conforming to the conduct carried out in the UK by the Parties. There is no evidence that a significant number of foreign undertakings played an active part in the bid rigging activities which are the subject of this Decision.

- V.19. The OFT also examined whether there is significant demand for services from non-UK construction firms by customers in the UK. According to the evidence examined, firms from non-UK EU Member States provide less than four per cent of construction activities in the UK. This figure is relatively low and may indicate that there is little tendency for foreign undertakings to provide services in the UK without setting up UK subsidiaries whose activities are limited to the UK (such as in the case of Ballast and John Sisk). The evidence reviewed by the OFT indicates that it is not common practice for firms from other Member States to tender for and fulfil UK-based contracts due to high transport costs.
- V.20. The OFT has considered the extent to which the UK construction industry has been affected by the activities of the Parties. According to the evidence reviewed, approximately six per cent⁸³⁶⁴ of construction activity in the UK is represented by the Parties in aggregate for the period of the Infringements. The OFT does not consider this to be an excessively high proportion, noting also that not all turnover of the Parties will generally have been affected by infringing conduct. Furthermore, no single Infringement is likely to have had a significant impact on the UK construction sector, given that the average value of a directly affected contract is approximately £1 million, and the UK construction sector has a value of over £100 billion.⁸³⁶⁵
- V.21. Horizontal cartels that cover the whole of a Member State are normally capable of affecting trade between Member States by reason of the exclusion by participants of competitors from other Member States, hindering the economic penetration which the Treaty is designed to bring about.⁸³⁶⁶ The OFT's investigation is only concerned with infringements that have occurred in England and the OFT has not dealt in this investigation with any bid rigging activities that may have occurred in the remainder of the UK.
- V.22. The OFT has not uncovered any evidence that the bid rigging activities of the Parties in the UK have had an actual exclusionary effect on competitors from other Member States. Furthermore, based upon the above evidence of the low demand in the UK for construction undertakings from other Member States and the non-tradable nature of construction services, it seems unlikely that if market conditions changed in the UK, cartel members would take action against competitors from other Member States.⁸³⁶⁷

- V.23. The OFT also considered the applicability of the EC rules on public procurement and whether these could indicate a potential effect on interstate trade. Public procurement is the purchase of goods or services by public bodies. The EC public procurement rules are intended to ensure that public procurement is open to EU-wide competition and that suppliers in any EU Member State have an equal opportunity to bid for public contracts. The relevant directive at the time of the Infringements was the Works Directive⁸³⁶⁸ (no longer in force) which covered contracts awarded by central government, local authorities and other public sector bodies such as schools, universities and health authorities. If the value of the contract exceeded certain thresholds, public procurement rules would apply, including the requirement to publish a contract notice in the Official Journal of the European Communities to enable suppliers throughout the EU to submit bids.
- V.24. A relatively low proportion (seven) of the Suspect Tenders met the thresholds that were in force during the relevant period and were therefore within the scope of the EC public procurement rules. The OFT considers that this is unlikely to indicate a potential appreciable effect on trade between Member States. This is on the basis that, even though the contracts fell within the scope of the EC public procurement rules, in practice, only a small proportion of bids would have been submitted by non-UK firms. Moreover, as indicated above, firms from other EU Member States represent less than four per cent of all firms that provide construction services in the UK.
- V.25. On the basis of the above, the OFT considers that the Infringements are not, individually or in aggregate, capable of appreciably affecting trade between Member States. The OFT is therefore not obliged to apply Article 81(1) to the Infringements.

H. Duration of the Infringements

- V.26. On the basis of the evidence available, set out in the Conduct of the Parties section above, the OFT has considered the relevant duration of each of the Infringements committed by the Parties. The OFT considers that the duration of Infringements of this nature is at least from the date of initial contact between the Parties, alerting one another that they had been invited to tender and were either interested in winning the tender or in making bids that would ensure that they would not win the tender, to the date when bids were actually submitted or due to be submitted.
- V.27. In cases involving compensation payments made after the date when bids were submitted, the OFT considers that the duration of Infringements of this nature lasted at least until the date when the final compensation payment was made.

⁸³⁶⁷ European Commission's Guidelines on the effect of trade concept contained in Articles 81 and 82 of the Treaty, OJ C101, 27 April 2004, page 81, paragraph 80.

⁸³⁶⁸ Works Directive (93/37/EEC) of 14 June 1993, OJ 1993, L 199/54, amended by Directive 97/52/EC of 13 October 1997, OJ 1997, L 328/1. This has been replaced by the Public Works Directive, Directive 2004/18, OJ 2004 L134/114, which was implemented in the UK on 31 January 2006 by the Public Contracts Regulations 2006 (SI 2006/5). All of the infringing tenders relating to public works pre-date 31 January 2006.

V.28. The nature of the initial contacts, which were usually by telephone, coupled with the fact that tender documentation was not always retained beyond the end of the tender process, means that the OFT does not always have precise information as to either or both of the start and completion dates in respect of each Infringement.

V.29. In any event, the OFT considers that the concept of duration is generally speaking of less significance in bidding markets compared to fixed price markets. As the CAT stated in Apex:⁸³⁶⁹

'(I)n the present case, the effect of the infringement is not restricted to the short period referred to above but has a potential impact on future tendering processes by the same tenderees. Moreover, in relation to tenders we bear in mind the specific nature of the tender process: once a contract has been awarded following an anti-competitive tender, the anti-competitive effect is irreversible in relation to that tender. The contract has been awarded; the contract works will in all likelihood have commenced. It is readily apparent that this is not a case where ongoing conduct may simply be rectified.'

V.30. R Durnnell stated in its response to the Statement that the situation in the construction markets in which it operates is different from that in Apex, such that its Infringements had no impact on future tendering processes involving the same tenderees.⁸³⁷⁰ For the reasons set out in the Legal Background section, the OFT does not accept this submission.

V.31. In light of the above, and as the OFT is not making any adjustment to the level of penalty consequent on the duration of any Infringement in this case (see paragraphs VI.181 to VI.188 of the Enforcement section below), the OFT considers it unnecessary to make a finding as to the duration of each of the agreements and/or concerted practices described in this Decision.

I. Exclusion or exemption

V.32. The OFT considers that the arrangements entered into between the Parties are not exempted from the Chapter I prohibition by operation of section 9 of the Act. In particular, the Parties' conduct clearly does not contribute to improving production or distribution, or promoting technical or economic progress. In the circumstances, it is not necessary for the OFT to consider whether any of the remaining requirements for exemption under section 9 of the Act would have been met.

V.33. There is also no block exemption order under section 6 that would exempt the conduct of the Parties from the Chapter I prohibition. Nor is there any applicable EU Council or Commission Regulation by virtue of which the conduct of the Parties would be exempt from Article 81(1) and would benefit from a parallel exemption from the Chapter I prohibition under section 10 of the Act.

V.34. Finally, none of the exclusions from the Chapter I prohibition provided for by sections 3 or 50 of the Act applies.

SECTION VI – ENFORCEMENT

VI.1. This Section of the Decision sets out the enforcement action which the OFT is taking and its reasons for taking that action.

A. Decision

VI.2. On the basis of the evidence set out in the Conduct of the Parties section above, the OFT finds that each of the Parties has infringed the Chapter I prohibition by participating at various times since March 2000 in one or more agreements and/or concerted practices involving bid rigging activities with the object of preventing, restricting or distorting competition. The list of Infringements in which the OFT finds that each Party has engaged is set out at Annex A.

B. Directions

VI.3. Section 32(1) of the Act provides that if the OFT has made a decision that an agreement and/or concerted practice infringes the Chapter I prohibition, it may give to such person or persons as it considers appropriate such directions as it considers appropriate to bring the infringement to an end. As the OFT considers that the Infringements have already come to an end, it is not necessary to issue directions in this case.

C. Financial penalties

General points

VI.4. Section 36(1) of the Act provides that on making a decision that an agreement and/or concerted practice has infringed the Chapter I prohibition, the OFT may require the undertaking⁸³⁷¹ concerned to pay it a financial penalty in respect of the infringement. In accordance with section 38(8) of the Act, the OFT must have regard to the guidance on penalties issued under section 38(1) of the Act, for the time being in force, when setting the amount of the penalty.⁸³⁷²

VI.5. The OFT has included in this Decision a maximum of three Infringements per non-leniency Party in respect of which financial penalties are being imposed. These have been selected as described above in paragraphs II.1495 to II.1498 of the OFT's Investigation section.

VI.6. The OFT notes that the leniency Parties are in many cases involved in more than three Infringements; however, for the reasons discussed in paragraphs II.1472 to II.1478 of the OFT's Investigation section above, the OFT is not imposing financial penalties in respect of more than three Infringements per Party (see also paragraph VI.386 below).

⁸³⁷¹ See paragraph VI.53 below.

⁸³⁷² OFT 423 OFT's guidance as to the appropriate amount of a penalty (December 2004).

Section 60 of the Act

- VI.7. A number of Parties have asserted that the OFT must act consistently with the Commission's practice on penalties as a result of section 60 of the Act.⁸³⁷³ This argument has been raised, for example, in relation to the following issues:
- year of turnover on which step 1 of the penalty calculation is based;
 - assessment of the effects of an Infringement in setting penalties;
 - negligence as a mitigating factor;
 - the circumstances in which a nominal penalty, or no penalty at all, should be imposed; and
 - the limitation period for imposing penalties.
- VI.8. The OFT does not consider, however, that it is required by section 60 to calculate the penalties it imposes under the Act in the same manner as fines imposed by the Commission under Regulation 1/2003 for infringements of Articles 81 or 82. Section 60 is concerned with ensuring that, so far as possible and having regard to any relevant differences between the provisions concerned, questions arising under the Act are dealt with consistently with the treatment of corresponding questions arising under EC competition law, the principal concern being to ensure consistency in the interpretation of the substantive UK and EC competition law provisions concerned. Save as regards fundamental procedural safeguards, questions of procedure, investigation and enforcement, including the calculation of financial penalties, are not the focus of section 60.⁸³⁷⁴ Rather, specific provision is made for these under the Act.⁸³⁷⁵ The OFT's primary obligation when calculating penalties under the Act is, therefore, to have regard to its own penalty guidance (see paragraph VI.4 above).⁸³⁷⁶ Moreover, to the extent that this produces a different result from that which would arise from the approach adopted by the Commission, the OFT regards this as a 'relevant difference' between the provisions concerned under section 60(1) of the Act.
- VI.9. Furthermore, whilst the OFT's approach will be broadly consistent with the general principles applied by the Commission – such as the need for appropriate punishment and deterrence as per the preamble to the Commission's guidance – the OFT is not bound to adopt, in relation to the detail, the same methodology as the Commission, particularly where the Commission has itself a margin of appreciation under its own guidelines. That would be tantamount to arguing that the OFT should apply the Commission's guidelines. Moreover, the ⁸³⁷³ For example, written representations of Harlow & Milner, 27 June 2008 (as amended 6 January 2009), paragraph 4.3; written representations of Crest Nicholson, 27 June 2008, paragraphs 8.18 to 8.20; and written representations of Dukeries, 27 June 2008, paragraph 60.

⁸³⁷⁴ See comments in Hansard at the time the Competition Bill was being enacted, such as, for example, the comment on behalf of the Government that section 60 was intended to import 'high level principles, such as proportionality, legal certainty and administrative fairness' into domestic law (see Lord Simon of Highbury, Hansard, House of Lords' debates, 25 November 1997: Column 961).

⁸³⁷⁵ See, in particular, sections 25 to 44, section 51 and Schedule 9 of the Act, together with the guidance and secondary legislation made under those provisions.

⁸³⁷⁶ This is consistent with the architecture of Regulation 1/2003, which does not require national competition authorities to apply the same approach to sanctions as the Commission in respect of infringements of Article 81 or 82.

OFT's duty under section 60(3) is at most only to have regard to any relevant decision or statement of the Commission.

- VI.10. In any event, the OFT does not consider that a Party can credibly suggest that the OFT must adopt those aspects of the Commission's penalties practice which are to that Party's advantage, whilst ignoring the other aspects of the Commission's practice which would be to its disadvantage. For example, none of the Parties has suggested that the OFT should adopt the same starting point as the Commission (effectively, up to 30 per cent of relevant turnover) or an 'entry fee' uplift of 15 to 25 percent of relevant turnover for serious infringements such as price fixing or bid rigging. Indeed, if the OFT were to recalculate its penalties on the basis of the Commission's guidance then many of the Parties would face higher penalties than those being imposed by the OFT in this Decision.

Previous OFT decisions

- VI.11. A number of the Parties have pointed to alleged inconsistencies between the OFT's approach to the calculation of the penalties in this case and the approach it has adopted in previous cases.⁸³⁷⁷ Provided the penalties it imposes in a particular case are within the range of penalties permitted by section 36(8) of the Act and the 2000 Order (as amended by the 2004 Order) and the OFT has had regard to its Penalty Guidance under section 38 of the Act, the OFT has a margin of appreciation when determining the appropriate amount of a penalty under the Act.⁸³⁷⁸ Moreover, each case is specific to its own facts and circumstances and it cannot be assumed that the level of penalty appropriate for a particular party in one case (or the manner in which the Penalties Guidance has been applied) will necessarily be the same in respect of another party in another case. Finally, the OFT does not accept that it is in any event bound by its decisions in relation to the calculation of penalties in previous cases. Rather, the OFT considers that, subject to the above, it is free to adapt its policy as appropriate having regard to all relevant circumstances and its overall policy objectives on financial penalties, as set out in its Penalty Guidance.⁸³⁷⁹

Separate penalty per Infringement

- VI.12. As discussed in the Statement, the OFT considers that it is appropriate in this case to treat each Infringement separately and is therefore imposing a separate financial penalty in respect of each Infringement committed by each undertaking, up to a maximum of three Infringements. The OFT is therefore imposing between one and three financial penalties on each Party, according to the number of Infringements in which the OFT finds that Party has been involved as set out in this Decision.

⁸³⁷⁷ For example, written representations of J Guest, 27 June 2008, paragraph 105; written representations of Harlow & Milner, 27 June 2008 (as amended 6 January 2009), paragraph 5.7; and written representations of GMI, 26 June 2008, paragraphs 79 to 81.

⁸³⁷⁹ Joined cases 100/80 to 103/80 Musique Diffusion Francaise and others v European Commission ('Pioneer') [1983] ECR 1825, at paragraphs 101 to 110; Joined cases C-189/02P, C-202/02P, C-205/02P to C-208/02P and C-213/02P Dansk Romindustri A/S and others v European Commission [2005] ECR I-5425, at paragraph 169.

- VI.13. Around 20 of the Parties suggested in their responses to the Statement, that the imposition of three financial penalties is arbitrary, resulting as it does from the OFT's selection of three Infringements per non-leniency Party, and that it will lead to financial penalties that are three times the amount they would have been if the OFT had treated each Party's Infringements as one single overall infringement.⁸³⁸⁰ Some Parties noted⁸³⁸¹ that the OFT had applied a single financial penalty per party in each of the roofing cases.⁸³⁸² Several Parties submitted that, if the OFT imposes a separate penalty for each Infringement, then the aggregate penalty for three Infringements occurring in the same market and in the same year should be no greater than it would have been had the Parties entered into an overall bid rigging scheme for every tender in that market in that year.⁸³⁸³ Two Parties submitted that the OFT should take into account the cumulative impact of three penalties when setting the starting point.⁸³⁸⁴
- VI.14. The OFT does not consider it appropriate to treat the Infringements in this case as one single overall infringement, or to lower the starting point to take into account the cumulative impact of three penalties, for a number of reasons.
- VI.15. First, there is no evidence that there was one overall bid rigging scheme by which the Parties engaged in market allocation, deciding between them who was going to win each particular tender. Indeed, for many Parties, their Infringements involved different counterparties, making it wholly artificial to treat these as a single Infringement.
- VI.16. Secondly, it cannot in any event be assumed, as the Parties' representations imply, that the penalty for a single overall bid rigging scheme would have been the same as or lower than the penalties being imposed in this case. As noted in paragraphs VI.103 and VI.233 below, had there been sufficient evidence of an overall scheme that was centrally controlled and orchestrated by the participants with contracts allocated between members of the cartel over a period of time and/or with the explicit intention of inflating the level of the winning bids, this would have constituted one of the most serious examples of collusive tendering and would almost certainly have warranted higher penalties than are being imposed in this case. It may also have affected wider relevant markets.
- VI.17. Thirdly, where a Party has been found to have participated in more than one Infringement, the OFT considers it appropriate that it should face more than one penalty. As provided for in the Act and as stated in paragraph VI.4 above, the OFT may require an undertaking to pay a financial penalty in respect of any infringement of the Act. Some Parties are facing penalties for only one Infringement and the OFT does not consider it appropriate that these Parties should face the same level of penalty as those Parties found to have committed more than one Infringement of the Act.

- VI.18. Fourthly, as noted in paragraph II.1460 above the OFT had initial evidence of more infringements for each of the Parties – in some cases considerably more – and decided not to pursue these additional suspected infringements primarily in order to ensure that its resources were targeted as effectively as possible, and that it could proceed to an infringement decision in as short a time as possible so that undertakings are appropriately deterred from bid rigging activities in the future. Thus many of the Parties could have faced much higher financial penalties than those being imposed by the OFT.
- VI.19. Fifthly, the Infringements for many of the Parties occurred in different markets and it would be artificial to attempt to impose a single overall penalty where a number of different markets had been affected or had had the capacity to be affected by such Infringements. Similarly, other relevant factors, such as director involvement, instigation/coercion and acceptance of the OFT's Fast Track Offer, often varied between Infringements as well as between Parties.
- VI.20. Finally, if the OFT were to treat the Infringements as one single overall infringement, one logical corollary would be that there would be one product and geographic market affected by that Infringement, namely construction in England, rather than the many separate product and geographic markets found by the OFT in this Decision. Not only would this be contrary to the OFT's actual findings, it would also result in a much higher penalty at step 1 for all of the Parties, who without exception operated in more than one of the product and geographic markets found by the OFT. In turn, for many of the Parties this would have led to higher overall penalties.
- VI.21. Notwithstanding the above, however, the OFT has ensured that the penalties imposed in this Decision are fair and proportionate taking into account all of the factors in this case, including the fact that penalties are being imposed for a maximum of three Infringements per Party. For example:
- this is one of the factors taken into account by the OFT when setting the level of the Minimum Deterrence Threshold at a level sufficient to achieve deterrence – see paragraph VI.223 below; and
 - where a Party has more than one Infringement in this Decision that occurred in the same relevant market, the OFT has considered whether a reduction is required at step 3 in order to ensure that the cumulative impact of the aggregate penalty is not excessive by virtue of the Party conducting a large proportion of its business in that relevant market during the financial year prior to the OFT's decision – see paragraphs VI.271 to VI.273 below.
- VI.22. As noted in paragraphs IV.120 to IV.121 above, certain Infringements involved tender processes where more than two bidders were involved, and there may have been two or more separate agreements or concerted practices in relation to that tender. As the OFT is imposing a maximum of three financial penalties on each Party, any Party involved in more than one agreement or concerted practice for a given tender will nonetheless receive only one financial penalty for its conduct in respect of that tender.

VI.23. Bullock and Pearce Group stated that their respective penalties should reflect the fact that they are being held liable for only one Infringement, whereas other Parties are being held liable for three.⁸³⁸⁵ As each Infringement is being treated separately and the OFT is imposing a separate penalty for each, these Parties' involvement in one Infringement will be reflected in the fact they are subject to only one penalty, as opposed to three. The OFT does not consider that a reduction in penalty should also be applied in these circumstances.

No penalty/nominal penalty

VI.24. Several Parties⁸³⁸⁶ submitted (by reference to a number of European cases) that the Commission's practice was to not impose a fine in certain circumstances, or to impose only a nominal fine in other circumstances. They argued that the OFT should adopt the same approach under section 60 of the Act and either impose no penalty at all, or only a nominal penalty, in this case. For the reasons set out in paragraphs VI.7 to VI.10 above, the OFT does not accept that it is obliged to adopt the Commission's practice on penalties.⁸³⁸⁷ Moreover, the OFT notes that the circumstances in which the Commission would not impose a fine are very limited.

VI.25. A few Parties⁸³⁸⁸ also submitted that the OFT was not entitled to impose a penalty due to the lack of legal certainty surrounding their conduct.⁸³⁸⁹ These Parties stated that the law in relation to what they termed 'simple' cover pricing was unclear at the time of the relevant Infringements, and that 'simple' cover pricing was not clearly and ascertainably punishable at that time. The OFT has considered the arguments in relation to 'simple' cover pricing at paragraphs III.159 to III.161 of the Legal Background section and does not repeat them again here. The OFT does not accept that there was any lack of clarity regarding the application of the Chapter I prohibition to the Parties' conduct as described in this decision and considers that each of the Parties should have been aware that its conduct had the object or effect of preventing, restricting or distorting competition (see paragraphs VI.38 to VI.51 below). A prior OFT or Commission decision that a particular type of conduct infringes the Act is not a pre-condition for the OFT to find an undertaking liable or to impose a penalty where its conduct is found to have infringed the Chapter I prohibition.

VI.26. A number of Parties⁸³⁹⁰ also submitted that, in setting penalties in this case, the OFT should take into account the fact that their Infringements occurred prior to the OFT's previous decisions in relation to cover pricing. This issue is discussed in relation to steps 1 and 3 of the penalty calculation, at paragraphs VI.173 and VI.251 below.

⁸³⁸⁵ Written representations of Bullock, 26 June 2008, paragraph 6.16.37; and written representations of Pearce Group, 1 June 2009, paragraph 5.29.

⁸³⁸⁷ Notwithstanding this, the OFT has reduced the penalty for one Party to a nominal penalty in view of its financial hardship – see penalty table for Harper plc below.

⁸³⁸⁸ For example, written representations of Caddick, 24 June 2008, section 5; written representations of Stainforth, 27 June 2008, paragraphs 4.25 to 4.28.

⁸³⁹⁰ For example, written representations of Admiral, 26 June 2008, paragraph 23.4.

Statutory cap on penalties

VI.27. No penalty which has been fixed by the OFT may exceed 10 per cent of the turnover of the undertaking calculated in accordance with the provisions of the 2000 Order, as amended by the 2004 Order.⁸³⁹¹ This is discussed further in general terms at paragraphs VI.369 to VI.373 below, and in the check of each individual financial penalty against the statutory cap, in each Party's individual financial penalty calculations below.

Limitation period

VI.28. Some Parties, for example Bullock and Galliford Try, noted that the Commission has a five year limitation period within which it must bring action against infringements of Article 81 and Article 82, and suggested that by virtue of section 60 of the Act, the OFT should be subject to the same limitation period in relation to the older Infringements in this Decision.⁸³⁹²

VI.29. The limitation period under Regulation 1/2003 (Art 25(1)(b)) is expressed to apply to the Commission's fining powers under Articles 23 and 24 of that Regulation. There is no equivalent limitation period expressed to apply to the OFT's power to require the payment of a penalty under section 36 of the Act. The OFT therefore considers this to be a 'relevant difference' for the purpose of section 60(1) (see paragraphs VI.7 to VI.10 above) and does not consider that its ability to require the payment of penalties for infringements of the Act is subject to a five year limitation period.

VI.30. Furthermore, the OFT does not accept that there has been any undue delay in its conduct of the investigation. The conduct that is the subject of this decision came to light in 2004 following a report from the Queen's Medical Centre in Nottingham and the investigation has proceeded at an appropriate pace since the conduct was brought to the OFT's attention. This is particularly so, given the number of Parties involved in this case and the unprecedented number of tenders in respect of which the OFT uncovered evidence of an infringement and the large number of undertakings involved. Moreover, there is no evidence to suggest that any of the Parties suffered harm as a result of the time taken to investigate the matter.

Small agreements

VI.31. Section 39(3) of the Act provides that a person is immune from the effect of section 36(1) if he is 'party to a "small agreement"'. 'Small agreement' is defined, pursuant to section 39(1) and the Competition Act 1998 (Small Agreements and Conduct of Minor Significance) Regulations 2000⁸³⁹³, as an agreement between undertakings, the combined applicable turnover of which for the business year ending in the calendar year preceding the one during which the infringement occurred, does not exceed £20 million.

VI.32. However, by virtue of section 39(1)(b), price fixing agreements⁸³⁹⁴ are not 'small agreements' for the purposes of the Act. A few Parties⁸³⁹⁵ argued that the Infringements should constitute 'small agreements' because they are not price fixing agreements and/or concerted practices. The OFT does not accept these arguments. Section 39(9) of the Act defines a price fixing agreement as 'an agreement which has as its object or effect, or one of its objects or effects, restricting the freedom of a party to the agreement to determine the price to be charged (otherwise than as between that party and another party to the agreement) for the product, service or other matter to which the agreement relates'.

⁸³⁹¹ Section 36(8) of the Act.

⁸³⁹² Written representations of Bullock, 26 June 2008, paragraphs 7.31 to 7.35; and written representations of Galliford Try, 27 June 2008, paragraphs 5.2 to 5.4.

⁸³⁹⁴ Which includes concerted practices: section 2(5) of the Act..

- VI.33. By giving a cover price, each of the relevant Parties to the Infringements was restricting the freedom of the recipient of the cover price to determine its own bid for the tender, since the joint intention of the Parties was that the recipient of the cover price would bid at or around the level of the cover price. The conduct of the recipient of the cover price was in fact clearly affected by receipt of that cover price – in most cases its bid was at or very close to the cover price given.
- VI.34. The OFT notes that the freedom of only one of the Parties to the agreement need be restricted. The OFT nonetheless considers that each of the relevant Parties to the Infringements was also restricting the freedom of the giver of the cover price, since the joint intention of the Parties was that the giver of the cover price would bid at a level below the cover price.
- VI.35. All of the cover pricing Infringements set out in this Decision are therefore price fixing agreements within the meaning of section 39(1)(b).
- VI.36. However, since none of the Infringements in this Decision involving compensation payments without cover pricing is capable of constituting a 'small agreement' due to the combined turnover of the relevant Parties, the OFT does not need to consider the applicability of section 39(9) to these Infringements.
- VI.37. Accordingly, none of the Parties will benefit from immunity from penalties under section 39(3) (see also paragraphs III.119 to III.124 above on price fixing in the Legal Background section).

Intention/negligence

- VI.38. The OFT may impose a penalty on an undertaking which has infringed the Chapter I prohibition only if it is satisfied that the infringement has been committed intentionally or negligently⁸³⁹⁶, although the OFT is not obliged to specify whether it considers the infringement to be intentional or merely negligent. The CAT has stated that:⁸³⁹⁷

'...an infringement is committed intentionally for the purposes of the Act if the undertaking must have been aware that its conduct was of such a nature as to encourage a restriction or distortion of competition.'

⁸³⁹⁵ For example, written representations of Bodill, 26 June 2008, paragraph 4; written representations of Milward, 26 June 2008, paragraphs 7.1 to 7.8; and written representations of Thomas Long, 26 June 2008, paragraph 4.

⁸³⁹⁶ Section 36(3) of the Act.

- VI.39. The OFT considers that serious infringements of the Chapter I prohibition, which have as their object the restriction of competition, such as price fixing or bid rigging, are likely to have been, by their very nature, committed intentionally.⁸³⁹⁸ Ignorance or a mistake of law is no bar to a finding of intentional infringement under the Act.
- VI.40. A few Parties⁸³⁹⁹ submitted that the Infringements in which they were involved were not anti-competitive by object, or were not price fixing arrangements, and hence the conclusion in the preceding paragraph is not applicable. For the reasons set out in paragraphs III.97 to III.135 and III.143 to III.157 of the Legal Background section, the OFT does not accept the premise of these representations.
- VI.41. In the present case, the OFT considers that the Parties must have been aware that one of the primary purposes of conducting a tendering process is to ensure competition in the award of contracts, or at the very least they ought to have been. Indeed, the OFT notes that a party organising a tender procedure will often require the parties invited to tender to complete a detailed non-collusion statement expressly confirming that the tender submitted is a competitive offer and that there have been no undue contacts with any competing company in connection with the tender offer (see examples listed in the General comments on cover pricing section, at paragraph IV.119 above). For the avoidance of doubt, however, the OFT does not consider that it is necessary to show that a party completed such a non-collusion statement for the OFT to find that it infringed the Chapter I prohibition intentionally (or indeed negligently).
- VI.42. A number of Parties stated in their responses to the Statement that they were neither intentional nor negligent in committing the Infringements.⁸⁴⁰⁰ For example, several Parties stated that they could not have known until March 2004, when the OFT issued its decision in *West Midlands Flat Roofing*⁸⁴⁰¹, that cover pricing was anti-competitive.⁸⁴⁰² Bullock highlighted that its Infringement occurred only a few months after the entry into force of the Act.⁸⁴⁰³ Greswolde noted that the whole industry, including its experts (citing the textbook referred to in paragraph IV.19 above), considered cover pricing to be a legitimate practice.⁸⁴⁰⁴ Lotus stated that even the legal community was unaware that ⁸³⁹⁸ See OFT 407, Enforcement (December 2004) at paragraphs 5.9 to 5.11. In this regard the OFT also notes that price fixing falls within the OECD (Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development) definition of 'hardcore cartels' – see the Penalty Guidance, at paragraph 1.4, footnote 8.

Similar points were made by Caddick, which suggested that December 2005 was the salient date (written representations of Caddick, 24 June 2008, paragraph 10.6) and by Durkan, which suggested that February 2006 was the salient date (written representations of Durkan, 27 June 2008, paragraph 168).

cover pricing was illegal until the OFT's first roofing decision.⁸⁴⁰⁵ Greswolde stated that West Midlands Flat Roofing is materially different from this case, so it is not an appropriate benchmark for determining whether the Infringements had been committed intentionally or negligently.⁸⁴⁰⁶ Similarly, Caddick submitted that there is still uncertainty as to whether 'simple' cover pricing is a hardcore restriction.⁸⁴⁰⁷ Other Parties emphasised that their conduct was not intentional.⁸⁴⁰⁸

- VI.43. Wright (Hull) submitted that negligence should be measured by reference to what the reasonable man would have done; highlighting the fact that cover pricing was widespread in the construction industry, and asserting that no one in the industry knew it to be illegal.⁸⁴⁰⁹
- VI.44. The OFT does not accept these arguments. According to the CAT in Napp, an infringement is committed intentionally if the undertaking must have known that its conduct would result in a restriction or distortion of competition and is committed negligently if it ought to have done so.⁸⁴¹⁰ The OFT considers that, by the very nature of the agreements and/or concerted practices involving collusive tendering, each of the Parties must have been aware that the agreements and/or concerted practices in which they participated had the object of preventing, restricting or distorting competition and that the Infringements were therefore committed intentionally. Examined objectively, in each cover pricing Infringement one Party provided the other(s) with prices which they could use to ensure that they did not win the contract and which, although bogus, would appear to the client to be genuine. To the extent that any of the Parties may genuinely have been unaware of the anti-competitive nature of their conduct, however, the OFT considers that the Parties at the very least ought to have realised that the provision of prices in this way would constitute a restriction or distortion of competition and that the Infringements were, therefore, committed negligently. Moreover, it is not necessary for the OFT to have made a decision that a particular action constitutes a breach of the law, for a party or its legal advisers to make its own assessment of the anti-competitive consequences of that action.
- VI.45. Furthermore, it is apparent from the representations of certain Parties that they understood cover pricing to be anti-competitive and had instructed staff not to engage in this conduct. For example, Lindum stated that it had '*...explained the effects of the Competition Act when it came into force and there was no doubt on the part of the estimators that cover pricing breached the competition rules.' (emphasis added).⁸⁴¹¹ If certain Parties were in no doubt that cover pricing was anti-competitive, then the OFT considers that other Parties must have been at least negligent in their failure also to recognise this.

⁸⁴⁰⁵ Written representations of Lotus, 26 June 2008, paragraph 5.20. See also, for example, written representations of Bullock, 26 June 2008, paragraph 5.16; written representations of Derwent Valley, 26 June 2008, paragraph 3.11.

⁸⁴¹⁰ Napp Pharmaceutical Holdings v Director General of Fair Trading [2002] CAT 1, at paragraph 457.

⁸⁴¹¹ Written representations of Lindum, 27 June 2008, paragraph 62.

