DECISION

Case CE/4327-04

Bid rigging in the construction industry in England

21 September 2009

CONTENTS

A brief description of the contents of each section of this document.

Capitalised terms used in this Contents section are defined in the Glossary at pages 28 to 29 below.

Purpose of this Contents section

- (i) This Contents section is intended to assist readers with understanding the structure and purpose of this Decision. A more detailed Index follows.

Section I – Introduction

- (ii) The Introduction lists the Parties to the Infringements of the Chapter I prohibition of the Act which form the subject of this Decision. Some Parties comprise more than one legal person, i.e. the Participant Company, together with its ultimate parent company at the time of each Infringement, where relevant.

Section II – Factual Background

- (iii) The first part of the Factual Background section, II.A The Parties, describes each of the Parties' primary activities and corporate structure. It lists details of the Parties' turnover and directors for each of the relevant years, and sets out the OFT's analysis of undertakings comprising more than one legal person, where relevant. The Parties' representations in relation to these matters are also addressed here.
- (iv) The second part of this section, II.B The OFT's Investigation, provides details of the investigation carried out by the OFT in this case, including dates of inspections and searches, interviews and written requests for information, and the Statement and Supplementary Statements. This part also lists the leniency Parties and describes the OFT's Fast Track Offer made to the non-lenieny Parties. It also describes the process by which the OFT selected the Alleged Infringements included in the Statement from information received in relation to the Suspect Tenders, and sets out the OFT's decision not to pursue certain Alleged Infringements following the issue of the Statement and receipt of the Parties' representations.
- (v) This part also describes the circumstances in which leniency Parties will receive full immunity for Infringements, when a reduction in penalty will be available, and in general terms the number of penalties each leniency Party and non leniency Party will face.
- (vi) Representations from the Parties on possible alternative remedies, the nature, length and conduct of the OFT's investigation, the leniency process and the Fast Track Offer are also addressed in this part.
- (vii) The third part of the Factual Background section, II.C Definition of Relevant Markets, sets out the OFT's definition of the relevant product markets and relevant geographic markets within which each of the Infringements is considered by the OFT to have occurred, and which form the basis of the starting point for the OFT's calculation of the penalty in respect of each of those Infringements. The Parties' representations on market definition are also addressed here.

Section III – Legal Background

- (viii) This section sets out the legal framework against which each of the Infringements has been considered by the OFT. It includes, but is not restricted to, a description of the law relating to undertakings, price fixing and bid rigging activities including cover pricing and compensation payments. This section also addresses the Parties' representations on the legal background to this Decision.

Section IV – The Conduct of the Parties

- (ix) This section describes the Infringements that form the subject of this Decision, namely, bid rigging activities in the construction industry in England between the coming into force of the Act on 1 March 2000, and December 2006. The majority of the bid rigging activities discovered by the OFT involved cover pricing, which occurs when a company obtains a price from a competitor in the tender process which is not designed to win the contract but is intended to give the appearance of competition. In addition the OFT found a number of instances of payments made between bidders, commonly referred to as 'compensation payments'.
- (x) The first part of this section, IV.B General comments on cover pricing and other bid rigging activities in the construction industry in England, sets out certain common themes that emerged in the course of the OFT's investigation, concerning the way in which construction companies conducted the practice of cover pricing and other bid rigging activities during the period under investigation. Many of the Parties in this case have testified to the endemic nature of the practice. The widespread and endemic practice of cover pricing in the construction industry was carried out in a relatively standard way, and the comments in this section should be read as applying to all Parties and all of the Infringements that are described in the following sections, except as specifically otherwise stated in the descriptions of the Infringements. The Parties' representations in relation to these matters are also addressed in this part.
- (xi) In order to avoid extensive repetition, the OFT sets out in the second part of this section, IV.C Leniency Parties' Approach to Cover Pricing and other Bid Rigging Activities, evidence on the way in which each of the leniency Parties engaged in cover pricing and other bid rigging activities, that is common to all of the Infringements in which each leniency Party has been found to have participated. The Parties' representations in relation to this evidence are also addressed here. The information on each leniency Party is described in alphabetical order.
- (xii) The third part of this section, IV.D The Infringements, sets out the specific evidence, and the inferences and conclusions drawn by the OFT from that evidence, in respect of each of the 199 specific Infringements in which the OFT has concluded that the Parties engaged in cover pricing and other bid rigging activities. The Parties' representations in relation to this evidence and the OFT's conclusions are also addressed on an Infringement-by-Infringement basis. The Infringements are described in chronological order.

- (xiii) Thus for each Infringement, reference should be made not only to the particular part of section IV.D setting out details of the Infringement, but also to the relevant part of section IV.C detailing the cover pricing activities of any leniency Party(ies) involved in that Infringement, and in addition to the general comments on cover pricing in section IV.B, which precedes both of those parts. The OFT has therefore included, in Annex A towards the end of this Decision, a Navigation Table (see below), which details the paragraphs in which the case against each Party may be found in relation to each relevant Infringement.

Section V – Legal Assessment

- (xiv) This section assesses the Infringements against the Legal Background and sets out the OFT’s conclusions, together with any representations from the Parties, and the OFT’s response.

Section VI – Enforcement

- (xv) This section states that the OFT is imposing financial penalties on each of the Parties in respect of a maximum of three Infringements. It sets out the factors the OFT has taken into account and its calculation methodology, including a separate penalty calculation for each Infringement and application of a Minimum Deterrence Threshold methodology at step 3 of the calculation.
- (xvi) This section also describes how the OFT has applied reductions in penalty for leniency Parties and discounts for non-leniency Parties that accepted the OFT’s Fast Track Offer.
- (xvii) The Parties’ representations on the OFT’s penalty calculations are also addressed in this section.

Annex A – Navigation Table

- (xviii) The Navigation Table in Annex A details the paragraphs in which the case against each Party may be found in relation to each relevant Infringement. The Parties are listed in alphabetical order and against each Party are listed the Infringement(s) in which that Party engaged in bid rigging activities, together with references to the relevant paragraphs in section IV.D describing that Infringement and the relevant paragraphs in section IV.C describing the cover pricing activities of the leniency Party(ies) involved in that Infringement, where applicable.
- (xix) The Navigation Table also makes it clear in respect of each Infringement: (a) for a leniency Party, whether: (i) it will receive either full 100 per cent immunity for that Infringement (because it is a But For Infringement for that Party); or (ii) it will receive its allocated leniency percentage deduction from the penalty for that Infringement (because it is a Not But For Infringement for that Party); or (iii) there will be no penalty (because the Infringement is not amongst the most recent three Not But For Infringements for the Party); and (b) for a non-leniency Party, whether it is receiving a 25 per cent deduction from penalty on that tender (because it accepted the OFT’s Fast Track Offer in respect of that tender) or alternatively is not receiving any deduction from penalty on that tender (because it did not accept the OFT’s Fast Track Offer in respect of that tender).

Annex B – List of Markets affected by each of the Infringements

- (xx) The table in Annex B sets out the relevant product market and the relevant geographic market into which the OFT considers each of the Infringements falls. This forms the basis of the starting point for the OFT's calculation of the penalty for each of the Parties in respect of each of those Infringements.

Annex C – List of Parties whose directors the OFT considers were involved in one or more of the Infringements

- (xxi) The tables in Annex C contain a list of the Parties whose directors the OFT considers were involved in one or more of the Infringements. The first table in Annex C lists the Parties in respect of which the OFT has evidence of general director involvement in bid rigging activities for all instances of bid rigging. The second table lists the Parties in respect of which the OFT has evidence of specific director involvement in bid rigging activities in relation to particular Infringement(s). The OFT considers that the involvement of company directors in the Infringements is an aggravating factor and has taken this into account at step 4 of the penalty calculation as set out in Section VI.

Annex D – Annexes to Definition of Relevant Markets

- (xxii) This section contains the Annexes D(1) to D(5) of section II.C, Definition of Relevant Markets.

2. K. W. Brookes (Contractors) Limited ('K W Brookes')

B. Summary of the Infringements and the OFT's enforcement action

I.3. The OFT has concluded that the Parties, between 2000 and 2006 and in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, were each involved in one or more Infringements. In particular, in relation to a number of contracts for which the Parties were invited to tender, each of the Parties engaged in bid rigging activities comprising (1) cover pricing by either requesting a 'cover price'¹ for themselves or providing a 'cover price' in response to requests from other Parties, or both, and/or (2) agreements to pay compensation to a competing bidder.

I.4. The OFT considers that agreements and/or concerted practices between undertakings that directly or indirectly engage in bid rigging arrangements are among the most serious infringements of the Act.² The CAT has fully endorsed the OFT's decision in its investigations into the roofing industry that cover pricing is anti-competitive and contravenes the Chapter I prohibition.³

I.5. The OFT is imposing financial penalties under section 36 of the Act on each of the Parties in relation to their respective Infringement(s).

I.6. The list of Infringements relating to each of the Parties is set out in the Navigation Table at Annex A. This table also details the paragraphs of this Decision in which the information relating to each of the Infringements may be found.

I.7. In this document, the OFT addresses at various points the Parties' representations made in response to the Statement and Supplementary Statements. The Parties' representations are grouped and addressed according to their substance (rather than the specific sub-heading under which the Party made the representation). Where several Parties have made the same or a similar representation, the OFT has usually cited a few by way of example. These citations are non-exhaustive and the OFT has nevertheless taken into account all representations made on any particular point. Where representations have been made jointly by two or more group companies, for ease of reading the OFT has tended to refer only to the Participant Company.

² Collusive tendering or bid rigging is among the most serious infringements of competition law, as reflected in its inclusion within the criminal cartel offence under section 188 of the Enterprise Act 2002.

SECTION II – FACTUAL BACKGROUND

A. The Parties

Introduction to this Section

- II.1. This section sets out, Party by Party in the same alphabetical order as used in paragraph I.1 above, the details of all of the Parties which the OFT has found to have engaged in the Infringements.
- II.2. In particular, this section describes each of the Parties' primary activities and corporate structure at relevant times.
- II.3. This section also sets out the relevant Parties' latest available total turnover figures (consolidated or group turnover where applicable in the case of ultimate parents) which, unless otherwise stated, relate to the business year preceding this Decision. The majority of the total turnover figures in this section have been obtained by the OFT from each of the Parties.
- II.4. This section also lists the Participant Companies' directors, and where applicable their ultimate parents' directors, for each of the relevant years, from the information available to the OFT.
- II.5. Finally, this section sets out the OFT's conclusions on liability for the Infringements, including where applicable the joint and several liability of the ultimate parent company of the undertaking involved in each of the relevant Infringements.

Points of general applicability and importance

Currency of company information

- II.6. This Decision generally contains the latest information available to the OFT at the time of writing. Where there has been a change in corporate structure since the date of the Statement, this will not affect the OFT's view on liability, which is generally formed by the circumstances that existed at the time of the relevant Infringement(s). Due to the possibility that there may have been a change in the company name and/or registered address, each Party's company number, as recorded at Companies House, is detailed below. This Decision is to be construed as applying to the company registered with the stated company number, however named and/or irrespective of its registered address prior, at, or subsequent to the time of the relevant Infringement(s).
- II.7. Similarly the information on companies' activities and numbers of subsidiaries generally reflects the position at the time of the Statement, and changes since that time have not usually been recorded as they do not affect the OFT's position on liability.

References to years (e.g. 2000, 2006)

- II.8. Unless otherwise specified, any reference in this section to 2000, for example for the date of appointment of a director, should be taken as meaning 1 March 2000, the date upon which the Act came into force. Similarly, any reference in this section to 2006 should be taken as meaning 31 December 2006, the cut-off date for the OFT's investigation in this case. It should be noted, for example, that where a director was already in post on 1 March 2000, only the year 2000 is referred to and not the actual date of appointment. Where a director was still in post on 31 December 2006, again only the year 2006 is referred to and not the actual date of resignation.

- II.9. References to years between those dates, i.e. 2001, 2002, 2003, 2004 or 2005, should be taken as meaning the entirety of the relevant calendar year. For example, if the OFT states that a director was in post from 2002 to 2004, this means that the director was in post at least from 1 January 2002 to 31 December 2004.

A. H. Willis and Sons Limited ('A H Willis')

- II.10. A H Willis is a private limited company registered in England and Wales, company number 04575214.⁴ It was incorporated on 28 October 2002.⁵ A H Willis's registered address is Griffins Court, 24-32 London Road, Newbury, Berkshire RG14 1JX⁶ and its head office is located at Wilmar, Gainfield, Buckland, Faringdon, Oxon, SN7 8QQ.⁷
- II.11. At the time of issue of the Statement, A H Willis undertook work as general building contractors in the education, housing and infrastructure sectors⁸ and it did not carry out work outside the United Kingdom.
- II.12. A H Willis has no holding companies or subsidiaries.⁹
- II.13. A H Willis's turnover for the financial year ending 31 December 2008 was [...] [C].¹⁰
- II.14. The directors of A H Willis from 2003 to 2006 were as follows:¹¹
- | | |
|-------------------------|-------------|
| - Andrew James Willis | 2003 – 2006 |
| - Anthony Hugh Willis | 2003 – 2006 |
| - Brenda Loraine Willis | 2003 – 2006 |
| - Mark Andrew Willis | 2003 – 2006 |
| - Steven Hugh Willis | 2003 – 2006 |
- II.15. A H Willis did not apply for leniency, but was given the opportunity of accepting the OFT's Fast Track Offer.¹²
- II.16. This Decision is addressed to A H Willis. The OFT considers that A H Willis is liable for the Infringements described in this Decision and that it is liable for payment of the penalties that the OFT is imposing, on account of the participation in the Infringements of that undertaking.

II.34. The following directors were on the Board of Directors of both Ackroyd & Abbott Construction and Ackroyd & Abbott for the periods mentioned below.³⁴ The OFT considers that this provides evidence that Ackroyd & Abbott exercised decisive influence over Ackroyd & Abbott Construction's conduct at the time of the Infringements.

- Peter Horsepool 2000 – 2006
- Richard Neil Horsepool 2000 – 2006

II.35. Ackroyd and Abbott did not apply for leniency, but it was given the opportunity of accepting the OFT's Fast Track Offer.³⁵

II.36. The OFT considers that Ackroyd & Abbott as 100 per cent owner of Ackroyd & Abbott Construction, can be presumed to have exercised decisive influence over Ackroyd & Abbott Construction's commercial policy during the relevant period and therefore forms part of the same economic entity. The OFT notes in addition the evidence of the exercise of decisive influence in the form of directors in common between Ackroyd & Abbott and Ackroyd & Abbott Construction. Ackroyd & Abbott Construction and Ackroyd & Abbott are therefore jointly and severally liable for Ackroyd & Abbott Construction's participation in the Infringements. Accordingly, they are jointly and severally liable for payment of the penalties that the OFT is imposing.

II.37. This Decision is therefore addressed to Ackroyd & Abbott Construction and Ackroyd & Abbott.

II.42. The overall structure is therefore as follows:

II.43. Adam Eastwood's turnover for the financial year ending 31 March 2009 was [...] [C].⁴³

II.44. Eastwood Foundation does not trade and therefore has no turnover of its own.⁴⁴

II.45. The directors of Adam Eastwood from 2000 to 2006 were as follows:⁴⁵

- Charles Geoffrey Dawson 2000 – 2006
- Colin Gillatt 2000 – 2006
- David William Marriott 2000 – 2006

- II.48. Adam Eastwood applied for, and has been granted, leniency in accordance with the OFT's leniency programme.⁴⁸
- II.49. The OFT considers that the Eastwood Foundation, as 100 per cent owner and controlling party of Adam Eastwood, can be presumed to have exercised decisive influence over Adam Eastwood's commercial policy during the relevant period and therefore forms part of the same economic entity. The OFT notes in addition, in respect of the period from 17 October 2001 to 2006, the evidence of the exercise of decisive influence in the form of directors in common between the Eastwood Foundation and Adam Eastwood at the time of the . Adam Eastwood and the Eastwood Foundation are therefore jointly and severally liable for Adam Eastwood's participation in the Infringements. Accordingly, they are jointly and severally liable for payment of the penalties that the OFT is imposing in respect of Infringements 50, 108 and 116.⁴⁹
- II.50. In its response to the Statement, the Eastwood Foundation disputed the OFT's preliminary finding that it had decisive influence over Adam Eastwood. The Eastwood Foundation submitted that it held shares in Adam Eastwood as an investment and did not interfere in the day-to-day running of Adam Eastwood, but instead maintained 'a watching and supportive brief.'⁵⁰ Furthermore the Eastwood Foundation questioned the legal basis for finding that a charity could be jointly and severally liable for an infringement committed by its trading subsidiary.⁵¹
- II.51. The OFT has had regard to all the submissions put forward by Adam Eastwood and the Eastwood Foundation in relation to this issue. In the light of the 100 per cent shareholding in Adam Eastwood held by the Eastwood Foundation and the common directorship noted above, the OFT considers that it is entitled to rely on the presumption of decisive influence as set out in paragraphs III.13 to III.18 below. Furthermore the OFT considers that the submissions put forward by the Eastwood Foundation and Adam Eastwood fall short of establishing that Adam Eastwood determined its conduct on the market autonomously.
- II.52. It follows that the OFT is entitled to treat Adam Eastwood and the Eastwood Foundation as forming the same undertaking for the purposes of the Chapter I prohibition. While that undertaking has a not-for-profit function (in the form of the charitable grant-making activities of the Eastwood Foundation), it also pursued between 2000 and 2006 the economic activities conducted by Adam Eastwood.⁵² In the OFT's view those activities must be considered separately, and the fact of the Eastwood Foundation's social function does not entail that Adam Eastwood's economic activities fall outside the scope of the Chapter I prohibition.⁵³
- II.53. This Decision is therefore addressed to Adam Eastwood and the Eastwood Foundation.

- II.62. The directors of Admiral from 2000 to 2006 were as follows:⁶⁵
- Andrew Clarkson 2000 – 2006
 - Keith Edwin Roebuck 2000 – 2006
 - Patricia Roebuck 2000 – 2006
 - Stephen Henry Savage 2000 – 2006
- II.63. The directors of A C Holdings from 2003 to 2006 were as follows:⁶⁶
- Keith Edwin Roebuck 13 October 2003 – 2006
 - Patricia Roebuck 13 October 2003 – 2006
 - Stephen Henry Savage 15 October 2003 – 2006
- II.64. The following directors have been on the Board of Directors of both Admiral and A C Holdings during the period mentioned below. The OFT considers that this provides evidence that A C Holdings exercised decisive influence over Admiral's conduct from 31 October 2003⁶⁷ to 2006.
- Keith Edwin Roebuck 13 October 2003 – 2006
 - Patricia Roebuck 13 October 2003 – 2006
 - Stephen Henry Savage 15 October 2003 – 2006
- II.65. Admiral applied for, and has been granted, leniency in accordance with the OFT's leniency programme.⁶⁸
- II.66. The OFT considers that Admiral is solely liable for the Infringements described in this Decision preceding 31 October 2003 and that it is therefore liable for payment of the penalties that the OFT is imposing in respect of Infringements 53 and 136, on account of the participation in the Infringements of that undertaking.
- II.67. The OFT considers that A C Holdings, as 100 per cent owner of Admiral, can be presumed to have exercised decisive influence over Admiral's commercial policy from 31 October 2003⁶⁹ to 2006 and therefore forms part of the same economic entity. The OFT notes in addition the evidence of the exercise of decisive influence in the form of directors in common between A C Holdings and Admiral. Admiral and A C Holdings are therefore jointly and severally liable for Admiral's participation in the relevant Infringements committed after 31 October 2003. Admiral and A C Holdings are therefore jointly and severally liable for payment of the penalty that the OFT is imposing in respect of Infringement 214.⁷⁰
- II.68. This Decision is therefore addressed to Admiral and A C Holdings.