- VI.46. The OFT also does not accept submissions that small companies without in-house counsel could not have been expected to keep up to date with changes in legislation, or to have known that cover pricing was illegal, or that the Act was not as widely advertised as it should have been.⁸⁴¹² Ignorance of the law is irrelevant to the assessment of intent or negligence (see paragraph VI.39 above), and the OFT is not obliged to show that an undertaking knew that its conduct infringed the Act.⁸⁴¹³
- VI.47. Pearce stated in its response to the Statement that the OFT is required to examine the actual intention of the Parties.⁸⁴¹⁴ It referred to the decision of the Court of Appeal in *Napp*⁸⁴¹⁵, and submitted that it is not sufficient for the OFT to deduce intent from the alleged anti-competitive object or effect of the agreement.⁸⁴¹⁶ Pearce stated that the OFT is entitled to infer intent where a company realises that it is for all practical purposes inevitable that its actions will result in a restriction of competition, but the OFT still needs to demonstrate that the company realised or ought to have realised that this was the case. Pearce stated that it is far from clear that giving or seeking a cover price a few hours before the tender deadline would have any effect on competition.
- VI.48. In response, the OFT notes first that provided the cover price is given prior to the tender deadline, the arrangement has the potential to prevent, restrict or distort competition for the reasons stated in paragraphs III.97 to III.106 of the Legal Background section.
- VI.49. Secondly, the OFT notes that the Court of Appeal was not considering the substance of the case but whether the party had leave to appeal (which was refused). The Court of Appeal noted only that the CAT had properly considered the intention of the parties and had not erred in its approach. In its own judgment, the CAT stated that 'While in some cases the undertaking's intention will be confirmed by internal documents, in our judgment, and in the absence of any evidence to the contrary, the fact that certain consequences are plainly foreseeable is an element from which the requisite intention may be inferred'.⁸⁴¹⁷ In the present case, the OFT considers that it was plainly foreseeable that the giving of a cover price to a competitor to use as its bogus bid for the contract had the potential to prevent, restrict or distort competition. There is nothing in the Court of Appeal's judgment in Napp which the OFT considers should lead it to adopt a different approach from that described above, or to reach a different conclusion on the facts.
- VI.50. A few Parties⁸⁴¹⁸ submitted that the OFT should conduct an individual appraisal of whether each Party had the requisite intent or negligence, rather than a single appraisal for all Parties. Whilst the OFT will have regard to any relevant circumstance or factor which suggests that a particular Party did not commit an Infringement negligently or intentionally, this does not detract from the principle described in the preceding paragraphs. Moreover, the OFT does not consider that there are any such circumstances or factors in this case that would lead it to conclude that any Party lacked the requisite intent or negligence in this case. The OFT's view is unaffected by any differences in the nature of the Infringements.⁸⁴¹⁹

- VI.51. The OFT is therefore satisfied that each of the Parties intentionally or at the very least negligently infringed the Chapter I prohibition. Notwithstanding this, the OFT has considered the background to the Infringements cited by the Parties as discussed in the foregoing paragraphs and in paragraphs IV.19 to IV.29 of the General section on cover pricing, and has taken this into account when assessing the seriousness of the conduct at step 1 of the penalty calculation – see paragraphs VI.173 to VI.174 below.

Calculation of penalties

- VI.52. In accordance with section 38(8) of the Act, the OFT must have regard to the guidance on penalties issued under section 38(1) of the Act, for the time being in force, when setting the amount of the penalty.⁸⁴²⁰ The Penalty Guidance sets out five steps for determining the penalty.

Turnover of the undertaking

- VI.53. For the purpose of the penalty calculation, the OFT considers that the relevant turnover or total turnover as applicable, is the turnover of the undertaking that comprises the relevant single economic entity, as defined in paragraph I.1 of the Introduction and as described in more detail in the relevant paragraphs of the Parties section.
- VI.54. In many cases, the relevant undertaking comprises several legal entities within the same corporate group (or who were within the same corporate group at the time of the Infringement(s)). In such cases, the OFT is basing its penalty calculations on the consolidated turnover of the parent company⁸⁴²¹, to whom this Decision is addressed, that ultimately controls the legal entity directly involved in the Infringements (the Participant Company, to whom this Decision is also addressed). For these purposes, the 'consolidated turnover' of the parent company includes the turnover of all wholly and majority owned subsidiaries over which the parent exercises control, including but not limited to the turnover of the Participant Company and its wholly/majority owned subsidiaries.
- VI.55. Some Parties suggested that it would be 'wholly unjust'⁸⁴²² for the penalty to be based on consolidated turnover where the relevant undertaking at the time of the Infringement comprised several legal entities within the same corporate group, some of which did not participate in the Infringement.⁸⁴²³

⁸⁴¹⁹ For example, written representations of Bullock, 26 June 2008, paragraphs 5.12 to 5.13; written representations of Greswolde, 27 June 2008, paragraphs 7.7 to 7.11; and written representations of Lotus, 26 June 2008, paragraphs 5.11 to 5.12.

⁸⁴²⁰ OFT 423 OFT's Guidance as to the appropriate amount of a Penalty (December 2004).

⁸⁴²¹ Or, in the case of Adam Eastwood, the parent registered charity.

⁸⁴²² Written representations of Crown Point, 27 June 2008, paragraph 6.16.

⁸⁴²³ For example, written representations of McGinley Holdings, 27 June 2008, paragraph 40.2.

- VI.56. The OFT considers that it is fair and appropriate to calculate penalties on the basis of the consolidated turnover of the parent in the present case since this legal entity exercised decisive influence over the Participant Company at the time of the Infringement, and was itself a part of the undertaking responsible for the Infringement. Its joint and several liability, and the calculation of penalties by reference to its turnover, is therefore a result of its direct responsibility for the Infringement.
- VI.57. Other Parties submitted that the OFT should only take into account consolidated turnover in the construction industry and not in relation to their other activities.⁸⁴²⁴ This issue does not arise at step 1, as only consolidated turnover in the relevant market will be captured (hence, the turnover captured at step 1 will be less than that suggested by the Parties). The need to take into account total consolidated turnover at step 3, rather than confining this to consolidated turnover derived in the construction industry, is addressed at paragraphs VI.237 to VI.239 below.
- VI.58. Where the corporate group structure has changed such that the legal entity that ultimately controlled the Participant Company at the time of the Infringements no longer exercises such control, the OFT is calculating the financial penalty on the basis of the consolidated turnover of the group as structured at the time of the Infringements. The OFT is therefore basing its calculation on the consolidated turnover of both (i) the Participant Company together with its current wholly/majority owned subsidiaries and (ii) the former parent company that ultimately controlled the Participant Company at the time of the Infringements together with its current wholly/majority owned subsidiaries; both the Participant Company and the former parent being addressees of this Decision.
- VI.59. Bullock stated that any penalty imposed on it would be met by its new parent (either directly or indirectly), which is unfair as the new parent company had no control over Bullock at the time of its Infringement.⁸⁴²⁵ Pearce Group made similar representations and stated that its new parent company will be unfairly penalised for activities in which it was not involved and from which it had derived no benefit.⁸⁴²⁶ Conversely, Durkan Holdings⁸⁴²⁷ submitted that the OFT should exercise its discretion not to sanction it, even if the OFT determines that it formed part of the same undertaking as its former subsidiary, Durkan, at the time of Durkan's Infringements.
- VI.60. Pearce Group also referred to the practical difficulties of holding a former parent and subsidiary jointly and severally liable, as it is unclear how the penalty should be apportioned between the now separate legal entities. Pearce Group submitted that the OFT should instead hold each of the Participant Company and its former parent solely liable for a separate stated penalty.⁸⁴²⁸ Pearce Group also stated that it was unaware of any EC or UK precedent for the OFT's proposed approach.⁸⁴²⁹

- VI.61. Where the OFT concludes that a Participant Company and its former parent company constituted a single economic entity at the time of the Infringement, the OFT considers that it is most appropriate in the interests of effective sanctioning and deterrence to hold both entities jointly and severally liable, and to base any penalty on the consolidated turnover of the entities (that is, the Participant Company and the parent company) comprising the undertaking as it was structured at the time of the Infringement. This ensures that the Participant Company is properly sanctioned for its direct participation in the Infringement. It also recognises the failure of the former parent to prevent the Participant Company (over which it exercised decisive influence) from acting in contravention of the Chapter I prohibition, and reflects the fact that the parent was itself part of the undertaking responsible for the Infringement. It acts as a deterrent to both legal entities, and ensures that parent companies cannot escape liability for competition law breaches by disposing of their infringing subsidiaries. In response to the Parties' specific arguments, the OFT is holding Bullock and Pearce/Pearce Group liable for Infringements in which they directly participated, and does not accept that this is in any sense unfair. The OFT also considers it appropriate to sanction Durkan Holdings for the reasons of effective sanctioning and deterrence described in this paragraph (this is particularly relevant in the case of Durkan Holdings, as two of its subsidiaries - Durkan and Durkan Limited - participated in Infringements).
- VI.62. Where a Participant Company and its former parent are being held jointly and severally liable for a penalty, any attribution or division of the penalty is a matter between them and does not concern the OFT (indeed, the OFT notes that this may be determined in part by the terms of the agreement for the sale of the Participant Company, including any warranties, indemnities and related limitations periods contained therein). The OFT also notes that joint and several liability is a concept which operates in tort, contract and other spheres of law, frequently with the effect of making independent legal entities jointly and severally liable for the same damage or debt. The OFT therefore does not consider it a bar to joint and several liability that a Participant Company and its parent company at the time of an Infringement no longer form part of the same corporate group. Notwithstanding the above, where the penalty for an undertaking exceeds 10 per cent of the total turnover of either the Participant Company or its former parent in the most recent business year preceding the Decision, the OFT is limiting the extent of each company's liability for that penalty to 10 per cent of the total turnover of each (see paragraph VI.381 below).
- VI.63. Some Parties, for example Francis, pointed out that the consolidated turnover of the current or former parent would include 'innocent' acquisitions that had been made since the time of the Infringement and suggested that this would have a disproportionate effect on the penalty.⁸⁴³⁰
- VI.64. The OFT notes that while consolidated turnover may have increased due to acquisitions since the date of the Infringement, it may equally have reduced due to disposals. In order to achieve adequate deterrence, the OFT considers it appropriate for a penalty to reflect the size of the undertaking on which it is imposed, for which current turnover is used as a proxy. In this respect, there is no basis for differentiating between acquisitions/disposals and 'organic' growth/decline.

⁸⁴²⁹ Written representations of Pearce Group, 1 June 2009, paragraph 5.7.

⁸⁴³⁰ Written representations of Francis, 2 July 2008, paragraphs 125 to 130.

- VI.65. Crest Nicholson stated in its response that, having disposed of its subsidiary, its own turnover is irrelevant since it is no longer active in the relevant markets.⁸⁴³¹ The OFT considers this fact to be irrelevant as it will still be appropriate to deter Crest Nicholson and others from engaging in anti-competitive conduct in other markets. Any reduction in relevant turnover due to cessation of activity in a market will be reflected in a reduction of the penalty at step 1 of the calculation given that this is based on the combined consolidated relevant turnover of the infringing subsidiary and its former parent.
- VI.66. Bullock pointed out in its written representations⁸⁴³² that the wording used by the OFT in paragraph VI.18 of the Statement referred to 'the parent company ... that ultimately controls the legal entity directly involved in the Alleged Infringements ...' (emphasis added) and noted that it was no longer controlled by Renew. However, the OFT points to the subsequent paragraph VI.19 of the Statement which dealt with Bullock's situation where the corporate group structure has changed and referred to 'the former parent company that ultimately controlled the Participant Company at the time of the Alleged Infringements' (emphasis added).
- VI.67. Bullock and Pearce Group also made representations submitting that the OFT should not base any financial penalty on the combined consolidated turnover of both themselves and their respective former parents. Bullock stated that, when it was acquired from Renew there was an injection of capital from Bullock's new parent DTB (representing the purchase price of Bullock) that was employed to increase Renew's turnover in subsequent years, which will result in the OFT counting the same turnover twice in its penalty calculations. Bullock also stated that post-acquisition it had little control over Renew's investment decisions and therefore its financial penalty would depend on the commercial success of Renew.⁸⁴³³ Pearce Group⁸⁴³⁴ stated that the resulting penalty based on consolidated turnover will be inappropriate and out of proportion to its total turnover and will reflect the structure and turnover of two, now unrelated, legal entities. It also stated that taking the turnover of a parent company into account in calculating a fine is inconsistent with the OFT's decisional practice.
- VI.68. Proceeds from the sale of shares in a subsidiary constitute capital proceeds, rather than turnover. Whilst this capital could be employed with the aim of directly increasing turnover, for example through investment in the business, it could equally be employed in a variety of other ways, such as to reduce debt or pay dividends to equity shareholders. The OFT therefore does not consider that it is counting the same turnover twice in its penalty calculations for Bullock.
- VI.69. Whilst the calculation of Bullock's and Pearce's/Pearce Group's penalties will partially be based on the commercial success of their former parents through the use of consolidated turnover, as noted above, their own liability will be limited to an amount calculated by reference to their own total turnover (see paragraph VI.381 below). This will ensure that the liability of Bullock and Pearce/Pearce Group does not exceed the statutory maximum having regard to their current turnover.

Turnover vs Profit

- VI.70. Some Parties suggested that the OFT should base its financial penalties on profit rather than turnover, noting that the Parties in this investigation operate in a high turnover / low margin business where much of the work is passed through to subcontractors with the main contractor taking a small portion of the profit for itself for overseeing the operation of the contract.⁸⁴³⁵ They stated that as a result, turnover is no indication of financial strength. Some Parties⁸⁴³⁶ cited a recent article by Sir Jeremy Lever, in which he criticised the Commission's reliance on turnover for its penalty calculations, stating that turnover is no indication of financial strength or ability to pay.⁸⁴³⁷ Other Parties stated that, if turnover is used, the OFT should have regard to the fact that penalties will be more onerous than for other industries, or will be disproportionate overall.⁸⁴³⁸
- VI.71. In response, the OFT notes that its Penalty Guidance provides for the imposition of penalties based on turnover. As noted in paragraph VI.4 above, the OFT is required to have regard to this Penalty Guidance when setting the amount of the penalty, by virtue of primary legislation, and may depart from this guidance only when there is good reason to do so. Likewise, the statutory cap on penalties, which is also derived from primary legislation, is also based on turnover. The OFT has not been provided with a compelling reason to depart from a turnover-based approach in this case.
- VI.72. Secondly, a calculation based on relevant turnover reflects the size of the affected market. This means that it is capable of also reflecting the impact of the Infringement on competitors, third parties and consumers more effectively than an undertaking-specific measure such as profitability.
- VI.73. Thirdly, turnover is a simple measure that is well-known both to the OFT and to business. It is easily ascertained from corporate accounts and is less susceptible to subjective interpretation or manipulation than measures such as profitability or 'value added' turnover.
- VI.74. Fourthly, turnover is used as the basis for calculating financial penalties in most, if not all, major jurisdictions, including the EC. Whilst the OFT does not consider that it is obliged to follow the Commission's penalties practice (see paragraphs VI.7 to VI.10 above), it notes that the CFI has recently confirmed that turnover is the appropriate measure for the Commission to use as the basis for its penalties calculations.⁸⁴³⁹ The CFI also concluded in the same case that the Commission was not required to discount certain input costs from an undertaking's turnover when calculating penalties.

⁸⁴³⁶ For example, written representations of Hall, 25 June 2008, paragraph 84; written representations of Irwins and Jack Lunn, 27 June 2008, paragraph 78; and written representations of York House, 27 June 2008, paragraph 74.

⁸⁴³⁹ Case T-122/04 Industrial Copper Tubes, judgment of 6 May 2009 (not yet reported).

- VI.75. Finally, with respect to the relationship with subcontractors' turnover, the OFT considers that there is little to distinguish the construction industry in this respect from many other industries where work is passed on to subcontractors, or from cartels in other industries that operate at a particular level of the distribution chain (e.g. at the retail level), where the parties' turnover figures reflect the cost price of goods purchased from undertakings operating at another level of the distribution chain (e.g. from manufacturers or wholesalers).
- VI.76. In terms of overall proportionality, in any specific case where a penalty calculated by reference to turnover is disproportionately high, an adjustment may be made at step 3.
- VI.77. R Durnnell stated that its turnover includes profits on which it has been taxed and, if the OFT's penalties are not tax deductible, it will effectively have been subject to double-taxation.⁸⁴⁴⁰ Penalties imposed by the OFT under the Act are not a form of 'taxation', but are imposed as a consequence of R Durnnell having engaged in illegal conduct. For the reasons set out above, the OFT considers that turnover is the appropriate basis for imposing financial penalties under the Act. The fact that the turnover may include profits on which the undertaking has been taxed does not alter the OFT's conclusion.

Step 1 – calculation of the starting point

- VI.78. The starting point for determining the level of penalty is calculated having regard to the seriousness of the infringement and the relevant turnover of the undertaking.⁸⁴⁴¹ The 'relevant turnover' is the turnover of the undertaking in the relevant product market and relevant geographic market affected by the Infringement in the last business year (see paragraphs II.1727 to II.1731 above in the Definition of the Markets section).⁸⁴⁴² The last business year is the business year preceding the date of the OFT's final decision.⁸⁴⁴³ This is consistent with the approach for calculating the maximum penalty under section 36(8) of the Act.⁸⁴⁴⁴ The starting point may be any amount up to a maximum of 10 per cent of each undertaking's relevant turnover.⁸⁴⁴⁵

Relevant turnover

- VI.79. Some Parties, for example Baggaley & Jenkins and Dukeries, suggested in their written representations that the starting point should be based on the amount of the winning tender, which they stated was the only way of obtaining a fair proxy for the possible impact or effect of the Infringement. Dukeries cited both *Parker Pen v Commission*⁸⁴⁴⁶, in which it was stressed that there was a need to have regard to the turnover to which the infringement relates, and the Commission's 2006 Fining Guidelines, which state that the basic amount of the ⁸⁴⁴² Penalty Guidance, at paragraph 2.7.

⁸⁴⁴³ While the OFT has made every effort to calculate penalties based on the latest possible turnover provided by the Parties, it has not been practicable to take account of turnover figures provided after 31 August 2009. Parties were informed by letter in June 2009 that the OFT would be unlikely to be able to take account of turnover figures received after the end of July 2009.

Commission's fine is determined as a proportion of the value of sales 'to which the infringement directly or indirectly relates'.⁸⁴⁴⁷

- VI.80. For the reasons set out in paragraphs VI.7 to VI.10, the OFT does not consider that it is obliged to follow the Commission's penalties practice. In any event, the OFT does not consider there to be a material difference between the Commission's practice and the OFT's own practice in this respect (as set out in paragraphs II.1600 to II.1602 in the Definition of the Markets section above). In effect, these Parties are arguing that the OFT's market definition should be no wider than the particular tender in question. The OFT does not accept this argument, however. The market definition adopted in this case is discussed in Section II above.
- VI.81. Propensity submitted that there was no market affected by one of its Infringements, and no relevant turnover, as the customer did not proceed with any of the tenders received, but instead re-tendered the project.⁸⁴⁴⁸ Paragraph III.114 of the Legal Background section describes why Propensity's conduct still amounts to an Infringement in these circumstances and hence why there was an affected market.

Business year

- VI.82. Many of the Parties claimed in their responses to the Statement that the OFT's selection of the business year preceding the date of the decision as the basis for relevant turnover is arbitrary.⁸⁴⁴⁹ A range of arguments were made in favour of using the year prior to the Infringement instead. Other Parties argued that the most rational approach at step 1 is to use turnover achieved in the business year during which the Infringement in question occurred.⁸⁴⁵⁰
- VI.83. Many Parties⁸⁴⁵¹ suggested in their written representations that the last business year prior to the Infringement is more logical at step 1 since this step of the penalty calculation is intended to reflect the effect or potential effect of the conduct on the relevant market. They stated that this step should represent the magnitude of the effect of the Infringement and the scale of the financial benefit accruing to the Party engaged in the Infringement. In the same way as the penalty at step 1 is derived from turnover only in the relevant market, it should they said be calculated on the basis of turnover in that market at the time the Infringement was committed. Greswolde noted that, unlike with a hardcore cartel lasting several years, each of the Infringements was discrete and its effects, if any, would have been felt only for a very short period of time, and it was therefore unfair for the OFT to take into account more recent turnover.

- VI.84. Several Parties, including Crest Nicholson, GMI, Greswolde, Harlow & Milner, Milward, Phoenix, Quarmby, Sol and Galliford Try, noted that the 2004 Order was concerned with amending the definition of the last business year at step 5 of the OFT's penalty calculation, as reflected by the Penalty Guidance⁸⁴⁵², and stated that it did not provide a basis for amending the OFT's approach to the last business year at step 1 of the penalty calculation. Sol, Crest Nicholson and others noted in addition that the Penalty Guidance explicitly states in relation to step 5 that the last business year is the year preceding the date of the OFT's final decision, whereas in relation to step 1 the Penalty Guidance is silent on the issue.⁸⁴⁵³
- VI.85. A number of Parties, including Balfour Beatty Group, noted that most of the Infringements were committed prior to the 2004 Order and therefore they had a legitimate expectation that the law applying to these Infringements would be the law that applied prior to the 2004 Order.⁸⁴⁵⁴ They noted that Article 7 of the ECHR states that a penalty should not be heavier than that applying at the time the offence was committed.⁸⁴⁵⁵
- VI.86. Several Parties, including Crest Nicholson, Harlow & Milner and Quarmby, submitted that all of the OFT's decisions on cartel activity in the roofing industry had used the year prior to infringement as last business year at step 1.⁸⁴⁵⁶ Kier noted that the OFT did not announce any change to its policy at step 1 and stated that it could not change its policy without informing people first.⁸⁴⁵⁷ Some Parties, for example Balfour Beatty Group and Loach, noted that the Infringements were generally committed prior to any change in OFT policy, therefore again the Parties had a legitimate expectation as to the method of penalty calculation applicable.⁸⁴⁵⁸
- VI.87. In response to this, the OFT would note that it is entirely within the OFT's discretion as to the precise method by which it calculates penalties in any particular case, providing it has regard to its Penalty Guidance, as noted in paragraph VI.52 above. In any event, all of the OFT's roofing decisions since 2005 have used the year prior to decision at step 1 (*North East Flat Roofing*⁸⁴⁵⁹, *Scottish Flat Roofing (I)*⁸⁴⁶⁰, *Scottish Flat Roofing (II)*⁸⁴⁶¹, and *Makers*⁸⁴⁶²).

- VI.88. A number of Parties, including B & A, Crest Nicholson and Galliford Try, noted that the year prior to the infringement is consistent with the practice of the Commission, and suggested that the OFT is obliged to follow this practice under section 60 of the Act.⁸⁴⁶³ The OFT does not accept this submission, for the reasons set out in paragraphs VI.7 to VI.10 above.
- VI.89. Some Parties, including Baggaley & Jenkins, Connaught, Henry Boot and Bluestone⁸⁴⁶⁴, informed the OFT that turnover had changed markedly in the years since the Infringements, mostly increasing, and stated that it would be unfair for the OFT to base step 1 of the penalty calculation on more recent turnover which they claimed had been obtained legitimately and reflected the genuine success of the undertakings concerned. They stated that the OFT's approach would disproportionately harm those companies whose turnover had grown most, and that these were likely to be the most efficient and competitive firms. They also noted that turnover was particularly high in 2007 in some of the regions covered by the Statement due to the flooding problems, and stated that profits will be unusually low in 2008/09 due to recession and a downturn in the housing market.
- VI.90. In response to these arguments, the OFT notes that by restricting step 1 of the penalty calculation to the relevant market the OFT is ensuring that there is a correlation between the penalty and the harm. This correlation is not damaged by using the year prior to the decision as the last business year. The OFT considers that by using the year prior to the decision, it is ensuring that the penalty takes full account of any benefits that may have accrued from the illegal activity. Using the year prior to the Infringement would not necessarily reflect the benefit that a company may have obtained from its cover pricing activities.
- VI.91. Pearce Group stated that, for Infringements which occurred before the 2004 Order, the OFT should adopt the same approach at step 1 and step 3 as at step 5; namely, to apply a dual approach to turnover so that either year before decision or year before infringement is used as a basis for calculation, whichever results in the lesser penalty, so as to avoid retroactivity of penalties.⁸⁴⁶⁵ The OFT considers, however, that in accordance with the Penalty Guidance it is appropriate to apply a dual approach only at step 5 to ensure the overall penalty imposed on an undertaking is not above the pre-May 2004 statutory cap. The OFT does not consider it appropriate to apply a dual approach at each step of its calculation.
- VI.92. A few Parties submitted that the OFT should not base its penalty calculations on a year with exceptionally high turnover⁸⁴⁶⁶, citing *Böel*⁸⁴⁶⁷ in support of their submissions. The OFT has considered the proportionality of the penalties imposed by this Decision, and has concluded that none of the penalties are disproportionate. As such, the OFT does not consider that the CFI's judgment in Boël can be construed as imposing any restriction on the year of turnover which the OFT may select as the basis of its penalty calculations. In any event, for the reasons set out in paragraphs VI.7 to VI.10 above, the OFT does not regard section 60 of the Act as applying to the mechanics of calculating penalties.

- VI.93. Furthermore, for the majority of Parties the turnover upon which the financial penalty is based, has been earned in the years 2008 and 2009 rather than in 2007.

Parties that did not trade in the business year preceding the decision

- VI.94. A number of Parties, including Corringway, Frudd, G Carter, Thorndyke and William Sapcote/Sapcote Holdings, did not trade in the business year preceding the date of the OFT's decision.
- VI.95. The statutory instrument which sets out the basis of calculation of turnover for the purposes of section 36(8) of the Act, the 2000 Order (as amended by the 2004 Order), defines 'business year' as 'a period of more than six months in respect of which an undertaking publishes accounts or, if no such accounts have been published for the period, prepares accounts'. Consistent with the position being adopted at step 5 of the penalty calculation (see paragraphs VI.374 to VI.375 below and the Penalty Guidance⁸⁴⁶⁸), where no accounts have been published or prepared in recent years the OFT is using at step 1 the turnover figures from the most recent period of more than six months in which they have been published or prepared.
- VI.96. Where figures have been published or prepared for a limited period in excess of six months, the 2000 Order (as amended by the 2004 Order) provides for pro-rating up to the full 12 month period: 'where a business year does not equal 12 months the applicable turnover shall be the amount which bears the same proportion to the applicable turnover during that business year as 12 months does to that period'. The OFT is therefore pro-rating figures up to the full 12 month period at step 1, where the most recent business year for the Parties in paragraph VI.97 below is less than a year but more than six months.
- VI.97. The effect of this on the relevant Parties' penalty calculations is discussed below in each of the affected Parties' individual penalty calculation sections.

Parties that were unable to provide any relevant turnover figures

- VI.98. Three Parties, Frudd, Thorndyke and William Sapcote/Sapcote Holdings, informed the OFT that all of their records had been destroyed or were impossible to access and that they were therefore unable to provide any relevant turnover figures as they were unable to ascertain what turnover they had generated in each of the relevant markets. The OFT is therefore using a proxy figure for these Parties' relevant turnover figures, which is based on the median percentage of total turnover represented by all of the Parties' relevant ⁸⁴⁶⁸ Penalty Guidance, at paragraph 2.17, 'The business year on the basis of which worldwide turnover is determined will be the one preceding the date on which the decision of the OFT is taken or, if figures are not available for that business year, the one immediately preceding it'.

turnover, for all Infringements (regardless of the market in which they occurred) where relevant turnover is more than nil. The OFT considers this to be a robust proxy that, in view of the number of Parties and Infringements involved, is relatively undisturbed by the particular market positions of other Parties. The proxy figure is 2.9 per cent and the OFT is applying this percentage to these Parties' most recent total turnover figures before applying the starting point set out in paragraph VI.168 below.

Parties that were unable to provide any relevant turnover figures for their most recent business year, but have provided total turnover figures for that business year

VI.99. Two Parties, G Carter and Lotus, were unable to provide any relevant turnover figures to the OFT for their most recent business year as all of their relevant records had been destroyed or were impossible to access. These Parties were, however, able to provide total turnover figures for their most recent year and were in addition able to provide some relevant turnover figures for previous years. In these circumstances, the OFT is using a proxy figure for these Parties' relevant turnover figures, which for each Party is based on the percentage of total turnover represented by that Party's relevant turnover in the most recent year for which relevant turnover has been supplied, applied to that Party's most recent total turnover figure. The OFT considers this to be the fairest proxy in the absence of the most recent relevant turnover figure. The OFT is then applying the starting point set out in paragraph VI.168 below to this proxy figure.

Use of percentage rate

VI.100. Notwithstanding the Parties' arguments discussed above in paragraphs VI.70 to VI.77 and without prejudice to the OFT's discretion to adopt other approaches, the OFT considers it appropriate in this case to calculate the starting point at step 1 of the penalty calculation by applying a percentage figure to each undertaking's relevant turnover.

VI.101. The actual percentage which is applied to the relevant turnover depends upon the nature of the infringement. The more serious and widespread the infringement, the higher the likely percentage rate.⁸⁴⁶⁹ When making this assessment in the present case, the OFT has considered a number of factors, including the nature of the product/ services, the structure of the market, the market shares of the undertakings involved in the Infringements and the effect on competitors and third parties.⁸⁴⁷⁰

Nature of the infringement

VI.102. The first factor considered by the OFT is the nature of the Infringements. The starting point for each penalty is based on the fact that the agreements and/or concerted practices described in this Decision involved collusive tendering (or bid rigging) and most also amounted to a form of price fixing. Whilst several

Parties⁸⁴⁷¹ challenged this conclusion in their representations on penalties, the OFT's reasoning in relation to price fixing and bid rigging is set out in the Legal Background section and is therefore not considered further here. Price fixing and other cartel activities (including collusive tendering) are among the most serious infringements of the Chapter I prohibition.⁸⁴⁷²

VI.103. The OFT considers that one of the most serious examples of collusive tendering would be a cartel where collusion in relation to individual tenders was part of an overall scheme that was centrally controlled and orchestrated by the participants with contracts allocated between members of the cartel over a period of time and/or with the explicit intention of inflating the level of the winning bids. The OFT does not have evidence of such an overall arrangement in this case.

Cover pricing

VI.104. The OFT notes that the instances of cover pricing described in this Decision were individual, discrete Infringements, resulting in the submission of uncompetitive tender bids, and that as discussed in the previous paragraph they are less serious forms of collusive tendering than those involving an overall scheme.⁸⁴⁷³

VI.105. Around five Parties submitted that the practical effects of cover pricing are at the lowest end of the scale of seriousness of bid rigging infringements, for the following reasons:

- there was no agreement between all parties concerned to rig their bids to achieve an agreed outcome or to determine the price that the customer would pay, which differentiates the Infringements from more serious forms of bid rigging;⁸⁴⁷⁴
- the passage of information involved in cover pricing is a discrete and individual occurrence, and is less serious than infringements involving an overall scheme where collusion occurs on a regular basis;⁸⁴⁷⁵
- the OFT should have regard to the economic context of cover pricing when assessing the seriousness of the infringement (the relevant economic context being one of high turnover and low margins in a highly fragmented market, and with no evidence that cover pricing increased profits);⁸⁴⁷⁶

⁸⁴⁷¹ For example, written representations of Bowmer & Kirkland, 4 July 2008, paragraphs 61 to 63; written representations of Stainforth, 27 June 2008, paragraph 4.38; and written representations of Wright (Hull), 27 June 2008, paragraphs 32 to 34 and 59.

⁸⁴⁷⁴ For example, written representations of Propensity, 27 June 2008 (as amended 31 March 2009), paragraphs 5.19 to 5.20; written representations of Bramall and Frank Haslam Milan, 27 June 2008 (as amended 30 March 2009), paragraph 2.23; written representations of Herbert Baggaley, 27 June 2008, paragraph 33(b) and explanatory letter to the OFT, dated 26 January 2009.