- II.87. Allenbuild did not apply for leniency, but both it and its ultimate parent company at the time of the Infringements, Renew, were given the opportunity of accepting the OFT's Fast Track Offer.⁹⁹
- II.88. Bullock did not apply for leniency, but both it and its ultimate parent company at the time of the relevant Infringement, Renew, were given the opportunity of accepting the OFT's Fast Track Offer.¹⁰⁰
- II.89. The OFT considers that Renew, as 100 per cent owner of Allenbuild and Bullock, can be presumed to have exercised decisive influence over their commercial policies during the relevant period and therefore forms part of the same economic entity. The OFT notes in addition the evidence of the exercise of decisive influence in the form of directors in common between Renew, Allenbuild and Bullock. Renew and Allenbuild are therefore jointly and severally liable for Allenbuild's participation in the Infringements after 8 June 2001. In addition, Renew and Bullock are therefore jointly and severally liable for Bullock's participation in Infringement 39. Accordingly, in both instances they are jointly and severally liable for payment of the penalties that the OFT is imposing.
- II.90. Since the Infringement described in this Decision, Bullock has been subject to a change in ownership. As the new parent company did not form part of the same economic entity as Bullock at the relevant time, it is not jointly and severally liable with Bullock, Allenbuild and Renew for payment of the penalties that the OFT is imposing. For the avoidance of doubt, this Decision is not addressed to the new parent company of Bullock.
- II.91. In their response to the Statement, Allenbuild and Renew submitted that Renew should not be held liable for Allenbuild's and Bullock's participation in the relevant Infringements.¹⁰¹ In support of this submission, Allenbuild and Renew put forward the following contentions:
- (a) Renew was a holding company whose interests in its subsidiaries were essentially financial. Renew had little or no awareness of or involvement in the day-to-day operations of Allenbuild and Bullock, and Allenbuild and Bullock determined their commercial policy with minimal interference from Renew.¹⁰²
 - (b) The holders of the common directorships between Renew, Allenbuild and Bullock, as identified above, were not involved in the day-to-day operations of the subsidiaries.¹⁰³ Their role was to report to the Renew board on the performance of the subsidiaries.¹⁰⁴ The Renew board considered these reports on the subsidiaries' businesses in overview and did not discuss operational details.¹⁰⁵

- (c) The Renew board had limited awareness of certain important tenders, but no knowledge of or involvement in the tender processes operated by Allenbuild and Bullock.¹⁰⁶ Renew created 'authority levels' determining when contracts to be entered into by Allenbuild and Bullock required approval from Renew. As regards Bullock, approval from a Renew director was generally only required for contracts within a certain value range (tens of millions), while the approval of the Renew board was only required for contracts with a value above that level. As regards Allenbuild, the corresponding financial thresholds were (as a general matter) lower figures.¹⁰⁷

II.92. The OFT has had regard to all of the submissions put forward by Allenbuild and Renew in relation to this issue. The OFT considers that, in the light of Renew's 100 per cent shareholdings in Allenbuild and Bullock at the relevant times and the common directorships identified above, it is entitled to presume that Renew exercised decisive influence over Allenbuild and Bullock, in accordance with the principles set out in paragraph III.13 below.

II.93. The OFT considers that the contentions put forward by Allenbuild and Renew fall short of rebutting that presumption and do not establish that Allenbuild and Bullock determined their conduct on the market autonomously. In this regard the OFT takes into account, in particular, the following:

- (a) The Renew board reviewed the performance of the subsidiaries by means of the reports prepared by the common directors as noted in II.91(b) above;¹⁰⁸
- (b) Roger Feast, a common director at the time of the Infringements, explained that his focus as Managing Director of the construction division subsidiaries was to '...ensure that a sensible profit margin percentage was being made in relation to each contract, to monitor month-end turnover, gross margins, the volume of new orders, workload and to understand any significant problems';¹⁰⁹
- (c) Renew retained direction of Allenbuild's and Bullock's decision-making in relation to high-value contracts.¹¹⁰ The predetermined authority levels referred to above also provided for other matters to be referred to a Renew director, including where a subsidiary had a negative cash flow or a proposed margin on a tender which was less than its overheads, and also in relation to new technology, joint ventures and PFI projects.¹¹¹

- (d) The OFT does not consider that the absence of significant consideration of the Allenbuild and Bullock businesses in Renew board papers and minutes is conclusive evidence that Renew did not exercise decisive influence over its subsidiaries. That influence might be exercised in ways other than resolutions of the Renew board. In any event, the OFT notes that there are suggestions that the Renew board had involvement at least in relation to problems within the Allenbuild business:
- i. The 'Board Papers' for the Renew board meeting on 19 September 2001 at item 12 refer to 'our involvement on [Allenbuild's] final accounts, project resourcing, construction methods and programming';¹¹²
 - ii. The 'Board Papers' for the Renew board meeting on 14 November 2001 at item 11 refer to Allenbuild's '4 month result to the end of September 2001 [being] considerably better than their forecast due mostly to our assistance on current projects';¹¹³
 - iii. The 'Board Papers' for the Renew board meeting on 13 November 2002 at item 12 note that within Allenbuild 'management changes are still necessary'.¹¹⁴
- (e) The OFT considers that, in accordance with the principles set out in paragraph III.18 below, Renew cannot escape liability by reference to its argument that neither the common directors identified above, nor the other members of the Renew board, had knowledge of or involvement in the tenders which were the subject of the relevant Infringements.

II.94. In its response to the Statement, Bullock submitted that there was no legal basis for the OFT's proposed finding that Renew and Bullock are jointly and severally liable for Bullock's participation in the relevant Infringement. Bullock submitted that the OFT was entitled to hold either Bullock or Renew liable, citing the decision of the CFI in Raiffeseisen.¹¹⁵

II.95. The OFT considers that Bullock's submission is incorrect as a matter of law, and that its citation of Raiffeseisen is taken out of context. In particular, in that case the Commission had imposed liability on a subsidiary company alone, and the argument before the CFI was that liability should have been imputed to the parent company instead of the subsidiary (hence the CFI's finding that the Commission had a discretion to do either). As the Commission had not imposed joint and several liability on the parent and subsidiary, it is unsurprising that this issue was not addressed by the CFI. It is clear, however, from other case law of the CFI that joint and several liability of a parent and subsidiary, where they are found to constitute the same undertaking for competition law purposes, is permitted in EC law¹¹⁶ and therefore, by extension, under the Act. The fact that, since the Infringement, Bullock and Renew have separated and no longer form part of the same undertaking, cannot affect the liability which arose at the time of the Infringement. Indeed, the OFT considers that this also follows from Raiffeseisen. If the OFT has a discretion to impose liability on Bullock or Renew, then there is no reason why it should not impose joint and several liability on both.

II.96. This Decision is therefore addressed to Renew, Allenbuild and Bullock.

- II.107. Apollo did not apply for leniency, but both it and its ultimate parent company at the time of the relevant Infringements, Apollo Group, were given the opportunity of accepting the OFT's Fast Track Offer.¹³²
- II.108. The OFT considers that Apollo Group, as 100 per cent owner of Apollo, can be presumed to have exercised decisive influence over Apollo's commercial policy from 2003 to 20 April 2006 and therefore formed part of the same economic entity. The OFT notes in addition the evidence of the exercise of decisive influence in the form of directors in common between Apollo Group and Apollo. Apollo and Apollo Group are therefore jointly and severally liable for Apollo's participation in the Infringements during this period. Accordingly, they are jointly and severally liable for payment of the penalties that the OFT is imposing.
- II.109. Since the Infringements described in this Decision, Apollo Group has been subject to a change in ownership. As the new parent company did not form part of the same economic entity as Apollo Group at the relevant times, it is not jointly and severally liable with Apollo and Apollo Group for payment of the fine that the OFT is imposing. For the avoidance of doubt, this Decision is not addressed to the new parent company of Apollo Group.
- II.110. This Decision is therefore addressed to Apollo and Apollo Group.

II.147. During this period BBCL and BBRL had no subsidiaries.¹⁷⁵

II.148. The following directors have been on the Board of Directors of both BBCL and Balfour Beatty plc during the period mentioned below.¹⁷⁶ The OFT considers that this provides evidence that Balfour Beatty plc exercised decisive influence over BBCL's conduct during this period, at the time of the relevant Infringements.

- Alistair James Wivell 9 July 2002 – 19 December 2003

II.149. The OFT considers that Balfour Beatty plc as 100 per cent indirect owner, ultimate parent company and controlling party¹⁷⁷ of BBCL, can be presumed to have exercised decisive influence over BBCL's commercial policy from 2000 until 19 December 2003 and therefore forms part of the same economic entity. The OFT notes in addition the evidence of the exercise of decisive influence in the form of directors in common between Balfour Beatty plc and BBCL. Balfour Beatty plc and BBCL are therefore jointly and severally liable for BBCL's participation in the Infringements from 2000 until 19 December 2003.

II.150. The OFT considers that Balfour Beatty plc as 100 per cent indirect owner, ultimate parent company and controlling party¹⁷⁸ of BBRL, can be presumed to have exercised decisive influence over BBRL's commercial policy from 2000 until 19 December 2003 and therefore forms part of the same economic entity. Balfour Beatty plc and BBRL are therefore jointly and severally liable for BBRL's participation in the Infringements from 2000 until 19 December 2003.

II.151. In their response to the Statement, BBCL, BBRL, Balfour Beatty plc, Mansell, and Mansell plc ('the Balfour Beatty group') submitted that Balfour Beatty plc should not be held liable for the participation of its subsidiaries in the relevant Infringements. The OFT has considered this submission and sets out its response in paragraphs II.172 to II.179 below.

Mansell 2000 – 19 December 2003

II.152. Mansell's ultimate parent company was Mansell plc¹⁷⁹, a public limited company, company number 00265178.¹⁸⁰ Mansell plc's registered address was

II.153. As at 31 December 2000, Mansell plc had six wholly owned subsidiaries.¹⁸³

II.154. The relevant structure for this period was as follows:¹⁸⁴

II.155. Mansell's consolidated turnover for the financial year ending 31 December 2008 was £972,400,000.¹⁸⁵

II.156. From December 2004 all trading has been carried out through Mansell, therefore Mansell plc has no turnover.¹⁸⁶

II.157. The following directors have been on the Board of Directors of both Mansell and Mansell plc during the periods mentioned below.¹⁸⁷ The OFT considers that this provides evidence that Mansell plc exercised decisive influence over Mansell's conduct from 2000 until 19 December 2003.

- David Eric Beardmore	2000 – 1 January 2001
- Philip Arthur Cleaver	2000 – 19 December 2003
- Peter Herbert Coats	2000 – 6 September 2001
- David Stuart Hurcomb	2000 – 19 December 2003
- Patrick John Scannel	6 September 2001 – 19 December 2003
- Stephen John Waite	2000 – 19 December 2003

II.158. The OFT considers that Mansell plc as 100 per cent owner of Mansell, can be presumed to have exercised decisive influence over Mansell's commercial policy during the relevant period and therefore forms part of the same economic entity. The OFT notes in addition the evidence of the exercise of decisive influence in the form of directors in common between Mansell plc and Mansell. Mansell and Mansell plc are therefore jointly and severally liable for Mansell's participation in the Infringements from 2000 until 19 December 2003. Accordingly, they are jointly and severally liable for payment of the penalties that the OFT is imposing, in respect of Infringements 89,104 and 116.

II.159. Mansell and its ultimate parent company, Mansell plc, were acquired by Balfour Beatty plc on 19 December 2003.¹⁸⁸ Mansell is wholly owned by Mansell plc which is now wholly owned by Balfour Beatty plc.¹⁸⁹

II.160. As at 7 September 2007, Balfour Beatty plc had 201 subsidiaries.¹⁹⁰

II.161. The relevant structure for this period was as follows:¹⁹¹

II.162. Since January 2006, BBCL has operated through its sister company, Balfour Beatty Construction Scottish & Southern Limited.¹⁹²

II.164. From 1 January 2005, the Mansell group was reorganised in such a way that all trading activity is carried out through Mansell. Therefore, all assets, liabilities and trading activities of the group are conducted through Mansell. Mansell plc is now a non-trading company.¹⁹⁴

II.166. The following director has been on the Board of Directors of both BBCL and Balfour Beatty plc during the period mentioned below.¹⁹⁷ The OFT considers that this provides evidence that Balfour Beatty plc exercised decisive influence over BBCL's conduct from 19 December 2003 until 1 November 2004.

- Alistair James Wivell 19 December 2003 – 1 November 2004

II.167. The OFT considers that Balfour Beatty plc, as 100 per cent indirect owner, ultimate parent company and controlling party¹⁹⁸ of Mansell, can be presumed to have exercised decisive influence over its commercial policy during the period from 19 December 2003 until 2006 and therefore forms part of the same economic entity. Balfour Beatty plc and Mansell are therefore jointly and severally liable for Mansell's participation in the Infringements.

II.168. The OFT considers that Balfour Beatty plc, as 100 per cent indirect owner, ultimate parent company and controlling party¹⁹⁹ of BBCL, can be presumed to have exercised decisive influence over BBCL's commercial policy during the period from 19 December 2003 until 2006 and therefore forms part of the same economic entity. The OFT notes in addition the evidence of the exercise of decisive influence in the form of directors in common between Balfour Beatty plc and BBCL. Balfour Beatty plc and BBCL are therefore jointly and severally liable for BBCL's participation in the Infringements.

II.169. The OFT considers that Balfour Beatty plc, as 100 per cent indirect owner, ultimate parent company and controlling party²⁰⁰ of BBRL, can be presumed to have exercised decisive influence over BBRL's commercial policy during the period from 19 December 2003 until 2006 and therefore forms part of the same economic entity. - II.170. BBCL and BBRL applied for, and Balfour Beatty plc has been granted, leniency in accordance with the OFT's leniency programme.²⁰¹
- II.171. Mansell applied for, and has been granted, leniency in accordance with the OFT's leniency programme.²⁰²
- II.172. In their response to the Statement, the Balfour Beatty group submitted that Balfour Beatty plc should not be held liable for the participation of its subsidiaries in the relevant Infringements.
- II.173. As a general matter, the Balfour Beatty group submitted that it operated on a decentralised business model, with day-to-day commercial and operational decisions largely being taken at the level of the group subsidiaries.²⁰³ However, the Balfour Beatty group did not adduce evidence as to economic and legal organisational links between its various companies to show that it is not a single economic entity. Specifically, it was submitted that Balfour Beatty plc had no involvement in or specific knowledge of the tenders which constitute the Infringements, since those tenders each had a value significantly below the level at which board approval from Balfour Beatty plc was required.²⁰⁴
- II.174. In addition, the Balfour Beatty group submitted:
- (a) that the common directorships identified by the OFT (as set out above) were very limited;²⁰⁵
 - (b) that there were no common directors as between Balfour Beatty plc and BBRL, BBCL and BBRL and Mansell and Balfour Beatty plc;²⁰⁶ and
 - (c) that the common directors identified by the OFT are not alleged to have been involved in or aware of the Infringements.²⁰⁷
- II.175. For the reasons set out in Section III (Legal Background), the OFT considers that a parent company may be held liable for an infringement committed by its subsidiary even though it had no specific involvement in or knowledge of the infringing conduct. The OFT refers specifically in this regard to the principle set out in paragraph III.18. It follows that Balfour Beatty plc cannot escape liability for the relevant Infringements by reference to its argument that it had no specific involvement in or knowledge of the infringing conduct.
- II.176. It must also follow that the fact that the common directors identified above are not alleged to have had knowledge of or involvement in the infringing conduct is not such as to enable Balfour Beatty plc to escape liability. The Balfour Beatty group submitted that its circumstances could be distinguished from those in

*Sepia Logistics*²⁰⁸, as Balfour Beatty plc's directors were not personally implicated in the Infringements and could not be said to be the 'controlling mind' of all the relevant entities.²⁰⁹ For the reasons set out in paragraphs III.17 to III.18 of the Legal Background section, the OFT does not consider that this is sufficient to rebut the presumption of decisive influence. Merely because in Sepia Logistics involvement in the infringement was an additional factor does not mean that it is a required for a finding of single economic entity.

- II.177. While the Balfour Beatty group sought to downplay the significance of the common directorships identified by the OFT, the OFT notes that the Balfour Beatty group has not denied the existence of those common directorships. The OFT considers that, in the light of the common directorships identified above and the 100 per cent shareholdings held by Balfour Beatty plc in the relevant subsidiaries, the OFT is entitled to rely on the presumption of decisive influence in accordance with the principles set out in paragraphs III.13 to III.18 below.
- II.178. Furthermore the OFT considers that the submissions put forward by the Balfour Beatty group are not sufficient to rebut that presumption and fall short of establishing that the relevant subsidiaries determined their conduct on the market autonomously.
- II.179. The Balfour Beatty group also submitted that the OFT should adopt the same approach as it did in *Mastic Asphalt*²¹⁰ in respect of Ruberoid and Briggs.²¹¹ In that case, the OFT concluded that the two companies formed part of the same undertaking, but addressed its decision only to Briggs (the infringing subsidiary). Whilst undertakings are the subjects of competition law, the OFT's decisions must be addressed to legal or natural persons. Where an undertaking is made up of two or more legal persons, the OFT considers that it has a margin of discretion as to which of those persons should be addressees of its decision and subject to penalties, in order to ensure effective enforcement of competition rules. In this respect, each case is specific to its own facts and circumstances, and the action taken by the OFT in one instance cannot necessarily be read across to another case. Moreover, the approach of competition authorities to the imposition of penalties is developing over time, together with the case law in this area.
- II.180. This Decision is therefore addressed to Mansell plc and Mansell for Mansell's participation in any Infringements during the period from 1 March 2000 until 19 December 2003.
- II.181. This Decision is therefore addressed to Balfour Beatty plc, BBCL and BBRL for their participation in any Infringements during the period from 1 March 2000 until 19 December 2003.

II.197. The following directors have been on the Board of Directors of both Ballast and Ballast Nedam plc during the periods mentioned below.²²⁸ The OFT considers that this provides evidence that Ballast Nedam plc exercised decisive influence over Ballast's conduct, at the time of the relevant Infringements.

- Phillip John Cooper 1 January 2002 – 15 October 2003
- Robert Heathfield 2000 – 31 December 2001

II.198. The following directors have been on the Board of Directors of both Ballast Nedam plc and Ballast Nedam during the periods mentioned below.²²⁹ The OFT considers that this provides evidence that Ballast Nedam exercised decisive influence over Ballast Nedam plc's conduct, at the time of the relevant Infringements.