- the OFT found no evidence of secrecy, which is one of the essential features of more serious forms of bid rigging;⁸⁴⁷⁷
- cover pricing was regarded as a legitimate practice in the construction industry and a way for parties to maintain their status on customer tender lists;⁸⁴⁷⁸
- it is not apparent that cover pricing led to customers receiving no genuinely competitive bids, or inflated bids winning tenders, or that customers viewed cover pricing as a distortion of the tender process;⁸⁴⁷⁹
- cover pricing was typically decided upon at a late stage in the tender process, by which time it would be too late for a customer to seek replacement bids;⁸⁴⁸⁰
- cover pricing did not impact on the decisions of the companies involved, as the company taking a cover price would otherwise not bid at all or submit a unilaterally inflated bid, the practical effect being therefore limited to the customer receiving one bid not based on a detailed estimate;⁸⁴⁸¹ and
- other genuine bidders participated in the tender, so the customer was not deprived of a competitive outcome.⁸⁴⁸²

VI.106. Whilst the OFT does not accept all of the arguments listed above, when setting the starting point for penalties the OFT has taken into account the fact that discrete individual instances of cover pricing can generally be expected to be less serious than an overall bid rigging scheme involving all bidders in a particular tender – see paragraph VI.103 above. A number of the arguments described above relate to the structure of the market or the effects of the infringements, and are addressed in more detail at paragraphs VI.120 to VI.166 below.

VI.107. Around 25 Parties stated that they did not engage in cover pricing with the motive of overcharging customers or seeking financial gain, and did not have any anti-competitive intent.⁸⁴⁸³ As discussed above in paragraphs IV.30 to IV.44 of the General comments on cover pricing section, many of the Parties informed the OFT that there was perceived pressure in the industry for suppliers to submit tender bids, even when they did not wish to win the contract, because otherwise there was a risk of not being invited to tender in the future.

- VI.108. A desire to maintain relationships with customers does not diminish each supplier's obligation to comply with the Act. All undertakings are independently free to submit bids at a price at which they would not expect to win the contract. However, where competitors have not acted independently of each other but have coordinated their pricing conduct, this will be prohibited under the Chapter I prohibition. In the OFT's view, the fact that the Parties' contact with each other may have been motivated by a desire to stay on tender lists does not detract significantly from the seriousness of the Infringements. The OFT has, however, taken these factors into account in setting the starting point at step 1, such that the starting point is likely to have been higher had the OFT had evidence that the Parties' explicit intent was to inflate prices.
- VI.109. Several Parties suggested that they were not at fault for engaging in cover pricing, but were merely reacting to a situation created by others; for example, Bullock and Linford suggested that Government policy was conducive to cover pricing⁸⁴⁸⁴, while several Parties suggested that they were 'driven' to participate in cover pricing because of unrealistic public sector expectations as to the number of tenders required⁸⁴⁸⁵ and/or customers' disorganised approach to tendering procedures.⁸⁴⁸⁶ Wildgoose stated that tendering processes were inherently unfair and unsustainable.⁸⁴⁸⁷
- VI.110. The OFT does not accept either that public sector expectations were unrealistic – for example, since submitting their leniency applications the 33 leniency Parties in this case have apparently managed to fulfil the requirements of both public and private sector tenders in a competitive way without resorting to cover pricing – or that the Parties were driven to engage in cover pricing. As noted above, they could have simply declined to tender. Indeed, a number of Parties stressed in their representations that it had always been their policy to decline tenders that they did not want to win.
- VI.111. Other Parties described limited estimating resource, difficulties in recruitment, holidays, sickness, time and cost of tender preparation and/or volume of work as reasons for engaging in cover pricing.⁸⁴⁸⁸ As noted above, the OFT considers that the Parties could have declined to tender instead of engaging in illegal conduct, however, and those factors do not diminish the seriousness of the Infringements. To the extent, however, that the Parties submit they were motivated by these factors rather than by an explicit intent to overcharge the customer and make financial gain, this has been taken into account in setting the starting point for the penalties.
- VI.112. Some Parties suggested that their starting point and/or overall penalty should be lower because they had only provided cover prices and had not sought to instigate the cover pricing arrangements.⁸⁴⁸⁹ However, the OFT considers it irrelevant that these Parties did not seek cover prices in the Infringements that are the subject of this Decision. By providing cover prices to their competitors, these Parties were participating in an activity that infringed the Chapter I prohibition. Their actions ensured the success of that activity and allowed the Party requesting the cover price to submit a bogus bid and to deceive the client into thinking that it had received more genuine bids than it had in fact received. Moreover, in knowing that they faced less genuine competition for the tender these Parties had the opportunity to modify their bids to the client's detriment. Furthermore, to the extent that any of the Infringements may have prevented a potentially more efficient competitor from entering the competition and submitting a bid, this will have been the result of the combined actions of all of the Parties to that Infringement.

⁸⁴⁸⁴ For example, written representations of Linford, 26 June 2008, paragraph 9.28; and written representations of Bullock, 26 June 2008, paragraph 6.16.7.

Compensation payments

VI.113. The table below sets out the six⁸⁴⁹⁰ instances of compensation payment agreements and/or concerted practices particularised in this Decision. These Infringements are described in detail in the relevant paragraphs of the Conduct of the Parties section above.

Infringement Number	Infringement Date	Infringement Name	Parties to the Infringement
85	3 December 2001	Alterations to the Press Hall Derby Daily Telegraph	Herbert Baggaley Bowmer & Kirkland
89	11 December 2001	Meadow House Mansfield	Thomas Fish Herbert Baggaley Mansell
98	20 February 2002	Conversion of Davers Steel Building	Herbert Baggaley Wildgoose
104	22 April 2002	Alterations to Café & Conservatory Extension Burton College Burton on Trent	Mansell Wildgoose
135	27 January 2003	17/18 Dover Street, W1	Mansell Durkan
146	5 May 2003	Construction of Four Storey Lift Tower Burton College Burton on Trent	Herbert Baggaley Wildgoose

VI.114. The OFT considers that bid rigging arrangements where the participants offer (or request) inducements to (or from) other cartel participants (for example, by making compensation payments) are more serious than those infringements where no such inducement is offered (see paragraphs III.130 to III.131 of the Legal Background section above). In line with previous decisions⁸⁴⁹¹, the OFT is treating compensation payments as an aspect of the seriousness of an infringement to be reflected in step 1 of the calculation of penalties.

⁸⁴⁸⁹ For example, written representations of Apollo, 27 June 2008, paragraph 12.4(i); written representations of Haymills, 27 June 2008, paragraphs 34 to 37; and written representations of Lotus, 26 June 2008, paragraph 6.21.

⁸⁴⁹¹ See, for example, OFT Decision, Collusive tendering for flat roof and car park surfacing contracts in England and Scotland, 22 February 2006, Case CA98/01/2006 at paragraph 722.

VI.115. As described above in paragraphs III.127 to III.135 and III.136 to III.157 of the Legal Background section, the OFT considers that there are two types of compensation payments relevant to the Decision: those that involve cover pricing and arrangements to make compensation payments without any cover pricing. For the purpose of calculating penalties, the OFT is treating both types of compensation payments in the same way, since the factors which make them more serious, referred to in paragraph VI.114 above, apply in all cases.

VI.116. Mansell and Wildgoose submitted that a higher starting point was not justified for their compensation payment Infringements either because they did not submit a cover price, or they did not make the compensation payment as an inducement for a competitor to 'stand aside', and/or they did not inflate their tender price as a result of the compensation payment.⁸⁴⁹² Wildgoose further stated that both Parties to the compensation payment arrangement would continue to compete against each other, as winning the tender in question would be more profitable than the compensation payment.⁸⁴⁹³ Bowmer & Kirkland stated that there was unlikely to be any detriment to the customer as the compensation payment made no difference to the outcome of the tender.⁸⁴⁹⁴

VI.117. Wildgoose and Herbert Baggaley also submitted that tender prices were not increased by compensation payments (either specifically in a particular tender and/or on average).⁸⁴⁹⁵ Wildgoose further stated that, where the amount of the compensation payment was added to its tender price, this was only a minor amount and the effect on the customer was marginal.⁸⁴⁹⁶ Herbert Baggaley submitted that there was no opportunity for bids to be inflated because of the presence of other 'genuine' bidders, and there was no attempt to earn supra-competitive profits.⁸⁴⁹⁷

VI.118. However, many other Parties⁸⁴⁹⁸ agreed with the OFT's position that compensation payments are more serious than cover pricing absent a compensation payment (indeed, they have argued that this should be treated as a mitigating factor for their own conduct). The OFT considers that the giving or acceptance of a payment facilitates collusion and that this is generally concealed through the submission of a false invoice, constitutes a particularly serious breach of the Chapter I prohibition and that it is important that companies are properly deterred from such activity in the future. The OFT is therefore maintaining the difference in starting points that was originally proposed in the Statement.

⁸⁴⁹³ Written representations of Wildgoose, 3 July 2008 (as amended 1 April 2009), paragraphs 4.72 to 4.77.

⁸⁴⁹⁴ Written representations of Bowmer & Kirkland, 4 July 2008, paragraph 68.

⁸⁴⁹⁵ Written representations of Loach, 26 June 2008, pages 9 and 13; written representations of Herbert Baggaley, 27 June 2008, paragraph 33; and written representations of Wildgoose, 3 July 2008 (as amended 1 April 2009), paragraph 6.34.

⁸⁴⁹⁶ Written representations of Wildgoose, 3 July 2008 (as amended 1 April 2009), paragraphs 4.78, 4.86 and 6.34.

⁸⁴⁹⁷ Written representations of Herbert Baggaley, 27 June 2008, paragraphs 33 and 46.

⁸⁴⁹⁸ For example, written representations of Interserve, 25 June 2008, paragraph 5.4.4; written representations of Robert Woodhead, 2 July 2008, paragraph 4.1.4; and written representations of Bullock, 26 June 2008, 6.16.1.

VI.119. The OFT has taken into account in this Decision the lack of evidence that the Parties were explicitly motivated by a desire to earn supra-competitive profits. If the OFT had consistent evidence of this intent, the starting point for compensation payments would in all likelihood have been higher.

Nature of the product, structure of the market, and the effect on customers, competitors and third parties

VI.120. When calculating the starting point, the OFT has regard to the nature of the product, the structure of the market, the market shares of the Parties (see paragraphs II.1727 to II.1731 above in the Definition of the Markets section), and the effect of the Infringements on customers, competitors and third parties. It also takes into account whether or not a Party was a participant in the more serious category of collusive tendering involving compensation payments, when fixing individual starting points for the Infringements.

VI.121. Wildgoose submitted that the Statement included no substantive discussion of the factors set out in the preceding paragraph, which was in breach of its legitimate expectations and contrary to the Penalty Guidance.⁸⁴⁹⁹ The OFT does not accept that its consideration of the seriousness of the Infringements in the Statement, or in this Decision, is inconsistent with its Penalty Guidance, nor that there was any breach of Wildgoose's legitimate expectations.

Market structure, size of Parties, and market shares

VI.122. A number of Parties submitted that the OFT should take into account the highly fragmented nature of the construction industry⁸⁵⁰⁰, the size of the Parties⁸⁵⁰¹ and/or their small market shares⁸⁵⁰² in setting a starting point at step 1. The OFT can confirm that it has taken the structure of the market into account in setting the starting point. Had the Infringements occurred in a more concentrated market, then the starting point would in all likelihood have been higher. In terms of the size of the Parties and their relative market shares, this will be reflected in their respective relevant and total turnover figures and, consequently, the size of their individual penalty. The OFT does not consider that there is any need also to adjust the percentage starting point at step 1 to account for this factor.

VI.123. Herbert Baggaley⁸⁵⁰³ submitted that the starting point should be very low, in order to reflect the fact that each of the Infringements did not apply to the whole of the relevant market, but only to a single tender. The OFT has taken this into account in setting the starting point. Had the Infringements been part of a wider cartel scheme, the OFT would almost certainly have adopted a higher starting point closer to the upper end of the possible range – see paragraph VI.103 above.

Value of tenders

- VI.124. The values of the tenders that are the subject matter of this Decision range from £2,200 to over £8.5 million. The size of a tender may be a relevant factor when assessing the seriousness of an infringement for the purposes of determining the starting point. Some Parties (for example, Crown Point, Greswolde and McGinley Holdings⁸⁵⁰⁴) suggested in their written representations that the OFT should take into account the size of tender since it affects likely consumer detriment. Phoenix submitted that the OFT is required by its Penalty Guidance to take account of the real impact of an Infringement and, therefore, the value of the tender.⁸⁵⁰⁵
- VI.125. Given the range of sizes of the tenders in this Decision and the process of selection of the maximum of three Infringements which are subject to a penalty, the OFT remains of the view as expressed in the Statement that any increase or decrease would be arbitrary and discriminate against some Parties compared with others. The OFT has therefore concluded that there should be no increase or decrease in the starting point on account of the size of any of the tenders. Moreover, the OFT does not consider that it is required by the Penalty Guidance to take account of the tender values.
- VI.126. Furthermore, the size of the tender may not, in fact, accurately reflect the likely consumer detriment which arises from the Infringement. In particular, the practice of cover pricing on a smaller tender risks distorting the list of invited bidders for a subsequent larger tender or for multiple tenders in future. As the CAT noted in Apex, one of the results of cover pricing is that it gives the customer a false impression of the nature of competition in the market, leading at least potentially to future tender processes being similarly impaired.⁸⁵⁰⁶

Approach to analysis of effects

- VI.127. A few Parties⁸⁵⁰⁷ stated that the OFT must take into account the lack of material adverse effect in setting penalties, in line with *Archer Daniel Midland*⁸⁵⁰⁸ and the Commission's decision in *Seamless Tubes*⁸⁵⁰⁹ to which it should have regard under section 60 of the Act. For the reasons set out in paragraphs VI.7 to VI.10, the OFT does not consider that section 60 of the Act obliges it to adhere to the Commission's practice on setting penalties.
- VI.128. Interserve stated that, whilst there is no need for the OFT to establish the effects of the Infringements for the purpose of establishing liability, the OFT should base its penalties assessment on empirical evidence of any financial harm caused.⁸⁵¹⁰ The OFT does not accept this to be correct. Indeed, imposing this evidential burden on the OFT would undermine the distinction between 'object' and 'effect' infringements. The OFT would be able to reach a finding of liability in respect of 'object' infringements without engaging in detailed and extensive economic analysis, but would be unable to sanction these most serious breaches of competition law without also discharging a further significant evidential burden of proving the actual effect of the infringement (indeed, in many cases, it would be impossible to adduce empirical evidence of the financial harm caused).

VI.129. The OFT has, however, considered below the Parties' substantive arguments with respect to lack of adverse effects in line with its own Penalty Guidance and practice.

Impact on building costs and taxpayers

VI.130. In the Statement, the OFT stated that the foreseeable effect of cover pricing was allocative inefficiencies in the affected market, and a higher cost for building projects than would otherwise be the case. As many customers in this case are public authorities, the further consequence of the Infringements was likely to have been higher taxes or a reduction in spending on other public projects, both at a national and at a local level.

VI.131. A number of Parties disputed that cover pricing could have led to allocative inefficiencies and/or higher costs for building projects.⁸⁵¹¹ For example, several Parties stated in their written representations that there would have been no impact on competition and/or the price paid by the client with regard to some or all of the Infringements in which they were involved (see also paragraph VI.135 below).⁸⁵¹² A few Parties stated that taxes are based on a myriad of factors and that there is no causal link between the Infringements and higher taxes.⁸⁵¹³ Propensity stated that the OFT had no evidence to support the allegation of higher taxes.⁸⁵¹⁴

VI.132. The OFT does not have and has not sought empirical evidence showing a direct causal link between cover pricing and higher costs for building projects. Indeed, as the Infringements in this case are anti-competitive by object, the Statement noted that the OFT was not required to prove the effects of the Infringements or to quantify the loss suffered by customers.

VI.133. The Statement therefore described what the OFT considers to be the foreseeable impact of the Infringements. As noted above, a number of Parties disagreed with the OFT's view and considered that their Infringements had no effect on the prices paid by customers. The OFT rejects any suggestion that cover bidding never had an effect on price (or was never capable of doing so), but it does accept that there may not have been a direct inflation of prices in each and every cover bidding Infringement, and has taken this into account in setting the starting point for all such Infringements. In any event, even where there is no demonstrable adverse impact on price, this must not be equated with a lack of adverse impact on competition (see below).

⁸⁵¹² For example, written representations of Harper plc, 27 June 2008, paragraph 39; written representations of Wildgoose, 3 July 2008 (as amended 1 April 2009), paragraphs 6.30 to 6.33; and written representations of Bowmer & Kirkland, 4 July 2008, paragraphs 66 to 69.

⁸⁵¹³ For example, written representations of Bullock, 26 June 2008, paragraph 6.16.26; written representations of Lotus, 26 June 2008, paragraph 6.20; and written representations of Linford, 26 June 2008, paragraph 9.28.

VI.134. A few Parties submitted that press statements made by the OFT at the time of issue of the Statement had substantially damaged their business, and that this loss should be taken into account in setting penalties.⁸⁵¹⁵ The OFT does not accept that any adverse publicity that may have resulted for a Party following the issue of the Statement is a relevant factor for the purposes of setting the starting point for the OFT's calculation of penalties.

Purported lack of adverse effects

VI.135. A large number of Parties submitted that their cover pricing Infringements had no material or serious adverse effects.⁸⁵¹⁶ Reasons advanced in support of this argument included the following:

- other 'genuine' bidders participated in the tender, so the practice of cover bidding did not deprive the customer of a competitive outcome or have any effect on the price of the winning bid.⁸⁵¹⁷ In particular, around five Parties stated that, as long as two genuine bidders participate in a tender process, the winning price will be reduced to marginal cost;⁸⁵¹⁸
- whilst two or more tenderers engaged in cover pricing, the winning tenderer did not, so there was no effect on the winning price or the customer;⁸⁵¹⁹
- the bid submitted by the company giving a cover price was unaffected, as it was only asked for a cover price late in the tender process and/or it was still constrained by other 'genuine' bidders when calculating its price;⁸⁵²⁰
- the bid by the customer giving cover was not the winning bid, so there was no effect on the winning price or the customer;⁸⁵²¹

⁸⁵¹⁹ For example, written representations of Greswolde, 27 June 2008, paragraph 7.31; and written representations of McGinley Holdings, 27 June 2008, paragraph 51.

⁸⁵²⁰ For example, written representations of Bullock, 26 June 2008, paragraphs 6.16.16 to 6.16.18; written representations of Haymills, 27 June 2008, paragraph 40; and written representations of T & C Williams, 27 June 2008, paragraph 7. Several Parties stated the fact the company giving a cover price submitted the lowest bid, or that it eventually made a loss on the contract, was evidence that its bid was unaffected by cover pricing (for example, written representations of John Sisk, 27 June 2008, paragraphs 181 to 196; written representations of Bluestone, 27 June 2008, paragraph 6.20; and written representations of Greswolde, 27 June 2008, paragraphs 7.31 and 7.39).

⁸⁵²¹ Written representations of Kier, 27 June 2008, paragraph 3.7.

- the contract was not awarded to the lowest priced bidder, so cover pricing did not affect the price paid by the customer;⁸⁵²² and
- the company taking a cover price was considered not to be a serious competitor in any event, so there would be no difference to the outcome of the tender.⁸⁵²³

VI.136. These arguments focus on the purported lack of impact on the winning price or the identity of the winning bidder. The OFT does not necessarily accept each of these arguments - in particular, the OFT rejects any suggestion that there was never an impact on the winning price or that cover bidding was not capable of affecting the price paid by the customer. Nevertheless, even if a particular Infringement had no demonstrable direct impact on price or on the identity of the winning bidder, this must not be equated with a lack of adverse impact on competition.

VI.137. The OFT considers that, whilst not all of the Infringements described in this Decision will necessarily have had the actual effect of preventing or restricting competition, as a minimum all of the Infringements had as their object the distortion of competition and, contrary to some Parties' suggestions, none of them can be expected to have had a benign or positive effect. The starting point at step 1 has been set to reflect this distortion.

VI.138. Distortion of competition by engaging in bid rigging has been confirmed by the CAT to be a contravention of the Chapter I prohibition since '(a) it reduces the number of competitive bids submitted in respect of that particular tender; (b) it deprives the tenderee of the opportunity of seeking a replacement (competitive) bid; (c) it prevents other contractors wishing to place competitive bids in respect of that particular tender from doing so; (d) it gives the tenderee a false impression of the nature of competition in the market, leading at least potentially to future tender processes being similarly impaired'.⁸⁵²⁴

VI.139. First, the client is deliberately deceived into thinking that it has received a certain number of genuine bids when in fact only a proportion of them are genuine and unaffected by illegal contact with other parties.

VI.140. Secondly, the client is deprived of obtaining an alternative bid from another contractor who generally wants to win the work. That other bidder might be more efficient than any of the bidders currently in the race and able to submit a lower bid. The client may also have some form of requirement to obtain a certain number of genuine bids in order to satisfy carefully agreed procurement rules that are designed to guarantee effective competition, and will unknowingly have been thwarted in its attempt to satisfy that requirement.

VI.141. Thirdly, a potentially more efficient bidder that wanted the job may have been deprived of the opportunity to win the work. This represents a form of barrier to entry that prevents new entrants from being added to the list of tenderers. Similarly, where the Parties' motives for submitting cover bids were to stay on tender lists for future projects, the effect extends to depriving (potentially more efficient) competitors of the chance to win future work.

VI.142. Fourthly, the company submitting the cover price was in no position to know whether the remaining bidders were submitting genuine bids or not. That is, whilst the Parties are able with hindsight to identify that there appear to have been other genuine bidders in a particular tender having reviewed the evidence contained in the Statement, at the time of the tender they would have been unaware of the number of 'genuine' bidders. As is the situation with eleven of the Infringements in this Decision, all of the bids could have been tainted by either the giving or taking of a cover price. The Parties' lack of contemporaneous knowledge as to the number of 'genuine' bids is demonstrated by K J Bryan's representations in relation to Infringement 34, where it was one of six participating tenderers and took a cover price from Bodill. K J Bryan stated that it was unaware that Bodill (the winning bidder) had also given cover prices to two other tenderers, Loach and Beaufort (see paragraphs IV.1167 to IV.1203 above).

Effect on customers of compensation payment arrangements (without cover bidding)

VI.143. As with cover pricing, the OFT has not attempted to quantify effects in terms of the direct impact of a compensation payment arrangement on the price paid for the tender in question. The ways in which effects on competition and consumers arise from such arrangements are set out at paragraphs III.143 to III.155 of the Legal Background section above.

Supra-competitive profits

VI.144. Around 14 Parties stated that there was no evidence of supra-competitive profits being earned.⁸⁵²⁵ A few Parties also stated that customers (alternatively, the quantity surveyors employed by customers to monitor project costs) would have been aware of excessive pricing.⁸⁵²⁶ Wildgoose stated that profit margins on projects involving cover pricing or compensation payments were no higher than other similar sized projects over the same period and, consequently, there was no evidence of a detrimental effect on customers.⁸⁵²⁷ Bodill stated that the low levels of profitability in the construction industry demonstrate that customers are getting substantial value for money.⁸⁵²⁸

VI.145. The OFT has not attempted to engage in detailed financial analysis in order to determine whether the Parties earned supra-competitive profits as a result of the Infringements. There is no requirement for the OFT to engage in such analysis, and it would not be possible in many cases to determine this. In particular, the practice of cover pricing had been going on for so long that it would be difficult to determine what the real competitive price level was. As noted above, the OFT rejects any suggestion that cover pricing or compensation payments never had an impact on the price charged to customers (or were not capable of doing so), and it therefore also rejects the suggestion that cover pricing and compensation payments will never have resulted in an increased profit margin (or were not capable of doing so). The OFT accepts, however, that there may not have been a direct inflation of price and/or profit margin as a result of each and every Infringement, and has taken this into account in setting the starting point.

⁸⁵²⁵ For example, written representations of W R Bloodworth, 27 June 2008, paragraphs 78 and 86; written representations of Wygar, 27 June 2008, paragraphs 61 and 70; and written representations of G F Tomlinson, 23 June 2008, paragraphs 87 and 99.

VI.146. In its representations, Bullock suggested that if supra-competitive prices were being charged then this would encourage entry by new firms which would drive prices back down to a competitive level.⁸⁵²⁹ However, the OFT does not consider it necessary for it to assess the extent to which new entry did in fact occur for this reason or (if so) what effect if any it had on prices, which in any event would be particularly difficult in this case. Indeed, one likely consequence of the widespread practice of cover pricing will have been to make it more difficult for new entrants to obtain opportunities to tender. As such, the theoretical notion of new entry may have been prevented from occurring in practice. Furthermore, as noted above, the prevalence of cover pricing over time makes it particularly difficult to determine what the real competitive price level was. Finally, the same argument could be made in relation to any hardcore price fixing arrangement. This is simply not an indicator that the Infringements were less serious, nor a mitigating factor.

Alternatives to cover pricing

VI.147. A large number of Parties stated that, in the absence of cover bidding, the company taking a cover price would have unilaterally submitted an inflated bid, or would have declined to bid, so that cover pricing made no difference to the outcome of the tender or the intensity of competition.⁸⁵³⁰ A few Parties also stated that a unilaterally inflated bid would have had the same effect as a cover price in terms of giving the customer the 'illusion' of a genuine bid.⁸⁵³¹ Another Party submitted that a cover price represents the 'genuine' price at which the party submitting it would be prepared to carry out the work, so there is no reduction in the number of competitive bids.⁸⁵³²

VI.148. The OFT does not accept that these arguments demonstrate a lack of adverse effect on competition. A competitive bid is one which reflects the bidders' perception of the potential risks and rewards involved in the project and in the wider marketplace. Whilst a bidder might unilaterally submit a high bid in the hope of not winning a tender, in doing so it runs the risk that the bid will be so low as to win a contract it is unable (or unwilling) to fulfil, or so high as to damage its credibility. Whilst the resulting bid may be above the level of the winning bid (and, in that sense, uncompetitive), it genuinely reflects the bidder's perception of the risks and rewards involved in the market. Where a bidder submits a cover price, however, these risks are curtailed as the price has simply been obtained from a competitor. In this way, a bidder submitting a ⁸⁵²⁹ Written representations of Bullock, 26 June 2008, paragraph 6.16.10.

⁸⁵³⁰ For example, written representations of Balfour Beatty group, 27 June 2008, paragraph 8.3; written representations of Connaught, 27 June 2008, paragraph 5.5; and written representations of Linford, 26 June 2008, paragraph 9.28.

⁸⁵³¹ Written representations of A H Willis, 27 June 2008, paragraph 40; written representations of Bowmer & Kirkland, 4 July 2008, paragraph 69; and written representations of Baggaley & Jenkins, 27 June 2008, paragraph 41.

⁸⁵³² Written representations of Allenbuild, 4 July 2008, paragraphs 4.11 to 4.19.

cover price deliberately substitutes practical cooperation for the risks of competition⁸⁵³³ and the bid cannot, therefore, be regarded as 'genuine' or competitive. The OFT therefore rejects the suggestion that cover pricing has the same impact on the competitive process as submitting a unilaterally high bid (albeit that the outcome of the tender process – in terms of the winning bidder – may be the same in each scenario).

- VI.149. Around 10 Parties submitted that, if a Party had declined to tender rather than submitting a cover price, the customer would not have invited a replacement bidder and/or any such replacement bidder would have been unlikely to bid any lower than the winning bid.⁸⁵³⁴ A few of these Parties stated that a cover price was sought late in the tender process, so there would have been no time for a replacement bidder to be sought.⁸⁵³⁵ Haymills submitted that there was only a three per cent probability that a customer would obtain an additional bid and it would produce a lower price.⁸⁵³⁶
- VI.150. Whilst the OFT recognises that the customer may not seek a replacement in every instance in which an invited bidder declines to tender, the OFT does not necessarily accept that the customer would be unlikely to do so. Regardless of the likelihood of a replacement bidder being sought, the customer is still deprived of the opportunity to seek a replacement bidder if so desired (see also paragraph III.102 of the Legal Background section). Finally, even if the customer would not have sought a replacement bidder, this does not mean that the cover pricing had no impact – the customer will have received fewer competitive bids than it intended, and it will have been given a false impression of the nature of competition in the market with the potential for future tenders to be similarly impaired.

- VI.151. Other Parties submitted that customers would have been aware of the practice of cover bidding and can be assumed to have taken this into account in designing their tender process⁸⁵³⁷ Admiral and E Manton submitted that their behaviour was carried out openly and recorded in tender books.⁸⁵³⁸
- VI.152. The OFT rejects these submissions, as customers cannot be assumed to have knowledge of cover bidding when the intention of a Party engaging in this practice was to appear to submit a 'genuine' bid. The OFT does not accept that a customer could have any means of identifying if any or all of the bids it received were from tenderers engaged in cover pricing. There is no evidence that the client was aware of cover pricing having taken place in most, if not all, of the Infringements in this Decision. As regards Admiral and E Manton, there is no suggestion that these Parties informed their respective customers when they engaged in cover pricing. Customers were therefore deceived into thinking that cover bids were genuine competitive bids. Whilst these Parties may have recorded the giving and taking of cover prices in their internal tender records, it is therefore incorrect to characterise the practice as having been carried out openly.

⁸⁵³⁵ For example, written representations of Bullock, 26 June 2008, paragraph 6.16; written representations of Lotus, 26 June 2008, paragraph 6.20; and written representations of Milward, 26 June 2008, paragraph 6.15.

Purported positive effects

- VI.153. A number of Parties suggested that the cover pricing Infringements engaged in by the Parties were in fact benign and had a positive effect since they saved on unnecessary tendering costs and/or ensured that companies stayed on tendering lists and could therefore compete for future work.⁸⁵³⁹ Around five Parties submitted that the costs saved when taking a cover price, rather than employing estimating resource to price the contract, were passed on to clients through reduced overheads which were recovered on the contracts for which they did compete.⁸⁵⁴⁰
- VI.154. Submission of cover prices may have reduced a Party's general overheads, but the OFT considers that this demonstrates a further potential impact on competition. The natural corollary of this submission is that construction companies which chose not to engage in cover pricing, but instead to price tenders received, would be running with higher overhead costs (as well as increased risk – see paragraph VI.148 above), disadvantaging them across a whole range of work when competing against companies who chose to engage in cover pricing.⁸⁵⁴¹
- VI.155. Moreover, even if the purported costs savings were passed on to customers in the form of lower overheads, they would not benefit the customer in respect of whose tender a Party had submitted a cover price, but would rather result in lower prices for other customers for whom the Party was the successful bidder. The customer involved in each particular Infringement does not therefore obtain any cost benefit from cover pricing in respect of the relevant tender. Finally, the OFT notes that it has not been provided with any evidence that these purported cost savings were passed on to any other customers.
- VI.156. Linford stated that it used cover pricing as a means of remaining on tender lists in order to exert competitive pressure as a potential entrant in a new market.⁸⁵⁴² Given that a cover price is intended to be too high to win the job and the giver of the cover price would know that Linford was not intending to submit a competitive bid, the OFT does not accept that the submission of a cover price exerts any competitive pressure on the other bidders.

⁸⁵³⁹ For example, written representations of Bullock, 26 June 2008, paragraph 6.16; written representations of the Construction Confederation, 16 June 2008, paragraph 1.3; and written representations of W R Bloodworth, 27 June 2008, paragraph 86.

⁸⁵⁴⁰ For example, written representations of Admiral, 26 June 2008, paragraph 23.6; written representations of F Parkinson, 25 June 2008, paragraph 43; and written representations of Durkan, 27 June 2008, paragraph 175.

⁸⁵⁴¹ For the avoidance of doubt, the OFT has not taken any such potential effect on competitors into account in setting the starting point in this case, but merely notes it in response to these Parties' submissions.

⁸⁵⁴² Written representations of Linford, 26 June 2008, paragraph 9.28.5. Bramall and Frank Haslam Milan made a similar submission (written representations of Bramall and Frank Haslam Milan, 27 June 2008, paragraph 2.71).

- VI.157. Admiral stated that declining to bid (instead of cover pricing) would decrease the number of bidders on future tender lists.⁸⁵⁴³ As noted above, the OFT considers that, contrary to Admiral's submission, declining to bid would give the customer the opportunity to invite a replacement bidder to tender, thereby potentially allowing a more efficient competitor to enter the market.
- VI.158. Bramall/Frank Haslam submitted that the OFT should have regard to the potential benefits of some information exchange in tender auctions. In particular, Bramall/Frank Haslam considered that the tender system used by local authorities exhibited a sort of market failure in which information asymmetries led to inefficient bidding behaviour, and submitted that information exchange seemed to be an appropriate answer to this.⁸⁵⁴⁴ The OFT does not accept that cover pricing provides any such benefit for customers, and does not consider this provides an excuse for the Parties' unlawful conduct.

Tenders not awarded

- VI.159. A few Parties stated that certain tenders described in this Decision were not taken forward by the customer (for example, because the customer decided to abandon the bids and re-tender the contract, or because the price of the winning bid was subject to negotiation post-tender) and, consequently, the Infringements could have had no effect on the customer or competitors.⁸⁵⁴⁵
- VI.160. Where a tender process has been completely abandoned, there can obviously be no impact on the price paid by the customer in respect of that tender. There is, however, an impact on the customer's perception of the level of competition in the market which has the potential to impact future tenders. The submission of a cover price has also prevented the customer from inviting a replacement bidder to tender; which could have an impact on the undertakings invited to tender by the same customer in future.
- VI.161. Where a tender has not been completely abandoned, but has effectively turned into a negotiated contract post-tender, the OFT does not accept that an impact on price can be discounted. If the winning tender price was inflated as a result of cover pricing, then the impact would be carried across to the subsequent negotiations, as they would have commenced at an inflated level. Moreover, any such negotiations will inevitably be informed by the customers' perception of competition and pricing more generally in the market, which the practice of cover pricing will tend to distort.

Other arguments in relation to seriousness

- VI.162. A number of other submissions were advanced by Parties in respect of the OFT's starting point at step 1. Bullock stated that the Party which gave a cover price to it had also provided a cover price to two other bidders, so giving the third cover to Bullock added nothing.⁸⁵⁴⁶ The OFT rejects any suggestion that the giving of a cover price had no effect merely because two other cover prices were also given in the context of the same tender process. If anything, the OFT ⁸⁵⁴³ Written representations of Admiral, 26 June 2008, paragraph 23.6.

⁸⁵⁴⁴ Written representations of Bramall and Frank Haslam Milan, 27 June 2008, paragraphs 2.65 to 2.72.

⁸⁵⁴⁵ For example, written representations of Interserve, 25 June 2008, paragraph 5.4; written representations of Simons Group, 26 June 2008, paragraph 6.14; and written representations of Galliford Try, 27 June 2008, paragraph 6.17.

⁸⁵⁴⁶ Written representations of Bullock, 26 June 2008, paragraph 6.16.22.

considers that this resulted in a greater distortion of competition than if only one cover price had been given, as four of the bids received by the customer were tainted by cover pricing.

- VI.163. Linford submitted that, for those Infringements where it gave a cover, the OFT has failed to demonstrate that the Party seeking a cover could not have approached someone else. Linford therefore concluded that cover pricing would have occurred even without its involvement.⁸⁵⁴⁷ It is not incumbent on the OFT, however, either in establishing liability or imposing penalties, to demonstrate that a similar Infringement could not (or would not) have been committed by another undertaking.
- VI.164. Willmott Dixon stated that for one Infringement (Infringement 243), cover pricing saved the client time and money and there was consequently no consumer detriment.⁸⁵⁴⁸ This representation is based on the suggestion that, by submitting a cover price, Willmott Dixon made up the minimum number of tenderers required by the client for procurement purposes, thereby avoiding the need to re-tender the job. The OFT considers, however, that it is not for a bidder to determine what would be in the customer's best interests, and it cannot be presumed that a customer would prefer to be deceived and receive a cover price than to receive a smaller number of tenders and, if necessary, re-tender the project.
- VI.165. Bullock submitted that, as it had no turnover in the relevant market at the time of its Infringement, the effect of its conduct on competition was limited.⁸⁵⁴⁹ The OFT does not agree. In many cases, the Parties were taking a cover price because the relevant job was not one that they wished to win, often because it was not their preferred type of work. The consequences of doing so, however, are the same as for other Infringements – the number of competitive bids is reduced, the customer is deprived of the opportunity to invite a replacement bidder to tender, a potential new entrant is prevented from being able to tender and the customer's perception of the nature of competition in the market is impaired (see paragraph VI.138). Consequently, the seriousness of the Infringement is not diminished by the fact that it has occurred in a market in which the relevant Party does not usually operate.
- VI.166. Harold Adkin stated that it is essential that owners of construction firms see a reasonable return on their risk and investment, and penalties should take this into account.⁸⁵⁵⁰ The OFT does not accept that this is a relevant factor when setting the starting point for penalties. To the extent that a penalty imposed by the OFT in this Decision is likely to result in financial hardship, this is addressed at step 3 (see paragraphs VI.276 to VI.288 below).
- VI.167. Taking into account all of the above factors, the OFT has set the starting points for the Infringements within the middle to upper end of the scale (the maximum being 10 per cent of an undertaking's relevant turnover). The starting point for those Infringements involving compensation payments is set at a higher level than the starting point for those Infringements not involving compensation payments, in order to reflect the comparative seriousness of the two types of Infringement.

⁸⁵⁵⁰ Written representations of Harold Adkin, 25 June 2008, point 2 in relation to penalties.

- VI.168. For those Infringements not involving compensation payments, the starting point is therefore 5 per cent.
- VI.169. For those Infringements involving compensation payments, the starting point is therefore 7 per cent.⁸⁵⁵¹
- VI.170. The levels of starting points set in this Decision are the same as those used in the OFT's previous investigations into bid rigging activity in the roofing industry.⁸⁵⁵²
- VI.171. Galliford Try stated that one of those previous cases, *West Midlands Flat Roofing*⁸⁵⁵³, involved multilateral contacts between customers and detailed written cover prices, whereas it had only minimal contact with another Party and there was no evidence of written communications.⁸⁵⁵⁴ First, the OFT does not consider that the form of communication between Parties – either written or oral – is relevant to its calculation of penalties; it is the substance of the contact which is important. Secondly, whilst some of the infringements in West Midlands Flat Roofing involved between three and five parties, there was no finding of multilateral contact in relation to any of those infringements, so the OFT does not consider this to be a distinguishing factor. The issue of whether there should be different starting points in this case based on the number of parties involved in an Infringement is discussed at paragraph VI.177 below.
- VI.172. The OFT also considered whether the starting points in this case should be set at a higher level than in its previous roofing cases, given that a number of the Infringements took place after the OFT issued those decisions (the first of which was issued in March 2004) and there was no evidence that the construction industry as a whole reduced its involvement in cover pricing to any significant extent between the OFT's roofing decisions and the issue of the Statement in April 2008.
- VI.173. However, the OFT has given consideration to the Parties' arguments in response to the Statement, to the effect that many of the Infringements occurred before the OFT's roofing decisions and that there was general widespread ignorance about the illegality of cover pricing as demonstrated by the text book referred to in paragraph IV.19 above.⁸⁵⁵⁵ While such arguments do not excuse the practice of cover pricing, since ignorance of the law is no defence, taking these submissions into account (along with the other factors referred to in this section and in paragraphs VI.38 to VI.51 above), the OFT has determined, on balance, that it would not be appropriate, in this instance, to apply a higher starting point than that used in the previous roofing cases.
- VI.174. However, it should be clearly noted by the Parties and by other firms, both in the construction industry and more generally, that cover pricing in whatever form is an infringement by object of the Chapter I prohibition and that the OFT may well consider it appropriate to apply a significantly higher starting point in any future cases involving cover pricing.

- VI.175. Around 12 Parties submitted that the OFT was treating them in an inequitable and discriminatory manner when compared with the level of penalties agreed as a result of early resolution with J Sainsbury in Dairy and British Airways in Fuel surcharges.⁸⁵⁵⁶ First, the OFT notes that each case is specific to its own facts and circumstances and the level of penalties imposed on a party in one case cannot be directly compared with that in another case due to potential differences, for example, in turnover, relevant markets, seriousness of the infringements, duration, aggravating and mitigating factors, and discounts for leniency, cooperation or early resolution. Moreover, the OFT does not accept that it is in any event bound by its decisions in relation to the calculation of penalties in previous cases. Rather, the OFT considers that, subject to the above, it is free to adapt its policy as appropriate having regard to all relevant circumstances and its overall policy objectives on financial penalties, as set out in its Penalty Guidance (see paragraph VI.11 above). Secondly, the OFT notes that these Parties have compared penalties on the basis of the proportion of profits which they represent (effectively arguing that any penalty imposed on them should represent a lower proportion of their profits), whereas the OFT bases its penalty calculations on the infringing undertaking's turnover. The OFT has addressed at paragraphs VI.70 to VI.77 above the reasons why it does not consider a profit-based approach to be appropriate in this case.
- VI.176. Around six Parties submitted that the OFT should set the starting point individually for each Party, taking into account the seriousness of each Infringement.⁸⁵⁵⁷ The OFT has had due regard to the facts and evidence for each individual Infringement, but (other than in respect of Infringements involving compensation payments) considers that there are insufficient differences between them to justify any difference in starting point at step 1.
- VI.177. In particular, whilst the OFT recognises that in the case of some cover pricing Infringements competition for the tender in question was entirely eliminated (for example, where a Party gave a cover price to all other participating tenderers) whereas in others competition was merely distorted, the evidence is not always clear as to whether the recipient (and, less often, the giver) of a cover price knew at the time cover was given or received the extent to which in any particular instance competition was likely to be eliminated. As such, the OFT considers that it would be unfair to distinguish between different Infringements on this basis when setting penalties. At a minimum, a recipient of a cover price may have been 'turning a blind eye' as to whether all other tenderers were similarly tainted (see also paragraph VI.142 above).
- VI.178. Furthermore, whilst it is possible that bid prices (and also profit margins) will have been deliberately raised where a Party knew that it faced very little or no competition as a result of cover pricing, without a full examination of the evidence on this (which in some cases it would be impossible to obtain), the ⁸⁵⁵⁶ For example, written representations of Francis, 2 July 2008, paragraph 95; written representations of Irwins and Jack Lunn, 27 June 2008, paragraph 91; and written representations of Wygar, 27 June 2008, paragraph 4.

⁸⁵⁵⁷ For example, written representations of Baggaley & Jenkins, 27 June 2008, paragraph 42; written representations of Phoenix, 27 June 2008, paragraphs 27 to 28; and written representations of Galliford Try, 27 June 2008, paragraphs 6.8 to 6.10.

OFT does not consider this to be a sound basis for differentiating between the Parties in this case in terms of the starting point adopted at step 1.

VI.179. For these reasons, the starting point for all cover pricing Infringements has been set at 5 per cent, rather than any higher starting point. The OFT cannot exclude the possibility, however, that the factors identified in paragraphs VI.177 to VI.178 would be taken into account in any future cases involving cover pricing. A number of other differentiating factors (such as director involvement, the Party's role in instigating the Infringement, and any steps taken to cooperate and promote compliance) are taken into account as aggravating and mitigating factors at step 4.

VI.180. Several Parties made representations regarding the level of the starting point in terms of the possible damage a high starting point might cause to their businesses, citing the low profitability in the construction industry⁸⁵⁵⁸ and suggesting that it would put companies out of business.⁸⁵⁵⁹ The OFT has dealt with the arguments about profitability as opposed to turnover at paragraphs VI.70 to VI.76 above. In terms of financial hardship, the Parties have had an opportunity to make representations on their own individual circumstances and the OFT has the ability to take these into account at step 3 of the penalty calculation. This is discussed in more detail at paragraphs VI.276 to VI.288 below.

Step 2 – adjustment for duration

VI.181. The starting point under step 1 may be increased or, in exceptional circumstances, decreased to take into account the duration of the infringement.⁸⁵⁶⁰ For almost all of the Infringements described in this Decision, the OFT has concluded that the duration was less than a year. The OFT does not believe that the fact that the actual bid rigging arrangements lasted for less than one year should lead to any downward adjustment in penalties imposed because the anti-competitive effects are irreversible and could have a continuing adverse impact on future tendering processes.⁸⁵⁶¹

VI.182. A few Parties concluded that the OFT had characterised the Infringements as being a year in duration.⁸⁵⁶² For example, Allenbuild and Robert Woodhead stated that 'the artificial categorisation of an infringement as being a year in duration means that the level of the fine is being further distorted.'⁸⁵⁶³ These Parties have, however, misunderstood the OFT's position as set out in the Statement and at paragraph VI.181 above; namely, the OFT recognises that these Parties' Infringements lasted less than one year.

⁸⁵⁶⁰ Penalty Guidance, at paragraph 2.10.

⁸⁵⁶¹ This approach is consistent with previous OFT decisions, for example, CA98/01/2006, Collusive tendering for flat roof and car park surfacing contracts in England and Scotland, 22 February 2006, at paragraph 732, and has also been endorsed by the CAT in Apex at paragraph 278.

⁸⁵⁶² For example, written representations of Hill, 23 June 2008, paragraph 20; written representations of R Durnell, 27 June 2008, paragraph 199.

⁸⁵⁶³ Written representations of Allenbuild, 4 July 2008, paragraph 6.2.2; and written representations of Robert Woodhead, 2 July 2008, paragraph 4.2.2.

- VI.183. Several Parties⁸⁵⁶⁴ argued that the OFT should make a downward adjustment where an Infringement lasted less than a year. In particular, Haymills submitted that it was arguable that an Infringement commenced on the day the cover price was given and did not last longer than the date tenders were returned, because neither it nor the counterparty involved in cover pricing won the bid.⁸⁵⁶⁵ Haymills submitted that the OFT should follow the approach in Aberdeen Journals, in which the CAT reduced a penalty due to its short duration.⁸⁵⁶⁶ Pearce Group stated that the short duration of its infringement constitutes an exceptional circumstance that should lead to a reduction in penalty at step 2.⁸⁵⁶⁷ A few Parties disputed that their Infringements had any impact on future tendering processes.⁸⁵⁶⁸
- VI.184. However, as noted in the Statement and above at paragraph V.26 to V.28, the OFT considers that the Infringements lasted at least from the date of the initial contact between the Parties, alerting one another that they had been invited to tender and were either interested in winning the tender or in making bids that would ensure that they would not win the tender, to the date when bids were actually submitted or due to be submitted for the duration of the work. The OFT further considers that the consequences of the bid rigging Infringements distorted competition at least until the work had been carried out, a period which varied considerably in length from tender to tender but almost always constituted a matter of months. Furthermore, the effects were irreversible because the competition lost in respect of the affected tender can never be recovered (see also paragraphs III.103 to III.105 of the Legal Background section). In cases involving compensation payments made after the date when bids were submitted, the OFT considers that the duration of Infringements of this nature lasted at least until the date when the final compensation payment was made (see paragraph V.27).
- VI.185. Furthermore, even were the duration of the Infringements to be regarded as shorter in duration, the Penalty Guidance states that the starting point will only be decreased at step 2 *in exceptional circumstances*⁸⁵⁶⁹ and the OFT does not consider that the circumstances surrounding the Infringements were in any way exceptional in this respect.
- VI.186. Wright (Hull) submitted that the Infringements are individual and discrete and therefore have 'no measurable duration' in the sense used in the Penalty Guidance.⁸⁵⁷⁰ The OFT accepts that the Infringements are discrete and individual. The OFT has therefore had regard to the practice of the CAT in assessing the penalties imposed in respect of similar infringements (see footnote 8561, and paragraphs VI.181 and VI.184).
- VI.187. For Infringement 135, which lasted over a year because it involved a compensation payment with an outstanding invoice, the OFT considers that the impact (in terms of duration) of collusive tendering is no different from the Infringements lasting less than a year. No upward adjustment for duration will therefore be made for this Infringement, despite the fact that as noted above and contrary to the representations of Wildgoose⁸⁵⁷¹, the OFT considers that the duration of Infringements of this nature lasted at least until the date when the final compensation payment was made.

VI.188. The OFT is therefore making no adjustment for duration at step 2 of the penalty calculation.

Step 3 – adjustment for other factors

VI.189. The penalty may be adjusted, after step 2, to achieve policy objectives, particularly deterring undertakings from engaging in anti-competitive practices, such as collusive tendering (including importantly, other undertakings which may be considering engaging in anti-competitive practices). Considerations at this stage may also include the OFT's estimate of any economic or financial benefit made by the infringing undertakings from the infringements, and the special characteristics, including the size and financial position of the undertakings in question.⁸⁵⁷²

Economic benefit

VI.190. Around 15 Parties⁸⁵⁷³ informed the OFT in their representations that they had derived no economic or financial benefit from the Infringements.

VI.191. As noted at paragraphs VI.145 and VI.178 above, the OFT has not analysed (nor would it be possible to analyse in many instances) the economic or financial benefit derived by the Parties from each of the Infringements. Whilst any such benefit cannot be ruled out, the OFT is not applying an upward adjustment to the penalties on this basis.

General comments on deterrence

VI.192. The OFT considers that deterrence is an important part of its fining policy, vis-à-vis both the Parties and other undertakings who are not addressees of this Decision but may be considering engaging in bid rigging activities. The need for effective deterrence is essential in view of the fact that cover pricing has been endemic in the construction industry, and the penalties therefore need to reflect this wider problem. The OFT has imposed financial penalties for cover pricing in the past in a related sector (the flat roofing sector⁸⁵⁷⁴). However, the OFT learned that cover pricing continued throughout the construction industry since its previous investigations. In the Statement, the OFT noted that as a result it considered that the overall level of financial penalties in this case might need to be higher than it was in the OFT's previous bid rigging cases, in order to represent an effective deterrent. Moreover, it cannot be assumed that cover bidding will necessarily be confined to the construction industry, so it is also important to deter undertakings from engaging in such activities in other sectors.

- VI.193. Harper plc stated that a recent study commissioned by the OFT had suggested that criminal penalties and director disqualification are a greater deterrent than increased fines. Harper plc argued that there was consequently no need to increase penalties in order to deter third parties.⁸⁵⁷⁵ As noted above, deterrence is an important part of the OFT's fining policy, and remains so. It does not follow from the fact that criminal penalties and director disqualification may be regarded as having a more significant deterrent impact, that financial penalties should therefore be lower. Indeed, the fact that some companies regard criminal penalties and director disqualification as more important in deterring infringements than financial penalties may suggest that an increase in the level of the OFT's penalties is required in order to ensure they act as an effective deterrent, and some of the findings of the study on deterrence would support that.⁸⁵⁷⁶
- VI.194. A large number of Parties argued that there was no need for deterrence to be a consideration in relation to their penalty. Around 15 Parties⁸⁵⁷⁷ made the specific point that they ceased all cover pricing activity once it became known that it was illegal, whilst around seven Parties⁸⁵⁷⁸ stated that they had ceased cover pricing before the OFT's investigation commenced. Other Parties argued that they did not need to be deterred from further infringements because cover pricing was a rare occurrence for them⁸⁵⁷⁹, because their Infringements involved only one rogue employee⁸⁵⁸⁰, because they have exited the UK construction industry, or because the Participant Company has ceased trading or has been dissolved.⁸⁵⁸¹
- VI.195. Deterrence is, however, about the actions of other companies, as much as the addressees of this Decision (see paragraph VI.192 above). Whilst the OFT welcomes the fact that Parties may have ceased cover pricing, there is still a need to ensure that other companies are sufficiently deterred from engaging in similar activities, and indeed that the Parties are sufficiently deterred from engaging in other forms of anti-competitive behaviour. To the extent that Parties have demonstrated the implementation of a suitable compliance policy, this is taken into account as a mitigating factor at step 4. It is also immaterial whether or not the Parties remain active in the construction industry, or have exited the market since the Infringements, or no longer trade, as this does not negate the need for a wider deterrent.

- VI.196. The OFT's assessment of deterrence is also not affected by the number of instances of cover pricing in which a Party has engaged. Given the consolidation and selection process undertaken in this case, the OFT does not consider it would be fair to differentiate between Parties when considering deterrence on the basis of the number of instances of cover pricing in which each Party was involved.
- VI.197. Around four Parties submitted that, where a Participant Company has been acquired by a new parent company since the Infringements, there is no need to deter the new parent company, as it was not involved in the Infringements and/or did not benefit from the illegal conduct.⁸⁵⁸² The OFT considers, however, that the Participant Company should be deterred from engaging in further anti-competitive conduct (regardless of the fact that it now forms part of a different undertaking). Furthermore, and as noted above, deterrence is also aimed at other companies as well as the addressees of the Decision.
- VI.198. Wright (Hull) submitted that, as a small firm, fining it will not deter other firms as it is not sufficiently prominent for an effective message to be sent to others.⁸⁵⁸³ Even if this were true (which the OFT does not necessarily accept), this does not negate the need to consider deterrence as the penalty should be sufficiently high to deter Wright (Hull) itself from engaging in similar infringing conduct in future. Moreover, the OFT would not wish smaller firms to assume from the penalty imposed on Wright (Hull) in this case that, because of their size, they could infringe competition law with impunity.
- VI.199. Balfour Beatty stated that the OFT had previously recognised that an uplift for deterrence is not justified where a party has acted as whistleblower and where the infringing conduct took place against that party's business strategy. Balfour Beatty submitted it should be treated in the same manner in this case.⁸⁵⁸⁴ First, the OFT notes that every case is necessarily fact-specific and the approach to penalty calculation taken for one party in one case cannot be directly read across to an entirely separate case. Secondly, for those Infringements in relation to which Balfour Beatty was the whistleblower, it is not being penalised at all (as they are But For Infringements). Thirdly, the OFT is pursuing at least three Infringements for almost every leniency applicant in this case (including Balfour Beatty). The OFT therefore does not consider that cover pricing can be characterised as an aberration or a 'one-off' occurrence for these Parties.
- VI.200. Around 15 Parties⁸⁵⁸⁵ suggested in their representations that there was no need for deterrence because there has been a movement away from traditional tendering methods in favour of negotiated tenders and framework agreements where, they suggested, cover pricing is more difficult if not impossible. However, the OFT notes first that there are still a significant number of projects that are allocated by means of traditional tendering methods, as indeed has been noted by some of the Parties.⁸⁵⁸⁶ Secondly, the majority if not all of negotiated tenders and framework agreements involve a price element at some stage of the process and the OFT therefore rejects any suggestion that cover pricing would be impossible. Thirdly, cover pricing is of course only one form of bid rigging or price collusion and if companies were insufficiently deterred from bid rigging activity then they are more likely to seek other ways of manipulating the tendering process to their advantage.

⁸⁵⁸² For example, written representations of Bullock, 26 June 2008, paragraph 6.22; written representations of Mowlem, 27 June 2008, paragraphs 4.8 and 4.11 to 4.15; and written representations of Lotus, 26 June 2008, paragraph 6.22.

⁸⁵⁸⁵ For example, written representations of Francis, 2 July 2008, paragraph 110; written representations of Durkan, 27 June 2008, paragraphs 196 to 197; and written representations of Lotus, 26 June 2008, paragraph 6.27. Similarly, Wright (Hull) stated that there was no need for deterrence as it has mostly moved away from tendered construction work to in-house property development so it had no opportunity to cover price (written representations of Wright (Hull), 27 June 2008, paragraphs 88 to 92).

VI.201. Almost half of the Parties⁸⁵⁸⁷ made representations to the effect that the widespread publicity following the issue of the Statement in April 2008 had already affected their reputation to the extent that they are properly deterred from engaging in similar behaviour in the future, and suggested that other companies will have noted this publicity and be similarly deterred from engaging in bid rigging. Around 10 Parties⁸⁵⁸⁸ noted that they had incurred considerable legal expenses and management time in defending the OFT's allegations and suggested that this was sufficient deterrent.

VI.202. As noted above, deterrence is not only about the particular addressees of this Decision, however, but also other companies. In any event, the OFT does not consider that publicity to the effect that the Parties had engaged in bid rigging, as took place at the time of the issue of the Statement, would on its own act as a sufficient deterrent, nor would management and legal costs. In order to ensure proper deterrence it is important that the OFT reaches an infringement decision and that appropriately calculated financial penalties are levied on the Parties.

Potential for exclusion from tender lists and follow-on private actions for damages

VI.203. Several Parties⁸⁵⁸⁹ expressed concern at the possibility of exclusion from tender lists following the OFT's decision. E Manton stated that virtually all reputable contractors in the Birmingham area will be fined and, if they are then excluded from tender lists, customers will struggle to obtain firms to carry out work and may have to pay a premium for firms from outside the area.⁸⁵⁹⁰ The OFT does not accept that this possibility is sufficient reason to make a downward adjustment to the penalties in this case, however. Moreover, whilst it must ultimately be the decision of each individual procurer, the OFT is issuing advice to procurers that in the particular circumstances of this case it would not be advisable for the Parties that are the subject of this Decision to be excluded from tender lists solely because of the OFT's enforcement action. In view of this, the OFT considers that it is particularly important to ensure that the penalties are set at an appropriate level to deter future bid rigging conduct.

⁸⁵⁸⁸ For example, written representations of Bodill, 26 June 2008, paragraph 5; written representations of Lotus, 26 June 2008, paragraph 6.27; and written representations of Wright (Hull), 27 June 2008, paragraph 85.3.

VI.204. Other Parties⁸⁵⁹¹ were concerned about the possibility of follow-on private actions, and suggested that an adjustment for deterrence was unnecessary in the light of these other deterrence factors. The OFT considers that an effective system for private actions is a useful additional tool for encouraging businesses to comply with competition law but does not consider that the potential for private actions in the present case is a reason to reduce the adjustment for deterrence at step 3 of the penalty calculation.

VI.205. A large number of Parties⁸⁵⁹² noted that the OFT's selection process meant that a sample of companies are being pursued and suggested that the competitive process would be further distorted if the OFT imposed heavy financial penalties that put companies out of business or caused them to alter their investment decisions. They noted that the OFT had found the practice of cover pricing to be endemic and suggested that other companies had infringed the Act but escaped a penalty merely through good fortune. Harper plc suggested that investigating these other companies would do more to deter other companies than uplifting the penalties to be imposed on the Parties.⁸⁵⁹³

VI.206. A number of Parties objected to the OFT's stated intention, as set out in the Statement, to increase the level of penalties above those applied in the OFT's previous cover pricing cases. Around 25 Parties⁸⁵⁹⁴ noted in their representations on the Statement that the majority of the Infringements (around 70 per cent) took place prior to the OFT's first decision on cover pricing in the roofing industry in March 2004.⁸⁵⁹⁵ The Parties suggested that it was still not clear following that decision, that what they referred to as 'simple' cover pricing was illegal and noted that the CAT's first decision on cover pricing was not made until 2005.⁸⁵⁹⁶ Some Parties⁸⁵⁹⁷ noted that a significant number of the Infringements (around 10 per cent) occurred in 2000 when the Competition Act 1998 had only just come into force and there was, according to these Parties, general uncertainty about its scope. Other Parties⁸⁵⁹⁸ emphasised the general lack of awareness of the illegality of cover pricing, citing for example the text book referred to by the OFT at paragraph IV.19 above and a lack of awareness even amongst the legal community. The Parties stated that in all of these circumstances it would not be fair to increase the level of financial penalties above those applied in the OFT's previous bid rigging cases.

VI.207. The OFT has considered the Parties' representations and has decided in the light of these that it is not appropriate in the present case to raise the level of the adjustment for deterrence at step 3 above the level set in the OFT's decisions on bid rigging in the roofing industry. However, as stated in paragraph VI.192 above deterrence is an important element of the OFT's fining policy and it remains important that there be some form of adjustment at step 3 of the penalty calculation in the present case in order to ensure that undertakings are sufficiently deterred from similar behaviour in the future, not only in the construction industry but also in other industries where work is allocated by means of tendering processes and other similar methods. While there may have been a lack of certainty amongst the Parties about the legality of cover pricing, as noted in paragraph VI.44 above the OFT considers that the Parties must (or at the very least should) have realised that the provision of prices to each other during the bidding process would constitute at the very least a restriction or distortion of competition.

VI.208. The following subsection discusses how the adjustment for deterrence at step 3 should be applied in the present case.

Minimum Deterrence Threshold

VI.209. For some Parties, the financial penalty calculated at the end of step 2 of the calculation represents a relatively low proportion of the undertaking's total turnover, as a consequence of that party's relevant turnover being a low proportion of its total turnover because it may have significant activities in other markets. In such cases, the OFT considers that the penalty figure reached at the end of step 2 is unlikely to represent a significant sum for that Party, and it will therefore be necessary to increase the Party's penalty at step 3 to arrive at a sum that represents, for that Party, a sufficient deterrent, having regard to the seriousness of the Infringements and the participant's total turnover.

VI.210. Those Parties whose circumstances are as set out in paragraph VI.209 above will therefore be subject to an increase in their penalty at step 3. In order to ensure equal treatment amongst the Parties, the penalty in each case will be increased to a level equivalent to a fixed proportion of the Party's total turnover in the last business year prior to this Decision (to be known as the Minimum Deterrence Threshold ('MDT')) and set at a level proportionate to the starting points for the different types of Infringements. The same MDT will be applied to all Parties involved in equally serious infringements. The MDT will be calculated having regard to the seriousness of the Infringements to which it is applied and the total turnover in the last business year of each undertaking.⁸⁵⁹⁹

VI.211. This approach has been applied in previous decisions⁸⁶⁰⁰, and endorsed by the CAT.⁸⁶⁰¹

VI.212. As stated above in paragraph VI.114, the OFT considers that Infringements which involve compensation payments are more serious and therefore attract a higher starting point at step 1. In order to ensure adequate deterrence for more serious types of infringement, those Parties which are involved in compensation payments and whose circumstances are as set out in paragraph VI.209 above will face a higher MDT than those Parties which are not involved in compensation payments (see further paragraph VI.248 below).

⁸⁵⁹⁹ While the OFT has made every effort to calculate penalties based on the latest possible turnover provided by the Parties, it has not been practicable to take account of turnover figures provided after 31 August 2009. Parties were informed by letter in June 2009 that the OFT would be unlikely to be able to take account of turnover figures received after the end of July 2009, and the OFT therefore considers that it has more than fulfilled its requirements in this regard.

⁸⁶⁰⁰ For example, CA98/01/2006, Collusive tendering for flat roof and car park surfacing contracts in England and Scotland, 22 February 2006.

VI.213. Two Parties, Balfour Beatty Group and Wildgoose, made representations to the effect that the compensation payment Infringements in which they were involved were either less serious than those of other Parties or were less serious than those that occurred in the OFT's roofing cartel decisions and that they should not therefore be subject to a higher level of MDT.⁸⁶⁰² However, other Parties⁸⁶⁰³ agreed with the OFT's position that compensation payments are more serious than cover pricing (indeed, some attempted to use this as a mitigating factor for their own conduct – see paragraph VI.118 above). The OFT considers that the giving or acceptance of a payment that facilitates collusion and that is generally covered up by the submission of a false invoice, constitutes a serious breach of the Chapter I prohibition and that it is important that companies are properly deterred from such activity in the future. The OFT is therefore maintaining the different levels of MDT as originally proposed in the Statement.

VI.214. Where the penalty for a particular Infringement at the end of step 2 already exceeds the MDT it will not be subject to any increase at step 3 because, in the OFT's view, the penalty arrived at after step 2 is already a sufficient deterrent.

Application of MDT to only one Infringement

VI.215. The MDT will only apply once to each undertaking, that is, the OFT is taking the Infringement with the highest penalty at the end of step 2 for each undertaking first, and only applying the MDT to that penalty at step 3 if necessary to ensure deterrence. Where two or three penalties are joint highest at the end of step 2, due to identical relevant turnover figures at step 1, the OFT is applying the MDT to the latest of the two or three Infringements so affected. Parties facing two or more penalties will not have the MDT applied at step 3 for the second and/or third penalties, as they (and the other undertakings) have received sufficient deterrence due to the first application of the MDT.