- Rene Herman Philip Willem Kottman 2000 – dissolution
- Theo Mulder 2000 – 1 April 2000
- Martinus Johannes Frederik Weck 2000 – 15 March 2000
- Gerardus Nicolaas Gigsbertus Wirken 2000 – 28 October 2002

II.199. Ballast did not apply for leniency, but both it and its ultimate parent company at the time of the relevant Infringements, Ballast Nedam, were given the opportunity of accepting the OFT's Fast Track Offer.²³⁰

II.200. The OFT considers that Ballast Nedam, as 100 per cent indirect owner of Ballast, can be presumed to have exercised decisive influence over Ballast's commercial policy during the relevant period and therefore formed part of the same economic entity. Accordingly, both Ballast Nedam and Ballast would have been jointly and severally liable for payment of the penalties that the OFT is imposing, if Ballast had not been dissolved on 13 July 2006.

II.201. In its response to the Statement, Ballast Nedam submitted that it should not be held liable for Ballast's participation in the relevant Infringements. In particular, Ballast Nedam submitted that:

- (a) Ballast was responsible for its own commercial policy²³¹ and for the development of the group business in the UK²³², and took the decision to enter administration independently of Ballast Nedam;²³³

- (b) Ballast Nedam plc was a holding company which did not interfere in the day-to-day activities of Ballast or its policy-making.²³⁴ Ballast Nedam is merely a financial holding company which held its interest in Ballast as an investment.²³⁵
- II.202. The OFT considers that, in the light of Ballast Nedam's 100 per cent ownership of Ballast and the common directorships identified above, it is entitled to rely on the presumption of decisive influence in accordance with the principles set out in paragraphs III.13 to III.18 below.
- II.203. The OFT does not consider that the contentions put forward by Ballast Nedam are sufficient to rebut that presumption or to establish that Ballast determined its conduct on the market autonomously, see paragraph III.17 of the Legal Background section.
- II.204. This Decision is therefore addressed to Ballast Nedam.

- Melvin Stuart Sheldon	1 August 2001 – 2006
- St Andrews Company Services Limited	1 June 2001 – 1 August 2001

II.235. The following director has been on the Board of Directors of BKPS and Bowmer & Kirkland during the periods mentioned below.²⁷¹ The OFT considers that this provides evidence that Bowmer & Kirkland exercised decisive influence over the conduct of BKPS.

- Melvin Stuart Sheldon	2000 – 2006 (Bowmer & Kirkland) 2001 – 2006 (BKPS)

II.236. Bowmer & Kirkland did not apply for leniency, but it was given the opportunity of accepting the OFT's Fast Track Offer.²⁷²

II.237. BKPS did not apply for leniency.

II.238. The OFT considers that Bowmer & Kirkland is liable for Infringements 18 and 85 described in this Decision and that it is therefore liable for payment of the penalties that the OFT is imposing in respect of those Infringements, on account of its participation in those Infringements.

II.239. In addition, for the period from 2001 to 2006 the OFT considers that Bowmer & Kirkland, as 100 per cent owner of BKPS, can be presumed to have exercised decisive influence over the commercial policy of BKPS during the relevant period and therefore forms part of the same economic entity. The OFT notes in addition the evidence of the exercise of decisive influence in the form of directors in common between Bowmer & Kirkland and BKPS. Bowmer & Kirkland and BKPS are therefore jointly and severally liable for BKPS's participation in the Infringements. Accordingly, they are jointly and severally liable for payment of the penalty that the OFT is imposing, in respect of Infringement 134.

II.240. In its response to the Statement, Bowmer & Kirkland submitted that liability for BKPS's participation in the relevant Infringement should not be attributed to Bowmer & Kirkland. Specifically, Bowmer & Kirkland submitted that:

- (a) Its subsidiaries enjoyed a high level of operational autonomy;²⁷³
- (b) The directorships held by Melvin Sheldon in BKPS reflected Mr Sheldon's role of strategic oversight and maintenance of financial discipline and control. Mr Sheldon did not engage in operational matters or the pricing of contracts;²⁷⁴ and

- (c) There is no evidence of board-level involvement in cover pricing, and the matter was never discussed at board level within the Bowmer & Kirkland group of companies.²⁷⁵

II.241. Furthermore Bowmer & Kirkland submitted that the OFT has to demonstrate not only that Bowmer & Kirkland could have exercised decisive influence over BKPS, but that Mr Sheldon did in fact exert such influence.²⁷⁶

II.242. The OFT has had regard to all the submissions put forward by Bowmer & Kirkland in relation to this issue. The OFT notes that, in the light of the 100 per cent shareholdings held by Bowmer & Kirkland in BKPS and the directorships in both companies held by Mr Sheldon, the OFT is entitled to presume that Bowmer & Kirkland exercised decisive influence over its subsidiary BKPS between 2001 and 2006.²⁷⁷

II.243. The OFT does not consider that Mr Sheldon's purported lack of involvement in operational matters or the pricing of contracts detracts from this conclusion. Indeed, the OFT considers that his role of strategic oversight and maintenance of financial control constitutes an economic and legal organisational link which demonstrates the exercise of decisive influence by Bowmer & Kirkland over BKPS. Furthermore the OFT considers that it does not assist Bowmer & Kirkland to argue that there was no board-level knowledge of or involvement in cover pricing within the Bowmer & Kirkland group of companies. The OFT refers in this regard to the principle set out in paragraph III.18 below.

II.244. In the circumstances, the OFT considers that Bowmer & Kirkland has not put forward sufficient evidence to rebut the presumption of decisive influence or to establish that its subsidiary determined its conduct on the market autonomously.

II.245. This Decision is therefore addressed to Bowmer & Kirkland and BKPS.

II.258. The following director has been on the Board of Directors of both Keepmoat and Bramall during the period mentioned below.²⁹⁶ The OFT considers that this provides evidence that Keepmoat exercised decisive influence over Bramall's conduct at the time of the Infringements.

- Roger Howard Ward 1 February 2004 – 2006

II.259. Both Bramall and Frank Haslam Milan applied for, and have been granted, leniency in accordance with the OFT's leniency programme.²⁹⁷

II.260. The OFT considers that Keepmoat, as 100 per cent owner of Bramall, can be presumed to have exercised decisive influence over Bramall's commercial policy during the relevant period and therefore forms part of the same economic entity. The OFT notes in addition, in respect of the period from 1 February 2004 to 2006, the evidence of the exercise of decisive influence in the form of directors in common between Keepmoat and Bramall. Keepmoat and Bramall are therefore jointly and severally liable for Bramall's participation in the Infringements which occurred during that period. Accordingly, they are jointly and severally liable for payment of the penalties that the OFT is imposing in respect of Infringements 57 and 179.

- II.306. Clegg applied for, and has been granted, leniency in accordance with the OFT's leniency programme.³⁴⁹
- II.307. The OFT considers that D E Clegg, as 100 per cent indirect owner of Clegg can be presumed to have exercised decisive influence over Clegg's commercial policy during the relevant period and therefore forms part of the same economic entity. The OFT notes in addition the evidence of the exercise of decisive influence in the form of directors in common between D E Clegg and Clegg. Clegg and D E Clegg are therefore jointly and severally liable for Clegg's participation in the Infringements. Accordingly, they are jointly and severally liable for payment of the penalties that the OFT is imposing, in respect of Infringements 139, 168 and 212.³⁵⁰
- II.308. Since the Infringements described in this Decision, Clegg and D E Clegg have been subject to a change in ownership. As the new parent company did not form part of the same economic entity as Clegg and D E Clegg at the relevant times, it is not jointly and severally liable with Clegg and D E Clegg for payment of the penalties that the OFT is imposing. For the avoidance of doubt, this Decision is not addressed to the new parent company of Clegg and D E Clegg.
- II.309. This Decision is therefore addressed to Clegg and D E Clegg.

- Anthony John Williams	30 October 2002 – 31 August 2006

II.320. The following directors have been on the Board of Directors of both Connaught and Connaught plc during the periods mentioned below.³⁶⁵ The OFT considers that this provides evidence that Connaught plc exercised decisive influence over Connaught's conduct at the time of the Infringements.

- Andrew Darkin	5 May 2000 – 30 October 2006
- David Kenneth Pike	2000 – 21 September 2004
- Mark William Tincknell	2000 – 2006

II.321. Connaught plc did not apply for leniency, but it was given the opportunity of accepting the OFT's Fast Track Offer.³⁶⁶

II.322. Connaught did not apply for leniency.

II.323. The OFT considers that Connaught plc, as 100 per cent owner of Connaught, can be presumed to have exercised decisive influence over Connaught's commercial policy during the relevant period and therefore forms part of the same economic entity. The OFT notes in addition the evidence of the exercise of decisive influence in the form of directors in common between Connaught plc and Connaught. Connaught and Connaught plc are therefore jointly and severally liable for Connaught's participation in the Infringements. Accordingly, they are jointly and severally liable for payment of the penalties that the OFT is imposing.

II.324. This Decision is therefore addressed to Connaught and Connaught plc.

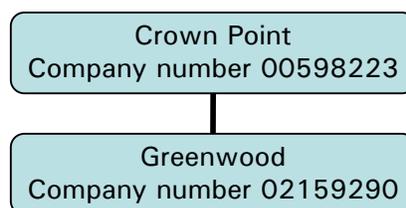

Crown Point Maintenance Group Limited ('Crown Point') and its dissolved subsidiary Greenwood Building Contractors (Mansfield) Limited ('Greenwood')

II.325. Greenwood was a private limited company registered in England and Wales, company number 02159290.³⁶⁷ Greenwood's registered and trading address was Nursery Street, Mansfield, Nottinghamshire, NG18 2AG.³⁶⁸

³⁶⁶ See paragraphs II.1481 to II.1487 below.

- II.326. Prior to dissolution, Greenwood's principal activity was that of building contractors.³⁶⁹ Prior to dissolution, Greenwood did not carry out work outside the United Kingdom.
- II.327. On 24 June 2005 an administrator was appointed³⁷⁰ and on 28 March 2007, Greenwood was dissolved.³⁷¹
- II.328. Greenwood's ultimate parent company was Crown Point, a private limited company, company number 00598223.³⁷² Crown Point's registered address is Crown Point House, 169 Cross Green Lane, Leeds, West Yorkshire, LS9 0BD.³⁷³ From 11 June 2002, Greenwood was a wholly owned subsidiary of Crown Point.³⁷⁴
- II.329. Greenwood had no subsidiaries.³⁷⁵
- II.330. The overall company structure from 11 June 2002 until 2006 was therefore as follows:

II.331. Crown Point's turnover for the financial year ending 31 May 2008 was [...] [C].³⁷⁶

II.332. The directors of Greenwood from 2001 to 2006 were as follows:³⁷⁷

- Andrew Goodwin	11 June 2002 – 20 September 2005
- Bryan Goodwin	11 June 2002 – 2006
- Kenneth Taylor	2001 – 11 June 2002
- Robert Gregory Taylor	2001 – 11 June 2002

II.333. The directors of Crown Point from 2001 to 2006 were as follows:³⁷⁸

II.334. The following director has been on the Board of Directors of both Greenwood and Crown Point during the period mentioned below.³⁷⁹ The OFT considers that this provides evidence that Crown Point exercised decisive influence over Greenwood's conduct, at the time of the relevant Infringements.

- Andrew Goodwin

11 June 2002 – 14 September 2005

II.335. Greenwood did not apply for leniency, but both it and its ultimate parent company at the time of the Infringements, Crown Point, were given the opportunity of accepting the OFT's Fast Track Offer.³⁸⁰

II.336. The OFT considers that Crown Point as 100 per cent owner of Greenwood, can be presumed to have exercised decisive influence over Greenwood's commercial policy from 11 June 2002 to 28 March 2007, and therefore formed part of the same economic entity. The OFT notes in addition the evidence of the exercise of decisive influence in the form of a director in common between Crown Point and Greenwood. Greenwood and Crown Point would therefore have been jointly and severally liable for Greenwood's participation in the Infringements. Accordingly, they would have been jointly and severally liable for payment of the penalties that the OFT is imposing, in respect of Infringements 118, 133 and 158.

II.337. However, Greenwood has been dissolved and accordingly, the OFT considers that Crown Point is solely liable for the relevant Infringements described in this Decision and that it is liable for payment of the penalties that the OFT is imposing in respect of Infringements 118, 133 and 158 on account of Greenwood's participation in those Infringements.

II.338. In response to the Statement, Crown Point submitted that liability for Greenwood's participation in the relevant Infringements should not be attributed to Crown Point.

II.339. In particular, Crown Point submitted that the presumption of decisive influence was rebutted in this instance, for the following principal reasons:

- (a) Following Crown Point's acquisition of Greenwood's shares in June 2002, Greenwood continued to be operated as an autonomous business with the same staff as previously.³⁸¹ There is no evidence that Crown Point issued direct instructions to Greenwood³⁸², and Greenwood's shares were held by Crown Point merely as an investment;³⁸³
- (b) There is also no evidence to suggest that Crown Point was involved in or had knowledge of the relevant Infringements;³⁸⁴
- (c) In particular, following its acquisition of Greenwood, Crown Point retained Greenwood's Managing Director, Mr Kenneth Taylor, under a consultancy agreement to run Greenwood's business on the same basis as previously for a period of 24 months.³⁸⁵ Although from that time he was retained as a consultant, Mr Taylor held himself out as a director of Greenwood, retained day-to-day control of Greenwood's business and determined Greenwood's commercial policy;³⁸⁶

- (d) Until mid-2004, the holder of the common directorships identified above, Mr Andrew Goodwin, had no input into the commercial or operational policy of Greenwood, which was left to Mr Taylor.³⁸⁷ Andrew Goodwin held no key function on the management board of Greenwood and did not attend Greenwood's weekly management meetings.³⁸⁸ Furthermore, Andrew Goodwin had no knowledge of or involvement in the relevant Infringements;³⁸⁹
- (e) Andrew Goodwin also did not have any management input in the running of the parent company, Crown Point, which was run by his father, Bryan Goodwin. Andrew Goodwin's role at Crown Point was as Contracts Manager only;³⁹⁰
- (f) Other than Andrew Goodwin, there was no commonality between the management personnel of Crown Point and Greenwood;³⁹¹
- (g) At the time of the Infringements, the geographical areas and markets in which Crown Point operated were entirely separate and different from those of Greenwood³⁹², and Greenwood's business formed no part of Crown Point's business.³⁹³ Crown Point and Greenwood also operated under different commercial names and logos;³⁹⁴ and
- (h) Greenwood employed its own staff and compiled its own annual accounts and reports.³⁹⁵ The only financial link between the two companies was the cross guarantees provided by Crown Point to Greenwood's bankers, in support of Greenwood's overdraft facilities.³⁹⁶

II.340. The OFT considers that in the light of Crown Point's 100 per cent shareholding in Greenwood and the common directorship identified above, it is entitled to presume that Crown Point exercised decisive influence over Greenwood in accordance with the principles set out in paragraphs III.13 to III.18 below. The OFT notes that Crown Point does not dispute that this presumption applies in the circumstances.³⁹⁷

³⁹⁷ Written representations of Crown Point, 27 June 2008, paragraph 5.1.

- II.341. The OFT has taken into consideration all of the contentions put forward by Crown Point. In this regard, the OFT also notes that:
- (a) As noted in paragraph III.17 of the Legal Background section, the OFT considers that the presumption of decisive influence will not be rebutted by mere assertions that Crown Point was not involved in the day-to-day operations of Greenwood, or that Greenwood had its own management;
 - (b) Whilst Crown Point submitted that Mr Taylor determined Greenwood's commercial policy and operated Greenwood as an autonomous business, Mr Taylor was appointed to this role by Crown Point (rather than, for example, by Greenwood itself).³⁹⁸ The OFT considers that this further supports its conclusion that Crown Point exercised decisive influence over Greenwood;
 - (c) Furthermore, Mr Taylor reported to Mr Andrew Goodwin on the progress of Greenwood's existing contracts and 'pipeline', and Mr Goodwin reported back to Crown Point on Greenwood's dealings;³⁹⁹
 - (d) Although Crown Point submitted that Greenwood employed its own staff, as noted above, Greenwood did not employ or contract with Mr Taylor, despite the fact that he was (according to Crown Point) the 'managing body' of Greenwood;⁴⁰⁰
 - (e) The OFT considers that the cross-guarantees provided by Crown Point to Greenwood's bankers also support the conclusion that Crown Point exercised decisive influence over Greenwood;
 - (f) With respect to Mr Andrew Goodwin, whilst Crown Point submitted that he had no key function on the management board of Greenwood and did not attend weekly meetings, he nevertheless made regular visits to Greenwood (initially fortnightly and then weekly), occasionally visited clients and sites, and had a role in the financial running of Greenwood;⁴⁰¹
 - (g) Crown Point's submission that Andrew Goodwin was only a Contracts Manager at Crown Point and had no management input appears to be inconsistent with Andrew Goodwin's own evidence, in which he states that he was Crown Point's Construction Manager with a Contracts Manager reporting to him;⁴⁰²
 - (h) In the light of the quotation set out in paragraph III.18 below, Crown Point also cannot escape liability by reference to its contention that Crown Point and Mr Goodwin were not aware of Greenwood's participation in the relevant Infringements; and

³⁹⁹ Witness statement of Andrew Goodwin, dated 26 June 2008, paragraphs 11, 13 and 15.

⁴⁰⁰ Written representations of Crown Point, 27 June 2008, paragraph 5.4(i).

⁴⁰¹ Witness statement of Andrew Goodwin, dated 26 June 2008, paragraphs 11 and 15.

⁴⁰² Witness statement of Andrew Goodwin, dated 26 June 2008, paragraph 7.

- (i) In these circumstances, Crown Point's submissions that Greenwood compiled its own annual accounts and reports, operated under a different commercial name and logo, and in a different geographic area and market from Crown Point, do not lead the OFT to alter its conclusion.
- II.342. In the circumstances, the OFT does not consider that the contentions put forward by Crown Point are sufficient to rebut the presumption of decisive influence or to establish that Greenwood determined its conduct on the market autonomously.
- II.343. Therefore, this Decision is only addressed to Crown Point.
- II.344. Greenwood was under the ownership of and ultimately controlled by Crown Point from 11 June 2002. The OFT is therefore addressing this Decision to Crown Point only in respect of Infringements 118, 133 and 158, that is the Infringements involving Greenwood which are dated after 11 June 2002. For the avoidance of doubt, Crown Point is not liable in respect of Infringements 29 and 68, for which Greenwood's participation is mentioned solely due to the fact that it was a counter-party to cover pricing on those tenders with other Parties that are addressed in this Decision.

Davlyn Construction Limited ('Davlyn')

- II.345. Davlyn is a private limited company registered in England and Wales, company number 04653477.⁴⁰³ Davlyn's registered and primary trading address is Sir Francis Ley Industrial Park, Shaftesbury Street, Derby, Derbyshire, DE23 8XA.⁴⁰⁴
- II.346. At the time of issue of the Statement, Davlyn's principal activities were those of building, joinery and operations in the construction industry⁴⁰⁵ and it did not carry out work outside the United Kingdom.
- II.347. Davlyn was incorporated on 31 January 2003 under the name of Davlyn UK but changed its name to Davlyn on 7 April 2003.⁴⁰⁶ Davlyn started trading on 1 April 2003.⁴⁰⁷

- II.352. The directors of Davlyn from 31 January 2003 to 2006 were as follows:⁴¹⁵
- | | |
|-----------------------|------------------------|
| - Marilyn Ann Charles | 31 January 2003 – 2006 |
| - Ian David Gaskin | 31 January 2003 – 2006 |
- II.353. Davlyn applied for, and has been granted, leniency in accordance with the OFT's leniency programme.⁴¹⁶
- II.354. Davlyn, company number 04653477, was the successor of Davlyn, company number 01337870. The names of the two companies were identical and they carried on the same business from the same address. In addition, Marilyn Ann Charles and Ian David Gaskin were Directors of both companies.
- II.355. This Decision is addressed to Davlyn. The OFT considers that Davlyn itself and as successor to Davlyn, company number 01337870, is liable for the Infringements described in this Decision and that it is liable for payment of the penalties that the OFT is imposing, on account of the participation in the Infringements of those undertakings.