Arguments against the application of an MDT

VI.216. A number of Parties objected to the application of an MDT in this case for a variety of reasons. Kier stated in its representations that the MDT mechanism was not properly explained in the Statement, thereby risking procedural unfairness.⁸⁶⁰⁴ Galliford Try and Thomas Vale both pointed out that the Penalty Guidance does not envisage the use of an MDT.⁸⁶⁰⁵ Galliford Try also stated that the application of an MDT would be contrary to its legitimate expectations.⁸⁶⁰⁶

VI.217. Whilst the Penalty Guidance does not make explicit reference to the MDT methodology, it does contemplate an adjustment at step 3 of the penalties calculation for deterrence and, as noted above, the use of an MDT for this purpose has previously been endorsed by the CAT. Moreover, the OFT considers that its proposals with respect to the application of the MDT specifically (and indeed penalty calculations in general) were clearly explained in a considerable amount of detail in the Statement. Indeed, a number of Parties in this case have commended the OFT on the amount of detail the Statement contained in respect of penalty calculations.⁸⁶⁰⁷

- VI.218. Willmott Dixon stated that the Penalty Guidance only refers to an uplift at step 3 where relevant turnover is zero.⁸⁶⁰⁸ This is incorrect. The Penalty Guidance envisages the possibility of adjustments at step 3 for several factors – one of these is deterrence, another is where relevant turnover is zero. In other words, these are separate adjustments, rather than cumulative conditions required for a single adjustment.
- VI.219. Ackroyd & Abbott stated that smaller companies are less able to absorb the additional penalty resulting from the application of an MDT.⁸⁶⁰⁹ However, as the MDT is calculated by reference to total turnover, the OFT does not accept that it discriminates between larger and smaller companies.
- VI.220. Thomas Vale submitted that any MDT should be offset against the advantages gained from a leniency applicant's cooperation.⁸⁶¹⁰ The OFT considers that deterrence and leniency are two separate elements of its approach to penalties and these are, therefore, considered separately. The cooperation afforded by leniency applicants is recognised by a percentage discount applied at the end of step 5 (see paragraphs VI.385 to VI.389 below).
- VI.221. Around 20 Parties⁸⁶¹¹ argued that there is no need for an MDT to be applied in the present case since the OFT is imposing penalties in relation to three Infringements for many of the Parties (alternatively, the MDT should only be applied if the aggregate penalty for a Party for all of its Infringements is less than the MDT threshold). The OFT does not accept this argument, however. First, it does not follow that where a penalty is being imposed on a Party for more than one Infringement, the combined penalties will necessarily be sufficient to achieve deterrence.
- VI.222. Secondly, where a Party has been found to have participated in more than one Infringement, the OFT considers it appropriate that it should face more than one penalty and, indeed, should have considered the potential consequences of its actions before engaging in repeat behaviour – as provided for in the Act and as stated in paragraph VI.4 above, the OFT may require an undertaking to pay a financial penalty in respect of any infringement of the Act. Given that some Parties are facing a penalty for only one or two Infringements, the OFT does not consider it appropriate that these Parties should face the same level of penalty as those Parties found to have committed one or more further Infringements of the Act, which would be the practical effect of applying an MDT only in circumstances where the aggregate penalty for a Party for all of its Infringements was less than the MDT threshold.

⁸⁶⁰⁸ Written representations of Willmott Dixon, 27 June 2008, paragraphs 62 to 70. Pearce Group also submitted that, consistent with the Penalty Guidance, MDT should only be applied to an undertaking with nil penalty after step 3 (written representations of Pearce Group, 1 June 2009, paragraph 5.35).

⁸⁶¹¹ For example, written representations of G F Tomlinson, 23 June 2008, paragraph 133; written representations of Irwins and Jack Lunn, 27 June 2008, paragraph 127; and written representations of York House, 27 June 2008, paragraphs 117 to 118.

- VI.223. Thirdly, the OFT recognises that it is imposing up to three penalties on each Party in this case and has taken into account both this factor and all of the factors discussed above in this section, along with the figures for relevant and total turnover supplied by the Parties, when deciding the level of MDT that needs to be applied in order that the overall penalties in aggregate will act as an effective deterrent for all Parties. Furthermore, where a Party has more than one Infringement in this Decision that occurred in the same relevant market, the OFT has considered whether a reduction is required at step 3 in order to ensure that the cumulative impact of the aggregate penalty is not excessive – see paragraphs VI.256 to VI.270 below.
- VI.224. Mowlem stated that an MDT should not be used as a substitute for investigating other instances of cover pricing which were admitted and taking them all to a final decision. The OFT confirms that it is not using the MDT to uplift fines in this manner.
- VI.225. Finally, Stainforth stated that: *‘...it is inappropriate for the OFT to implement an MDT when the OFT is culpable for failing to educate [the construction] industry to the possibility that simple cover pricing gave rise to an infringement of competition law... If the OFT was to suggest that it had so engaged the industry, it is no fault of Stainforth’s that it did not receive the message if the industry was unable to get that message across to individual contractors. Stainforth must not be unduly prejudiced by the imposition of a more onerous fine than might have otherwise been the case because of the failings of others outside its control.’*⁸⁶¹²
- VI.226. First, the OFT does not accept that it is in any way ‘culpable’ for a failure to educate the construction industry about the requirements of the Act. Each undertaking is responsible for ensuring that it is compliant with competition law (as with any other law) and the OFT completely refutes the suggestion that responsibility for Stainforth’s illegal conduct should be attributed to anyone other than Stainforth itself.
- VI.227. Furthermore, Stainforth’s representations demonstrate clearly why deterrence forms such an important part of the OFT’s fining policy. When an undertaking is unwilling to admit responsibility for breaches of the law, but instead attempts to lay the blame entirely on others (either the OFT or representatives of the construction industry at large), there is a clear need for the penalty imposed on that undertaking to be sufficiently large to deter it from further infringing conduct.

Representations on calculation and level of MDT

- VI.228. Other Parties objected to the method of calculation of the MDT, or the level at which the MDT would be set.
- VI.229. Several Parties submitted that the OFT is required to have regard to the level of deterrence required for each individual undertaking by reference to its particular circumstances, rather than adopting a 'blanket' approach of using a percentage of turnover for all Parties.⁸⁶¹³

⁸⁶¹² Written representations of Stainforth, 27 June 2008, paragraph 4.40(g).

VI.230. Provided its methodology is properly explained, the OFT has a margin of appreciation in assessing the appropriate penalty level for achieving deterrence in any particular case; this is an area requiring judgment.⁸⁶¹⁴ The OFT considers that applying an MDT by reference to a percentage of total turnover is within its margin of appreciation and that, given the range of Parties involved in the case, this is appropriate so as to ensure that in each case the penalty properly reflects the size of the particular undertaking in question. The OFT has also considered whether there are other individual circumstances that should be taken into account in assessing the need for a penalty adjustment at step 3 to achieve deterrence but (save to distinguish between those Infringements involving compensation payments) has concluded that it would not be appropriate to do so in this case. In particular and as noted above, the OFT considers it would be unfair in this case to differentiate at step 3 on the basis of the number of Infringements in which a Party was involved, given (in particular) the consolidation and selection exercise conducted in this case. Whilst the OFT is applying a higher level of MDT to Infringements involving compensation payments, it does not consider that there are sufficient other differences between the various Infringements to justify a range of different MDT levels. Finally, whilst it might be possible to differentiate between the Parties on the basis of when each ceased its infringing conduct, compliance, along with a number of other factors, is taken into account at step 4. Indeed, the OFT considers that the approach it has adopted is the fairest means of achieving a deterrent effect in the circumstances of this case.

VI.231. John Sisk stated in its representations that, as the OFT had pursued fewer than three Infringements against it, the level of MDT applicable to it should be lower than that applicable to Parties with three Infringements.⁸⁶¹⁵ Similarly, Pearce Group submitted that any MDT applied to it should be reduced to reflect its liability for only one Infringement.⁸⁶¹⁶ However, the purpose of the MDT is to ensure that the penalty imposed on a Party is sufficient to deter it (and other undertakings) from engaging in anti-competitive conduct, regardless of the number of Infringements in which it was involved. Moreover, where a Party has been found to have participated in only one Infringement, it will only receive one penalty thus distinguishing it from those Parties found to have been involved in two or more Infringements.

VI.232. Around 10 Parties⁸⁶¹⁷ made similar arguments to those described in paragraph VI.70 above, suggesting that the OFT should base its financial penalties on profit rather than turnover because the Parties in this investigation operate in a high turnover/low margin business and as a result, turnover is no indication of financial strength. The OFT has considered the arguments for the use of profit, rather than turnover, as a basis for calculating penalties at paragraphs VI.71 to VI.75 above.

VI.233. Around 20 Parties⁸⁶¹⁸ argued that the cover pricing Infringements described in this Decision were not as serious as other types of cartel activity, and that the MDT should be set at a level that reflects this fact. The OFT is satisfied the MDT in this case is being set at a level appropriate to the seriousness of the Infringements and reflects the fact that a higher MDT would be warranted for more serious cartel activity such as an overall scheme that was centrally controlled and orchestrated by the participants with contracts allocated between members of the cartel over a period of time and/or with the explicit intention of inflating the level of the winning bids.

Representations on turnover to which MDT should be applied

VI.234. A number of Parties also made representations about the specific turnover to which any MDT should be applied.

VI.235. Several Parties⁸⁶¹⁹ argued that the OFT should use the turnover in the year prior to the Infringement rather than the turnover in the last business year prior to decision, for its calculations at step 3 of the penalty calculation. The Parties set forth similar arguments to those described in paragraphs VI.82 to VI.92 above. Other Parties submitted that major acquisitions or substantial increases in their turnover since the Infringements should be disregarded when calculating any MDT.⁸⁶²⁰

VI.236. In response to these arguments, the OFT notes that the adjustment at step 3 of the penalty calculation is intended to ensure that the penalty represents a proportion of the undertaking's total turnover sufficient to deter that undertaking and other undertakings from similar behaviour in the future, and this outcome would not necessarily be achieved by using turnover from the year prior to the Infringement, particularly where an undertaking's turnover has grown considerably in the years since the Infringement took place.

VI.237. Around 15 Parties⁸⁶²¹ suggested in their representations that the OFT should limit its assessment of sufficient deterrence at step 3, to the turnover generated by the Participating Company, and/or in the product market represented by the Infringement. For example, John Sisk and Sicon stated that the MDT should not apply to Sicon's turnover derived from activities outside the UK⁸⁶²² and Crest stated that its turnover should not be taken into account at step 3 as it was not active in the particular trade affected by the Infringement.⁸⁶²³ Simons Group submitted that applying an MDT by reference to total turnover results in unfair treatment to diversified companies with substantial activities outside construction, as they will have a much larger multiplier added to their penalty, despite the fact that the majority of their business is not affected by cover pricing and is competition law compliant.⁸⁶²⁴ Mowlem and Galliford Try objected to the application of an MDT as in their view it results in a penalty which bears no link to the impact of an Infringement.⁸⁶²⁵

VI.238. However, the point of the adjustment at step 3 is to ensure that the penalty as a whole is sufficient to deter companies from engaging in similar conduct in the future. It is therefore necessary to ensure that the adjustment takes into account both the overall size of the economic undertaking of which the Participating Company formed a part (where applicable), and the total turnover of that economic undertaking, not just the part of the turnover represented by the market in which the Infringement occurred. For large companies with many interests it is important that the overall penalty represents a sufficiently large proportion of their total turnover to deter them, and to deter similarly sized companies, from engaging in similar behaviour not only in the relevant market but also in the other markets in which they operate.

VI.239. Furthermore, the CAT has recognised that, whilst up to 10 per cent of relevant turnover is an appropriate starting point for penalties, the need to achieve sufficient deterrence may require the OFT to go well beyond this (subject only to the statutory cap at step 5).⁸⁶²⁶

VI.240. Renew/Allenbuild and Bullock stated that, where a parent and subsidiary formed part of one undertaking at the time of an Infringement but have since separated, the MDT should be assessed separately by reference to the turnover of each currently independent undertaking, in order to assess the deterrent effect separately for each of them.⁸⁶²⁷ As noted at paragraph II.89 above, the OFT is holding Renew and Bullock jointly and severally liable for Bullock's participation in its Infringement. As the OFT is imposing a single penalty on these entities, it does not consider it appropriate (or indeed practicable) to calculate the MDT separately for each of them. Notwithstanding this, Bullock's liability for this Infringement will be limited by virtue of the statutory cap at step 5, to the extent that its penalty would otherwise exceed 10 per cent of its turnover.

VI.241. Approximately 15 Parties⁸⁶²⁸ stated that the OFT's proposed approach to MDT, as set out in the Statement, went beyond that endorsed by the CAT in Makers.⁸⁶²⁹ There was, however, some disagreement amongst those Parties as to how the MDT had been calculated in Makers and, consequently, how they suggested the OFT should apply any MDT in this case.

- Around 10 Parties suggested that the relevant market in Makers was very localised and resulted in a small penalty, so the MDT was calculated by reference to national turnover in the affected product market, but was not applied to total turnover.⁸⁶³⁰

- Quarmby stated that the MDT was applied to Makers' total turnover, but not to the turnover of its parent company.⁸⁶³¹
- Mowlem stated that the MDT in Makers was applied by reference to total turnover, but the relevant market in that case was national, whereas the relevant markets are regional in the present case. Consequently, the use of total turnover in this case would result in a disproportionate increase in penalty.⁸⁶³²
- Interserve and Simons Group submitted that, whilst the MDT in Makers was calculated by reference to total turnover, that case did not involve the same degree of prioritisation and consolidation as this case. As a result, they stated that any MDT applied in this case should be calculated by reference to total UK turnover in relation to either competitively tendered work or all construction work.⁸⁶³³

VI.242. In response to these arguments, the OFT notes that in Makers the MDT was applied by reference to the total turnover of Makers, which was the infringing undertaking and addressee of the OFT's decision in that case (the penalty was calculated as if Makers had achieved 15 per cent of its total turnover in the relevant market).⁸⁶³⁴ This accords with the approach adopted by the OFT in the present case. Any MDT applied at step 3 is calculated by reference to the total turnover of the undertaking in question (see paragraph VI.210).

VI.243. Where an undertaking consists of parent and subsidiary companies, the MDT is calculated by reference to the total turnover of the entire undertaking, in other words, the consolidated turnover of the parent company.

VI.244. The OFT notes that the 'ultimate holding company' of Makers was Keller Group plc ('Keller').⁸⁶³⁵ Keller was, however, not an addressee of the OFT's decision in that case; the infringing undertaking and addressee of the OFT's decision in that case was Makers itself (rather than a larger undertaking comprising both Makers and Keller). For this reason, Keller's turnover was not taken into account by the OFT in calculating Makers' penalty. Given that in this case the Decision is addressed not only to the Participant Companies but also to relevant parent companies, the OFT does not consider that its approach to the calculation of the penalties at step 3 in this case is inconsistent with that adopted in Makers. Moreover, as discussed in paragraph VI.11 above, the OFT is not in any event bound by its decisional practice in relation to the calculation of penalties in previous decisions.

VI.245. Willmott Dixon also stated that there is no reason to apply an MDT unless there is a dramatic reduction in turnover in the relevant market in the year used as the basis for calculation, and that the general scheme of guidance suggests there should only be a revision upwards in unusual circumstances.⁸⁶³⁶ Again, the OFT disagrees with this characterisation of its Penalty Guidance. As noted above, deterrence is an important part of the OFT's policy and one which has been endorsed by the CAT. Willmott Dixon also stated that, since the relevant geographic markets are narrow in this case, any MDT applied should be less than the 15 per cent applied in Makers as most Parties would not generate such a high proportion of their total turnover in such small markets.⁸⁶³⁷ In response to this, the OFT would note that the purpose of the MDT is not to replicate the 'average' or 'standard' proportion of total turnover represented by relevant turnover across the Parties. Rather, it is intended to ensure that the penalties imposed on the Parties represent a sufficient proportion of their total turnover to have a deterrent effect.

Conclusion on level of MDT

- VI.246. For the reasons set out above, the penalties of those Parties whose circumstances are as set out in paragraph VI.209 above will be increased at step 3 to the level of the applicable MDT.
- VI.247. For those Parties who do not have any Infringements involving compensation payments, the MDT is set at 0.75 per cent of total turnover in the last business year prior to this Decision.
- VI.248. For those Parties who do have at least one Infringement involving a compensation payment, the MDT is set at 1.05 per cent of total turnover in the last business year prior to this Decision. The MDT is Party-specific, that is it will apply at this level for such Parties, irrespective of whether the Infringement to which the MDT applies is itself a compensation payment.
- VI.249. The levels of MDT applied in this Decision are the same as those used in the OFT's previous investigations into bid rigging activity in the roofing industry.⁸⁶³⁸ The OFT considered whether the MDT should be set at a higher level than in those previous cases, given that a number of the Infringements took place after the OFT issued those decisions (the first of which was issued in March 2004) and there was no evidence that the construction industry as a whole had reduced its involvement in cover pricing to any significant extent during the period from the OFT's roofing decisions to the issue of the Statement in April 2008.
- VI.250. The OFT notes, however, the compliance efforts taken within the industry generally since the issue of the Statement, for example, Building Magazine's 'Rebuilding Trust' campaign and the UK Construction Group and National Federation of Builders code of conduct on competition compliance, each of which has been signed up to by a number of Parties.
- VI.251. The OFT has also given consideration to the Parties' arguments in response to the Statement, to the effect that many of the Infringements occurred before the OFT's roofing decisions and that there was general widespread ignorance about the illegality of cover pricing as demonstrated by the text book referred to in paragraph IV.19 above. While such arguments do not excuse the practice of cover pricing, since ignorance of the law is no defence, the OFT has taken them into account when deciding the level of adjustment at step 3 and has therefore decided to maintain the MDT at the same levels as those used previously.

VI.252. However, it should be clearly noted by the Parties and by other firms, both in the construction industry and more generally, that cover pricing in whatever form is an infringement by object of the Chapter I prohibition and that the OFT may well consider it appropriate to apply a significantly higher MDT in any future cases involving cover pricing and/ or compensation payments, in order to achieve sufficient deterrence.

VI.253. Pearce Group submitted that, whatever approach the OFT adopted to MDT, the figure derived after its application should then be adjusted for duration under step 2.⁸⁶³⁹ The suggested approach of revisiting step 2 does not accord with the Penalty Guidance. In any event, the OFT is not making any adjustment for duration in this case (see paragraph VI.188).

Calculation of MDT for Parties that did not trade in the business year preceding the decision

VI.254. As noted at paragraphs VI.94 to VI.97, a number of Parties did not trade in the business year preceding the date of this Decision. Where no accounts have been published or prepared in recent years, the OFT is using the turnover figures from the most recent period of more than six months in which they have been published or prepared. Where figures have been published or prepared for a limited period in excess of six months but less than a year, the OFT is pro-rating figures up to the full 12 month period.

VI.255. In calculating the MDT (where it is applicable), the OFT is therefore using turnover figures as described below in each of the affected Parties' individual penalty calculation sections.

Infringements to which the MDT does not apply, where the penalty at the end of step 2 is zero

VI.256. Where the relevant turnover of an undertaking is zero and the penalty figure reached at the end of step 2 is therefore zero, the OFT may adjust the penalty at step 3.⁸⁶⁴⁰ This may be the case for a variety of reasons, for example, where the undertaking has ceased trading altogether, where the undertaking in question remains in business but has exited the relevant product or geographic market since the infringements took place, or, in bidding markets, where the undertaking has been unsuccessful in winning tenders in the relevant year. In setting penalties for an undertaking (Price) with nil turnover in *WM Roofing II*⁸⁶⁴¹, the CAT stated:

'We take into account the penalties imposed on the other undertakings, the relationship between the turnover of those undertakings and the penalties imposed on them, that Price had no relevant turnover, that Price only committed one infringement but that there was involvement on the part of a director and also that the OFT's calculation of Price's penalty for deterrent effect was necessarily based on an arbitrary assessment since Price had no relevant turnover.'

- VI.257. Although as noted in paragraph VI.215 above the OFT is applying the MDT only once for each Party, to the Infringement with the highest penalty at the end of step 2, the OFT does not consider it appropriate that a Party should avoid a penalty altogether for any of its Infringements by virtue of the Party having no turnover in the relevant market (other than where, in the case of a leniency Party, the Infringement is a But For Infringement, as discussed in paragraph II.1475 above and at paragraph VI.385 below). In many cases the Parties were taking a cover price because the relevant job was one that they did not want, often because it was not their normal type of work. The OFT nevertheless considers that the need for deterrence applies broadly and is not limited to markets or sectors in which undertakings are currently operating. There is a need to deter undertakings from infringing also in markets they have exited, or where they have never carried out any work, and this would not be achieved if companies faced no penalty in respect of Infringements affecting such markets.
- VI.258. The OFT has therefore used a proxy figure for any second or third Infringements in respect of which the penalty is nil at the end of step 2. The OFT informed the Parties by means of a letter dated 15 April 2009 that it proposed to use a percentage of the relevant Party's total turnover in the business year preceding the OFT's decision for this purpose. The OFT indicated in its letter that the proxy figure would be based on some kind of average percentage of total turnover represented by the penalty reached at the end of step 2, for all Infringements (regardless of the market in which they occurred) where relevant turnover is more than nil. The OFT considered this to be a robust proxy that, in view of the number of Infringements involved, would be relatively unaffected by the particular market positions of other Parties.
- VI.259. In response to the OFT's letter, several Parties took the opportunity to repeat a number of the representations already made in response to the Statement, for example on matters such as the fairness of an MDT, the level of MDT, or the fairness of using turnover in the year prior to decision rather than in the year prior to infringement, and applied them in addition specifically to this particular issue. The Parties' representations on these matters have already been addressed in the preceding paragraphs, including to the extent that they are of relevance to this issue, and the OFT does not repeat them or the OFT's response here. However, some Parties made additional arguments specifically in relation to the proposals set out in the preceding paragraph, and these are dealt with in the paragraphs below.
- VI.260. A number of Parties⁸⁶⁴² stated that the OFT's proposals did not contain enough specificity for them to make meaningful representations. Parties such as Interserve and Kier said that the OFT had allowed itself a wide margin of discretion in making this proposal, while Parties such as Allenbuild/Renew, Greswolde and Morgan Ashurst said that given the lack of information any detailed response they made would be speculative in nature. Some Parties⁸⁶⁴³

⁸⁶⁴² For example, letter from Ackroyd & Abbott, 29 April 2009; letter from Corringway, 13 May 2009; letter from Greswolde, 6 May 2009; letter from Interserve, 29 April 2009; letter from Kier, 29 April 2009; letter from Bluestone, 6 May 2009; letter from Propency, 28 April 2009; and letter from Quarmby, 28 April 2009.

⁸⁶⁴³ For example, letter from Stainforth, 29 April 2009; and letter from Strata, 28 April 2009.

suggested that the OFT should have issued an amended or supplementary Statement of Objections in order to present this proposal to them.

- VI.261. In response, the OFT considers that its letter of 15 April 2009 discussed in sufficient detail the nature of its proposal, as set out in paragraphs VI.257 and VI.258 above, and that this was specific enough for the Parties to make meaningful representations based on the extent to which they considered the proposal would affect their own position. Indeed, this is demonstrated by the fact that several Parties did make such representations, as discussed in the following paragraphs. It was not necessary or appropriate for the OFT to discuss detailed figures at that stage since these could only be calculated once updated turnover figures had been received from all of the Parties and the OFT could determine the resulting levels of penalties, both overall and at each step of the calculation.
- VI.262. Some Parties⁸⁶⁴⁴ noted that the OFT had stated in the Statement that it would apply the MDT only once for each undertaking, since this would provide sufficient deterrence for companies considering engaging in bid rigging in the future, and suggested that this additional proposal departed from that position. Other Parties, such as Interserve and Simons Group, asked why it mattered if some Infringements faced a penalty of nil, providing overall the penalty was sufficiently high in the OFT's view.⁸⁶⁴⁵
- VI.263. As noted in paragraph VI.257 above, this issue is concerned not with the overall level of the penalties imposed on a Party but with ensuring that Parties do not avoid a penalty merely because in the year prior to the Decision they happen to have had no turnover in the market concerned. Rather, the OFT considers that the Parties should face a penalty for each Infringement in which they were involved, irrespective of whether they happen to have generated turnover in the market or markets affected and that to do otherwise would be inequitable for those Parties found to have been involved in the same number of Infringements which also happened to have generated turnover in the relevant market concerned. Applying a proxy to calculate the penalty for a Party's second and/or third Infringements in circumstances where it had no turnover in the relevant market or markets addresses this potential inconsistency. The OFT notes that some Parties, such as Crest Nicholson, have supported the OFT's position in this respect.⁸⁶⁴⁶
- VI.264. Ackroyd & Abbott and Propensity suggested that if the proposal were adopted, the OFT should only establish the appropriate level of MDT after first aggregating each Party's penalties for each of its Infringements including the additional amount for the second and third Infringements where applicable. However, the effect of this would be that Parties which had infringed twice or three times would face the same level of penalties as those Parties that had infringed only once. The OFT does not consider this to be an equitable outcome, for the reasons stated in paragraph VI.257 above.
- VI.265. Milward referred the OFT to paragraph 2.13 of its Penalty Guidance where it is stated that the OFT may adjust the penalty at step 3 in the case of nil relevant ⁸⁶⁴⁴ For example, letter from Ackroyd & Abbott, 29 April 2009; letter from Milward, 29 April 2009; letter from Propensity, 28 April 2009; letter from Quarmby, 28 April 2009; letter from Stainforth, 29 April 2009; and letter from Strata, 28 April 2009.

⁸⁶⁴⁵ Letter from Interserve, 29 April 2009; and letter from Simons, 29 April 2009.

turnover 'in exceptional circumstances', and noted that if the additional amount were to be applied to every Party with nil relevant turnover in a market this would not constitute exceptional circumstances. It suggested that the OFT had to justify why exceptional circumstances applied in this case. However, the wording of this paragraph does not say that the OFT is entitled to apply an uplift only in exceptional circumstances – as is clear from the CAT's endorsement of the OFT's MDT approach in Apex and Makers – rather, it suggests that nil relevant turnover will only apply in exceptional circumstances. The fact that it occurs relatively frequently in the present case is a consequence of the relatively narrow market definitions adopted by the OFT in this case.

- VI.266. Milward also suggested that the proposal discriminates against small and medium-sized companies because they are more likely to incur peaks and troughs resulting in nil turnover in a particular market in a particular year. However, there is little evidence of this happening from the turnover figures presented to the OFT – it is more the case that some Parties, regardless of their size, had nil turnover in a particular market on a regular basis. For this reason, Simons Group's alternative proposal of using an average of turnover achieved in the relevant market over a number of years might have been useful for some Parties but would make no difference to the position for several Parties that have never actively operated in the relevant market.
- VI.267. Some Parties⁸⁶⁴⁷ suggested that the proposal would result in arbitrary and unfair outcomes whereby, all other things being equal, Parties with very low relevant turnover in a market would end up with a lower penalty than Parties with nil turnover in a market. The OFT acknowledges that this is a potential concern but notes that the impact of this is in fact minimal given the relatively low amount by which penalties are in fact being increased where a Party's turnover in the relevant market is nil. As previously noted in paragraph VI.262 above, the OFT considers that more inequitable outcomes would result if it did not adopt this measure, since Parties with two Infringements with relevant turnover would end up paying a higher penalty than Parties with three Infringements where relevant turnover is nil in two or three of the relevant markets, all other things being equal.
- VI.268. Mowlem suggested that a large adjustment at step 3 would negate the relevance of step 1 of the penalty calculation and thereby undo all the work the OFT had carried out on market definition in this case, resulting in disproportionate penalties that do not bear any relation to the Infringements.⁸⁶⁴⁸ Again, the OFT acknowledges that this might be the outcome if it were to impose a large additional amount at step 3 for additional infringements where turnover in the relevant market is nil, but does not consider this has happened in the present case given the relatively low amount by which penalties are in fact being increased where a Party's turnover in the relevant market is nil.
- VI.269. Mowlem also suggested that when calculating the proxy figure, the OFT should base it on an average percentage of total turnover represented by the penalty reached at the end of step 2, for all Infringements, not only regardless of the market in which they occurred, but also including those Infringements where the Party's relevant turnover was nil.⁸⁶⁴⁹ The OFT has carefully considered ⁸⁶⁴⁷ For example, letter from Ackroyd & Abbott, 29 April 2009; letter from Milward, 29 April 2009; letter from Propensity, 28 April 2009; and letter from Simons Group, 29 April 2009.

⁸⁶⁴⁹ Written representations of Mowlem, 27 June 2009, paragraphs 4.16 to 4.20.

Mowlem's suggestion and decided that it would provide a fairer outcome than its original proposal since this reflects the aggregate situation of all Parties in all Infringements. The OFT is therefore using a figure based broadly on the median percentage of total turnover represented by the penalty reached at the end of step 2, for all Infringements.

VI.270. The proxy figure is 0.14 per cent and the OFT is applying this percentage to Parties' most recent total turnover figures, for any Infringements where the most recent relevant turnover figure is nil, in order to derive a figure to be reached at the end of step 2 (and at the end of step 3), for any Infringements to which the MDT does not apply (i.e. Parties' second and/or third Infringements), where the penalty at the end of step 2 would otherwise be zero.

Cumulative effect of the aggregate penalty for Parties with more than one Infringement in the same relevant market

VI.271. Around four Parties argued that the MDT should also act as a maximum cap on each penalty imposed in this case.⁸⁶⁵⁰ Robert Woodhead stated that if a Party obtains more than 15 per cent of its total turnover in the relevant market, then it will be subject to a higher penalty than that recognised by the OFT as being required for deterrence.⁸⁶⁵¹

VI.272. The OFT does not accept these Parties' arguments, since the MDT represents the minimum figure necessary in the OFT's view to act as a proper deterrent. Moreover, the application of a maximum as well as a minimum threshold at step 3 would result in one single percentage of total turnover to apply at step 3 and would therefore completely negate the considerations at steps 1 and 2.

VI.273. Nevertheless, in response to representations from Parties such as Strata⁸⁶⁵², the OFT has considered whether any form of reduction would be appropriate at step 3 in certain cases in order to ensure that the cumulative impact of the aggregate penalty is not excessive where a Party has been found to have participated in more than one Infringement in the same relevant market and a large proportion of its total turnover in the relevant business year was achieved in that market. An aggregate penalty may be considered excessive if it significantly exceeds the equivalent penalties for other parties in the same case that were involved in very similar infringements and is well above the level necessary to ensure deterrence. The OFT has concluded that where a Party has either two or three Infringements in the same market and as a result its overall penalty for all Infringements at the end of step 3 would amount to more than 4.5 per cent of its total turnover, a downward adjustment should be made at step 3 to each of the Infringements in that market to bring the resulting overall penalty for each of those Parties to a level which is sufficient to ensure deterrence and which is within the range of penalties faced by the other Parties. This adjustment is discussed below in relation to each of the relevant Parties' individual penalty calculations and it applies to the following [...] Parties:

Materiality

VI.274. Durkan stated in its representations that the level of penalties contemplated by the OFT in the Statement would be unjust since the Infringements in aggregate did not affect a material level of construction activity, and no single Infringement is likely to have had a significant impact on the UK construction industry. In relation to its own Infringements, Durkan stated that the duration was limited and the cumulative value was low relative to the value of the UK construction industry as a whole. Durkan therefore suggested that its penalty should be adjusted at step 3 to reflect this lack of materiality.⁸⁶⁵³

VI.275. The OFT does not consider that the Infringements particularised in this Decision lack materiality. Indeed, the OFT considers them to be serious breaches of the Act, as reflected in the starting point adopted at step 1. The OFT therefore does not accept Durkan's suggestion that its penalty should be adjusted downwards at step 3.

Financial position

VI.276. In the Statement, the OFT noted that the financial position of the Parties is a relevant consideration in the context of determining whether the sum reached at the end of step 2 is an appropriate amount for deterrence, and that it is within the OFT's margin of appreciation to take the financial position of an undertaking into account but there can be no expectation that a penalty will be adjusted on this account.⁸⁶⁵⁴ The OFT noted that financial hardship claims would be considered strictly on a case-by-case basis.

VI.277. [...][C]⁸⁶⁵⁵ referred to the Commission's Fining Guidelines on financial hardship and Advocate General Slynn's Opinion in *Musique Diffusion*⁸⁶⁵⁶, which refers to the need to have regard to the ability of undertakings to pay. Dukeries submitted that the OFT was bound to follow the same approach as a result of section 60 of the Act. For the reasons set out in paragraphs VI.7 to VI.10 above, the OFT does not accept this submission. The OFT has, however, considered financial hardship claims in line with its own Penalty Guidance and practice, and the principles outlined by the CAT.

- VI.278. Balfour Beatty Group submitted that the OFT should take into account the impact of penalties on a Party's profits.⁸⁶⁵⁷ The Penalty Guidance does not require the OFT to consider impact on profits and, other than as a part of the broader assessment of financial position for those firms that have advanced a sufficiently well supported claim for financial hardship, the OFT does not consider that there is any reason to depart from the guidance and introduce an assessment of penalty relative to profit levels.
- VI.279. In response to the Statement, around 80 of the Parties made representations of some form or other regarding their own individual financial position. Many of these representations were, however, either not evidenced or so poorly evidenced that the OFT was unable to make a proper assessment of the Party's financial position.
- VI.280. In this respect, the OFT notes the principles adopted by the CAT and set out in the following extracts from the CAT's judgment in the Sepia Logistics case which were also cited in the Statement.
- VI.281. The onus is upon the party in question to provide information sufficient for the OFT to make a proper assessment of its financial hardship – it is not the OFT's responsibility to search for this information or make additional enquiries of the party:

*'The financial position of the undertaking in question is not something that the OFT must consider in all cases, but rather is something that the OFT may consider, upon the application of the undertaking. In making such an application, it seems to us that the onus must be on the applicant to provide the regulator with all information and/ or documentation it wishes to have taken into account ... It is for the applicant to satisfy the OFT that they are eligible for a reduction in penalty, and not for the OFT to disprove that application. Given that in this case the OFT did not have at the time it took its Decision sufficient information to assess the financial position of the undertaking as a whole, we think it was reasonable for the OFT to conclude that a reduction in the level of penalty on the grounds of financial hardship was not justified.'*⁸⁶⁵⁸

- VI.282. Many Parties made assertions that the imposition of a financial penalty would adversely affect their financial position, but did not provide the OFT with evidence in support of that claim. Without supporting information or documentation which would enable the OFT to assess the financial position of these undertakings, a reduction in the level of penalty on the grounds of financial hardship cannot be justified in these cases.
- VI.283. The CAT has also held that where an economic undertaking comprises more than one legal entity, it is necessary for the undertaking to provide evidence of the financial position of all of its various component parts, in order for the OFT to be able to assess whether there is genuine financial hardship for the undertaking as a whole:

'we support the OFT's finding that PC, SGH, PBM and DQS all form part of a single undertaking, and that the OFT was within its rights to hold DQS and PC

*jointly and severally liable for the penalty. It follows naturally that in order to assess the financial situation of that undertaking, the OFT would have required information on each of the companies which form part of that undertaking.*⁸⁶⁵⁹

Adequately supported financial hardship claims

VI.284. The following Parties made a claim of financial hardship with supporting information and/or documentation, which the OFT cross checked against publicly filed accounts available from Companies House. However, the OFT was unable to conclude that there was sufficient indication that the penalty which the OFT is imposing would seriously threaten the viability of the Party concerned. Accordingly, no reduction in the level of penalty on the grounds of financial hardship can be justified in these cases.

[...][C]

VI.285. In making this assessment, the OFT has had regard in particular to the following three factors:

- The level of net current assets relative to the size of penalty for the Party;
- The level of net assets, adjusted to take account of dividend payments made out of the undertaking in the last three years, relative to the size of penalty for the Party; and
- The level of profit (or loss) after tax averaged over the last three years for which accounts were available, relative to the size of penalty for the Party.

VI.286. The OFT has also had regard to its decision in the present case to allow all Parties to pay the penalty by instalments over a three year period, subject to payment of interest and other conditions (discussed below at paragraphs VI.290 and VI.665, and set out in more detail in the covering letters to the Parties accompanying this Decision).

VI.287. Of the Parties listed in paragraph VI.284 above, there were some for which there was a reasonably strong indication on one or more of the bases set out in paragraph VI.285 above that the imposition of the penalty might threaten the viability of that Party, but the OFT has nonetheless concluded that, in light of other factors, the Party was not eligible for a reduction in penalty. For such Parties, an individual assessment has been briefly set out in the relevant Party's penalty calculation section below.

VI.288. Finally, each of the following Parties submitted a claim that the penalty would cause financial hardship, accompanied with supporting information and/or documentation, which the OFT cross checked against publicly filed accounts available from Companies House. On the basis of these claims and consideration of the financial circumstances of these Parties, the OFT considers that for each of these Parties there is sufficient indication that the penalty which the OFT would otherwise impose would seriously threaten the viability of the Party concerned. Accordingly, reduced penalties are warranted in each case. The OFT sets out a brief assessment of each Party's individual circumstances in the relevant Party's penalty calculation section below.

i. [...]C]

Financial position of the construction industry generally

VI.289. The OFT also noted in the Statement more generally that it does not consider that there are any special characteristics of the construction industry which would warrant reduced penalties for all or individual Parties on the basis of financial position. In response, around 10 Parties⁸⁶⁶⁰ made general representations to the effect that if the OFT were to set penalties at too high a level, this would have serious financial consequences, given the current condition of the world economy and the UK construction industry in particular, and that this in turn would have an effect on competition in the construction industry. As noted above, where the OFT is satisfied that a penalty will affect the viability of a specific Party, it will consider making an adjustment to that penalty. This will reflect economic circumstances more widely, insofar as those circumstances are detrimental to a particular Party's viability. The OFT does not consider, however, that it is appropriate to reduce penalties across the board as a result of the current economic climate, as not all Parties will be similarly affected.

⁸⁶⁶⁰ For example, written representations of Bullock, 26 June 2008, paragraph 6.27; written representations of the Construction Confederation, 16 June 2008, paragraph 3.9; written representations of Beaufort, 27 June 2008, page 1.

VI.290. In light of the current economic climate, and in particular its effect on the UK construction industry, however, the OFT has decided in the particular circumstances of this case to offer the Parties a more extended period in which to pay their penalty (subject to payment of interest on the outstanding balance). In making this offer to all Parties rather than on a case by case basis in response to individual representations, the OFT has also had regard to the exceptional number of Parties involved in this case and the public interest in ensuring that the OFT is able to deal with the matter as efficiently and effectively as possible. It should not therefore be assumed that the OFT would adopt a similar approach in other cases, particularly where these involve fewer parties. Details of this extended period and the applicable interest rate have been provided to each of the Parties in the covering letter accompanying this Decision.

Step 4 – adjustment for aggravating and mitigating factors

Aggravating factors

VI.291. The OFT may increase the penalty at step 4 where there are other aggravating factors, or decrease it where there are mitigating factors.⁸⁶⁶¹

Repeat infringements

VI.292. The OFT notes that where parties have committed repeated infringements, this constitutes an aggravating factor under step 4 of the penalty calculation. The magnitude of the penalty may therefore be adjusted to reflect the number of infringements that each party has committed.⁸⁶⁶² However, in the present case, the OFT considers that such an uplift would be unnecessary and duplicative, given that it is imposing a separate penalty for each Infringement, up to a maximum of three penalties per Party. Moreover, none of the Parties has previously been found to have infringed the Chapter I or Chapter II prohibitions. There will therefore be no increase to the level of penalty for repeat infringements.

VI.293. Around 20 Parties⁸⁶⁶³ included their comments on the treatment of repeat infringements in their representations regarding the OFT's imposition of separate penalties for a maximum of three Infringements per Party in this case. The OFT has discussed this issue at paragraphs VI.12 to VI.23 above.

Role of the undertaking as leader/instigator

VI.294. The OFT also notes that the role of an undertaking as a leader in, or an instigator of, the Infringement may be an aggravating factor.⁸⁶⁶⁴ The OFT considers that 'instigation' in this context is something more than mere initiation of collusion by being the first party to make contact with others or the first to suggest collusion in relation to a specific tender.

⁸⁶⁶⁴ Penalty Guidance, at paragraph 2.15.

- VI.295. The OFT has uncovered evidence of one instance, Infringement 158⁸⁶⁶⁵, where a Party, Wildgoose, which was responsible for managing the contract process on behalf of the client (Chesterfield Borough Council), went beyond this and sought to reach a situation where the other bidders (Greenwood and Herbert Baggaley) submitted cover prices so that Wildgoose would win the contract. The OFT considers that Wildgoose used its position to instigate this Infringement by actively asking Greenwood and Herbert Baggaley to submit cover prices.
- VI.296. Wildgoose made representations about its motivation for engaging in this conduct and the impact on the customer, which are addressed at paragraphs IV.4347 to IV.4439 above.
- VI.297. As the OFT noted in the Statement, it does not consider that the instigation of this Infringement amounted to coercion, and taking into account all of the circumstances of this Infringement the OFT is limiting the increase in the penalty imposed on Wildgoose for instigating Infringement 158 to a 5 per cent uplift at step 4 of the penalty calculation. The OFT also confirms that Wildgoose's role as an instigator in this Infringement does not affect its status as a leniency applicant.
- VI.298. Furthermore, the OFT does not consider that Wildgoose's instigation of this Infringement in any way diminishes the culpability of each of Herbert Baggaley and Greenwood. The OFT is not therefore reducing their respective penalties for Infringement 158.
- VI.299. In addition to instigating cover pricing, Wildgoose also made a related payment of £1,000 to an individual in connection with Infringement 158 (see paragraphs IV.4347 to IV.4439 above). For the purposes of calculating penalties, the OFT is not treating Infringement 158 as involving a compensation payment (in other words, it will attract only a 5 per cent starting point at step 1) as it does not consider that this payment was made to another undertaking involved in the tender, in the same manner as the other compensation payments in this case. However, the OFT considers that making a payment to an individual in connection with cover pricing is a serious matter, and is an aggravating factor which should properly be reflected in Wildgoose's penalty. The OFT is therefore increasing the penalty imposed on Wildgoose in respect of Infringement 158 by a further 15 per cent at step 4 of the penalty calculation, in addition to the 5 per cent uplift described at paragraph VI.297 above.
- VI.300. Some Parties noted that in the Infringements set out in the Statement they had only given cover prices, and therefore that they had not instigated any of the cover pricing arrangements.⁸⁶⁶⁶ However, the OFT considers that in the circumstances where cover pricing was endemic by the industry's own admission and existed as a background practice and understanding, it is not of material significance that any particular party initiated a cover pricing arrangement by requesting the cover price. The provider of the cover price responded to the request, not with a refusal on the basis that it was illegal, but instead with a price that was related in some way to its own bid and that was designed to deceive the procurer into thinking that it had received a genuine bid from the recipient of the cover price. No discount can be given for such activity, the object of which must be at least to distort competition. See also paragraph VI.112 above, which responds to similar points made in respect of step 1 of the penalty calculation.

Involvement of directors

- VI.301. The OFT considers that the involvement of company directors in the Infringements is an aggravating factor. This is in line with the approach taken by the OFT in its previous decisions relating to the roofing sector.⁸⁶⁶⁷
- VI.302. In its written representations, Admiral noted that its directors were also its shareholders and that there was therefore no independent body of persons to whom a definable duty was owed.⁸⁶⁶⁸ The OFT does not consider that this gave Admiral's directors an excuse to act outside the law.
- VI.303. In their representations, a number of the smaller Parties in this case⁸⁶⁶⁹ noted that in a small family run company, unlike in a large company, decision making is in practice in the hands of only a small number of people and so it is much more likely that directors will be involved. They argued that as a result, an uplift for director involvement would discriminate unfairly against the smaller Parties.
- VI.304. The OFT notes, however, that company directors have an additional responsibility, beyond that of other employees, not to infringe the law. The OFT considers that this applies equally, regardless of the size of the company.
- VI.305. Some infringing subsidiary companies⁸⁶⁷⁰ made the point that although directors of the subsidiary had been involved in Infringements, they were not directors of the parent company at that time. As the OFT is imposing penalties based on the consolidated turnover of the parent company, they said, it would not be right to apply an increase for the involvement of someone who was not a director of that parent company. However, the OFT considers that the parent companies bore responsibility for the acts of their subsidiaries and for the acts of those subsidiary companies' directors whom, in most if not all cases, they were responsible for appointing. The OFT therefore considers that it is appropriate for an uplift to be applied at step 4 of the penalty calculation for the involvement of directors, whether they were directors of parent companies or directors of infringing subsidiary companies.
- VI.306. Some of the leniency Parties⁸⁶⁷¹ complained that they were being penalised for a full and frank disclosure. One leniency Party suggested that it should receive a discount for cooperation equivalent to the value of the increase for director involvement, since the OFT would not have known about it but for that leniency

⁸⁶⁶⁹ For example, written representations of Hall, 25 June 2008, paragraph 131; written representations of J H Hallam, 27 June 2008, paragraph 123; and written representations of Hill, 23 June 2008, paragraph 21. Similarly, Bramall submitted that the likelihood of a director being involved in an Infringement would depend on how 'flat' the company's structure is (written representations of Bramall and Frank Haslam Milan, 27 June 2008, paragraph 6.29).

⁸⁶⁷⁰ For example, written representations of Balfour Beatty group, 27 June 2008, paragraphs 8.28 to 8.37.

⁸⁶⁷¹ For example, written representations of Irwins and Jack Lunn, 27 June 2008, paragraph 132; written representations of W R Bloodworth, 27 June 2008, paragraph 119; and written representations of Bramall and Frank Haslam Milan, 27 June 2008, paragraphs 6.30 to 6.32.

Party's information.⁸⁶⁷² However, the information regarding director involvement might well have become evident to the OFT in any event as part of its investigation – for example, from a contemporaneous document with an individual's name on it obtained or found on a visit under section 27 or 28, or from witness testimony from another company involved in an Infringement to the effect that he or she spoke to the director in question about the cover price. This is part of the overall assessment as to whether to apply for leniency, and leniency applicants have a duty to give all available and relevant information to the OFT. Furthermore, the OFT considers that the leniency Parties in this case are gaining considerable benefit in return for their cooperation, in terms of complete immunity from penalty on some Infringements, and substantial discounts from the penalty on all remaining Infringements, regardless of the fact that they may have infringed on a large number of occasions and provided details of many other instances of cover pricing which the OFT is not taking forward for appropriate prioritisation reasons. It would not therefore be appropriate for the OFT to waive an increase for involvement of directors in the Infringements of these Parties.

VI.307. Other Parties argued that director involvement should not be treated as an aggravating factor if the director had since left the company⁸⁶⁷³, no longer had management responsibility⁸⁶⁷⁴, or ceased his involvement in cover pricing once he became aware that it was illegal.⁸⁶⁷⁵

VI.308. The OFT considers, however, that Boards of Directors would not be properly incentivised to ensure that they are cognisant and compliant with competition law requirements, if they could avoid increases in penalties by removing management responsibility from a director once the OFT had identified him as being involved in illegal activity, or by instructing him to cease illegal activities once the company is investigated by the OFT. Whilst the OFT welcomes the fact that directors of companies may have brought an end to infringements, it perceives this as a reactive response to the OFT's investigation, rather than a proactive approach to compliance which the OFT is seeking to promote. The OFT therefore does not accept that it should waive an increase for director involvement in any of these circumstances.

VI.309. Whilst the OFT does not accept the points made by the Parties set out in the preceding paragraphs, it has considered what would be an appropriate amount of increase for the involvement of directors in the particular circumstances of the present case. Given, in particular, the need to ensure that any adjustment is fair and proportionate for all Parties, the OFT has decided to limit the increase for director involvement at step 4 in this case to [5-10] per cent. This is at the lower end of the range of possible adjustments that the OFT may make for director involvement and it should not be assumed that the OFT would necessarily adopt the same approach in other cases.

VI.310. Annex C contains a list of the Parties whose company directors the OFT finds were involved in one or more of the Infringements.⁸⁶⁷⁶ The first table in Annex

⁸⁶⁷⁶ This Decision is concerned with liability of a corporate nature and does not deal with the possibility of Competition Disqualification Orders ('CDOs') against individual directors, which may be pursued as a

C, headed List of Parties whose directors the OFT considers were involved in every one of that Party's Infringements, by virtue of their knowledge of cover pricing within the company as described in the relevant part of Section IV.C relating to that Party, contains a list of Parties in respect of which the OFT has evidence of general director involvement in bid rigging activities for all instances of bid rigging. For these Parties, the OFT is applying a [5-10] per cent uplift at step 4 of the penalty calculation to all of the Infringements in respect of which the OFT is imposing a penalty.

VI.311. The second table in Annex C, headed List of Parties whose directors the OFT considers were involved in one or more specific Infringements, contains a list of Parties in respect of which the OFT has evidence of specific director involvement in bid rigging activities in relation to particular Infringement(s). For these Parties, the OFT is applying a [5-10] per cent uplift at step 4 of the penalty calculation to the specific Infringement(s) listed in that table in respect of which the OFT is imposing a penalty.

VI.312. Note that where a Party is listed in the second table in relation to a specific Infringement as well as more generally in the first table, the OFT is applying only one [5-10] per cent uplift at step 4 of the penalty calculation for each such Infringement.

VI.313. In respect of those Parties not listed in Annex C, Bramall submitted that these Parties' directors would also likely have been aware of cover pricing (or at least negligent if they were unaware), given that cover pricing was endemic in the construction industry.⁸⁶⁷⁷ However, the adjustments made at step 4 are to reflect the aggravating and mitigating circumstances of individual Parties and in the absence of evidence specific to a Party the OFT does not consider it would be appropriate to make an individual adjustment to that Party's penalty at step 4 based on mere supposition. The OFT also does not consider this to be a good reason for not applying an uplift to those Parties in respect of which the OFT does possess such evidence. A Party cannot hope to avoid the consequences of its own illegal conduct (or that of its directors) by suggesting that other Parties might also be culpable, particularly without any supporting evidence.

VI.314. Where the OFT identified in Annex C of the Statement that a particular director was involved in one or more Infringements and has now accepted following representations from the Party in question that either the individual was not a director and/or was not involved in any Infringements, that director's name has been removed from Annex C for the Decision and no uplift is applied to the penalty by virtue of that director's previously alleged involvement in an Infringement. Where Parties' representations in this respect have not been accepted, these are discussed either in the Party's general leniency section (section IV.C) or in the relevant Infringement description (section IV.D) above.

Intent

VI.315. The Penalty Guidance recognises that intent is a potential aggravating factor. The OFT has not attempted to determine in each case whether an Infringement separate matter following the issue of this Decision (see OFT 510 Competition Disqualification Orders (May 2003)). The OFT can confirm that, in accordance with paragraph 4.12 of that guidance, it will not apply for a CDO against any current director of a company whose company benefited from leniency in respect of the activities described in this Decision to which the grant of leniency relates.

⁸⁶⁷⁷ Written representations of Bramall and Frank Haslam Milan, 27 June 2008, paragraph 6.31.

was committed intentionally or negligently but is satisfied that they were all committed either intentionally or, at the very least, negligently. As such, the OFT will not be increasing the penalty at step 4 for intent. Likewise, the OFT is not treating alleged negligence (rather than intent) as a mitigating factor (see paragraph VI.337 below).

Mitigating factors

Compliance

- VI.316. The OFT considers that where a Party can demonstrate that it has taken adequate steps with a view to ensuring compliance with the Chapter I and Chapter II prohibitions and Articles 81 and 82 of the EC Treaty, this may be treated as a mitigating factor.⁸⁶⁷⁸ In the Statement, the OFT stated that it was of the view that in order to obtain a discount, a Party would need to show that it had introduced a compliance policy and communicated this to all appropriate members of staff since it first became aware of the OFT's investigation.
- VI.317. Most of the Parties made submissions regarding the existence of a compliance policy, in their responses to the Statement. Although these submissions varied considerably, following a detailed assessment the OFT is satisfied in the case of around 80 Parties that they have adequately demonstrated that they have taken positive steps to introduce a formal compliance policy that is appropriate for the size of the undertaking in question (taking account in each case of all the entities forming part of the undertaking concerned), and to ensure that all appropriate staff have been made properly aware of their competition law obligations. The application of a discount at step 4 for compliance is reflected in each of the relevant Parties' penalty calculations, set out below.
- VI.318. For these Parties, the OFT considers a [5-10] per cent reduction at step 4 of the penalty calculation to be appropriate. The OFT considers that these Parties are the ones that are most likely to have successfully minimised the likelihood of future infringement.
- VI.319. The remaining Parties did not provide the OFT with sufficient evidence that they had taken sufficient positive steps to introduce a formal compliance programme appropriate for the size of the undertaking (taking account in each case of all the entities forming part of the undertaking concerned), and will therefore receive no discount for compliance.

Cooperation

- VI.320. The OFT considers that cooperation which enables the enforcement process to be concluded more effectively and speedily is a mitigating factor. In the Statement, the OFT stated that if any Party had provided voluntary cooperation above and beyond its legal obligations, the OFT would consider whether it should reduce that Party's penalty. The OFT noted that it considers that the fast track procedure is a form of cooperation but that, in accordance with the OFT's Fast Track Offer, acceptance of the offer would be taken into account after step 5 of the penalty calculation. The OFT also noted that undertakings already benefiting from the leniency programme or the OFT's Fast Track Offer would not receive an additional reduction in financial penalties to reflect general cooperation.

⁸⁶⁷⁸ Penalty Guidance, at paragraph 2.16.

VI.321. The OFT further noted that, other than the voluntary assistance of Frudd which did not subsequently result in a formal grant of leniency⁸⁶⁷⁹, the OFT was not aware of any exceptional cooperation by any Party which would enable the process in this case to be concluded more efficiently and speedily, warranting a downward adjustment at step 4.

VI.322. Thomas Vale submitted that it had provided exceptional cooperation above and beyond its legal obligations, which should be recognised at step 4.⁸⁶⁸⁰ Similarly, Harper plc submitted that it had provided cooperation beyond that required under the terms of the OFT's Fast Track Offer by providing an additional list of potential infringements.⁸⁶⁸¹ As noted in the Statement, the OFT is not providing additional discounts at step 4 to Parties that are already in receipt of leniency or Fast Track discounts (see also paragraph VI.320 above).

Cooperation – New admissions

VI.323. In response to the Statement, the OFT also received new admissions from a number of Parties that had not applied for leniency and that had rejected the OFT's Fast Track Offer in respect of one or more of their Infringements. Following sight of the Statement, these Parties informed the OFT that they were satisfied they had engaged in conduct infringing the Chapter I prohibition, in respect of one or more of their Infringements.

VI.324. The OFT considers that such new admissions do warrant a discount at step 4 of the penalty calculation in this case. These Parties made the admissions without any commitment by the OFT that this would result in a penalty discount, and these admissions helped the OFT to conclude its enforcement process more effectively and speedily.⁸⁶⁸²

VI.325. However, the OFT does not consider that the new admissions should attract the same level of discount as that awarded for acceptance of the OFT's Fast Track Offer. As noted in paragraph II.1701 above, the OFT's Fast Track Offer discount was given because of the considerable benefit to the OFT's enforcement process provided by admissions from Parties that had not been granted sight of the evidence, and at a stage of the case which helped the OFT to select the tenders that would be taken forward to its Statement. In that sense, the OFT's Fast Track Offer had a number of similarities with leniency and similarly resulted in a discount from the final penalty after step 5 of the penalty calculation.

VI.326. The new admissions, by contrast, have been made after sight of the OFT's evidence and at a very late stage in the case. Nevertheless, as noted above in paragraph VI.324, the new admissions do add some value and the OFT is therefore granting the following discounts at step 4 of the penalty calculation to these Parties:

- where a Party has made a clear admission of the facts, or alternatively a clear positive statement that it does not dispute or contest the facts: [10-15] per cent discount

⁸⁶⁸¹ Written representations of Harper plc, 27 June 2008, paragraph 83.

⁸⁶⁸² See Penalty Guidance, at paragraph 2.16.

- where, in addition to the above, a Party has clearly admitted that its conduct constituted an infringement of the Act: [10-15] per cent discount – this discount applies in place of, and not in addition to, the [10-15] per cent discount noted in the previous paragraph.

VI.327. The application of a discount at step 4 for new admission is reflected in each of the relevant Parties' penalty calculations, set out below. Such discount cannot, of course, be applied in respect of any Infringements where a Party is already benefiting from discount by virtue of either leniency or acceptance of the OFT's Fast Track Offer.

VI.328. Where a Party has apparently made some form of qualified new admission that is so obscurely worded or beset by equivocation within that Party's representations that it has proved impossible for the OFT to determine whether the Party is actually admitting to or denying the conduct, the OFT has not given any discount in this regard.

Other arguments on mitigating factors

VI.329. In response to the Statement, the OFT received a number of representations on other factors which the OFT does not consider warrant a discount at step 4, as follows.

VI.330. Some Parties noted variously that they had no directors involved in Infringements⁸⁶⁸³, or that they were not involved in compensation payments.⁸⁶⁸⁴ The OFT confirms that these Parties are not receiving uplifts as set out above for these factors, but the absence of these factors is not a basis for reducing these Parties' penalties further.

VI.331. Many Parties noted that they had terminated their infringing activities promptly following the OFT's intervention (or indeed before the OFT's investigation into them commenced).⁸⁶⁸⁵ The Penalty Guidance states that adjustment may be made at step 4 for this factor.⁸⁶⁸⁶ However, the OFT does not consider that it is appropriate in the present case for a discount to be given for prompt termination, given the clear illegality of price fixing and the exchange of prices between competitors.

VI.332. Some Parties noted in some detail the charitable works and community activities they had undertaken.⁸⁶⁸⁷ The OFT does not consider this to be a relevant mitigating factor that would warrant a discount from a penalty for infringement of the Chapter I prohibition.

⁸⁶⁸³ For example, written representations of Lemmeleg, 26 June 2008, paragraph 6.2.7; written representations of McGinley Holdings, 27 June 2008, paragraph 50; and written representations of A H Willis, 27 June 2008, paragraph 59(c).

⁸⁶⁸⁴ For example, written representations of Admiral, 26 June 2008, paragraph 23.12; written representations of GMI, 26 June 2008, paragraph 94; and written representations of Lindum, 27 June 2008, paragraph 32(4).

⁸⁶⁸⁵ For example, written representations of Durkan, 27 June 2008, paragraph 194; written representations of R Durnell, 27 June 2008, paragraph 217; and written representations of Strata, 27 June 2008, paragraph 2.31.

⁸⁶⁸⁶ Penalty Guidance, at paragraph 2.16.

⁸⁶⁸⁷ For example, written representations of P Casey, 27 June 2008, page 2; written representations of Dukeries, 27 June 2008, paragraph 17; and written representations of G & J Seddon, 27 June 2008, paragraph 126.

- VI.333. Many Parties noted that they had genuine uncertainty as to whether their conduct constituted an infringement.⁸⁶⁸⁸ Again, the Penalty Guidance states that adjustment may be made at step 4 for this factor.⁸⁶⁸⁹ However, the OFT does not consider that it is appropriate in the present case for a discount to be given since, as discussed in paragraph VI.44 above, by the very fact that the agreements and/or concerted practices involved collusive tendering, each of the Parties must (or at the very least should) have been aware that the agreements and/or concerted practices in which they participated had the object of preventing, restricting or distorting competition. Nevertheless, as noted above in paragraphs VI.51, VI.173 and VI.251, the OFT has taken the general level of ignorance of competition law within the industry into account (amongst other things) in deciding not to increase step 1 of the penalty above the level applied in its roofing decisions or to increase the level of the MDT above that which applied in those decisions.
- VI.334. Some Parties suggested in their representations that they should get an additional discount for having named the counter-party to their Infringement in their response to the OFT's Fast Track Offer.⁸⁶⁹⁰ However, the OFT notes that many of the Parties that responded positively to the OFT's Fast Track Offer were unable to name the counter-party because they had destroyed their relevant tender records, and does not consider that those Parties that were able to provide the name of the counter-party should benefit from an additional discount by comparison with these Parties.
- VI.335. A few Parties suggested that they were under severe pressure to engage in cover pricing in order to remain on customer tender lists, and that the OFT should treat this as a mitigating factor.⁸⁶⁹¹ Whilst the Penalty Guidance recognises that severe duress or pressure is a potential mitigating factor, the OFT does not consider that it existed in this case. According to these Parties, they engaged in illegal conduct in order to gain a commercial benefit; namely, remaining on a customer's tender list. Whilst the OFT has not attempted to measure this benefit, nor taken it into account in calculating penalties, the OFT does not consider that the prospect of missing out on such a benefit can properly be construed as giving rise to 'severe duress or pressure' to engage in a breach of the Act.
- VI.336. Several Parties submitted that the Infringement(s) in which they were involved were the responsibility of a 'rogue' employee or contractor acting outside the scope of his or her authority, in breach of company policy and/or without the knowledge of any directors, and that this should be recognised as a mitigating factor.⁸⁶⁹² The OFT considers that each undertaking is responsible for ensuring that it complies with competition law including through the promotion of an appropriate compliance 'culture', implementing suitable compliance policies and monitoring those policies to ensure that its employees, agents and contractors are aware of the requirements of competition law and do not engage in illegal conduct. Consequently, the OFT does not consider that a discount is warranted merely because an individual has acted on his or her own initiative.

⁸⁶⁸⁸ For example, written representations of Pearce, 14 July 2008, paragraph 4.15; written representations of Kier, 27 June 2008, paragraphs 3.44 to 3.45; and written representations of Linford, 26 June 2008, paragraph 9.43.

⁸⁶⁹² For example, written representations of Quarmby, 27 June 2008, paragraph 5.6; written representations of Bowmer & Kirkland, 4 July 2008, paragraph 77; and written representations of Lindum, 27 June 2008, paragraphs 49, 62 and 77.

VI.337. A number of Parties made representations to the effect that their Infringements were committed negligently, rather than intentionally. A few Parties went on specifically to submit that negligence should be treated as a mitigating factor at step 4 of the OFT's penalty calculations.⁸⁶⁹³ Some Parties also stated that negligence is a mitigating factor under the Commission's Fining Guidelines, and the OFT should have regard to this under section 60 of the Act.⁸⁶⁹⁴ As noted at paragraph VI.315 above, the OFT is not uplifting any Party's penalty for intent at step 4, but is also not treating negligence as a mitigating factor. The OFT also does not accept the Parties submissions based on section 60, for the reasons set out in paragraphs VI.7 to VI.10 above.

VI.338. Lindum⁸⁶⁹⁵ stated that willingness to apologise for an infringement is relevant at step 4, citing the CAT's judgment in Replica Kit.⁸⁶⁹⁶ The OFT does not agree with Lindum's conclusion that the CAT awarded a reduction in penalty on the basis of a willingness to apologise. Rather, the CAT considered that an update to the relevant undertaking's compliance programme and its acceptance of responsibility for the infringement could justify a small reduction in penalty. The OFT is already awarding discounts at step 4 for both compliance and admissions of liability since the Statement (see paragraphs VI.316 to VI.326 above). The OFT does not consider that a separate discount is warranted for willingness to apologise.

VI.339. Ballast Nedam stated in mitigation that it was involved in bilateral arrangements only, not involving all tendering parties.⁸⁶⁹⁷ The OFT confirms that this has been taken into account at step 1 (as a multilateral agreement or concerted practice involving all tenderers would almost certainly have attracted a higher starting percentage), but it does not warrant a discount at step 4.

VI.340. GMI stated that there was no evidence that it completed a non-collusion statement in relation to any of its Infringements, and submitted that this was a mitigating factor.⁸⁶⁹⁸ The OFT does not consider that this is a mitigating factor that warrants a discount at step 4.

VI.341. Willmott Dixon stated that, as it had admitted taking a cover price in respect of one Infringement despite the fact that the OFT's evidence was not strong and compelling, this should be treated as a mitigating factor.⁸⁶⁹⁹ The OFT refutes the suggestion that the evidence in respect of this Infringement does not meet the required evidential threshold. As noted above, the OFT is treating post-Statement admissions as a mitigating factor (see paragraphs VI.323 to VI.326).

VI.342. Willmott Dixon also stated in respect of the same Infringement that it submitted a cover price under pressure from the client, and that this should be treated as a mitigating factor.⁸⁷⁰⁰ The OFT has addressed the substance of this representation at paragraphs IV.6771 to IV.6802 above.