Derwent Valley Construction Limited ('Derwent Valley')
Chevin Holdings Limited ('Chevin')

- II.356. Derwent Valley is a private limited company registered in England and Wales, company number 01089587.⁴¹⁷ Derwent Valley's registered and primary trading address is Acacia House, 29 Bridge Street, Belper, Derby, Derbyshire, DE56 1AY.⁴¹⁸
- II.357. II.377. The directors of Gavco from 2003 to 2006 were as follows:⁴⁴²

- Glenn Victor Manners 2003 – 2006
- Stuart Phillips 2003 – 2006

II.378. The following directors have been on the Board of Directors of both Dukeries and Gavco during the periods mentioned below.⁴⁴³ The OFT considers that this provides evidence that Gavco exercised decisive influence over Dukeries' conduct.

- Glenn Victor Manners 2003 – 2006
- Stuart Phillips 2003 – 2006

II.379. Dukeries did not apply for leniency, but both it and its ultimate parent company at the time of the Infringements, Gavco, were given the opportunity of accepting the OFT's Fast Track Offer.⁴⁴⁴

II.380. The OFT considers that Gavco, as 100 per cent owner of Dukeries, can be presumed to have exercised decisive influence over Dukeries' commercial policy during the relevant period and therefore formed part of the same economic entity. The OFT notes in addition the evidence of the exercise of decisive influence in the form of directors in common between Gavco and Dukeries.

- II.385. At the time of issue of the Statement, Durkan Limited undertook building contract work for Local Authorities and Housing Associations⁴⁵¹ and did not carry out work outside the United Kingdom.
- II.386. At the time of the Infringements, Durkan and Durkan Limited's ultimate parent company was Durkan Holdings, a private limited company, company number 01316529.⁴⁵² Durkan Holdings' registered and trading address is Durkan House, 214 – 224 High Street, Waltham Cross, Hertfordshire, EN8 7DR.⁴⁵³
- II.387. Durkan Limited is (and was at the time of the Infringements) a wholly owned subsidiary of Durkan Holdings. At the time of the Infringements, Durkan Holdings held 51 per cent of the shares in Durkan, but disposed of this shareholding in September 2007 when Durkan was subject to a management buy out.
- II.388. Durkan has one subsidiary.⁴⁵⁴ Durkan Limited also has one subsidiary.⁴⁵⁵
- II.389. The relevant company structure from 2000 – 2006 is outlined below:

Durkan Limited & Durkan Holdings

II.394. The directors of Durkan Limited from 2002 to 2006 were as follows:⁴⁵⁹

- Robert James Barton	2002 – 2006
- James Philip Briggs	2002 – 2006
- Robert Clark	2002 – 2006
- Daniel Gerard Durkan	2002 – 2006
- William Durkan	2002 – 2006
- David Alan Fraher	2002 – 2006
- Patricia Gillis	3 November 2003 – 31 March 2006
- Julian Harajda	2 September 2002 – 2006
- John Francis Loughlin	1 February 2004 – 2006
- Michael Thomas Pudelek	2002 – 1 May 2005
- Lee Phillip Smith	1 December 2004 – 6 April 2006
- Nigel Francis Tenwick	1 December 2004 – 2006
- Brian Andrew Williams	1 December 2004 – 2006

II.395. The directors of Durkan Holdings from 2002 to 2006 were as follows:⁴⁶⁰

- Robert Clark ⁴⁶¹	24 June 2005 – 30 June 2005
- Daniel Gerard Durkan	2002 – 2006
- William Durkan	2002 – 2006
- David Alan Fraher	2002 – 2006

II.396. The following directors were on the Board of Directors of both Durkan Limited and Durkan Holdings for the periods mentioned below.⁴⁶² The OFT considers ⁴⁶¹ The OFT notes that Durkan Holdings has changed its position on whether Mr Clark was a director of Durkan Holdings during the period stated above. In its response to the Statement, Durkan Holdings stated that Mr Clark was a director of Durkan Holdings: see written representations of Durkan Holdings, 27 June 2008, paragraph 22, OFT Document Reference SAB014. In its response to the First Supplementary Statement, Durkan Holdings contended that Mr Clark was not a director, but merely exercised the functions of a director: see written representations of Durkan Holdings and Durkan Limited, 6 February 2009, paragraph 33. The OFT considers the difference to be immaterial for present purposes.

⁴⁶² Company Appointments Reports, OFT Document Reference 12692 and SAB002.

that this provides evidence that Durkan Holdings exercised decisive influence over Durkan Limited's conduct, at the time of the relevant Infringement.

- Robert Clark	24 June 2005 – 30 June 2005
- Daniel Gerard Durkan	2002 – 2006
- William Durkan	2002 – 2006
- David Alan Fraher	2002 – 2006

II.397. The OFT considers that Durkan Holdings, as 100 per cent owner of Durkan Limited, can be presumed to have exercised decisive influence over Durkan Limited's commercial policy during the relevant period and therefore forms part of the same economic entity. The OFT notes in addition the evidence of the exercise of decisive influence in the form of directors in common between Durkan Holdings and Durkan Limited. Durkan Limited and Durkan Holdings are therefore jointly and severally liable for Durkan Limited's participation in the Infringement which occurred during that period. Accordingly, they are jointly and severally liable for payment of the penalties that the OFT is imposing in respect of Infringement 220.

II.398. In its reply to the First Supplementary Statement, Durkan Holdings did not make any representations in respect of its liability for Durkan Limited's conduct.

Durkan and Durkan Holdings

II.399. The directors of Durkan from 2002 to 2006 were as follows:⁴⁶³

- Robert Francis Cummins	6 February 2006 – 2006
- Daniel Gerard Durkan	2002 – 2006
- William Durkan	2002 – 2006
- David Alan Fraher	2002 – 2006
- Michael Thomas Pudelek	2002 – 2006
- Robert John Scott	2002 – 2006
- Colin Simmons	2002 – 2006
- David Watts	17 October 2005 – 2006
- Maurice Williams	2002 – 24 February 2006

II.400. The following directors were on the Board of Directors of both Durkan and Durkan Holdings for the periods mentioned below.⁴⁶⁴ The OFT considers that, taken together with Durkan Holdings' shareholding of 51 per cent, this gives rise to a presumption that Durkan Holdings exercised decisive influence over Durkan's conduct, at the time of the relevant Infringements.

- Daniel Gerard Durkan	2002 – 2006
- William Durkan	2002 – 2006
- David Alan Fraher	2002 – 2006

II.401. In response to the Statement, Durkan Holdings made a number of representations that:

⁴⁶³ Company Appointments Report, OFT Document Reference 12692.

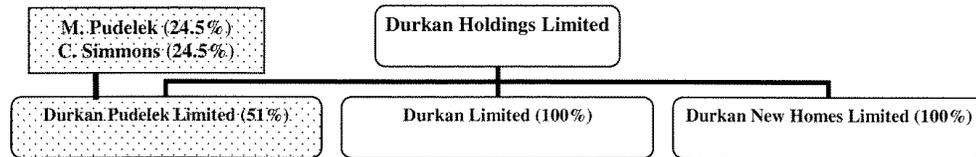

⁴⁶⁴ Company Appointments Reports, OFT Document Reference 12692 and 12693.

'...Durkan Holdings and Durkan Pudelek [Durkan] ...were not one economic unit at the time of the Alleged Infringements'.⁴⁶⁵

II.402. For the reasons outlined below the OFT does not accept this assertion, however.⁴⁶⁶

II.403. According to Durkan Holdings:

'...the company structure during that period [2000-2006] was as follows'.⁴⁶⁷

II.404. Durkan Holdings argued that it cannot be presumed from Durkan Holdings' 51 per cent shareholding in Durkan, that it was able to exercise decisive influence over Durkan's commercial policy.⁴⁶⁸

II.405. Durkan Holdings has further described its role as follows:

'...Durkan Pudelek [Durkan] was incorporated on 7 October 1992. From incorporation to 10 September 2007, Durkan Holdings held 51% of the equity share capital in Durkan Pudelek [Durkan]. In essence, the role of Durkan Holdings was that of a venture capitalist. Durkan Holdings provided financial support by way of loan financing, bond and guarantee support. The level of its shareholding interest was intended to protect its investment. The mere fact that Durkan Holdings had a 51% shareholding interest in the share capital of Durkan Pudelek [Durkan] is inconclusive for the issue of decisive influence'.⁴⁶⁹

II.406. Durkan's Articles of Association⁴⁷⁰ for the relevant period provide that each share carries one vote. As such, by holding 51 per cent of the equity share capital, Durkan Holdings exercised 51 per cent of the voting rights in Durkan. The OFT considers that Durkan Holdings' majority shareholding (and the attached voting rights) is, at the very least, indicative of the exercise of decisive influence over Durkan.

II.407. The OFT does not rely solely on Durkan Holdings' shareholding in Durkan in order to attribute liability to it for Durkan's conduct, however. In addition, as set out in the Statement, the OFT also relies on the fact that Durkan Holdings had three directors in common with Durkan, Daniel Gerald Durkan, William Durkan and David Alan Fraher.

⁴⁶⁹ Written representations of Durkan Holdings, 27 June 2008, paragraph 35, OFT Document Reference SAB014.

⁴⁷⁰ Durkan Articles of Association, OFT Document Reference SAB008, applying Regulation 54, Table A of the Companies (Tables A to F) Regulations 1985 as amended by SI 2000/3373.

- II.408. In its response to the First Supplementary Statement, Durkan Holdings submitted that 'the inferences the OFT draws from the Articles of Association are insufficient to demonstrate joint liability'. In support of this submission, Durkan Holdings referred to Clause 24 of the subscription and shareholders agreement dated 7 October 1992 between Durkan Holdings and Michael Thomas Pudelek and Colin Simmons ('the Subscription Agreement').⁴⁷¹
- II.409. As regards Clause 24 of the Subscription Agreement, this provides as follows:
- 'In the event of any ambiguity or conflict arising between the terms of this Agreement and those of [Durkan's] Memorandum of Association and Articles the terms of this Agreement shall prevail as between the Shareholders'.*
- II.410. The OFT notes in this regard that Durkan Holdings has not pointed to any provision of the Subscription Agreement which would cast doubt on the extent of Durkan Holding's shareholding in Durkan or on the allocation of votes amongst shareholders as set out in Durkan's Articles of Association.
- II.411. Durkan Holdings argued in its response to the Statement, and again in its response to the First Supplementary Statement⁴⁷² that:
- '...the fact alone that the parent and the subsidiary have directors in common is not sufficient for a finding of joint liability. It is further required that the directors cover, and have exercised, key operational functions in both companies...'*⁴⁷³
- II.412. This is to mischaracterise the OFT's case, however. The OFT has not sought to argue that the fact that a parent and its subsidiary had directors in common is alone sufficient for a finding of joint liability. Rather, the OFT's case is that where a parent has a majority shareholding in a subsidiary and other indicia are also present (which may include having directors in common and/or other economic and legal organisational links), the OFT is entitled to presume that the parent exercised decisive influence. Moreover, the OFT does not accept that where a parent company is a majority shareholder and has directors in common with its subsidiary, the OFT must also show that the common directors were responsible for 'key operational functions' of the subsidiary and exercised those functions (see paragraphs III.19 to III.24 of the Legal Background section). Nevertheless, as set out below, the OFT considers that in this instance, there are factors which indicate that the directors of Durkan Holdings did in fact exercise such functions in relation to Durkan.
- II.413. In its response to the First Supplementary Statement, Durkan Holdings again disputed the OFT's entitlement to rely on the presumption that Durkan Holdings exercised decisive influence over Durkan.⁴⁷⁴ The OFT refers again in this regard to the points set out above and to the legal principles set out in paragraphs III.19 and III.24 below.
- II.414. In its response to the Statement, Durkan Holdings sought to rely on the Subscription Agreement in support of its assertion that Durkan Holdings and Durkan were not one economic unit at the time of the Infringements. In particular, Durkan Holdings made the following representations:

⁴⁷¹ Written representations of Durkan Holdings and Durkan Limited, 6 February 2009, paragraph 52(a).

⁴⁷² Written representations of Durkan Holdings and Durkan Limited, 6 February 2009, paragraph 52(b).

⁴⁷³ Written representations of Durkan Holdings, 27 June 2008, paragraph 33(b), OFT Document Reference SAB014.

⁴⁷⁴ Written representations of Durkan Holdings and Durkan Limited, 6 February 2009, paragraphs 42 to 45

'...the Subscription Agreement contains the following provisions:

- (a) Clause 7.1: "[Mike] Pudelek shall act as Chief Executive and [Colin] Simmons shall act as Construction Director of the Company"
- (b) Clause 7.2: "Alan Fraher shall be appointed as Financial Director of the Company, Daniel Durkan as Executive Director and Tim Henessy as Secretary of the Company [Durkan] but their services shall be on a part time basis and Durkan [Holdings] shall continue to be full time employer of these executives".

...[a]ccordingly, and consistent with their respective shareholdings, operational control of Durkan Pudelek [Durkan] vested in Michael Pudelek, as the Chief Executive, and in Colin Simmons as the Construction/Managing Director.⁴⁷⁵

- II.415. Moreover in its response to the First Supplementary Statement, Durkan Holdings submitted that clause 7.1 of the Subscription Agreement had the effect of conferring legal control over Durkan on Mike Pudelek and Colin Simmons, 'because they had the right to manage the activities and determine the business policy of Durkan Pudelek [Durkan]'.
- II.416. The OFT does not accept Durkan Holdings' assertion that the operational control exercised by the minority shareholders over some of the activities of Durkan was such as to exclude Durkan Holdings from exerting decisive influence over Durkan, however (or indeed to exclude Durkan Holdings from exercising legal control over Durkan). On the contrary, the OFT considers that the fact that directors and full-time employees of Durkan Holdings held senior operational management positions within Durkan, namely Finance Director and Executive Director, is evidence that Durkan Holdings did exercise decisive influence over Durkan. Moreover, this receives further support from a number of additional factors, as set out below.
- II.417. In particular, the email dated 30 March 2004⁴⁷⁶ from Alan Fraher, a director of both the parent and subsidiary companies and full-time employee of Durkan Holdings, to Clive Perceval of Mansell is evidence, not only of Mr Fraher's influence over Durkan but also of his direct involvement in Infringement 135. The email records an exchange between Mr Fraher and Mr Perceval in which Mr Fraher refers to attending meetings and negotiating a 'financial committment' [sic] for Durkan. This is clear evidence of a director and employee of Durkan Holdings taking business, financial and operational decisions for and on behalf of Durkan, even to the extent of having direct involvement in respect of an Infringement. In its response to the First Supplementary Statement, Durkan Holdings described Mr Fraher's role in this exchange as simply one of "cash management".⁴⁷⁷ In the light of Mr Fraher's reference to attending meetings and negotiating a financial commitment as set out above, the OFT considers this explanation to be implausible.
- II.418. In its response to the Statement, Durkan Holdings stated that:

⁴⁷⁵ Written representations of Durkan Holdings, 27 June 2008, paragraphs 37 and 38, OFT Document Reference SAB014.

⁴⁷⁷ Written representations of Durkan Holdings and Durkan Limited, 6 February 2009, paragraph 52(c).

*'...the Subscription Agreement obliges Durkan Holdings to use all reasonable endeavours to procure bonds and guarantees that may be required by Durkan Pudelek [Durkan] in order to carry out its business...'*⁴⁷⁸

II.419. The OFT considers that for an economic unit to be independent it must perform all of the main functions of an economic operator.⁴⁷⁹ Business units that are dependant on a corporate centre for their commercial strategy and operations, for their investments and finances, and/or for their legal affairs cannot be considered to constitute separate economic units in their own right.⁴⁸⁰ The OFT considers that the fact that Durkan was dependent on Durkan Holdings for finance and other commercial operations is strong evidence that Durkan and Durkan Holdings formed a single economic unit. Moreover that is not undermined by the fact that Durkan was required to pay for the financial and support services provided by Durkan Holdings.⁴⁸¹

II.420. Durkan Holdings also stated that:

*'...William Durkan [the Chairman and a director of both Durkan Holdings and Durkan rarely participated in the Board meetings of Durkan Pudelek [Durkan]'*⁴⁸²

II.421. The OFT does not accept that Mr Durkan's alleged infrequent participation in Durkan Board meetings affects the OFT's conclusions regarding the influence exercised by Durkan Holdings over Durkan. This is particularly evident when considered in conjunction with clauses 4.2 and 5.1.5.2 of the Durkan Subscription Agreement which provide:⁴⁸³

'...[i]f such Chairman is unable to attend any meeting of the Board, then William Durkan shall be entitled to appoint another Director to act as Chairman in his place...' (clause 4.2)

and

'...The quorum for any meeting of the Board shall be at least two Directors of whom at least one shall be a Director nominated by Durkan [Holdings] or the alternate of such Director and one of whom at least shall be either Pudelek or Simmons or an alternate of such Director...' (clause 5.1.5.2, emphasis added).

II.422. It is clear that in the event that the Chairman (William Durkan) or a Durkan Holdings' appointed director was unable to attend a Board meeting, the Subscription Agreement allowed for the Durkan Holdings Chairman or director to nominate an alternate to attend in their place. The OFT also considers the requirement for a director nominated by Durkan Holdings to be present at the Board meeting to establish a quorum as being further evidence of the influence exercised by Durkan Holdings over Durkan's commercial policy and decision making.

⁴⁸³ Durkan Subscription Agreement, OFT Document Reference SAB017.

II.423. The OFT also notes that the Durkan Subscription Agreement⁴⁸⁴ at clause 4.3 provides:

'...In the case of an equality of votes at any meeting of the Board, the Chairman shall be entitled to a second or casting vote...'

This is further evidence of the influence exercised by Durkan Holdings over Durkan.⁴⁸⁵

II.424. Durkan Holdings stated in its response to the Statement that:

*'...Colin Simmons and Mike Pudelek conceived the logo and corporate colours for Durkan Pudelek [Durkan] and used them from the date of incorporation. The logo and corporate colours are different from those of the Durkan Holdings' companies'.*⁴⁸⁶

II.425. The OFT does not accept the assertion that the Durkan logo was materially different from the Durkan Holdings logo. The OFT notes that both logos use the same font and point for their lettering and contain the word 'DURKAN' displayed prominently above the same 'brushstroke' design.⁴⁸⁷ The OFT's view is therefore that, contrary to Durkan Holdings' representations, the logos support the OFT's view that Durkan Holdings exercised decisive influence over Durkan. Moreover, the OFT does not consider that any differences in the companies' respective logos or corporate colours would, in any event, undermine the strength of the other evidence pointing towards Durkan Holdings' influence over Durkan.