Consideration of alleged objectively different positions in relation to the OFT's Fast Track Offer

VI.343. As set out in paragraph II.1576 above, following the issue of the Statement, Crest Nicholson applied for judicial review of the OFT's decision not to reopen the OFT's Fast Track Offer. On 24 July 2009 the Court rejected Crest Nicholson's claim that the OFT's decision not to reopen the Fast Track Offer following the issue of the Statement was contrary to the principles of equal treatment and procedural fairness. However, the Court found that the OFT should have acknowledged that Crest Nicholson might have been in an objectively different position from other recipients of the OFT's Fast Track Offer. Then, if a difference was established, the OFT had to decide what effect, if any, that should have on any penalty (see outline of the ruling at paragraphs II.1577 to II.1578 above).⁸⁷⁰¹

VI.344. As a result, on 27 July 2009 the OFT wrote to Crest Nicholson and all of the other Parties and invited them to make submissions on:

- (a) 'Whether, and if so how, [the Party] was in an objectively different position compared to other Fast Track Offer recipients which put it in a position where it could not fairly admit the allegations and accept the Fast Track Offer at the time it was made;
- (b) *If so, what effect, if any, that claimed different position should have on any penalty which the OFT may subsequently impose for alleged cover pricing.*⁸⁷⁰²

Crest Nicholson's submissions

VI.345. In response to the OFT's letter Crest Nicholson submitted⁸⁷⁰³ that it was in an objectively different position from other recipients of the OFT's Fast Track Offer on the grounds that:

- (a) it was an historic indirect parent company of Pearce⁸⁷⁰⁴ (a Participant Company) and when it received the OFT's Fast Track Offer it attempted to investigate but could only make limited internal investigations because of the lack of documentary records remaining in its possession and any relevant knowledge of Crest Nicholson employees⁸⁷⁰⁵;
- (b) it attempted to obtain information from Pearce Group but these attempts were unsuccessful, and a lack of cooperation by Pearce Group reflected a conflict of interest between Crest and Pearce Group⁸⁷⁰⁶; and

- (c) whereas all other recipients of the November Fast Track Offer were in a position to know whether their subsidiaries had accepted the March Fast Track Offer⁸⁷⁰⁷, Crest Nicholson was the only historic parent whose former subsidiary had not been sent the March Fast Track Offer and it could not, therefore, be guided by the stance adopted by its former subsidiary in relation to an admission of liability as could other historic parent companies.⁸⁷⁰⁸

VI.346. Further, Crest Nicholson submitted that it was now willing to admit joint and several liability for its remaining Infringement, Infringement 75.⁸⁷⁰⁹

VI.347. Crest Nicholson submitted that because of these claimed objective differences it should receive a reduction in penalty in order to place it in the position it would have been in had it been able to make an informed decision as to whether to accept the OFT's Fast Track Offer.⁸⁷¹⁰ Crest Nicholson further submitted that because it was now willing to admit joint and several liability for Infringement 75 this indicated that, had it been able to make an informed decision at the time of the OFT's Fast Track Offer, it would have decided to admit liability in respect of those allegations it considered to be well founded.⁸⁷¹¹ Crest Nicholson stated that it was no answer for the OFT to say that Crest Nicholson did not materially assist the OFT's investigation at the Fast Track Offer stage, because it was not given the opportunity to generate the same benefits provided by other parties.⁸⁷¹²

VI.348. Therefore Crest Nicholson submitted that, in light of its admission and the fact that it had no opportunity to accept the OFT's Fast Track Offer at the time it was made, it should receive a 25 per cent discount from any penalty imposed.⁸⁷¹³

VI.349. The OFT has carefully considered Crest Nicholson's position. The OFT accepts that prima facie Crest Nicholson could be seen as in an objectively different position from the other Fast Track Offer recipients. In particular, the OFT notes that as well as being an historic indirect parent of Pearce, the relevant Participant Company, at the time Crest Nicholson received the OFT's Fast Track Offer its former subsidiary had not responded to the OFT's original Fast Track Offer. However, the OFT does not consider that it would be appropriate by reason of these differences to grant Crest Nicholson a 25 per cent discount in its penalty which has been requested. Indeed, to do so would have the same effect as re-opening the OFT's Fast Track Offer, which the OFT considers would not only be unequal and unfair to other Parties that accepted the OFT's Fast Track Offer but would also be inconsistent with the Court's explicit rejection of Crest Nicholson's request that the OFT reopen the Fast Track Offer post-Statement. Indeed, in its judgment the Court specifically stated as follows:

⁸⁷⁰⁷ Written representations of Crest Nicholson, 10 August 2009, paragraph 2.19. Paragraph 2.21 notes that the OFT has acknowledged that the relationship between Crest Nicholson, Pearce Group and Pearce was complicated and had presented difficulties for the OFT during its investigation.

'treating the claimant differently, and fairly, does not mean that the OFT needed to give it the gist of the case against it on the evidence possessed by the OFT relevant to alleged bid rigging. That would be inimical to the legal principle that enforcement authorities are entrusted with wide discretionary powers in the conduct of an investigation. The very design of the Fast Track Offer was to reduce the burden on the OFT in the conduct of what was its largest ever investigation. Nor was it necessary for the OFT to reopen the Fast Track Offer after the Statement of Objections was published in April 2008. To do so would have resulted in unequal and preferential treatment to the claimant, and unfairness to the other recipients of the Fast track Offer, who had accepted it without the benefit of knowing what was in the Statement of Objections and OFT file'⁸⁷¹⁴ (emphasis added).

- VI.350. Where an undertaking accepted the OFT's Fast Track Offer pre-Statement in respect of a particular Suspect Tender, (i) it provided an admission, upon which as discussed in paragraph II.1567 above the OFT was able to rely at a stage when the OFT had not yet decided which Suspect Tenders to pursue, thereby assisting the OFT both in selecting the contracts it wished to pursue and strengthening the OFT's case in respect of that Alleged Infringement in the Statement, and (ii) it agreed to limit the extent of its representations in circumstances where it had not seen the OFT's evidence and so did not know the strength of the case against it or the likelihood (absent its admission) of the OFT ultimately being able to proceed against it in respect of that Suspect Tender. This is true of all those Parties which accepted the OFT's Fast Track Offer, whatever their position.
- VI.351. Although the OFT does not accept that Crest Nicholson's post-Statement admission warrants a 25 per cent reduction in penalty, the OFT does accept that the admission warrants some reduction in its liability for the penalty imposed in respect of Infringement 75. The OFT has considered the particular matters raised by Crest Nicholson which it has been suggested mean that Crest Nicholson was in an objectively different position from other recipients of the OFT's Fast Track Offer such that it should be treated materially differently from other parties which made post-Statement admissions.
- VI.352. The OFT notes that many of the recipients of the OFT's Fast Track Offer, including those that accepted it, will have been able to access only limited information in relation to the Suspect Tenders. There might be a range of reasons why limited information was available to such Parties and the OFT does not consider that the reasons given by Crest Nicholson are such as to warrant a materially higher discount than [10-15] per cent (in the light of the nature and purpose of the OFT's Fast Track Offer). The OFT does not accept either that Crest Nicholson received no assistance from Pearce Group or Pearce or that it was unable to be guided at all by its former subsidiaries' likely reply to the OFT's Fast Track Offer. Rather, the OFT notes that in its letter of 18 December 2007 responding to the OFT's Fast Track Offer, Crest Nicholson stated that Pearce's solicitors had 'informed us that they [had] not uncovered any evidence to support the OFT's allegations'. Moreover, to the extent that Crest Nicholson wished to be guided by its former subsidiary's response to the OFT's Fast Track Offer, this was a clear indication as to Pearce's likely position (and was accurate). In any event, the OFT does not consider that even if the assistance it received from Pearce Group and/or Pearce was limited, that this is sufficient basis for a materially higher discount than [10-15] per cent.

VI.353. In the light of the consideration of each of the matters raised by Crest Nicholson, taking into account the nature and purpose of the OFT's Fast Track Offer and bearing in mind the principles of fairness and effectiveness in the setting of financial penalties, the OFT does not consider that the matters raised by Crest Nicholson together justify any reduction in penalty higher than the [10-15] per cent discount awarded to other Parties who also made admissions following the issue of the Statement - see paragraphs VI.323 to VI.328 above. The OFT does not consider that the difference between Crest Nicholson's position and that of other Fast Track Offer recipients was so significant as to warrant any additional discount.

Other Parties' submissions

VI.354. Several other Parties, in response to the OFT's letters of 27 July 2009, took the opportunity to repeat a number of the representations already made in response to the OFT's Fast Track Offer and the Statement, for example on matters such as the fairness of the OFT's Fast Track Offer⁸⁷¹⁵ and the amount of information that the OFT provided with the Fast Track Offer.⁸⁷¹⁶ The Parties' representations on these matters have already been addressed in section II above, and the OFT does not repeat these representations or the OFT's response here. However, some Parties made additional arguments specifically in relation to the issue of whether they were in an objectively different position and these are dealt with in the following paragraphs.

VI.355. Several Parties submitted that for a variety of reasons (for example that the infringing activity had been carried out by a dormant company⁸⁷¹⁷ or that the relevant employees had since left the business⁸⁷¹⁸), they did not have access to the documents or people in order fully to investigate the Suspect Tenders, and as a result they were unable to accept the OFT's Fast Track Offer.

VI.356. One Party, Renew, which accepted the OFT's Fast Track Offer at the time it was made, submitted that because it was an ex-parent company of Bullock (one of the Participant Companies) (as well as being a current parent of Allenbuild, another Participant Company), it was in the same position as Crest Nicholson.⁸⁷¹⁹ The OFT does not accept this submission because even though Renew may not have been able fully to investigate the Suspect Tenders relating to Bullock, it did know that its subsidiary and ex-subsiary had accepted the OFT's Fast Track Offer. Therefore Renew was in a position to be guided as to whether or not to accept the Fast Track Offer on this basis (and indeed does already benefit from the 25 per cent discount for accepting it).

VI.357. Similarly, Durkan Holdings suggested that it was in an objectively different position because at the time it received the OFT's Fast Track Offer it was a separate economic entity from its subsidiary at the time of the Infringements, Durkan, and therefore it 'could do no more than acknowledge the admissions

⁸⁷¹⁵ For example, letters from Willmott Dixon, 29 July 2009 and 30 July 2009.

⁸⁷¹⁶ For example, written representations of Durkan, 19 August 2009.

⁸⁷¹⁷ For example, written representations of Bowmer & Kirkland, 31 July 2009.

⁸⁷¹⁸ For example, letter from Bowmer & Kirkland, 31 July 2009; letter from Francis, 31 July 2009; letter from Lindum, 7 August 2009; written representations of Pearce, 10 August 2009 paragraph 3.1 and 3.2

that Concentra had made.⁸⁷²⁰ The OFT does not accept that as a result Durkan Holdings was 'pressurised ... into making a commercial decision to admit liability'.⁸⁷²¹ Like Renew, and by Durkan Holdings' own admission, it was in a position to be guided by the actions of its subsidiary, which had accepted the OFT's Fast Track Offer in respect of both Infringements 135 and 240. Durkan Holdings has not withdrawn this admission following the Statement and continues to benefit from the 25 per cent discount deriving from that admission.

VI.358. For those Parties (i.e. Durkan Limited, G Hurst/PDH, Pearce and E Taylor) which made submissions in response to the OFT's letter but rejected the OFT's Fast Track Offer and continue to deny participation in the Infringement(s)⁸⁷²², the OFT considers that there is no reason to consider further whether these Parties were in an objectively different position from other Fast Track Offer recipients as there are no new admissions which might attract a discount for cooperation at step 4 of the penalty calculation.

VI.359. A few Parties, Apollo (which rejected the OFT's Fast Track Offer), Francis/Barrett (which rejected the OFT's Fast Track Offer but made new admissions after receiving the Statement) and Bowmer and Kirkland (which accepted the OFT's Fast Track Offer in relation to one Infringement and has since made new admissions in relation to its two remaining Infringements) said that following their own internal investigations they found no evidence of participation in the Suspect Tenders so could not fairly admit to the OFT's Fast Track Offer.⁸⁷²³ One Party, Robert Woodhead, submitted the same argument even though it accepted the OFT's Fast Track Offer.⁸⁷²⁴

VI.360. A number of Parties which made similar submissions in response to the OFT's letter that they were in an objectively different position from other Parties due to non-availability of information, namely Ackroyd and Abbott⁸⁷²⁵, B&A⁸⁷²⁶, Connaught⁸⁷²⁷, Interserve⁸⁷²⁸, Lindum⁸⁷²⁹, T Denman⁸⁷³⁰ and Thomas Long⁸⁷³¹, rejected the OFT's Fast Track Offer in relation to one or more Suspect Tenders but went on to make new admissions in respect of one or more Infringements after receiving the Statement. As a result these Parties are, as discussed above, receiving discounts of [10-15] or [10-15] per cent as appropriate from their penalty at step 4 of the calculation.

VI.361. The OFT does not accept that the factors outlined by these Parties mean that they were in an objectively different position from other Fast Track Offer recipients such as would warrant an additional penalty discount over and above the [10-15] or [10-15] per cent discount for making new admissions following the issue of the Statement. As stated in paragraphs II.1554 to II.1556 above, the OFT does not accept that a fast track offer can be made and fairly accepted only where a company is able to carry out its own internal investigations and determine for itself whether or not the OFT's suspicion of an infringement is well-founded. There was no compulsion on the Parties to accept the OFT's offer. The alternative was to go through the normal process of receiving and responding to the Statement. Some of the companies which accepted the OFT's Fast Track Offer may have done so simply because they regarded participation in bid rigging as very likely, or knew that it was widespread at the time; some may have been willing to accept liability on the basis of the description of specific tenders in the OFT's letter. Some companies informed the OFT that they were accepting the offer as a 'commercial' decision, having no evidence of illegal activity but wishing to benefit from the penalty reduction on offer. In the circumstances, the OFT considers that the Parties were not in a materially different position from other Fast Track Offer recipients, and, in any event, to the extent that their positions might be considered different, the differences are not sufficient to justify any materially increased discount in penalty. For the avoidance of doubt, for the reasons set out in paragraphs VI.349 to VI.350 above the OFT does not consider that their positions would warrant the granting of a 25 per cent discount.

- VI.362. A number of Parties (for example, Kier) submitted that they were in an objectively different position from other Fast Track Offer recipients because they had no pre-warning of the OFT's investigation or the OFT's Fast Track Offer.⁸⁷³² This, the Parties submitted, meant that there was insufficient time for them fully to investigate the Suspect Tenders.⁸⁷³³ The OFT does not accept that this placed these Parties in an objectively different position from other Fast Track Offer recipients. In response to requests, extensions of time were provided to Parties which, in the OFT's view, gave them sufficient opportunity to respond, given all of the circumstances including the amount of time that had elapsed since the OFT's original letter was sent. The OFT notes that Kier made no new admissions in response to the Statement.
- VI.363. One Party, Greswolde, which in fact accepted the OFT's Fast Track Offer, submitted that it was 'subject to an unusual and detrimental circumstance'⁸⁷³⁴ because its legal advisor joined the OFT around the time that the Statement was issued. The OFT does not accept that this means that Greswolde is in an objectively different position from other recipients of the OFT's Fast Track Offer.
- VI.364. Another Party which accepted the OFT's Fast Track Offer, Durkan, submitted in relation to Infringement 240 that there were insufficient details in the schedule of Suspect Tenders for it to make an informed decision whether to accept the OFT's offer.⁸⁷³⁵ The OFT does not consider that the level of detail in the schedule for this Suspect Tender was materially different from the general level of detail provided in relation to other Suspect Tenders for this and other Parties, or that this in any way placed Durkan in an objectively different position from other Parties, particularly given that Durkan accepted the OFT's Fast Track

⁸⁷³³ For example, letter from Kier, 10 August 2009.

Offer in relation to this Suspect Tender and has since confirmed specifically to the OFT that it does not withdraw that admission (as discussed in the description of Infringement 240 in section IV above). The OFT also notes that in its judgment the Court specifically stated that *'treating the claimant differently, and fairly, does not mean that the OFT needed to give it the gist of the case against it on the evidence possessed by the OFT relevant to alleged bid rigging. That would be inimical to the legal principle that enforcement authorities are entrusted with wide discretionary powers in the conduct of an investigation. The very design of the Fast Track Offer was to reduce the burden on the OFT in the conduct of what was its largest ever investigation.'*⁸⁷³⁶

- VI.365. Durkan also suggested that it was in an objectively different position from other Parties because the OFT 'promptly informed some FTO recipients of the evidence in the OFT's possession' but failed to provide the same information to Durkan.⁸⁷³⁷ As the OFT discusses in paragraph II.1553 above, it provided on an equal basis to any Party upon request brief information to help identify the tender where this was available to the OFT, but for the reasons given in section II it did not provide the 'evidence' to any Party.
- VI.366. A number of Leniency Parties (Balfour Beatty Group, Thomas Vale and Wildgoose) repeated submissions that they considered that the Leniency Parties had been treated unfairly.⁸⁷³⁸ The OFT does not accept these submissions and has addressed the concerns of the Leniency Parties in paragraphs II.1545 to II.1548 and II.1582 to II.1583 above and paragraphs VI.390 to VI.395 below.
- VI.367. Stainforth submitted that it considers that what it termed 'simple' cover pricing, if it is an infringement at all (which it denies), is an effects based infringement and therefore it was unable to accept the OFT's Fast Track Offer without assessing the evidence.⁸⁷³⁹ Stainforth went on to make an admission as to the facts set out in the Statement after it had received it.⁸⁷⁴⁰ The OFT does not accept that cover pricing is an effects based infringement (see Legal Background section above) and neither does the OFT accept that Stainforth needed to assess the evidence before deciding whether or not to accept the offer (indeed, a significant number of Fast Track Offer acceptors did not agree with the OFT's assessment either). The OFT does not therefore accept that Stainforth was in an objectively different position from other recipients of the OFT's Fast Track Offer.
- VI.368. One of the Parties, [.....] [C], submitted that it was in an objectively different position from other Fast Track Offer recipients because it depends more heavily on public sector work and is likely to face potentially severe economic prejudice as a result of the reputational damage that an admission of guilt to the OFT's Fast Track Offer would inevitably have entailed.⁸⁷⁴¹ The OFT does not accept this submission. In fact, [.....] [C] made an admission as to the facts set out in the Statement after it had received it.⁸⁷⁴² [.....] [C] also submitted that the whole Fast Track Offer was procedurally unfair.⁸⁷⁴³ The OFT does not accept this and agrees with the Court that *'treating the claimant differently, and fairly, does not mean that the OFT needed to give it the gist of the case against it on the evidence possessed by the OFT relevant to alleged bid rigging. That would be inimical to the legal principle that enforcement authorities are entrusted with wide discretionary powers in the conduct of an investigation.'*⁸⁷⁴⁴ As set out in paragraphs VI.325 and VI.326 above, the OFT does not consider that new admissions should attract the same level of discount as that awarded for acceptance of the Fast Track Offer.

Step 5 – adjustment to prevent the maximum penalty from being exceeded and to avoid double jeopardy

- VI.369. As stated above in paragraph VI.12, the OFT is imposing a penalty in respect of each of up to maximum of three Infringements per Party. The OFT may not fix a penalty that exceeds 10 per cent of the worldwide turnover of the undertaking⁸⁷⁴⁵ in its last business year before the date of the OFT's final Decision, calculated in accordance with the provisions of the 2000 Order, as amended ('the section 36(8) turnover').⁸⁷⁴⁶ The section 36(8) turnover is not restricted to a party's turnover in the relevant product market and relevant geographic market.⁸⁷⁴⁷
- VI.370. In addition, where an infringement of the Chapter I prohibition ended prior to 1 May 2004, any penalty must, if necessary, be further adjusted to ensure that it does not exceed the maximum penalty applicable prior to 1 May 2004, i.e. 10 per cent of the turnover in the UK of the undertaking in the financial year preceding the date when the infringement ended.⁸⁷⁴⁸
- VI.371. The OFT has assessed each of the Parties' penalties against the tests set out in the preceding paragraphs (as applicable). This assessment has not necessitated any reductions to penalties at step 5 of the penalty calculation.
- VI.372. Also, the OFT must, when setting the amount of a penalty for a particular agreement (or concerted practice), take into account any penalty or fine that has been imposed by the European Commission or by a court or other body in another Member State in respect of the same agreement (or concerted practice).⁸⁷⁴⁹ Such adjustments are not necessary for assessing penalties in this case.
- VI.373. Henry Boot was concerned that the OFT would adjust its penalty at step 5 to a level out of proportion with the conduct concerned, given that its consolidated turnover is significantly higher than its relevant turnover.⁸⁷⁵⁰ In accordance with the Penalty Guidance, however, the OFT is only making a downward adjustment at step 5 for those Parties whose penalty exceeds the statutory cap

VI.374. As noted at paragraphs VI.94 to VI.97 above, a number of Parties did not trade in the business year preceding the date of this Decision. Where no accounts have been published or prepared in recent years, the OFT is using the turnover figures from the most recent period of more than six months in which they have been published or prepared. Where figures have been published or prepared for a limited period in excess of six months but less than a year, the OFT is pro-rating figures up to the full 12 month period.

VI.375. In applying the statutory cap at step 5, the OFT is therefore using turnover figures as described below in each of the affected Parties' individual penalty calculation sections.

Limitation of liability for companies that formed part of a single undertaking at the time of one or more Infringements but are now separate undertakings

VI.376. A number of Parties comprise two or more legal entities which constituted one undertaking at the time of one or more of the Infringements, but have since parted and now constitute two separate undertakings. The Parties so affected are as follows:

- Bullock – Bullock's ultimate parent at the time of its Infringement was Renew. Bullock has since been acquired by a different company such that it is no longer owned by Renew (see paragraph II.90 above).
- Durkan – Durkan's ultimate parent at the time of its two Infringements was Durkan Holdings. On 10 September 2007, Durkan was the subject of a management buyout (and rebranded as Concentra) such that it is no longer owned by Durkan Holdings (see paragraph II.387 above).
- Haymills – Haymills' ultimate parent at the time of its first two Infringements was Haymills plc, now known as Corringway Conclusions, which has been in liquidation since 2004 (see paragraph II.620 above). Haymills' ultimate parent at the time of its third Infringement was Ever 2312 Limited, now known as Haymills Group (see paragraph II.624 above).
- Holroyd – Holroyd's ultimate parent at the time of its first two Infringements was Holderness. Holroyd's immediate parent at the time was Holroyd Group (see paragraph II.693 above). Holroyd's ultimate parent at the time of its third Infringement was Holroyd Group (see paragraph II.695 above). Both Holroyd and Holroyd Group are now in liquidation.
- Irwins – Irwins' ultimate parent at the time of all of its Infringements was Jack Lunn Holdings. On 14 June 2007, Irwins became independently owned such that it is no longer owned by Jack Lunn Holdings (see paragraph II.767 above).

- J J McGinley – J J McGinley’s ultimate parent at the time of all three of its Infringements was McGinley Holdings. J J McGinley was sold by McGinley Holdings on 22 September 2004 and was subsequently acquired by a new parent on 24 March 2005 (see paragraph II.819 above).
- Pearce – Pearce’s ultimate parent at the time of its Infringement was Crest Nicholson. On 31 January 2003, Pearce and its immediate parent Pearce Group were the subject of a management buyout and the share capital was acquired by a new company such that they are no longer owned by Crest Nicholson (see paragraph II.1005 above).
- Propensity/Totty/Jackson – Totty’s ultimate parent at the time of its Infringements was Propensity. Jackson’s ultimate parent at the time of its Infringement was Propensity. In 2007, Propensity’s ultimate parent restructured the group of companies such that neither Totty nor Jackson is now owned by Propensity.

VI.377. In the case of Bullock, Durkan, Irwins, J J McGinley, Pearce and Propensity/Totty/Jackson, the OFT is as stated in paragraph VI.58 above basing its calculation on the consolidated turnover of both (i) the Participant Company together with its current wholly/majority owned subsidiaries and (ii) the former parent company that ultimately controlled the Participant Company at the time of the Infringements together with its current wholly/majority owned subsidiaries; both the Participant Company and the former parent being addressees of this Decision.

VI.378. Bullock and Renew both submitted that the OFT should apply the cap at step 5 based on their current structure, thereby limiting each of their liability to an amount based on their own respective turnover, rather than their total combined turnover.⁸⁷⁵¹

VI.379. Durkan Holdings stated in its written representations that Article 23(2) of Regulation 1/2003 ‘provides that the Commission cannot, by imposing joint and several liability increase an undertakings’ liability beyond the limit set by Article 23(2), so the total fine on all parties subject to the joint and several liability cannot exceed 10% of the turnover of the smallest undertaking concerned’.⁸⁷⁵² It referred to a CFI case in which the CFI ‘concluded that in applying the 10% upper limit the European Commission may refer to the turnover of the undertaking involved in the infringement (rather than the parent company)’.⁸⁷⁵³

VI.380. First, Article 23(2) states that ‘For each undertaking...participating in the infringement, the fine shall not exceed 10% of its total turnover’ (emphasis added). Whilst Article 23(2) therefore provides that the fine imposed on an undertaking may not exceed 10 per cent of that undertaking’s turnover, it is completely silent as to the extent of liability that may be imposed on a legal entity which formed part of a larger undertaking at the time of an infringement. Secondly, the CFI case referred to above stated only that, in applying the 10 per cent upper limit, the Commission ‘may’ refer to the turnover of the subsidiary, not that it was compelled to do so. Thirdly, the CFI has more recently stated as follows:

*'The fact that several companies are held jointly and severally liable for a fine on the ground that they form part of the same undertaking...does not mean, as regards the application of the maximum amount of 10% of turnover laid down by Article 23(2) of Regulation 1/2003, that the obligation of each of them is limited to 10% of turnover which it achieved during the last business year. The maximum amount of 10% of turnover within the meaning of that provision must be calculated on the basis of the total turnover of all the companies constituting the single economic entity acting as an undertaking..., since only the total turnover of the component companies can constitute an indication of the size and economic power of the undertaking in question.'*⁸⁷⁵⁴

VI.381. Notwithstanding the above, where a Party listed in paragraph VI.376 comprises two or more legal entities which now constitute two separate undertakings, the OFT is limiting the liability of each of those separate undertakings to the share of that Party's overall penalty which represents 10 per cent of that separate undertaking's total turnover in the most recent business year preceding the OFT's decision.

VI.382. This affects [...] [C], and is explained in more detail in relation to their individual penalty calculations below.

VI.383. In the case of Haymills and Holroyd, not only would the limitation of liability as set out in paragraphs VI.377 and VI.381 apply as necessary (however, this affects neither company), but in addition the OFT has made two separate penalty calculations, one for each set of Infringements involving a particular parent. In the case of Haymills, one penalty calculation has been made for the first two Infringements involving the turnover of Haymills and Corringway, while the other for the third Infringement has involved the turnover of Haymills and Haymills Group. In the case of Holroyd, one penalty calculation has been made for the first two Infringements involving the turnover of Holroyd and Holderness, while the other for the third Infringement has involved the turnover of Holroyd and Holroyd Group.

VI.384. This is explained in more detail in relation to these Parties' individual penalty calculations below, along with the fact that the OFT will be applying only one MDT to each of these undertakings – in both cases, for the penalty calculation involving the first two Infringements.

Application of the OFT's Leniency Policy

VI.385. As stated in paragraph II.1475 of the OFT's Investigation section above, each leniency Party will⁸⁷⁵⁵ benefit from a 100 per cent reduction in penalty for any ⁸⁷⁵⁴ Case T-112/05 Akzo Nobel NV v Commission [2007] ECR II-5049, at paragraph 90. See also Case T-9/99 HFB [2002] ECR II 1487, at paragraph 528 and Case T-71/03 Tokai Carbon [2005] ECR II-10 at paragraph 390.

⁸⁷⁵⁵ Subject to its continued compliance with the conditions on which leniency was granted, as indicated at paragraphs 3.9 to 3.17 of the OFT's Penalty Guidance, which was published on 21 December 2004. It is noted that three Parties, John Cawley, Bodill and Wildgoose, applied for leniency prior to the introduction of this guidance. The relevant guidance on leniency and penalties prior to 21 December 2004 was contained in OFT 423 'Director General of Fair Trading's guidance as to the appropriate amount of a penalty', (March 2000). In calculating penalties in respect of these three Parties, the OFT has exercised its discretion as to the applicability of this previous guidance to ensure that these Parties do not lose the benefit of any terms contained in that previous guidance.

Infringement where it informed the OFT about that Infringement before the OFT had been made aware of it from any other source, that is, where the OFT would not have known about the Infringement but for the disclosure by that leniency Party. Where two leniency Parties both informed the OFT, prior to being questioned by the OFT in interview, of bid rigging on a tender that involved both Parties, the Party that applied first for leniency will obtain the benefit of the 100 per cent But For immunity on that tender. Where there were two instances of bid rigging on a tender, each involving a different leniency Party, it would be possible for both leniency Parties to obtain 100 per cent But For immunity from penalty. The OFT's assessment of 100 per cent But For immunity is set out in relation to each involved leniency Party for each tender included in the Conduct of the Parties section above.

VI.386. As noted above, for the remaining Infringements involving leniency Parties, the OFT is imposing fines only in respect of a maximum of three Not But For Infringements (even though it may be the case that a leniency Party is involved in more than three Not But For Infringements). The OFT has concluded that the most objective way to select the three Infringements for penalty calculations is to impose fines in respect of the three most recent Not But For Infringements.

VI.387. Leniency Parties will⁸⁷⁵⁶ receive a reduced penalty (reduced by between 35 per cent and 65 per cent) where the OFT has learnt of an Infringement from an alternative source, for example, from evidence gathered during an inspection or from another Party. The same reduction percentage for each relevant leniency Party applies in respect of each of its Infringements, where the 100 per cent reduction described above does not apply.

VI.388. The level of the reduction percentage to be applied to leniency Parties has been decided on the basis of the overall value added by a leniency Party to the OFT's investigation and is being applied at the end of the calculation.⁸⁷⁵⁷ The OFT has assessed the value of the information provided by each leniency Party according to the following factors:

- (a) the number of Alleged Infringements in the Statement which the OFT would not have been able to investigate but for the evidence of that leniency Party;
- (b) the number of Alleged Infringements in respect of which that leniency Party provided contemporaneous evidence of cover pricing to the OFT in its leniency application, in particular where that evidence named the other Party(ies) involved in cover pricing;
- (c) the number of Alleged Infringements in respect of which that leniency Party made clear and unambiguous admissions of its involvement in cover pricing, both in its leniency application and in its interviews with the OFT;
- (d) the length of time between the OFT's inspection of or visit to that leniency Party's premises and that leniency Party's application for leniency; and ⁸⁷⁵⁶ Subject to their continued compliance with the conditions on which leniency was granted.

⁸⁷⁵⁷ See paragraph VI.389 below, and the Navigation Table at Annex A, which identify the leniency Parties.

- (e) in the case of John Cawley, the fact that it was the first Party to apply for leniency in this investigation.

Leniency Parties with a 35 per cent reduction

Arthur M Griffiths
Davlyn
W R Bloodworth

⁸⁷⁵⁸ John Cawley receives an additional 25 per cent leniency discount, making a total leniency discount of 65 per cent, due to the fact that it was the first Party to apply for leniency after the commencement of the OFT's investigation (see Penalty Guidance, paragraph 3.11).

- VI.390. Some leniency Parties⁸⁷⁵⁹ claimed that they should be entitled to a greater reduction than that awarded by the OFT, or otherwise criticised the OFT's approach to leniency in this case, although the majority of these claims and comments appeared to be based largely on a misunderstanding of the reason for the 65 per cent reduction awarded to John Cawley by virtue of its being first to apply for leniency. In any event, the OFT considers that the leniency reductions applied in this case are generous when considered in their overall context, and there is no basis for any further reductions.
- VI.391. Some leniency Parties claimed that they should be entitled to 100 per cent immunity on some of their Infringements where the OFT has given the relevant Party a leniency reduction. The OFT deals with such representations in the leniency assessment section of each Infringement in question.
- VI.392. Several leniency Parties disagreed with the OFT's decision to fine leniency applicants for up to three Not But For Infringements (see paragraph VI.386). Fish Holdings stated that this approach deprived it of any benefit from the leniency programme.⁸⁷⁶⁰ Thomas Vale stated that this policy leaves it no better off than undertakings which have not cooperated with the OFT.⁸⁷⁶¹
- VI.393. The OFT considers that the leniency Parties in this case are gaining considerable benefit in return for their cooperation. Despite the fact they may have infringed the Act on a large number of occasions, they are only being penalised for a maximum of three Infringements. Whilst they complain that this places them in the same position as non-leniency Parties (who are also being fined for a maximum of three Infringements), this ignores the fact that the leniency Parties are receiving substantial discounts on these penalties, whereas those who have failed to cooperate with the OFT will not. Contrary to the representations described above, the OFT is satisfied that the leniency Parties in this case are in a more favourable position than non-leniency Parties.
- VI.394. Thomas Vale also objected to the prospect of being named in this Decision as a participant in those other Infringements, in respect of which it is not being penalised (largely because it benefits from But For immunity), claiming that this exposure outweighs the benefits of leniency.⁸⁷⁶² The prospect of exposure, in the form of being named as a participant in an infringement decision, is one of the many factors that an undertaking must take into account as part of its overall assessment as to whether or not to apply for leniency. The OFT does not consider it reasonable for Thomas Vale to expect that, as a consequence of its leniency status, the OFT should not proceed to an infringement decision and name Thomas Vale as a participant in these Infringements. Moreover, Thomas Vale benefits substantially from the fact that it has complete immunity from penalty in respect of a substantial number of But For Infringements.
- VI.395. Both Thomas Vale and Wildgoose objected to the OFT's decision to stop its investigation at the stage it did. Wildgoose stated that, as an early leniency applicant it supplied evidence in relation to a large number of Infringements, but the OFT's decision to cease its investigation resulted in later leniency parties ⁸⁷⁵⁹ For example, written representations of Bramall and Frank Haslam Milan, 27 June 2008 (as amended 30 March 2009), paragraph 6.27; written representations of Bluestone, 27 June 2008, paragraph 7.3; and written representations of Wildgoose, 3 July 2008 (as amended 1 April 2009), paragraph 6.60.