II.426. Durkan Holdings also relied in its response to the Statement on a non-compete provision in the Subscription Agreement:

*'... that precludes Durkan Pudelek [Durkan] competing with Durkan Holdings. Such a provision would be unnecessary in the event that Durkan Holdings controlled Durkan Pudelek [Durkan]'.*⁴⁸⁸

II.427. Similarly in its response to the First Supplementary Statement, Durkan Holdings relied on the provisions in clause 15.2 of the Subscription Agreement regarding loans to be provided by Durkan Holdings to Durkan, which Durkan Holdings submitted 'would normally feature in a contract with third parties'.⁴⁸⁹

II.428. The OFT does not accept that the inclusion of a non-compete provision in the Subscription Agreement, or the provision in clause 15.2 of the Subscription Agreement, is evidence that Durkan Holdings did not exercise decisive influence over Durkan. The inclusion of a non-compete provision does not demonstrate that Durkan Holdings' majority shareholding was ineffective nor does it demonstrate an inability to exercise decisive influence. The OFT considers the non-compete provision to be largely irrelevant to the question of control.

⁴⁸⁴ Durkan Subscription Agreement, OFT Document Reference SAB017.

⁴⁸⁵ Contrary to Durkan Holdings' submission in its response to First Supplementary Statement, paragraph 52(f), the OFT does not however rely on this factor as conclusive 'for a finding of joint liability'.

⁴⁸⁶ Written representations of Durkan Holdings, 27 June 2008, paragraph 41, OFT Document Reference SAB014; see also written representations of Durkan Holdings and Durkan Limited, 6 February 2009, paragraph 52(g).

⁴⁸⁹ Written representations of Durkan Holdings and Durkan Limited, 6 February 2009, paragraph 52(f); Written representations of Durkan Holdings, 27 June 2008, paragraph 46, OFT Document Reference SAB014.

Moreover, the OFT notes that Durkan Holdings has not put forward any evidence of its having had to rely on the provision to protect its interests. As noted above, the OFT considers that the fact that Durkan was dependent on Durkan Holdings for finance and other commercial operations is strong evidence that Durkan and Durkan Holdings formed a single economic unit.⁴⁹⁰

II.429. Durkan Holdings also stated in its response to the Statement that:

*'...throughout the present administrative procedure, Durkan Holdings has always presented itself as a separate interlocutor from Durkan Pudelek [Durkan] in its dealings with the OFT...'*⁴⁹¹

II.430. The OFT notes that Durkan Holdings, while presenting itself as separate from Durkan in its dealings with the OFT, has consistently presented itself and Durkan to the public as a single economic unit. One example is Durkan Holdings' website which provided seamless integrated information on both Durkan Holdings' and Durkan's activities.⁴⁹² Another example is the Durkan Holdings Consolidated Financial Statement for Year Ended 31 January 2006 where Durkan is described as performing the Group's 'private sector building contract work'.⁴⁹³ This is also reflected in an article published on ContractJournal.com on 24 August 2007⁴⁹⁴, which recorded a discussion with Durkan Holdings' Chief Executive and which referred to Durkan as '[o]ne of the other two smaller operating divisions' of Durkan Holdings.⁴⁹⁵ The OFT considers these public communications to be strong supporting evidence that Durkan Holdings and Durkan operated as a single economic unit at the time of the Infringements.

II.431. Moreover, the OFT's conclusions on this are consistent with the fact that in its Consolidated Financial Statements for the years ended 31 January 2002⁴⁹⁶, 2003⁴⁹⁷, 2004⁴⁹⁸, 2005⁴⁹⁹ and 2006⁵⁰⁰, Durkan Holdings consistently reported on the activities of its subsidiary, Durkan.⁵⁰¹ The OFT also notes that Durkan Holdings reported in its Consolidated Financial Statements for the years ended 31 January 2002⁵⁰², 2003⁵⁰³, 2004⁵⁰⁴, 2005⁵⁰⁵ and 2006⁵⁰⁶ that Durkan paid ⁵⁰¹ Under sections 229, 235(c) and 258 of the Companies Act 1985 [c.6] a parent company must include the activities of another member of its group in its financial reports if the parent holds a majority of the voting rights, exercises dominant influence or some other similar form of control over that group member. The inclusion of a subsidiary undertaking in a consolidated financial statement is optional where severe long-term restrictions substantially hinder the exercise of the rights of the parent company over the assets or management of that undertaking (section 229(3)(a)) or the parent company's interest in the subsidiary is held exclusively with a view to subsequent resale (section 229(3)(c)). Where that is the case, however, the parent company is still required to report the activities of the subsidiary but as assets controlled by the parent rather than as subsidiaries (Accounting Standards Board Financial Reporting Standard 2: Accounting for Subsidiary Undertakings July 1992 FSR2 as amended, paragraphs 27, 28 and 29).

'management charges' to Durkan Holdings through Durkan Holdings' wholly owned subsidiaries Durkan Limited and Durkan New Homes Limited and that in its Consolidated Financial Statement for the year ended 31 January 2006⁵⁰⁷ Durkan described Durkan Holdings as its '...parent company and controller' (emphasis added). The OFT considers that these factors further support its conclusion that Durkan Holdings and Durkan belonged to a single economic entity at the time of the Infringements.

II.432. The OFT has also had regard to the further submissions put forward by Durkan Holdings in its response to the First Supplementary Statement and in its oral representations which are not expressly mentioned above. The OFT does not consider that those arguments are such as to affect the conclusions stated below.

II.433. In its separate response to the Statement, Durkan also made representations that:

*'...over the period in which the Alleged Infringements occurred, January 2003 – February 2006, Durkan Pudelek [Durkan] did not form one economic unit with Durkan Holdings...'*⁵⁰⁸

II.434. Similarly in its response to the First Supplementary Statement, Durkan submitted 'that the factual reality of the day to day operations of [Durkan] was that [Durkan] decided its own conduct in the market independently of Durkan Holdings'.⁵⁰⁹

II.435. For the reasons set out in paragraphs II.403 to II.431 above, the OFT does not accept these assertions.

II.436. In its response to the Statement, Durkan described certain support services provided by Durkan Holdings to Durkan as follows:

'...Durkan Holdings provided Durkan Pudelek [Durkan] with support services. Such support services as were provided by Durkan Holdings were paid for by Durkan Pudelek [Durkan] at an annual cost of [calculated as a percentage] of the gross turnover of Durkan Pudelek [Durkan]. Support services included office space and related services such as secretarial services. ...Operational services and disciplines such as Client Marketing, Estimating, Surveying, Contracts management were not provided by Durkan Holdings'.⁵¹⁰

II.437. The OFT notes that this is inconsistent with Clause 1.1 of the Durkan Subscription Agreement⁵¹¹, however, which provided that:

'...the services to be provided by Durkan [Holdings] to the Company [Durkan are] to include all time devoted to the Company by any of its direct employees or consultants, provision of office space and related services to include management, secretarial, estimating, surveying and any other services of whatsoever nature... (emphasis added).

The OFT considers the specific inclusion of management, estimating and surveying services is further evidence of the influence exercised by Durkan Holdings over Durkan's operations.

- II.438. As set out at paragraph II.412 above, the OFT considers that in circumstances where a subsidiary is majority owned by its parent company and there are other economic and legal indicia of influence, then it may be presumed that the parent company exercised decisive influence over the commercial activities of its subsidiary. In the Statement, the OFT relied on such indicia, namely that Durkan Holdings had three directors in common with Durkan (Daniel Gerald Durkan, William Durkan and David Alan Fraher), together with Durkan Holdings' majority shareholding in Durkan, to conclude that the exercise of decisive influence by Durkan Holdings over the commercial activities of Durkan at the time of the Infringements may be presumed.
- II.439. The OFT considers that nothing stated by Durkan Holdings or Durkan in their respective responses to the Statement or the First Supplementary Statement would serve to rebut that presumption. Rather, the OFT considers that the arguments and additional evidence advanced by Durkan Holdings and Durkan, together with the additional material set out in this Decision, overwhelmingly points to Durkan Holdings having exercised decisive influence over Durkan at the time of the Infringements and of both companies having formed part of one and the same economic entity.
- II.440. In particular, the OFT relies on the following factors in support of its conclusions in this regard:
- (a) Durkan Holdings' majority shareholding and associated voting rights in Durkan (see paragraph II.406 above);
 - (b) the fact that three of Durkan's directors, including its Chairman, were also directors of Durkan Holdings (see paragraph II.407 above);
 - (c) the fact that full-time employees of Durkan Holdings held senior operational management posts within Durkan (see paragraph II.415 above), together with evidence of a Durkan Holdings' director's involvement in the negotiation of a specific financial commitment for Durkan (see paragraph II.417 above);
 - (d) Durkan's dependence on Durkan Holdings for finance and other operations (see paragraph II.419 above) and the payment by Durkan to Durkan Holdings of management charges for services provided by Durkan Holdings to Durkan (see paragraph II.431 above);
 - (e) Durkan Holdings' right to have one of its nominated directors or an alternate of such a director present at Durkan Board meetings for a quorum to be established (see paragraph II.421 above);
 - (f) the right of Durkan's Chairman, who was also the Chairman of Durkan Holdings, to chair meetings or, in his absence, to appoint another director to do so, and his entitlement to a second or casting vote in the event of an equality of votes at Durkan Board meetings (see paragraph II.422 above);
 - (g) Durkan's use of its parent's name, 'Durkan', and the similarity between the companies' respective logos (see paragraph II.425 above);

- (h) public communications representing Durkan and Durkan Holdings as a single economic unit (see paragraph II.429 above); and
- (i) the fact that during the relevant period Durkan Holdings reported Durkan's activities in its Consolidated Financial Statements and that Durkan, in its Consolidated Financial Statement for the year ended 31 January 2006, described Durkan Holdings as its 'parent company and controller' (see paragraph II.431 above).

II.441. The OFT therefore considers that Durkan Holdings as 51 per cent owner of Durkan and having Directors in common, together with the other indicia as further set out above, can be presumed to have exercised decisive influence over Durkan's commercial policy during the relevant period and therefore forms part of the same economic entity. Moreover, the OFT also considers that the combination of factors listed in the above paragraph together demonstrate that Durkan Holdings in fact exercised decisive influence over Durkan. Durkan and Durkan Holdings are therefore jointly and severally liable for Durkan's participation in the Infringements. Accordingly, they are jointly and severally liable for payment of the penalties that the OFT is imposing in respect of Infringements 135 and 240.

II.442. This Decision is therefore addressed to Durkan, Durkan Limited, and Durkan Holdings.

E. Manton Limited ('E Manton')

II.457. This Decision is therefore addressed to E Taylor. The OFT considers that E Taylor is liable for the Infringements described in this Decision and that it is liable for payment of the penalties that the OFT is imposing, on account of the participation in the Infringements of that undertaking.

F. Parkinson Limited ('F Parkinson')
Mowbray Holdings Limited ('Mowbray')

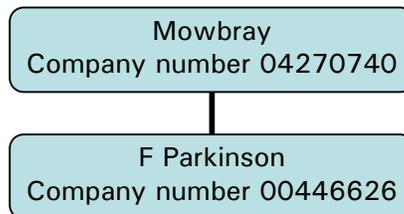

II.458. F Parkinson is a private limited company registered in England and Wales, company number 00446626.⁵²⁶ F Parkinson's registered and primary trading address is Mowbray Drive, Blackpool, Lancashire, FY3 7UU.⁵²⁷ F Parkinson also trades from premises in York.⁵²⁸

II.459. At the time of issue of the Statement, F Parkinson undertook new build and refurbishment works for both public and private sector clients. Market sectors included, but were not limited to educational, commercial, industrial and health and leisure.⁵²⁹ At the time of issue of the Statement F Parkinson did not carry out work outside the United Kingdom.

II.460. F Parkinson's ultimate parent company is currently Mowbray, a private limited company, company number 04270740.⁵³⁰ It was incorporated on 15 August 2001. Mowbray's registered address is 50 Mowbray Drive, Blackpool, Lancashire, FY3 7UU.⁵³¹

II.461. F Parkinson has no subsidiaries.

II.462. The overall company structure from 2002 – 2006 is outlined below:

II.463. Mowbray's consolidated turnover for the financial year ending 30 September 2008 was £23,556,298.⁵³²

II.464. The directors of F Parkinson from 2002 to 2006 were as follows:⁵³³

- Roger Parkinson 2002 – 28 September 2001
- Andrew Smith 1 December 2005 – 2006

II.465. The directors of Mowbray from 2002 to 2006 were as follows:⁵³⁴

- Peter Glenn 2002 – 2006
- Allan Graham Hollick 2002 – 30 April 2004
- Francis Hull 2002 – 2006
- Colin Oakley 2002 – 2006

II.466. The following directors have been on the Board of Directors of both F Parkinson and Mowbray during the periods mentioned below.⁵³⁵ The OFT considers that this provides evidence that Mowbray exercised decisive influence over F Parkinson’s conduct at the time of the Infringements.

- Peter Glenn 2002 – 2006
- Allan Graham Hollick 2002 – 30 April 2004
- Francis Hull 2002 – 2006
- Colin Oakley 2002 – 2006

II.467. F Parkinson did not apply for leniency, but both it and its ultimate parent company at the time of the relevant Infringements, Mowbray, were given the opportunity of accepting the OFT’s Fast Track Offer.⁵³⁶

II.468. The OFT considers that Mowbray, as 100 per cent owner of F Parkinson, can be presumed to have exercised decisive influence over F Parkinson’s commercial policy and therefore forms part of the same economic entity. The OFT notes in addition the evidence of the exercise of decisive influence in the form of directors in common between F Parkinson and Mowbray. F Parkinson and Mowbray are therefore jointly and severally liable for F Parkinson’s participation in the Infringements. Accordingly, they are jointly and severally liable for payment of the penalties that the OFT is imposing.

II.469. This Decision is therefore addressed to F Parkinson and Mowbray.

Frudd Construction Limited ('Frudd')

II.484. Frudd is a private limited company registered in England and Wales, company number 01673323.⁵⁵¹ Frudd's registered address is c/o Ernst & Young LLP, 1 Bridgewater Place, Water Lane, Leeds, LS11 5QR.⁵⁵² Frudd also has a trading address at Byidon House, 92 Rolleston Drive, Arnold, Nottingham, Nottinghamshire, NG5 7JP.⁵⁵³

II.485. At the time of issue of the Statement, Frudd undertook construction, contract maintenance and building services in sectors such as commercial, industrial, leisure and domestic for both public and private sector clients.⁵⁵⁴ At the time of issue of the Statement, Frudd did not carry out work outside the United Kingdom.

II.486. Until 17 August 2005, Frudd was called Frudd Building Services Limited.⁵⁵⁵

II.487. An administrator was appointed for Frudd on 4 January 2007⁵⁵⁶ and a liquidator was subsequently appointed on 3 July 2008.⁵⁵⁷

II.490. The directors of Frudd from 2002 to 2006 were as follows:⁵⁶⁰

- David Ian Frudd	2002 – 2006
- Jenna Frudd	2002 – 2006
- John Christopher Frudd	2002 – 2006
- Andrew Neil Smith	2002 – 31 January 2004
- Stanley Yeomans	2002 – 6 May 2004

II.491. Frudd applied for leniency in accordance with the OFT's leniency programme.⁵⁶¹ Notwithstanding the fact that Frudd has not signed up to the leniency agreement⁵⁶², the OFT intends, given the circumstances to recognise in any penalty calculation the voluntary assistance provided by Frudd as a result of its application for leniency. This means that the offered leniency reduction has been taken into account when calculating the penalties that the OFT is imposing on Frudd and the information provided by Frudd in the context of its leniency application has been used by the OFT as if it had signed up to the leniency agreement.

II.492. This Decision is addressed to Frudd. The OFT considers that Frudd is liable for the Infringements described in this Decision and that it is liable for payment of the penalties that the OFT is imposing, on account of the participation in the Infringements of that undertaking.

II.634. The directors of Haymills Group from incorporation to 2006 were:⁷²¹

- Julian Andrew Brandon	26 May 2004 – 2006
- Ian Richard Brown	1 August 2004 – 2006

II.635. The following directors have been on the Board of Directors of both Haymills and Corringway during the periods mentioned below.⁷²² The OFT considers that this provides evidence that Corringway exercised decisive influence over Haymills' conduct, at the time of the Infringements preceding 27 July 2004.

- Martin Courtenay Clarke 2002 – 6 October 2003

II.636. The following directors have been on the Board of Directors of both Haymills and Haymills Group during the periods mentioned below.⁷²³ The OFT considers that this provides evidence that Haymills Group exercised decisive influence over Haymills's conduct, at the time of the Infringement following 27 July 2004.

- Julian Andrew Brandon 27 July 2004 – 2006

II.637. Haymills did not apply for leniency, but both it and its ultimate parent companies at the time of the relevant Infringements, Corringway and Haymills Group, were given the opportunity of accepting the OFT's Fast Track Offer.⁷²⁴

II.638. The OFT considers that Corringway, as 100 per cent owner of Haymills, can be presumed to have exercised decisive influence over Haymills' commercial policy from 2000 until 27 July 2004 and therefore forms part of the same economic entity. The OFT notes in addition the evidence of the exercise of decisive influence in the form of directors in common between Corringway and Haymills. Haymills and Corringway are therefore jointly and severally liable for Haymills's participation in the Infringements. Accordingly, they are jointly and severally liable for payment of the fine that the OFT is imposing, in respect of Infringements 103 and 119.

II.639. The OFT considers that Haymills Group, as 100 per cent owner of Haymills, can be presumed to have exercised decisive influence over Haymills's commercial policy from 27 July 2004 until 2006 and therefore forms part of the same economic entity. The OFT notes in addition the evidence of the exercise of decisive influence in the form of directors in common between Haymills Group and Haymills. Haymills and Haymills Group are therefore jointly and severally liable for Haymills' participation in the Infringement. Accordingly, they are jointly and severally liable for payment of the penalty that the OFT is imposing, in respect of Infringement 232.

II.640. In its response to the Statement, Corringway submitted that it should not be held liable for Haymills' participation in the Infringements between 2000 and 27 July 2004. Corringway submitted for example that:

- (a) The mere fact of a 100 per cent shareholding does not of itself suffice for a finding that a parent company is liable for an infringement committed by its subsidiary; instead the OFT is required 'to demonstrate that the parent company, through its conduct, has responsibility for the infringement';⁷²⁵
- (b) There is no evidence that Corringway had any involvement or participation in the Infringements⁷²⁶, and moreover Corringway was a mere holding company.⁷²⁷ Similarly the OFT has not provided evidence

⁷²⁴ See paragraphs II.1481 to II.1487 below.

⁷²⁵ Written representations of Corringway, 27 June 2008, paragraph 2.3.

⁷²⁶ Written representations of Corringway, 27 June 2008, paragraph 2.4.

that the directors of Corringway were involved in or aware of the Infringements.⁷²⁸

- (c) The fact that there were common directors on the Boards of Corringway and Haymills is insufficient to establish liability on the part of Corringway, and Corringway's Board minutes in the relevant period provide no indication that the Corringway Board was involved in the day-to-day business of Haymills.⁷²⁹
- (d) Since Corringway is in liquidation it should not be held liable for Haymills' participation in the relevant Infringements, by analogy with Case T-134/94 NMH Stahlwerke [1999] ECR II-239.⁷³⁰

II.641. In their separate response to the Statement, Haymills Group and Haymills agreed with the OFT that Corringway and Haymills constituted the same undertaking during the period 2000 to 27 July 2004.⁷³¹ However Haymills Group and Haymills submitted that Haymills and Corringway should not be held jointly and severally liable for the relevant Infringements in the period 2000 to 27 July 2004, but rather that the OFT should impose liability for those Infringements solely on Corringway. Otherwise, in the light of Corringway's liquidation, liability for the Infringements in the period 2000 to 27 July 2004 may fall indirectly on Haymills Group as the subsequent purchaser of Haymills.⁷³²

II.642. The OFT has had regard to all of the submissions put forward by Corringway and by Haymills Group and Haymills in relation to this issue. For the reasons set out in paragraphs III.13 to III.18 below, the OFT considers that a parent company may be held liable for an infringement committed by its subsidiary even though it had no specific involvement in or knowledge of the infringing conduct. The OFT refers specifically in this regard to the quotation set out in paragraph III.18. It follows that Corringway cannot escape liability for the Infringements by reference to its argument that it had no specific involvement in or knowledge of the infringing conduct. It must also follow that the fact that the common directors identified above are not alleged to have had knowledge of or involvement in the infringing conduct is not such as to enable Corringway to escape liability.