⁸⁷⁶⁰ Written representations of Fish Holdings, 27 June 2008, paragraph 7.

⁸⁷⁶¹ Written representations of Thomas Vale, 27 June 2008, paragraph 52.

⁸⁷⁶² Written representations of Thomas Vale, 27 June 2008, paragraph 52.

facing fewer Infringements and therefore potentially less exposure to civil penalties.⁸⁷⁶³ Thomas Vale submitted that the OFT cannot limit its investigation due to manpower and resource constraints when this would disadvantage certain companies because other guilty parties remain unpunished. The OFT does not accept these submissions. As noted above, being named as an infringing party and, consequently, facing potential liability for civil penalties is one of the factors to be taken into account in applying for leniency. By applying for leniency earlier, Wildgoose improved its chances of obtaining But For immunity for its Infringements. The history of this investigation, and the reasons for the selection and consolidation process, are outlined in the OFT's Investigation section above. The OFT does not consider that its approach to this investigation has in any way disadvantaged leniency Parties.

VI.396. Several Parties stated that they were unaware of the OFT's investigation until they received the OFT's Fast Track Offer, by which time the OFT was not accepting any further leniency applications in respect of this case. As a result, these Parties claim they were disadvantaged as they did not have the same opportunity to apply for leniency as those Parties that were visited or interviewed by the OFT earlier in the process.⁸⁷⁶⁴ This argument is without merit, as any undertaking can approach the OFT at any time to apply for leniency. There is no need for an investigation to be underway or a visit to have occurred before leniency can be sought. Consequently, these Parties had the same opportunity to apply for leniency as any other Party in this case.

VI.397. Similarly, Lindum submitted that it was prevented from applying for leniency because its Infringements were attributable to a 'rogue' employee without management knowledge.⁸⁷⁶⁵ The fact that its internal controls were insufficiently rigorous to prevent and/or identify illegal conduct on the part of its employees is a failing on the part of Lindum itself. This cannot be attributed as a defect in the OFT's leniency programme.

Application of the OFT's Fast Track Offer

VI.398. Around half of the non-lenieny Parties⁸⁷⁶⁶ accepted the OFT's Fast Track Offer (see paragraphs II.1481 to II.1494 of the OFT's Investigation section), whereby the OFT offered a reduction of 25 per cent of any penalty imposed, on an infringement by infringement basis. This offer was subject to the Party admitting its participation in the Infringements and certain other conditions. None of these Parties have withdrawn their acceptance of the Fast Track Offer in response to the evidence presented in the Statement. The OFT is applying the 25 per cent reduction at the end of step 5 in respect of each Infringement admitted by the relevant Party⁸⁷⁶⁷ (subject to the relevant Party continuing to comply with the conditions of the OFT's Fast Track Offer).

VI.399. Thomas Vale stated that the OFT's Fast Track Offer seriously undermined its position as a leniency applicant, as companies were favoured that had not ⁸⁷⁶³ Written representations of Wildgoose, 3 July 2008 (as amended 1 April 2009), paragraphs 6.17 to 6.19.

⁸⁷⁶⁴ For example, written representations of Adam Eastwood, 26 June 2008, point 6 on penalties; written representations of Interserve, 25 June 2008, paragraphs 5.43 – 5.44; written representations of Shaylor, 25 June 2008, paragraphs 4.17 to 4.18.

⁸⁷⁶⁵ Written representations of Lindum, 27 June 2008, paragraph 71.

⁸⁷⁶⁷ See the Navigation Table at Annex A, which identifies which Infringements were admitted by each Party.

assisted the investigation, had not provided detailed information and would not usually have had the option of leniency. It stated that the Fast Track Parties were unjustly getting a discount for expending much less cost and management time than that invested by Thomas Vale.⁸⁷⁶⁸ The background to the OFT's Fast Track Offer is set out in the OFT's Investigation section and is therefore not repeated here. The OFT considers that the assistance and cooperation provided to it by the Fast Track Parties does merit the 25 per cent reduction in penalty being awarded to them. The OFT does not consider this to be unjust in comparison with the 50 per cent leniency discount Thomas Vale is receiving in respect of its Not But For Infringements (in addition to But For immunity in respect of a substantial number of Infringements).

D. Individual penalty calculations

VI.400. The following tables set out the individual penalty calculations for each of the Parties. Unless stated otherwise, the penalty calculation methodology discussed in detail in the foregoing paragraphs of this section applies in respect of each Party. As both the individual penalty and the total penalty figures are rounded, differences of up to one pound may occur when adding individual penalties together to reach the total penalty. In such instances the total penalty figure takes precedence.

⁸⁷⁶⁸ Written representations of Thomas Vale, 27 June 2008, paragraph 61.

Party 1: A H Willis

VI.401. This Party did not apply for leniency or accept the OFT's Fast Track Offer, and it made no fresh admissions in response to the Statement. This Party was not involved in any compensation payments.

VI.424. All of this Party's three latest Not But For Infringements were committed by Mansell prior to its acquisition by Balfour Beatty. The penalties for these Infringements have therefore been calculated on the basis of the consolidated turnover of Mansell's ultimate parent at the time of the Infringements, Mansell plc.

VI.425. The turnover of Mansell plc includes an amount of [...] [C] reported by this Party to be the turnover of one of its subsidiaries for 2007. Since updated 2008 figures for this subsidiary were not available, and the 2008 figure was expected by this Party to be of a similar amount, the OFT has used this figure as a proxy for that subsidiary's turnover for 2008.

VI.426. As this Party was involved in at least one Infringement involving a compensation payment, the MDT at step 3 is set at 1.05 per cent of total turnover in its last business year. For the Infringements that were compensation payments, the starting point is set at 7 per cent of total turnover in its last business year.

Party 12: Ballast Nedam as the ultimate parent company of its dissolved subsidiary Ballast

VI.427. This Party did not apply for leniency but did accept the OFT's Fast Track Offer. This Party was not involved in any compensation payments.

VI.443. Carillion transferred a portion of Mowlem's trade to other parts of its business at the beginning of 2008. Whilst the OFT is not generally holding a new parent liable where it is in the position of Carillion, that is it has acquired the Participant Company after the Infringement and either the Participant Company or its previous parent company still exists, the OFT considers that if all or a significant portion of trade/turnover has transferred to the new parent from the Participant Company, it would be contrary to the effective enforcement of competition law not to take account of that trade/turnover when calculating the applicable penalty. The OFT has therefore included this portion of turnover in its penalty calculation.

VI.463. In respect of Infringements 135 and 240, the Participant Company involved in these Infringements was Durkan. In accordance with paragraph VI.58 above, the OFT is therefore basing its penalty calculation for these Infringements on the consolidated turnover of both (i) the Participant Company (Durkan) together with its current wholly/majority owned subsidiaries and (ii) the former parent company (Durkan Holdings) that ultimately controlled the Participant Company at the time of the Infringements together with its current wholly/majority owned subsidiaries.

VI.464. In respect of Infringement 220, the Participant Company involved in this Infringement was Durkan Limited. The OFT is therefore basing its penalty calculation for this Infringement on the consolidated turnover of Durkan Holdings.

VI.465. For Durkan, the business year preceding the Decision was the 11 month period ending 31 December 2008. In accordance with paragraphs VI.96, VI.254 and VI.374 above, the OFT has therefore used these figures and multiplied them by 12/11 in order to arrive at a full year's turnover figures.

VI.466. As this Party was involved in at least one Infringement involving a compensation payment, the MDT at step 3 is set at 1.05 per cent of total turnover in its last business year. For the Infringement that was a compensation payment, the starting point is set at 7 per cent of total turnover in its last business year.

VI.477. Frudd was unable to provide turnover figures to the OFT for its most recent business year ending 31 March 2008 because it went into administration on 4 January 2007. Frudd was only able to provide a total turnover figure to the OFT for the 7 month period to 31 October 2006. Consistent with paragraphs VI.254 and VI.374 above, the OFT has therefore used this figure and multiplied it by 12/7 in order to arrive at a full year's turnover figure.

VI.478. Frudd informed the OFT that all of its records had been destroyed or were impossible to access and that it was therefore unable to provide any relevant turnover figures. In accordance with paragraph VI.98 above, the OFT is therefore using a proxy figure of 2.9 per cent for Frudd's relevant turnover figures, and applying this percentage to Frudd's most recent total turnover figure before applying the starting point of 5 per cent.

VI.482. G Carter was only able to provide a total turnover figure to the OFT for the 9 month period to 31 January 2008, because it has been in liquidation since 19 March 2008. In accordance with paragraphs VI.254 and VI.374 above, the OFT has therefore used this figure and multiplied it by 12/9 in order to arrive at a full year's turnover figure.

VI.483. G Carter was unable to provide any relevant turnover figures to the OFT for its most recent business year as all of its relevant records have been destroyed or were impossible to access. G Carter was, however, able to provide relevant turnover figures for its business year ending 30 April 2007. In accordance with paragraph VI.99 above, the OFT is therefore using a proxy figure for G Carter's relevant turnover figures, based on the percentage of total turnover represented by G Carter's relevant turnover in its business year ending 30 April 2007, applied to G Carter's most recent total turnover figure calculated as described in the preceding paragraph. The OFT is then applying the starting point of 5 per cent to this proxy figure.

VI.491. In its representations on the Statement, GMI suggested that turnover for its 'connected companies' should be excluded on the grounds that this was negotiated work and in GMI's view should therefore have constituted a different market.⁸⁷⁶⁹ However, as explained in paragraphs II.1673 to II.1694 of the Market Definition section above, the OFT considers that negotiated work does not constitute a separate market and this turnover for GMI's 'connected companies' has therefore been included in the above calculations.

VI.492. The penalty for Infringement 14 is calculated on the basis of the consolidated turnover of GMI as this Infringement occurred before its purchase by GMI Construction Holdings. The penalty for Infringement 228 is calculated on the basis of the consolidated turnover of GMI Construction Holdings.

VI.504. In respect of Infringements 103 and 119, at the time of these Infringements the ultimate parent of the Participant Company Haymills was Corringway. In accordance with paragraph VI.58 above, the OFT is therefore basing its penalty calculation for these Infringements on the consolidated turnover of both (i) the Participant Company (Haymills) together with its current wholly/majority owned subsidiaries and (ii) the former parent company (Corringway) that ultimately controlled the Participant Company at the time of the Infringement together with its current wholly/majority owned subsidiaries.

VI.505. In respect of Infringement 232, at the time of this Infringement the ultimate parent of the Participant Company Haymills was its current ultimate parent Haymills Group. The OFT is therefore basing its penalty calculation for this Infringement on the consolidated turnover of Haymills Group.

VI.506. Although Corringway continued to trade until it went into liquidation in September 2004, it was only able to provide turnover figures to the OFT for the business year ending 31 March 2003. Consistent with paragraphs VI.95, VI.254 and VI.374 above, the OFT has therefore used these figures as the basis for the Corringway turnover element of its penalty calculations for Infringements 103 and 119. Since the Corringway turnover figures included an amount for the 2002/2003 turnover of Haymills and since the OFT is adding the latest turnover figures for Haymills (that is, the turnover for its business year ending 31 March 2008) to the turnover figures for Corringway, the Haymills element of Corringway's 2002/2003 turnover figures is being removed before adding Haymills' 2007/2008 turnover figures, in order to avoid double counting.

VI.520. In respect of Infringements 31 and 125, at the time of these Infringements the ultimate parent of the Participant Company Holroyd was Holderness. In accordance with paragraph VI.58 above, the OFT is therefore basing its penalty calculation for these Infringements on the consolidated turnover of both (i) the Participant Company (Holroyd) together with its current wholly/majority owned subsidiaries and (ii) the former parent company (Holderness) that ultimately controlled the Participant Company at the time of the Infringement together with its current wholly/majority owned subsidiaries.

VI.521. In respect of Infringement 231, at the time of this Infringement the ultimate parent of the Participant Company Holroyd was its current ultimate parent Holroyd Group. The OFT is therefore basing its penalty calculation for this Infringement on the consolidated turnover of Holroyd Group.

VI.522. Both Holroyd and Holroyd Group are now in administration, and this Party has only been able to provide turnover figures to the OFT for the business year ending 30 June 2007. Consistent with paragraphs VI.95, VI.254 and VI.374 above, the OFT has therefore used these figures as the basis for its penalty calculations.

VI.523. In the interests of effective enforcement, the OFT is applying the MDT to one of the two Infringements for which Holderness was the ultimate parent. [...] [C]

VI.531. In respect of Infringement 231, the Participant Company involved in this Infringement was Irwins. In accordance with paragraph VI.58 above, the OFT is therefore basing its penalty calculation for this Infringement on the consolidated turnover of both (i) the Participant Company (Irwins) together with its current wholly/majority owned subsidiaries and (ii) the former parent company (Jack Lunn Holdings) that ultimately controlled the Participant Company at the time of the Infringement together with its current wholly/majority owned subsidiaries.

VI.532. In respect of Infringements 205 and 241, the Participant Company involved in these Infringements was Jack Lunn. The OFT is therefore basing its penalty calculations for these Infringements on the consolidated turnover of Jack Lunn Holdings.

VI.533. The most recent business year in respect of which Irwins has provided turnover figures is the six month period ending 31 March 2008. As this is not a period in excess of six months, the OFT is in accordance with paragraphs VI.95, VI.254 and VI.374 above using the turnover figures from the most recent period in excess of six months, that is, the business year ending 30 September 2007. For Jack Lunn Holdings the OFT is using the turnover figures for the business year ending 30 September 2008, which have been confirmed not to include any turnover for Irwins.

VI.558. As discussed in paragraph II.888 of the Company Profiles section above, Rok would not normally be held directly liable for any Infringements committed by Lemmeleg that occurred prior to the acquisition of Lemmeleg by Rok, in circumstances where the acquired subsidiary, Lemmeleg, remained in existence. However, Lemmeleg has nil turnover, as its business is accounted for in the accounts of Rok Building Limited, a wholly-owned subsidiary of Rok. The penalty calculation is therefore based on the element of Rok's turnover that relates to the business carried on by Lemmeleg.

VI.567. Lotus was only able to provide a total turnover figure to the OFT for the 9 month period to 30 June 2008, because it is in administration. In accordance with paragraphs VI.254 and VI.374 above, the OFT has therefore used this figure and multiplied it by 12/9 in order to arrive at a full year's turnover figure.

VI.568. Lotus was unable to provide any relevant turnover figures to the OFT for its most recent business year as all of its relevant records have been destroyed or were impossible to access. Lotus was, however, able to provide relevant turnover figures for its business year ending 30 September 2007. In accordance with paragraph VI.99 above, the OFT is therefore using a proxy figure for Lotus's relevant turnover figures, based on the percentage of total turnover represented by Lotus's relevant turnover in its business year ending 30 September 2007, applied to Lotus's most recent total turnover figure calculated as described in the preceding paragraph. The OFT is then applying the starting point of 5 per cent to this proxy figure.

VI.580. The Casey Group was incorporated on 12 June 2001 and therefore had nil turnover in the business year of P Casey preceding the date of the first Infringement, that is, the year ending 31 July 2000. By virtue of the dual check against The Casey Group's total turnover, carried out at step 5 of the penalty calculation and discussed in paragraph VI.370 above, The Casey Group's liability for the portion of the total penalty attributable to Infringement 64 is therefore reduced to nil. P Casey is therefore solely liable for the penalty imposed in respect of Infringement 64. Both P Casey and The Casey Group remain jointly and severally liable for the remainder of the total penalty, that is, the penalties imposed in respect of Infringements 162 and 225.

Party 70: P Waller

VI.581. This Party applied for and was granted leniency. This Party was not involved in any compensation payments.

Party 71: Pearce together with its parent Pearce Group and their former ultimate parent company Crest Nicholson

VI.582. This Party did not apply for leniency or accept the OFT's Fast Track Offer. In response to the Statement, Crest Nicholson made a fresh admission in relation to this Party's Infringement, but neither Pearce nor Pearce Group made any admission. This Party was not involved in any compensation payments.

VI.583. In accordance with paragraph VI.58 above, the OFT is basing its penalty calculation for this Party on the consolidated turnover of both (i) the Participant Company (Pearce and Pearce Group) together with its current wholly/majority owned subsidiaries and (ii) the former parent company (Crest Nicholson) that ultimately controlled the Participant Company at the time of the Infringements together with its current wholly/majority owned subsidiaries.

VI.584. Pearce and Pearce Group's most recent business year was the 14 month period to 30 June 2008. Consistent with paragraphs VI.96, VI.254 and VI.374 above, the OFT has therefore used this figure and multiplied it by 12/14 in order to arrive at a full year's turnover figure. Crest Nicholson's most recent business year was the 12 month period ending 31 October 2008.

VI.593. In respect of Infringements 138 and 213, at the time of these Infringements the ultimate parent of the Participant Company Totty Building was Propensity Group. In accordance with paragraph VI.58 above, the OFT is therefore basing its penalty calculation for these Infringements on the consolidated turnover of both (i) the Participant Company (Totty Building) together with its current wholly/majority owned subsidiaries and (ii) the former parent company (Propensity Group) that ultimately controlled the Participant Company at the time of the Infringement together with its current wholly/majority owned subsidiaries.

VI.594. In respect of Infringement 235, at the time of this Infringement the ultimate parent of the Participant Company Jackson was Propensity Group. In accordance with paragraph VI.58 above, the OFT is therefore basing its penalty calculation for these Infringements on the consolidated turnover of both (i) the Participant Company (Jackson) together with its current wholly/majority owned subsidiaries and (ii) the former parent company (Propensity Group) that ultimately controlled the Participant Company at the time of the Infringement together with its current wholly/majority owned subsidiaries.

VI.595. The penalty for Infringement 235 is reduced to nil.

VI.596. By virtue of the check against Propensity Group's total turnover in its last business year, carried out at step 5 of the penalty calculation and discussed in paragraph VI.369 above, Propensity Group's liability for the penalties imposed in respect of Infringements 138 and 213 is reduced to nil. Totty Building is therefore solely liable for the penalties imposed in respect of these two Infringements.

VI.631. Thomas Fish was only able to provide turnover figures to the OFT for the 9 month period to 30 June 2008, since it went into administration on 21 April 2008. In accordance with paragraphs VI.96, VI.254 and VI.374 above, the OFT has therefore used these figures and multiplied them by 12/9 in order to arrive at a full year's turnover figures.

VI.632. As this Party was involved in at least one Infringement involving a compensation payment, the MDT at step 3 is set at 1.05 per cent of total turnover in its last business year. For the Infringement that was a compensation payment, the starting point is set at 7 per cent of total turnover in its last business year.

VI.637. Thorndyke was unable to provide turnover figures to the OFT for its most recent business year because it went into liquidation on 21 January 2006. Thorndyke was only able to provide a total turnover figure to the OFT for the business year ending 31 December 2004. Consistent with paragraphs VI.254 and VI.374 above, the OFT has therefore used this figure in its penalty calculations.

VI.638. Thorndyke informed the OFT that all of its records had been destroyed or were impossible to access and that it was therefore unable to provide any relevant turnover figures. In accordance with paragraph VI.98 above, the OFT is therefore using a proxy figure of 2.9 per cent for Thorndyke's relevant turnover figures, and applying this percentage to Thorndyke's most recent total turnover figure before applying the starting point of 5 per cent.

VI.649. William Sapcote was unable to provide turnover figures to the OFT for its most recent business year because it went into administration on 15 October 2007. William Sapcote was only able to provide a total turnover figure to the OFT for the business year ending 31 March 2006. Consistent with paragraphs VI.254 and VI.374 above, the OFT has therefore used this figure in its penalty calculations.

VI.650. William Sapcote informed the OFT that all of its records had been destroyed or were impossible to access and that it was therefore unable to provide any relevant turnover figures. In accordance with paragraph VI.98 above, the OFT is therefore using a proxy figure of 2.9 per cent for William Sapcote's relevant turnover figures, and applying this percentage to William Sapcote's most recent total turnover figure before applying the starting point of 5 per cent.

VI.660. York House was unable to provide turnover figures to the OFT for its most recent business year because it is in administration. York House was only able to provide sufficiently robust turnover figures to the OFT for the business year ending 31 December 2007. Consistent with paragraphs VI.95, VI.254 and VI.374 above, the OFT has therefore used these figures in its penalty calculations.

VI.661. [...] [C]

VI.662. [...] [C]

VI.663. The penalties for Infringements 211 and 233 are reduced to nil as these are But For Infringements.

E. Payment of penalty

VI.664. The OFT therefore requires the Parties to pay the penalties set out in the following table. In each case, as noted in paragraphs VI.61 and VI.62 above, where a Party comprised two or more legal entities at the time of an Infringement those entities are jointly and severally liable for the payment of the entire penalty for that Infringement, unless either:

- (a) for a particular Infringement one or more of the legal entities comprising that Party was neither the Participant Company nor its ultimate parent at the time of the Infringement; or
- (b) liability is limited as discussed in paragraph VI.381 above by virtue of a Party comprising two or more legal entities which now constitute two separate undertakings, and the penalty constitutes more than 10 per cent of the total turnover in the last business year of one of those legal entities; or
- (c) a new admission was made by one of the legal entities but not by the other.

Each of these circumstances is highlighted in the table below where it applies.

VI.665. The penalties will become owed to the OFT in their entirety on 24 November 2009, with the exception of the penalty imposed on R Durtnell together with its ultimate parent company Durtnell Holdings which will become owed to the OFT in its entirety on 6 January 2010, and the penalties imposed on E Manton and Wildgoose which will become owed to the OFT in their entirety on 7 January 2010, and must be paid to the OFT by close of banking business on that date, unless the Party has elected to accept the OFT's offer of additional time to pay the penalty.⁸⁷⁷⁰ If either the penalty is not paid or acceptance of the time to pay offer is not received within this deadline, and either an appeal against the imposition or amount of that penalty has not been made or such an appeal has been made and determined in the OFT's favour, the OFT may commence proceedings to recover the amount as a civil debt.

ANNEX A – NAVIGATION TABLE

A guide to the paragraphs in which the case against each Party may be found in relation to each of the Infringements

- A.1. The Navigation Table below details the paragraphs in which the case against each Party may be found in relation to each relevant Infringement. The Parties are listed in alphabetical order and against each Party is listed the Infringement(s) in respect of which the OFT has found that Party to have engaged in bid rigging activities, together with references to the relevant paragraphs in section IV.D above describing that Infringement and the relevant paragraphs in section IV.C above describing the cover pricing activities of the leniency Party(ies) involved in that Infringement, where applicable.
- A.2. The Navigation Table also sets out in respect of each Infringement,
- (a) for a leniency Party, whether: (i) it will receive full 100 per cent immunity for that Infringement (because it is a But For Infringement for that Party); or (ii) it will receive its allocated leniency percentage deduction from any penalty for that Infringement (because it is a Not But For Infringement for that Party); or (iii) it will receive no penalty for that Infringement (because the Infringement is not amongst the most recent three Not But For Infringements for the Party); and
 - (b) for a non-lenience Party, whether it will receive a 25 per cent deduction from any penalty for that Infringement (because it has accepted the OFT's Fast Track Offer in respect of that Infringement) or alternatively will not be entitled to any deduction from penalty for that Infringement (because it has not accepted the OFT's Fast Track Offer in respect of that Infringement).
- A.3. The word 'Infringement' has been abbreviated to 'Inf.' in column one for reasons of brevity.
- A.4. The Party(ies) are identified by reference to all parts of the infringing Party. For details as to which part of the Party is the Participant Company for a particular Infringement, reference should be made to that specific Infringement. For details as to which part(s) of the Party is liable for a particular Infringement, reference should be made to the Penalty tables and accompanying paragraphs.

Greenwood has been under the ownership of and ultimately controlled by Crown Point since 11 June 2002. The OFT is therefore addressing this Statement to Crown Point only in respect of those tenders involving Greenwood which are dated after 11 June 2002. Consequently the OFT does not intend to take any action against either Greenwood or Crown Point for the two tenders dated 8/11/2000 and 30/7/2001, for which Greenwood is mentioned solely due to the fact that it was a counter-party to cover pricing on those tenders.

ANNEX B – LIST OF MARKETS AFFECTED BY EACH OF THE INFRINGEMENTS

A.5. The table below sets out the relevant product market(s) and the relevant geographic market(s) into which the OFT considers each of the Infringements falls. As described Section VI (Enforcement) above, the starting point for determining the level of penalty for each of the Infringements has been calculated having regard to the seriousness of the Infringement and the relevant turnover of the Party. The ‘relevant turnover’ is the turnover of the Party in the relevant product market(s) and relevant geographic market(s) affected by the Infringement in the last business year prior to issue of the Decision. The OFT’s proposed definition of relevant product markets and relevant geographic markets is set out in the Definition of Relevant Markets section above.

ANNEX C – LIST OF PARTIES WHOSE COMPANY DIRECTORS THE OFT CONSIDERS WERE INVOLVED IN ONE OR MORE OF THE INFRINGEMENTS

- A.6. As noted in Section VI (Enforcement) above, the OFT considers that the involvement of company directors in the Infringements is an aggravating factor at step 4 of the penalty calculation. The tables below contain a list of the Parties whose company directors the OFT considers were involved in one or more of the Infringements.
- A.7. The first table, headed List of Parties whose directors the OFT considers were involved in every one of that Party’s Infringements, by virtue of their knowledge of cover pricing within the company as described in the relevant part of Section IV.C relating to that Party, contains a list of Parties in respect of which the OFT has evidence of general director involvement in bid rigging activities for all instances of bid rigging. For these Parties, the OFT is applying an adjustment at step 4 of the penalty calculation to all of the Infringements in respect of which the OFT is imposing a penalty.
- A.8. The second table, headed List of Parties whose directors the OFT considers were involved in one or more specific Infringements, contains a list of Parties in respect of which the OFT has evidence of specific director involvement in bid rigging activities in relation to particular Infringement(s). For these Parties, the OFT is applying an adjustment at step 4 of the penalty calculation to the specific Infringements listed in that table in respect of which the OFT is imposing a penalty.
- A.9. Note that where a party is listed in the second table in relation to a specific Infringement as well as more generally in the first table, the OFT is applying only one adjustment at step 4 of the penalty calculation for each such Infringement.

List of Parties whose directors the OFT considers were involved in every one of that Party’s Infringements, by virtue of their knowledge of cover pricing within the company as described in the relevant part of Section IV.C relating to that Party

ANNEX D – ANNEXES TO DEFINITION OF RELEVANT MARKETS

- A.10. This annex contains Annexes D(1) to D(5) of the Definition of Relevant Markets section. As noted in paragraph II.1607 above, the data analysis for the OFT's Construction Database was carried out in relation to the Alleged Infringements in the Statement. These annexes have not therefore been amended from the equivalent annexes included in the Statement.

- % Commercial Construction – construction work for offices, shops, entertainment venues, schools, colleges, university, hospitals and agricultural premises.
- % Industrial Construction – construction work for warehouses, oil, steel, coal factories and other industrial sectors.
- % Other (please specify).....

4. Please fill in the table below to show for each category of work you undertake the proportion that is new build and the proportion that is repair, maintenance and improvement work.

Type of Construction work	% New Build	% Repair, Maintenance and Improvement
Private Sector Housing
Public Sector Housing Infrastructure
Commercial Construction
Industrial Construction
Other- please specify

5. Please explain to what extent the company is structured to reflect the categories of work that it undertakes.

6. Please indicate (by marking with an x) the length of time you consider you would need to commence operations in another category of work (amongst the ones listed in question 3).

- less than a year
- more than a year

Please explain what factors would influence the time required to start up operations and provide an estimate of the likely costs.

7. Please indicate (by marking with an x) the sectors your company operates in.

8. Please indicate (by marking with an x) the length of time you consider you would need to commence operations in a different sector (amongst the ones listed in question 7).

- less than a year
 more than a year

Please explain what factors would influence the time required to commence operations in another sector and provide an estimate of the likely costs of commencing operations.

9. Please indicate the range of values (lowest-highest) of construction contracts that your company currently undertakes.

10. Please estimate the average value of construction contracts that your company currently undertakes.

11. Please indicate whether your company structure in any way reflects the size of contracts being undertaken.

12. Please indicate the extent to which, on large construction contracts, you take the role of lead contractor or mainly act as one of the subcontractors. What is the average value of such contracts?

13. Please explain whether there are any constraints (financial/capacity or otherwise) that would prevent you from bidding for certain types of construction contracts.

14. Please indicate how much it costs on average and the average time required to make a bid for a construction contract.

15. Please provide (on a separate sheet marked 'Confidential') a list broken down by sector, category of work and geographic location (as appropriate) of those companies who you consider to be your main competitors for construction contracts.

16. Please indicate where your head office and local offices are located (including postcodes).

17. Please provide an estimate of the proportion of your construction contracts within the following distances of your head and local offices:

Distance	Head Office	Local Offices
	% of contracts	% of contracts
25 mile radius
50 mile radius
75 mile radius
100 mile radius
200 mile radius

18. Please explain the extent to which pricing is set on the basis of local market conditions.

Market Definition Questions

Please provide responses to the questions set out in Section A and Section B.

Section A

1. Please indicate (by marking with an x) whether companies that were invited to tender for the most recent suspect tender shown on Schedule A were chosen from a select list?

Yes No

If yes, please supply the select list used at the time of the suspect tender, highlighting on the list all those companies you consider could have been invited to tender for the work specified in the suspect tender. Where a select list⁸⁷⁷¹ was used for part of the selection please indicate (in the space below) the method by which additional contractors were selected to be added to the list of those invited to tender and (on a separate sheet annexed to this response) list those contractors that were added in this way.

If no, please go to question 4 below.

2. Please answer the question below in respect to the select list used for the suspect tender (by marking your answer with an x)

(a) how often were select lists typically updated.

- monthly or more often between six-monthly and monthly between annually and six-monthly between two and one years less often than every two years

⁸⁷⁷¹ A select list is a list of approved contractors from which contractors are selected to be invited to tender for a project.

- (b) on what basis were revisions made.
- regularly in line with internal policy
 - before each tender or major tenders
 - when approached by a contractor
 - irregularly but not as a result of a contractors approach
 - other (please specify)

- (c) on what basis did you choose companies to invite to tender from the select list
- on a rota basis
 - on the basis of suitability for the particular project
 - other, please specify.....

3. Please specify any other select lists for construction work you had at the time of the suspect tender.

4. (For respondents that do not have select lists) Please provide the following:

(a) a brief description of the process used to select those building contractors that were asked to tender for the suspect tender.

(b) (on a separate sheet annexed to this response) the 'long list' of building contractors considered for the suspect tender from which the short list of building contractors who were invited to tender were drawn.

Section B

5. Please rank in order of importance (1 being the most important, 2 the next most important, etc.) the following criteria for drawing up a list of building contractors who are to be asked to tender for a project.

- demonstrate that have already done similar type of work
- good reputation in industry
- have passed external accreditation process, (please name organisation used to accredit firms.....)
- show that they price competitively
- local firm
- other, please specify.....

6. Please rank in order of importance (1 being the most important, 2 the next most important, etc.) the following criteria for selecting amongst bids obtained as a result of an invitation to tender for a project.

- have already worked for you on similar project
- price competitively
- quality of bid document
- quality of bid presentations
- local firm
- other, please specify.....

7. Please indicate whether the lowest bid for the most recent suspect tender came in above the financial authority⁸⁷⁷²

- Yes No

If yes please indicate what course of action you took

- selected the same winning bidder on the same scale and timing
- re-tendered or sought additional bids from other firms
- scaled back the project
- delayed the project
- cancelled the project
- other, please specify.....

If no, please indicate in accordance with likelihood (1 being the most likely, 2 the next most likely, etc) the courses of action you would have taken if the lowest tender in the suspect tender had been 5 per cent higher than the financial authority?

- selected the same winning bidder on the same scale and timing
- re-tendered or sought additional bids from other firms
- scaled back the project
- delayed the project
- cancelled the project
- other, please specify.....

⁸⁷⁷² The financial authority is the amount of money that an organisation has allowed in respect of a particular project.