II.643. While Corringway has sought to downplay the significance of the common directorships identified by the OFT, the OFT notes that Corringway has not denied the existence of those common directorships. The OFT considers that, in the light of the common directorships identified above and the 100 per cent shareholding held by Corringway in Haymills, the OFT is entitled to rely on the presumption of decisive influence as set out in paragraph III.13 below. Furthermore the OFT considers that the submissions put forward by Corringway are insufficient to rebut that presumption, since they fall short of establishing that Haymills determined its conduct on the market autonomously.

⁷²⁹ Written representations of Corringway, 27 June 2008, paragraph 4.2. Corringway has not however provided the OFT with copies of Corringway's board minutes in the relevant period.

⁷³⁰ Written representations of Corringway, 27 June 2008, paragraph 6.4.

⁷³² Written representations of Haymills Group and Haymills, 27 June 2008, paragraphs 2.6 to 2.8.

- II.644. The OFT does not consider that Corringway should escape liability by analogy with Case T-134/94 NMH Stahlwerke [1999] ECR II-239 I. In particular, the CFI imputed liability in that case to the economic successor of the infringing company, in order to ensure that the effectiveness of the competition rules would not be compromised by changes to the legal form of the undertakings concerned. The OFT considers in this case that effectiveness is best served by holding both Corringway and Haymills jointly and severally liable for Haymills' participation in the Infringements during the period of Corringway's ownership.
- II.645. Nor does the OFT consider that Corringway should be held solely responsible for Haymills' participation in the Infringements between 2000 and 27 July 2004. It follows from the case law of the CFI that joint and several liability of a parent and subsidiary, where they are found to constitute the same undertaking for competition law purposes, is permitted in EC law.⁷³³ Were the OFT not to impose joint and several liability on Corringway and Haymills, this would enable Haymills to escape the consequences of its participation in the Infringements in the period 2000 to 27 July 2004.
- II.646. This Decision is therefore addressed to Haymills, Corringway and Haymills Group.

Henry Boot Construction (UK) Limited ('Henry Boot')
Henry Boot plc ('Henry Boot plc')

- II.647. Henry Boot is a private limited company registered in England and Wales, company number 02880202.⁷³⁴ Henry Boot's registered address is Banner Cross Hall, Ecclesall Road, Sheffield, South Yorkshire, S11 9PD.⁷³⁵ Henry Boot's head office is Callywhite Lane, Dronfield, Derbyshire, S18 2XN.⁷³⁶ Henry Boot also trades from 71 Ardwick Green, Ardwick, Manchester, M12 6FX.⁷³⁷
- II.648. At the time of issue of the Statement, Henry Boot undertook construction and refurbishment works in the housing, retail, education, health, leisure, industrial and commercial sectors for both private and public clients.⁷³⁸ At the time of issue of the Statement Henry Boot did not carry out work outside the United Kingdom.
- II.649. Henry Boot's ultimate parent company is Henry Boot plc, a public limited company, company number 00160996.⁷³⁹ Henry Boot plc's registered address is Banner Cross Hall, Sheffield, South Yorkshire, S11 9PD.⁷⁴⁰ Henry Boot is a wholly owned subsidiary of Henry Boot plc.⁷⁴¹

- II.658. The OFT considers that Henry Boot plc, as 100 per cent owner of Henry Boot, can be presumed to have exercised decisive influence over Henry Boot's commercial policy during the relevant period and therefore forms part of the same economic entity. The OFT notes in addition the evidence of the exercise of decisive influence in the form of directors in common between Henry Boot plc and Henry Boot. Henry Boot and Henry Boot plc are therefore jointly and severally liable for Henry Boot's participation in the Infringements. Accordingly, they are jointly and severally liable for payment of the penalties that the OFT is imposing, in respect of Infringements 47, 149 and 175.⁷⁴⁹
- II.659. In their response to the Statement, Henry Boot plc and Henry Boot submitted that Henry Boot plc should not be held liable for Henry Boot's participation in the Infringements. Henry Boot plc and Henry Boot submitted that:
- (a) Henry Boot plc did not determine Henry Boot's commercial strategy. Henry Boot plc approved contracts to be entered into by Henry Boot only where they had a value above a certain level (tens of millions) and all of the relevant Infringements involved contracts below that threshold.⁷⁵⁰ Henry Boot plc also approved Henry Boot's business plan;⁷⁵¹ and
 - (b) The holder of the common directorships identified above, Edward Boot, had no involvement in the day-to-day running of Henry Boot.⁷⁵²
- II.660. The OFT considers that in the light of Henry Boot plc's 100 per cent shareholding in Henry Boot and the common directorships held by Mr Boot, the OFT is entitled to rely on the presumption of decisive influence in accordance with the principles set out in paragraph III.13 below. It therefore falls to Henry Boot plc and Henry Boot to adduce sufficient evidence to rebut that presumption.
- II.661. In this regard, the OFT considers that the fact that Henry Boot plc approved contracts to be entered into by Henry Boot which had a value above a certain level (tens of millions), and approved Henry Boot's business plan, demonstrates that Henry Boot plc retained the power of final decision with regard to Henry Boot's conduct on the market.⁷⁵³ Furthermore the OFT considers that, in accordance with the principle set out in paragraph III.18 below, the contention that Henry Boot plc was not involved in decision-making on the contracts which are subject of the relevant Infringements does not enable Henry Boot plc to escape liability. Finally, the OFT notes that all the members of Henry Boot plc's Board attended the Board meetings of Henry Boot in order to 'advise on strategy but they [did] not dictate on strategy'.⁷⁵⁴
- II.662. In the circumstances the OFT considers that the contentions put forward by Henry Boot plc and Henry Boot are not sufficient to rebut the presumption of decisive influence and establish that Henry Boot determined its conduct on the market autonomously.

⁷⁴⁹ The penalty in respect of Infringements 149 and 175 is reduced to zero as this is a 'But for' Infringement.

II.663. This Decision is therefore addressed to Henry Boot and Henry Boot plc.

Herbert Baggaley Construction Limited ('Herbert Baggaley')
Baggaley Group Limited ('Baggaley Group')

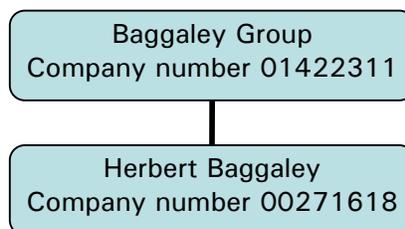

II.664. Herbert Baggaley is a private limited company registered in England and Wales, company number 00271618.⁷⁵⁵ Herbert Baggaley's registered primary and trading address is 1 Melton Way, Mansfield, Nottinghamshire, NG18 5FU.⁷⁵⁶

II.665. At the time of issue of the Statement, Herbert Baggaley undertook construction, maintenance and joinery works throughout the Midlands and South Yorkshire. The construction and maintenance divisions focused on works for private and public clients in the education, health, retail, commercial and industrial sectors.⁷⁵⁷ At the time of issue of the Statement, Herbert Baggaley did not carry out work outside the United Kingdom.

II.666. Herbert Baggaley's ultimate parent company is Baggaley Group, a private limited company, company number 01422311.⁷⁵⁸ Baggaley Group's registered address is 1 Melton Way, Mansfield, Nottinghamshire, NG18 5FU.⁷⁵⁹ Herbert Baggaley is a wholly owned subsidiary of Baggaley Group.⁷⁶⁰

II.667. Herbert Baggaley has no subsidiaries.⁷⁶¹

II.668. The relevant company structure is outlined below:

II.669. Baggaley Group has 1 other subsidiary.⁷⁶²

II.670. Baggaley Group's worldwide consolidated turnover for the financial year ending 30 June 2009 was [...] [C].⁷⁶³

II.671. The directors of Herbert Baggaley from 2000 to 2006 were as follows:⁷⁶⁴

- Richard Ian Baggaley 5 January 2006 – 2006
- Antony Vincent Dearden 1 July 2001 - 2006
- Michael John Feazey 2000 – 24 August 2001

II.673. The following directors have been on the Board of Directors of both Herbert Baggaley and Baggaley Group during the periods mentioned below.⁷⁶⁶ The OFT considers that this provides evidence that Baggaley Group exercised decisive influence over Herbert Baggaley's conduct at the time of the Infringements.

- Herbert Howard Baggaley 2000 – 2006
- Richard Ian Baggaley 5 January 2006 – 2006

II.674. Herbert Baggaley applied for, and has been granted, leniency in accordance with the OFT's leniency programme.⁷⁶⁷

II.675. The OFT considers that Baggaley Group, as 100 per cent owner of Herbert Baggaley, can be presumed to have exercised decisive influence over Herbert Baggaley's commercial policy during the relevant period and therefore forms part of the same economic entity. The OFT notes in addition the evidence of the exercise of decisive influence in the form of directors in common between Baggaley Group and Herbert Baggaley. Herbert Baggaley and Baggaley Group are therefore jointly and severally liable for Herbert Baggaley's participation in the Infringements. Accordingly, they are jointly and severally liable for payment of the penalties that the OFT is imposing, in respect of Infringements 146, 158 and 168.

II.676. This Decision is therefore addressed to Herbert Baggaley and Baggaley Group.

- II.738. Interserve's ultimate parent undertaking and ultimate controlling party from 2000 until 2006 was Interserve plc.⁸³⁹ The OFT considers that this provides evidence that Interserve plc exercised decisive influence over Interserve's conduct.
- II.739. Interserve plc did not apply for leniency, but it was given the opportunity of accepting the OFT's Fast Track Offer.⁸⁴⁰
- II.740. Interserve did not apply for leniency.
- II.741. The OFT considers that Interserve plc, as 100 per cent owner of Interserve, can be presumed to have exercised decisive influence over Interserve's commercial policy during the relevant period and therefore forms part of the same economic entity. The OFT notes in addition the evidence of the exercise of decisive influence in that Interserve plc was the ultimate controlling party of Interserve during the relevant period. Interserve and Interserve plc are therefore jointly and severally liable for Interserve's participation in the Infringements. Accordingly, they are jointly and severally liable for payment of the penalties that the OFT is imposing.
- II.742. In response to the Statement, Interserve and Interserve plc submitted that Interserve plc should not be held liable for Interserve's participation in the relevant Infringements. In particular, Interserve and Interserve plc submitted that:
- (a) there is no evidence that the Board of Interserve or of Interserve plc was involved in the relevant Infringements,⁸⁴¹
 - (b) there is no evidence that Interserve plc had any influence in relation to the relevant Infringements, and there were no reporting lines in place which would have brought the relevant Infringements to Interserve plc's attention,⁸⁴² and
 - (c) the relevant Infringements involved operational matters which were managed and controlled within the Project Services division of Interserve.⁸⁴³
- II.743. The OFT has had regard to all the contentions put forward by Interserve and Interserve plc in relation to this issue. The OFT considers that, in the light of Interserve plc's 100 per cent shareholding in Interserve, it is entitled to rely on the presumption of decisive influence in accordance with the principles set out in paragraph III.13 to III.18 below.

- II.744. The OFT considers that, in accordance with the principle set out in paragraph III.18 below, Interserve plc cannot escape liability by reference to its argument that it had no knowledge of or involvement in the relevant Infringements.
- II.745. In the circumstances the OFT considers that the contentions put forward by Interserve and Interserve plc are not sufficient to rebut the presumption of decisive influence or to establish that Interserve determined its conduct on the market autonomously.
- II.746. This Decision is therefore addressed to Interserve and Interserve plc.

Irwins Limited ('Irwins')
Jack Lunn (Construction) Limited ('Jack Lunn')
Jack Lunn (Holdings) Limited ('Jack Lunn Holdings')

- II.747. Irwins is a private limited company registered in England and Wales, company number 03145905.⁸⁴⁴ Irwins' registered and primary trading address is Woodbottom Mills, Low Hall Road, Horsforth, West Yorkshire, LS18 4EW.⁸⁴⁵

- II.752. Irwins and Jack Lunn do not have any subsidiaries.⁸⁵⁵
- II.753. The OFT has carefully considered Irwins' position within the Jack Lunn Holdings group structure. The other 49 per cent share holding in Irwins was held by various individuals, thereby giving Jack Lunn Holdings the controlling share. In addition, Irwins states that 'the company was controlled by the shareholders of Jack Lunn (Holdings) Limited'.⁸⁵⁶
- II.754. The overall structure of Irwins and Jack Lunn was therefore as follows during the relevant period:

- II.755. Jack Lunn Holdings also has another six subsidiaries.⁸⁵⁷
- II.756. Irwins' turnover for the financial year ending 30 September 2007 was £27,408,055.⁸⁵⁸

- II.764. Jack Lunn applied for, and has been granted, leniency in accordance with the OFT's leniency programme.⁸⁶⁶
- II.765. The OFT considers that Jack Lunn Holdings, as 100 per cent owner of Jack Lunn, can be presumed to have exercised decisive influence over Jack Lunn's commercial policy during the relevant period and therefore forms part of the same economic entity. The OFT notes in addition the evidence of the exercise of decisive influence in the form of directors in common between Jack Lunn Holdings and Jack Lunn. Jack Lunn and Jack Lunn Holdings are therefore jointly and severally liable for Jack Lunn's participation in the Infringements, which occurred during that period. Accordingly, they are jointly and severally liable for payment of the penalties that the OFT is imposing, in respect of Infringement 205 and 241.
- II.766. The OFT also considers that Jack Lunn Holdings, as the controlling party, and majority shareholder of Irwins, can be presumed to have exercised decisive influence over Irwins' commercial policy during the relevant period and therefore forms part of the same economic entity. The OFT notes in addition the evidence of the exercise of decisive influence in the form of directors in common between Jack Lunn Holdings and Irwins. Irwins and Jack Lunn Holdings are therefore jointly and severally liable for Irwins' participation in the Infringement, which occurred during that period. Accordingly, they are jointly and severally liable for payment of the penalty that the OFT is imposing, in respect of Infringements 231.
- II.767. Since the Infringements described in this Decision, Irwins has been subject to a change in ownership.⁸⁶⁷ As the new parent company did not form part of the same economic entity as Irwins at the relevant times, it is not jointly and severally liable with Jack Lunn Holdings and Irwins for payment of the penalties that the OFT is imposing. For the avoidance of doubt, this Decision is not addressed to the new parent company of Irwins.
- II.768. This Decision is therefore addressed to Jack Lunn Holdings, Jack Lunn and Irwins.

⁹¹⁴ Letter from Evans Mockler, 13 July 2009.

II.814. The directors of J J McGinley from 2000 to 2006 were as follows:⁹¹⁵

- Stuart Rigby Ambrose	2000 – 24 March 2005
- Stephen John Day	24 March 2005 – 18 April 2006
- John Vincent Gavan	24 March 2005 – 30 September 2006
- Robert Benjamin Irvine	15 July 2005 – 2006
- Martin John Joyce	20 April 2005 – 2006
- Neil Robert Ernest Kirkby	24 March 2005 – 2006
- Owen Gerard McLaughlin	30 September 2006 – 2006
- Dermot Francis McGinley	2000 – 24 March 2005
- John Joseph McGinley	2000 – 24 March 2005
- Seamus Patrick McGinley	2000 – 24 March 2005
- Jack McGrory	24 March 2005 – 6 April 2006
- Margaret Rose Sullivan	2000 – 24 March 2005

II.815. The directors of McGinley Holdings from 2000 to 2006 were as follows:⁹¹⁶

- Dermot Francis McGinley	2000 – 2006
- John Joseph McGinley	2000 – 2006
- Seamus Patrick McGinley	2000 – 2006

II.816. The following directors were on the Board of Directors of both J J McGinley and McGinley Holdings during the periods mentioned below.⁹¹⁷ The OFT considers that this provides evidence that McGinley Holdings exercised decisive influence over J J McGinley's conduct at the time of the Infringements.

- Dermot Francis McGinley	2000 – 24 March 2005
- John Joseph McGinley	2000 – 24 March 2005
- Seamus Patrick McGinley	2000 – 24 March 2005

II.817. J J McGinley did not apply for leniency, but both it and its ultimate parent company at the time of the Infringements, McGinley Holdings, were given the opportunity of accepting the OFT's Fast Track Offer.⁹¹⁸

II.818. The OFT considers that McGinley Holdings, as 100 per cent owner of J J McGinley, can be presumed to have exercised decisive influence over J J McGinley's commercial policy from 2000 until 22 September 2004 and therefore forms part of the same economic entity. The OFT notes in addition the evidence of the exercise of decisive influence in the form of directors in common between McGinley Holdings and J J McGinley. McGinley Holdings and J J McGinley are therefore jointly and severally liable for J J McGinley's participation in the Infringements. Accordingly, they are jointly and severally liable for payment of the penalties that the OFT is imposing.

II.819. Since the events described in this Decision, J J McGinley has been subject to a change in ownership. As the new parent company did not form part of the same economic entity as J J McGinley at the relevant times, it is not jointly and ⁹¹⁵ Company Appointments, OFT Document Reference 11832. The OFT notes that J J McGinley has advised that Stephen John Day ceased to be a director on 16 April 2006. This is not the date recorded by Companies House and the OFT prefers information provided by Companies House in this case. In any event, this is not material to the OFT's findings of infringement.

severally liable with J J McGinley and McGinley Holdings for payment of the penalties that the OFT is imposing. For the avoidance of doubt, this Decision is not addressed to the new parent company of J J McGinley.

II.820. In its response to the Statement, McGinley Holdings submitted that it should not be held liable for J J McGinley's participation in the relevant Infringements. In support of its submission, McGinley Holdings put forward the following contentions:

- (a) It is not alleged that the directors of J J McGinley were involved in the relevant Infringements;⁹¹⁹
- (b) McGinley Holdings was a holding company only, and J J McGinley ran its business autonomously;⁹²⁰ and
- (c) The holders of the common directorships identified above did not in practice exercise management control over J J McGinley.⁹²¹

II.821. The OFT has had regard to all the contentions put forward by McGinley Holdings in relation to this issue. The OFT considers that, in the light of the common directorships identified above and the 100 per cent shareholding held by McGinley Holdings in J J McGinley, the OFT is entitled to rely on the presumption of decisive influence in accordance with the principles set out in paragraph III.13 below.

II.822. The OFT considers that, in accordance with the principle set out in paragraph III.18 below, McGinley Holdings cannot escape liability by reference to its argument that the directors of J J McGinley had no knowledge of or involvement in the relevant Infringements.

II.823. In the circumstances the OFT considers that the contentions put forward by McGinley Holdings are not sufficient to rebut the presumption of decisive influence or to establish that J J McGinley determined its conduct on the market autonomously.

II.824. This Decision is therefore addressed to McGinley Holdings and J J McGinley.

II.842. John Sisk did not apply for leniency, but both it and its ultimate parent company at the time of the relevant Infringement, Sicon, were given the opportunity of accepting the OFT’s Fast Track Offer.⁹⁴⁶

II.843. The OFT considers that Sicon, as 100 per cent indirect owner of John Sisk can be presumed to have exercised decisive influence over John Sisk’s commercial policy during the relevant period and therefore forms part of the same economic entity. John Sisk and Sicon are therefore jointly and severally liable for John Sisk’s participation in the Infringement which occurred during that period. Accordingly, they are jointly and severally liable for payment of the penalty that the OFT is imposing.

II.844. In response to the OFT’s Statement of Objections, John Sisk and Sicon (together ‘Sisk’) appeared to accept that they together constituted a single undertaking.⁹⁴⁷ Nonetheless Sisk also represented that Sicon is a non-trading company which has no influence over or involvement in the day-to-day operations of John Sisk.⁹⁴⁸

II.845. The OFT considers that, in the light of Sicon’s 100 per cent indirect ownership of John Sisk, the OFT is entitled to rely on the presumption of decisive influence in accordance with the principles set out in paragraph III.13 below. The OFT considers that Sisk’s contentions fall short of rebutting that presumption or establishing that John Sisk determined its conduct on the market independently of Sicon. The OFT therefore considers that Sicon and John Sisk form a single undertaking for present purposes.

II.846. Sisk also submitted in its response that it was John Sisk’s Northern Division (‘Sisk Northern’) which participated in the relevant Infringement, and that Sisk Northern was an autonomous undertaking at the time of the Infringement. In support of this submission, Sisk put forward the following contentions:

⁹⁴⁵ Director’s Report and Financial Statement, OFT Document Reference 7426 pages 53, 95 and 99; OFT Document Reference 12164b.

⁹⁴⁶ See paragraphs II.1481 to II.1487 below.

⁹⁴⁷ Written representations of John Sisk and Sicon, 27 June 2008, paragraph 28 (and see also paragraph 1).

⁹⁴⁸ Written representations of John Sisk and Sicon, 27 June 2008, paragraphs 98 and 122; oral representations of John Sisk and Sicon, 15 July 2008, page 9.

- (a) Sisk Northern managed its own business, with its own regional board of directors and its own staff. It produced its own budget and business plan and had responsibility for its own profitability. It also had its own separate profit and loss account and cash management system.⁹⁴⁹
- (b) Sisk Northern marketed its services separately, took its own decisions on which tenders to pursue, and priced its tenders and built its own projects separately.⁹⁵⁰
- (c) Neither the board of John Sisk nor the board of Sicon were involved in Sisk Northern's day-to-day operations or decisions on tenders.⁹⁵¹

II.847. The OFT considers that Sisk's contentions are not sufficient to establish that Sisk Northern was an autonomous undertaking. In this regard, the OFT notes the following:

- (a) Certain functions were carried out centrally by John Sisk on behalf of Sisk Northern (and John Sisk's other divisions), including compliance and quality assurance;⁹⁵²
- (b) Sisk Northern reported to the John Sisk board on its activities;⁹⁵³
- (c) Certain tendering decisions were taken centrally by John Sisk.⁹⁵⁴ The OFT considers that this illustrates that John Sisk retained the power of final decision with regard to Sisk Northern's conduct on the market.⁹⁵⁵ The OFT notes that the relevant Infringement related to a tender which did not fall to be addressed centrally by John Sisk.⁹⁵⁶ However the OFT considers that, in the light of the principle set out in paragraph III.16 below, it does not assist Sisk to contend that John Sisk was not aware of the relevant Infringement, nor indeed that John Sisk and Sicon were not involved in the day-to-day operations of Sisk Northern; and
- (d) There is no indication that there were any restrictions on John Sisk's ability, as the legal owner of its business, to interfere in or alter the structure or running of Sisk Northern's operations if it so chose.

II.848. The OFT therefore considers that Sisk Northern formed part of the same single undertaking as Sicon and John Sisk for present purposes.

II.849. The OFT notes that, even if Sisk Northern did constitute a separate undertaking from John Sisk (which is not accepted), its participation in the relevant Infringement would fall to be attributed to the legal person responsible for the operation of Sisk Northern at the relevant time.⁹⁵⁷ In light of the fact that Sisk

II.886. The following directors have been on the Board of Directors of both Lemmeleg Building and Lemmeleg during the periods mentioned below.⁹⁹⁸ The OFT considers that this provides evidence that Lemmeleg exercised decisive influence over Lemmeleg Building's conduct at the time of the Infringements.

- Trevor Harold Cooper 2002 – 30 June 2006
- Terence Hodgkinson 2002 – 22 July 2006

II.887. Lemmeleg did not apply for leniency, but it was given the opportunity of accepting the OFT's Fast Track Offer.⁹⁹⁹

II.888. Rok would not normally be held directly liable for any Infringements committed by Lemmeleg that occurred prior to the acquisition of Lemmeleg by Rok, in circumstances where the acquired subsidiary, Lemmeleg, remained in existence. However, Lemmeleg had nil turnover for 2006, as its business was accounted for in the accounts of Rok Building Limited, a wholly-owned subsidiary of Rok. The OFT therefore considers that in these circumstances, it is appropriate also to address any Decision to Rok, as the economic successor to which the business of Lemmeleg has been transferred.¹⁰⁰⁰

II.889. The OFT considers that Rok, as 100 per cent owner of Lemmeleg and being the economic successor to which the business of Lemmeleg has been transferred, therefore forms part of the same economic entity. Rok and Lemmeleg are therefore jointly and severally liable for Lemmeleg's participation in the Infringements. Accordingly, Lemmeleg and Rok are jointly and severally liable for payment of the fine that the OFT is imposing.

II.890. This Decision is therefore addressed to Rok and Lemmeleg.

II.902. Lindum Group did not apply for leniency, but it was given the opportunity of accepting the OFT's Fast Track Offer.¹⁰¹³

II.903. Lindum did not apply for leniency.

II.904. The OFT considers that Lindum Group is liable for Infringement 37 described in this Decision and that it is therefore liable for payment of the penalty that the OFT is imposing in respect of that Infringement, on account of its participation in that Infringement.

II.905. In addition, the OFT considers that Lindum Group, as 100 per cent owner of Lindum, can be presumed to have exercised decisive influence over the commercial policy of Lindum during the relevant period and therefore forms part of the same economic entity. The OFT notes in addition the evidence of the exercise of decisive influence in the form of directors in common between Lindum Group and Lindum. Lindum and Lindum Group will therefore be jointly and severally liable for the participation of Lindum in Infringements 182¹⁰¹⁴ and 189. Accordingly, they are jointly and severally liable for payment of the penalties that the OFT is imposing.

II.906. This Decision is therefore addressed to Lindum and Lindum Group.

- Robert John Titterton 31 October 2005 – 2006

II.916. The following director has been on the Board of Directors of both Linford and F & E V Linford during the periods mentioned below.¹⁰²⁵ The OFT considers that this provides evidence that F & E V Linford exercised decisive influence over Linford's conduct at the time of the Infringements.

- David Linford 2000 – 2006

II.917. Linford did not apply for leniency, but both it and its ultimate parent company at the time of the relevant Infringements, F & E V Linford, were given the opportunity of accepting the OFT's Fast Track Offer.¹⁰²⁶

II.918. The OFT considers that F & E V Linford, as 100 per cent owner of Linford, can be presumed to have exercised decisive influence over Linford's commercial policy during the relevant period and therefore forms part of the same economic entity. The OFT notes in addition the evidence of the exercise of decisive influence in the form of directors in common between F & E V Linford and Linford. Linford and F & E V Linford are therefore jointly and severally liable for Linford's participation in the Infringements. Accordingly, they are jointly and severally liable for payment of the penalties that the OFT is imposing.

II.919. This Decision is therefore addressed to Linford and F & E V Linford.

- II.953. Bluestone applied for, and has been granted, leniency in accordance with the OFT's leniency programme.¹⁰⁶²
- II.954. The OFT considers that Morgan Sindall, as 100 per cent owner of Bluestone, can be presumed to have exercised decisive influence over its commercial policy during the relevant period and therefore forms part of the same economic entity. The OFT notes in addition the evidence of the exercise of decisive influence in the form of directors in common between Morgan Sindall and Bluestone. Morgan Sindall and Bluestone are therefore jointly and severally liable for Bluestone's participation in the Infringements. Accordingly, they are jointly and severally liable for payment of the penalties that the OFT is imposing, in respect of Infringements 206, 239 and 243.¹⁰⁶³
- II.955. This Decision is therefore addressed to Bluestone and Morgan Sindall.

II.963. North Midland did not apply for leniency, but it was given the opportunity of accepting the OFT's Fast Track Offer.¹⁰⁷¹

II.964. This Decision is addressed to North Midland. The OFT considers that North Midland is liable for the Infringements described in this Decision and that it is liable for payment of the penalties that the OFT is imposing, on account of the participation in the Infringements of that undertaking.

P D H Developments Limited ('PDH')
G. Hurst & Sons Limited ('G Hurst')

II.965. PDH is a private limited company registered in England and Wales, company number 00619334.¹⁰⁷² PDH's registered address is Woodstock, London Road, Retford, Notts, DN22 7EB.¹⁰⁷³ PDH trades from its registered address and another two trading addresses in Retford, Nottinghamshire.¹⁰⁷⁴

II.966. At the time of issue of the Statement, PDH carried out construction work in the Midlands region and it did not carry out work outside the United Kingdom.

II.967. PDH has changed name twice since 2000. Prior to 23 April 2004 it was named G. Hurst & Sons (Contractors) Limited and between 23 April 2004 and 14 May 2004 it was named G. Hurst & Sons (Developments) Limited.¹⁰⁷⁵

II.968. PDH's ultimate parent company is G Hurst, a private limited company, company number 00423423.¹⁰⁷⁶ G Hurst's registered address is Woodstock, London Road, Retford, Notts, DN22 7EB.¹⁰⁷⁷ of doubt, this Decision is not addressed to the new parent company of Pearce Group and Pearce.

Liability of Pearce Group

II.1021. In its response to a Supplementary Statement,¹¹³³ Pearce Group accepted that the OFT was entitled to hold it liable as intermediate parent company of Pearce. It submitted, however, that the OFT was not holding other intermediate parent companies liable and, consequently, was discriminating against Pearce Group when compared to the OFT's treatment of other Parties in this case, without objective justification.¹¹³⁴

II.1022. The OFT is holding Pearce Group liable, however, as the undisclosed principal of Pearce and, therefore, because it was directly involved in the relevant Infringement.¹¹³⁵ Its treatment is therefore equivalent to that of other Parties directly involved in Infringements. In its response to the Supplementary Statement, Pearce Group disputed that the OFT was entitled to hold it liable on this basis, stating that neither 'direct involvement' nor 'participation' are established concepts in UK or EC case law: '...the concept of direct involvement is entirely novel as a basis for attributing liability in competition cases'. Rather, Pearce Group submitted that the attribution of liability rests solely on the concept of 'decisive influence'.¹¹³⁶

II.1023. The OFT does not accept Pearce Group's representations in this respect. Direct involvement is not a legal concept or novel basis for attributing liability, but is a statement of fact. As noted above, the OFT considers that Pearce Group exercised decisive influence over Pearce at the relevant time, but this does not preclude the OFT from also concluding that Pearce Group was directly involved in the relevant Infringement as a result of the agency relationship which existed between it and Pearce.

II.1024. In addition to disputing the legal basis for liability, Pearce Group also contended that the OFT had no evidence of its direct involvement in the Infringement and that, in fact, it was not so involved.¹¹³⁷ In particular, Pearce Group submitted that the relationship between itself and Pearce was no different from that of any other parent and wholly owned subsidiary; the undisclosed agency agreement was simply an accounting tool to simplify audit and corporation tax requirements.¹¹³⁸ In support of this submission, Pearce Group stated that:

- (a) Pearce had its own board and separate management, approximately 150 staff, its own separate payroll and bank accounts;
- (b) Pearce was independently responsible for all marketing, estimating, building, sub-contracting and financing in relation to all projects,

¹¹³³ On 16 April 2009, the OFT issued a Supplementary Statement to Pearce, Pearce Group, Crest Nicholson, and the counter-Parties to Infringement 75 referred to in this company profile as 'the Supplementary Statement'.

¹¹³⁴ Written representations of Pearce Group, 1 June 2009, paragraphs 1.7, 2.8, 2.11 to 2.13 and 2.19; and oral representations of Pearce Group, 5 June 2009, page 5.

¹¹³⁵ Whilst Pearce Group submitted that the Supplementary Statement was not clear in this respect, it is apparent from its representations that it understood the basis for the OFT's finding of liability against it (see written representations of Pearce Group, 1 June 2009, paragraphs 2.4, 2.14, 2.17).

¹¹³⁶ Written representations of Pearce Group, 1 June 2009, paragraphs 1.6, 2.7 and 2.17 to 2.19.

¹¹³⁷ Written representations of Pearce Group, 1 June 2009, paragraphs 1.6, 2.17 and 2.20.

¹¹³⁸ Written representations of Pearce Group, 1 June 2009, paragraphs 1.6, 2.20 to 2.22 and 2.28.

including receiving payments from clients and making payments to sub-contractors;

- (c) Pearce Group had no involvement in the day-to-day management of Pearce;
- (d) whilst Pearce Group received monthly summary reports of Pearce's activities, and was required to sign-off contracts with a value over £3 million, according to Pearce Group the same is true of many other subsidiaries;
- (e) Pearce bid for, entered into and undertook contracts in its own name;
- (f) Pearce did not require any specific authority to bid for the contract which was the subject of the Infringement, and Pearce Group would only have received summary details of the contract after the event; and
- (g) all of the work involved in preparing the tender giving rise to the Infringement was carried out by Pearce, the bid was submitted in Pearce's name and, had it been successful, Pearce would have undertaken the work and received payment. The customer involved in the Infringement also considered Pearce to be the contracting party and provider of the tender services.

Pearce Group therefore concluded (and, in particular, from points (e) and (g)) that Pearce was selling its own services.¹¹³⁹

II.1025. The OFT does not consider the factors described in sub-paragraphs II.1024(a) to (g) to be inconsistent with an undisclosed agency relationship operating between Pearce Group and Pearce, and therefore they do not undermine the OFT's conclusion that Pearce Group was directly involved in the relevant Infringement as undisclosed principal of Pearce. The OFT does not accept, however, Pearce Group's conclusion that Pearce was selling its own services. Rather, the OFT is of the view that Pearce was providing services in its own name, but on behalf of its undisclosed principal Pearce Group, and that any monies received were held by Pearce for the benefit of Pearce Group. Pearce Group's analysis is also inconsistent with the terms of the agency agreement which existed between Pearce and Pearce Group, a copy of which has been provided to the OFT¹¹⁴⁰, and with Pearce's statutory accounts (see paragraph II.1018 above).

II.1026. Pearce Group also made representations about the payment of dividends by Pearce and the treatment of assets and liabilities in Pearce's accounts.¹¹⁴¹ According to Pearce Group, these factors supported the view that Pearce provided services in its own right. In the OFT's view, however, Pearce's statutory accounts do not accord with a trading company generating its own turnover and paying dividends to its parent companies from its own profits, but rather are consistent with Pearce acting as undisclosed agent of Pearce Group, and with the terms of the agency agreement between them.

¹¹³⁹ Written representations of Pearce Group, 1 June 2009, paragraphs 2.22 to 2.26.

¹¹⁴⁰ Letter to the OFT from Pearce Group, 12 June 2009, attaching the Agency Agreement, dated 29 October 1989, between Pearce (formerly W.A. Cox (Evesham) Limited) and Pearce Group (formerly C.H. Pearce & Sons plc).

¹¹⁴¹ Written representations of Pearce Group, 1 June 2009, paragraph 2.27.

II.1027. The OFT therefore remains of the view that Pearce Group is liable for the relevant Infringement, not only because it exercised decisive influence over Pearce, but because of its direct involvement in the relevant tender as undisclosed principal of Pearce. The agency relationship also means that Pearce Group is not in the same position as other intermediate parent companies in this case, and the OFT is therefore not discriminating against Pearce Group by including it as an addressee of this Decision.

II.1028. In its separate response to the Supplementary Statement, Crest Nicholson concurred with the OFT's analysis that Pearce was acting as the undisclosed agent of Pearce Group during the relevant period, and that Pearce could be correctly classified as an auxiliary to Pearce Group's business. Crest Nicholson agreed that Pearce Group should therefore be held jointly and severally liable as a result of having been directly involved in the Infringement.¹¹⁴²

Liability of Crest Nicholson

II.1029. In its response to the Statement, Pearce did not dispute that Pearce and Crest Nicholson formed part of the same undertaking at the time of the relevant Infringement.¹¹⁴³ In support of its position, Pearce cited the following factors:

- (a) Pearce's overall business plan was agreed by Crest Nicholson; and
- (b) Pearce's activities were reported to Crest Nicholson in summary form, and Don Ross, the holder of the common directorships identified above, ordinarily attended Pearce's board meetings.¹¹⁴⁴

II.1030. However Pearce submitted that Crest Nicholson should be held solely liable for Pearce's participation in the relevant Infringement, on the grounds that Crest Nicholson retained any resulting benefit by way of dividend payments or as proceeds of its subsequent sale of Pearce.¹¹⁴⁵

II.1031. In its separate responses to the Statement and Supplementary Statement, Crest Nicholson submitted that it should not be held liable for Pearce's and Pearce Group's participation in the relevant Infringement. In support of its submissions, Crest Nicholson put forward the following contentions:

- (a) Pearce and Pearce Group were autonomous businesses, and Crest Nicholson had no involvement in the operation of either business.¹¹⁴⁶ Moreover there is no evidence that Crest Nicholson was involved in or aware of the relevant Infringement;¹¹⁴⁷
- (b) Pearce and Pearce Group together had delegated decision-making authority in relation to contracts with a value below a certain level (tens of millions), while contracts above this threshold had to be reported to Crest Nicholson's Executive Committee, and decisions on contracts with a value of double that level had to be approved by that Committee. The tender which was the subject of the relevant Infringement had a value below £3.5 million, with the consequence that it would not have been brought to the attention of Crest Nicholson.¹¹⁴⁸ Similarly all of Pearce's business in 2000 and 2001 would have been conducted without the authorisation of Crest Nicholson;¹¹⁴⁹

- (c) By 2000, Crest Nicholson was actively considering a disposal of Pearce Group and its involvement in its subsidiary diminished. Pearce Group was subsequently acquired by its management team, who were central to the commercial behaviour and strategy of Pearce Group and Pearce during the relevant period;¹¹⁵⁰
- (d) Mr Ross, the holder of directorships in Crest Nicholson, Pearce Group and Pearce as identified above, was Chief Executive of Pearce Group at the time of the relevant Infringement. Mr Ross reported to the board of Crest Nicholson on the Pearce Group's results¹¹⁵¹ and on any financial and major operational issues.¹¹⁵² Mr Callcutt, the holder of directorships in both Crest Nicholson and Pearce Group as identified above, was Chief Executive of Crest Nicholson at the time of the relevant Infringement¹¹⁵³, and chaired meetings of the board of Pearce Group;¹¹⁵⁴
- (e) Pearce operated autonomously within the Pearce Group.¹¹⁵⁵ Mr Ross was not involved in the operational or strategic decisions of Pearce and had no executive responsibilities within Pearce. Pearce had its own separate operational board and its own managing director, John Darby, who had primary responsibility for Pearce's day-to-day operation. Mr Ross's role as a director of Pearce was primarily to monitor Pearce's financial performance.¹¹⁵⁶ Mr Ross would only visit Pearce in order to attend board meetings, or approve a proposed acquisition of land for residential development, or where difficulties arose in the carrying out of projects.¹¹⁵⁷ Mr Ross had no involvement in the negotiation of tenders at Pearce and took a 'hands-off' approach in relation to Pearce's operations;¹¹⁵⁸
- (f) The commercial name and logo of Crest Nicholson were not used interchangeably with those of Pearce for marketing purposes;¹¹⁵⁹

¹¹⁵⁹ Written representations of Crest Nicholson, 27 June 2008, paragraph 4.31.

- (g) Pearce operated in different markets from Crest Nicholson's core business. Crest Nicholson was involved in private residential developments and mixed-use development projects through the services of sub-contractors. Pearce's business involved the provision of construction services¹¹⁶⁰, and in this regard Pearce and Pearce Group were functionally separate from Crest Nicholson.¹¹⁶¹

II.1032. Crest Nicholson also observed that the 100 per cent shareholding in Pearce was held directly by Pearce Group and only indirectly by Crest Nicholson.¹¹⁶²

II.1033. The OFT has taken into account all of the submissions put forward by Crest Nicholson in relation to this issue. The OFT considers that in the light of Crest Nicholson's 100 per cent ownership of Pearce and Pearce Group, and the common directorships identified above, it is entitled to presume that Crest Nicholson exercised decisive influence over Pearce and Pearce Group. Pursuant to the case law of the CFI, that presumption arises whether the parent's 100 per cent shareholding in its subsidiary is direct or indirect¹¹⁶³, and it therefore makes no difference that Crest Nicholson's shareholding in Pearce was held indirectly through its shareholding in Pearce Group.

II.1034. In the circumstances it falls to Crest Nicholson to rebut that presumption. The OFT considers that Crest Nicholson's arguments fall short of rebutting the presumption and do not establish that either Pearce or Pearce Group was able to determine its conduct on the market autonomously. In this regard, the OFT notes in particular the following:

- (a) There appears to have been significant integration of the management teams of Crest Nicholson, Pearce Group and Pearce by means of the roles carried out by Mr Ross and Mr Callcutt as identified above;
- (b) Pearce reported to Pearce Group and had its budgets set by Pearce Group¹¹⁶⁴, while Pearce Group's budgets were submitted to Crest Nicholson annually for approval.¹¹⁶⁵ Pearce Group reported on its performance against that budget at Pearce Group board meetings, which were chaired by Mr Callcutt (who was Chief Executive of Crest Nicholson)¹¹⁶⁶, and Mr Ross reported to the Crest Nicholson board on Pearce Group's results;¹¹⁶⁷
- (c) As set out above, Crest Nicholson retained the power to direct commercial strategy in relation to high-value contracts;¹¹⁶⁸

- (d) It has been suggested that the Crest Nicholson board on one occasion noted the poor margins being achieved by Pearce's business and that its future should be considered.¹¹⁶⁹ However the OFT has not been provided with any more evidence in this regard; and
- (e) For the reasons set out in paragraphs III.13 to III.18 below, the OFT considers that a parent company may be held liable for an infringement committed by its subsidiary even though it had no specific involvement in or knowledge of the infringing conduct. The OFT refers specifically in this regard to the quotation set out in paragraph III.18. Crest Nicholson cannot therefore escape liability for the Infringement by reference to its argument that it had no specific involvement in or knowledge of the infringing conduct.

II.1035. It follows that for present purposes Crest Nicholson, Pearce Group and Pearce formed part of the same undertaking at the time of the relevant Infringement. In those circumstances, the OFT is entitled to hold Crest Nicholson, Pearce Group and Pearce jointly and severally liable for Pearce's and Pearce Group's participation in the relevant Infringement.¹¹⁷⁰

II.1036. In light of the above, this Decision is addressed to Crest Nicholson, Pearce Group and Pearce.

Peter Baines Limited ('Peter Baines')

II.1037. Peter Baines is a private limited company registered in England, company number 01099776.¹¹⁷¹ Peter Baines's registered and primary trading address is Woods Lane, Derby, Derbyshire, DE22 3UD.¹¹⁷²

II.1038. At the time of issue of the Statement, Peter Baines operated as general building contractors specialising in refurbishment in the commercial sector and private and public housing. At the time of issue of the Statement, it also manufactured joinery products.¹¹⁷³ Peter Baines did not carry out work outside the United Kingdom.

II.1039. Peter Baines does not have any holding companies or subsidiaries.¹¹⁷⁴

II.1040. Peter Baines's turnover for the financial year ending 31 March 2008 was [...] [C].¹¹⁷⁵

- Michael James Parkinson 20 November 2002 – 8 June 2004

II.1084. The following directors have been on the Board of Directors of both Jackson and Propensity Limited during the period mentioned below.¹²³³ The OFT considers that this provides evidence that Propensity Limited exercised decisive influence over Jackson's conduct for periods including the time of the relevant Infringement (September 2002).

- David Martin Best 2 May 2001 – 3 January 2003
- David Matthew Bramwell 2 May 2001 – 31 March 2002
- Philip Brierley 2000 – 28 June 2006
- Bernard Francis Clarke 1 May 2002 – 2006

II.1085. The following directors have been on the Board of Directors of both Jackson and Propensity during the period mentioned below.¹²³⁴ The OFT considers that this provides evidence that Propensity exercised decisive influence over Jackson's conduct for periods including the time of the relevant Infringements (May 2004 to September 2005).

II.1086. The following directors¹²³⁵ have been on the Board of Directors of both Totty and Propensity during the period mentioned below.¹²³⁶ The OFT considers that this provides evidence that Propensity exercised decisive influence over Totty's conduct for periods including the time of the relevant Infringement (June 2005).

- Philip Brierley 20 November 2002 – 28 June 2006
- Graham Stephen Cragg 20 November 2002 – 1 July 2006
- Richard James Jones 20 November 2002– 21 July 2006

II.1087. The following directors¹²³⁷ have been on the Board of Directors of both Totty Building and Propensity during the period mentioned below.¹²³⁸ The OFT considers that this provides evidence that Propensity exercised decisive influence over Totty Building's conduct for periods including the time of the relevant Infringements (February 2003 and December 2004).

- Phillip Brierley 20 November 2002 – 28 June 2006
- Richard James Jones 20 November 2002 – 21 July 2006

II.1088. Propensity applied for, and has been granted, leniency in accordance with the OFT's leniency programme.¹²³⁹

II.1089. The OFT considers that Jackson is liable for the Infringements described in this Decision prior to 30 June 2002.¹²⁴⁰

II.1090. The OFT considers that Propensity Limited, as 100 per cent owner of Jackson, can be presumed to have exercised decisive influence over Jackson's commercial policy at the time of Infringement 119 and therefore formed part of the same economic entity. The OFT notes in addition the evidence of the exercise of decisive influence in the form of directors in common between Propensity Limited and Jackson. Propensity Limited and Jackson will therefore be jointly and severally liable for Jackson's participation in Infringement 119.

II.1091. The OFT considers that Propensity, as 100 per cent indirect owner of Jackson, can be presumed to have exercised decisive influence over Jackson's commercial policy from 3 January 2003 and therefore forms part of the same economic entity. The OFT notes in addition the evidence of the exercise of decisive influence in the form of directors in common between Propensity and http://www.offt.gov.uk/shared_offt/business_leaflets/ca98_guidelines/oft423.pdf.

¹²⁴⁰ The OFT notes that it could have exercised its discretion to seek to find jointly and severally liable Peterhouse Group Limited as Jackson's parent company at the time of infringements 77 and 103. As no penalty is being imposed in respect of those infringements and as the Statement was not addressed to Peterhouse Group Limited in its capacity as Jackson's parent, the OFT is making no finding of liability in relation to Peterhouse Group Limited in respect of infringements 77 and 103.

Jackson. Jackson and Propensity are therefore jointly and severally liable for Jackson's participation in the relevant Infringements. Accordingly, they are jointly and severally liable for payment of the penalty that the OFT is imposing, in respect of Infringement 235.¹²⁴¹

- II.1092. The OFT considers that Propensity, as 100 per cent indirect owner of Totty, can be presumed to have exercised decisive influence over Totty's commercial policy from 3 January 2003 to 2006 and therefore formed part of the same economic entity. The OFT notes in addition the evidence of the exercise of decisive influence in the form of directors in common between Propensity and Totty. Totty and Propensity are therefore jointly and severally liable for Totty's participation in the relevant Infringement.
- II.1093. The OFT considers that Propensity, as 100 per cent indirect owner of Totty Building can be presumed to have exercised decisive influence over Totty Building's commercial policy from 3 January 2003 to 2006 and therefore formed part of the same economic entity. The OFT notes in addition the evidence of the exercise of decisive influence in the form of directors in common between Propensity and Totty Building. Totty Building and Propensity are therefore jointly and severally liable for Totty Building's participation in the relevant Infringements. Accordingly, they are jointly and severally liable for payment of the penalties that the OFT is imposing, in respect of Infringements 138 and 213.
- II.1094. Since the Infringements described in this Decision, Propensity has been subject to a change in ownership. As the new parent company did not form part of the same economic entity as Propensity at the relevant times, it is not jointly and severally liable with Propensity for payment of the penalties that the OFT is imposing. For the avoidance of doubt, this Decision is not addressed to the new parent company of Propensity.
- II.1095. This Decision is therefore addressed to Propensity, Propensity Limited, Jackson, Totty and Totty Building.

- James Roger Quarmby 2000 – 2006

II.1107. Quarmby did not apply for leniency, but both it and its ultimate parent company at the time of the Infringements, St James Securities, were given the opportunity of accepting the OFT's Fast Track Offer.¹²⁵⁶

II.1108. The OFT considers that St James Securities, as the ultimate owner of 80 per cent of Quarmby and having Directors in common, can be presumed to have exercised decisive influence over Quarmby's commercial policy during the relevant period and therefore forms part of the same economic entity. Quarmby and St James Securities are therefore jointly and severally liable for Quarmby's participation in the Infringements. Accordingly, they are jointly and severally liable for payment of the penalties that the OFT is imposing.

II.1109. In its response to the Statement, St James Securities submitted that it should not be held liable for Quarmby's participation in the relevant Infringements. In support of its submission, St James Securities put forward the following contentions:

- (a) Quarmby and St James Securities operated as independent autonomous businesses and were active in different sectors: St James Securities operated a property development business while Quarmby was a construction business.¹²⁵⁷ Quarmby carried out work for St James Securities, but did so pursuant to contracts negotiated on an arms-length commercial basis.¹²⁵⁸ There were no reporting lines between Quarmby and St James Securities¹²⁵⁹ and there was no routine managerial contact between Quarmby and St James Securities.¹²⁶⁰
- (b) Quarmby's day-to-day affairs were controlled by its Managing Director, David Jones¹²⁶¹, who determined its commercial strategy and was responsible for its tendering and purchasing decisions.¹²⁶² The holder of the shared directorships identified above, James Roger Quarmby, was the Chairman of Quarmby and a non-executive director.¹²⁶³ Mr Quarmby attended board meetings of Quarmby solely in an advisory capacity.¹²⁶⁴ Furthermore Mr Quarmby was not informed of all Quarmby bidding decisions, and had no knowledge of the tenders which are the subject of the relevant Infringements.¹²⁶⁵

- (c) The holder of the additional shared directorships identified above, Mr Corscadden, had a reduced role in Quarmby's business until his retirement as a director of Quarmby in August 2003.¹²⁶⁶
- (d) St James Securities had no involvement in setting Quarmby's budget, approving its expenditure or approving its business plan.¹²⁶⁷ Occasionally St James Securities was asked to guarantee Quarmby's contractual obligations, but did so only on an arm's length basis and with separate advice from St James Securities' internal legal director.¹²⁶⁸

II.1110. The OFT has taken into account all of St James Securities' submissions in relation to this issue. The OFT considers that, in the light of St James Securities' 80 per cent shareholding in Quarmby and the common directorships identified above, it is entitled to presume that St James Securities exercised decisive influence over Quarmby in accordance with the principles set out in paragraphs III.19 to III.24 below.

II.1111. In any event, the OFT considers that the available factual information shows that St James Securities exercised decisive influence over Quarmby at the time of the relevant Infringements. In this regard the OFT refers in particular to the following:

- (a) Mr Quarmby's evidence indicates that there was significant financial interdependence between St James Securities and Quarmby at the time of the relevant Infringements. From 1991, the financial results of Quarmby were consolidated in St James Securities' financial statements and the banking functions of St James Securities and Quarmby were amalgamated.¹²⁶⁹ This improved the overall financial picture and both St James Securities' and Quarmby's ability to trade¹²⁷⁰, and allowed St James Securities to benefit from the merged entities cash position to provide working capital for its property development activities.¹²⁷¹ In addition, the OFT refers to St James Securities' reliance on Quarmby's cash position during the entirety of the period during which the relevant Infringements occurred.¹²⁷²
- (b) Mr Quarmby, the Chairman of St James Securities, was also Chairman of Quarmby and attended Quarmby board meetings.¹²⁷³ At those meetings Mr Quarmby participated in discussions regarding the financial and commercial aspects of Quarmby's business.¹²⁷⁴ Where issues arose within the Quarmby business which were of 'direct relevance' to St James Securities, Mr Quarmby would refer those issues to other St James Securities board members¹²⁷⁵, and Mr Quarmby has given evidence to the effect that 'there [was] a general understanding at St James Securities that if anyone were to want [him] to raise a specific issue with the Quarmby Board they could mention it to [him] in advance'.¹²⁷⁶

- (c) Mr Quarmby's evidence indicates that there were no restrictions on the exercise of St James Securities' 80 per cent shareholding in Quarmby and the associated ownership rights.¹²⁷⁷

II.1112. In addition, for the reasons set out in Section III (Legal Background), the OFT considers that a parent company may be held liable for an infringement committed by its subsidiary even though it had no specific involvement in or knowledge of the infringing conduct. The OFT refers specifically in this regard to paragraph III.18 and III.19 to III.24. It follows that St James Securities cannot escape liability for the Infringements by reference to its argument that it, or that Mr Quarmby, had no specific involvement in or knowledge of the infringing conduct.

II.1113. This Decision is therefore addressed to Quarmby and St James Securities.

The OFT notes in addition the evidence of the exercise of decisive influence in the form of directors in common between Justgrade and Quarmby (Special Projects). Quarmby (Special Projects) and Justgrade are therefore jointly and severally liable for Quarmby (Special Projects)'s participation in the Infringements. II.1132. Durnnell Holdings's consolidated turnover for the financial year ending 31 December from 2007 was £47,745,432.¹³⁰⁰

II.1133. The directors of R Durnnell from 2002 to 2006 were as follows:¹³⁰¹

- James John Chandler	2002 – 2006
- John Alexander Durnnell	2002 – 2006
- Paul Matthews	2002 – 2006
- Robert Henry Thomas Neal	2002 – 2006
- Evan Rosser Valente	2002 – 2006

II.1134. The director of Durnnell Holdings from 2002 to 2006 was as follows:¹³⁰²

- John Alexander Durnnell	18 February 2002 – 2006
---------------------------	-------------------------

II.1135. The following director has been on the Board of Directors of both R Durnnell and Durnnell Holdings during the period mentioned below.¹³⁰³ The OFT considers that this provides evidence that Durnnell Holdings exercised decisive influence over R Durnnell's conduct at the time of the Infringements.

- John Alexander Durnnell	18 February 2002 – 2006

II.1136. R Durnnell did not apply for leniency, but both it and its ultimate parent company at the time of the Infringements, Durnnell Holdings, were given the opportunity of accepting the OFT's Fast Track Offer.¹³⁰⁴

II.1137. The OFT considers that Durnnell Holdings, as 100 per cent owner of R Durnnell, can be presumed to have exercised decisive influence over R Durnnell's commercial policy during the relevant period and therefore forms part of the same economic entity. The OFT notes in addition the evidence of the exercise of decisive influence in the form of directors in common between Durnnell Holdings and R Durnnell. R Durnnell and Durnnell Holdings are therefore jointly and severally liable for R Durnnell's participation in the Infringements. Accordingly, they are jointly and severally liable for payment of the penalties that the OFT is imposing.

II.1138. This Decision is therefore addressed to R Durnnell and Durnnell Holdings.

- II.1154. The OFT considers that R G Holdings, as 100 per cent owner of R G Carter, can be presumed to have exercised decisive influence over R G Carter's commercial policy during the relevant period and therefore forms part of the same economic entity. The OFT notes in addition the evidence of the exercise of decisive influence in the form of a director in common between R G Holdings and R G Carter. R G Carter and R G Holdings are therefore jointly and severally liable for R G Carter's participation in Infringement 202. Accordingly, they are jointly and severally liable for payment of the penalty that the OFT is imposing.
- II.1155. The OFT considers that R G Holdings, as 100 per cent owner of R G Building, can be presumed to have exercised decisive influence over R G Building's commercial policy during the relevant period and therefore forms part of the same economic entity. The OFT notes in addition the evidence of the exercise of decisive influence in the form of a director in common between R G Holdings and R G Building. II.1163. Richardson Projects did not apply for leniency, but was given the opportunity of accepting the OFT's Fast Track Offer.¹³³³

II.1164. This Decision is addressed to Richardson Projects. The OFT considers that Richardson Projects is liable for the Infringements described in this Decision and that it is liable for payment of the penalties that the OFT is imposing, on account of the participation in the Infringements of that undertaking.

II.1165. Since the Infringements described in this Decision, Richardson Projects has been subject to two changes in ultimate ownership. As neither of the new parent companies formed part of the same economic entity as Richardson Projects at the relevant times, neither is jointly and severally liable with Richardson Projects for payment of the penalties that the OFT is imposing. For the avoidance of doubt, this Decision is not addressed to either of the subsequent new ultimate parent companies of Richardson Projects.

II.1166. This Decision is therefore addressed to Richardson Projects.

Robinson & Sawdon Limited ('Robinson & Sawdon')

II.1179. Robinson & Sawdon is a private limited company registered in England and Wales, company number 00237888.¹³⁴⁶ Robinson & Sawdon's registered address is 1 Melton Park Office Village, Redcliff Road, Melton, North Ferriby, North Humberside, HU14 3RS.¹³⁴⁷

II.1180. At the time of issue of the Statement, Robinson & Sawdon was a building and joinery contractor which undertook work in the commercial, industrial and housing sectors¹³⁴⁸ and it did not carry out work outside the United Kingdom.

II.1181. Robinson & Sawdon has no subsidiaries.¹³⁴⁹

II.1182. Robinson & Sawdon's turnover for the financial year ending 31 March 2008 was [...] [C].¹³⁵⁰

II.1183. The directors of Robinson & Sawdon from 2004 to 2006 were as follows:¹³⁵¹

- Charles Frederick Robinson 2004 – 2 October 2006
- Richard Michael Sawdon 2004 – 2 October 2006
- Robert Wilson Sawdon 2004 – 27 August 2004

II.1184. Robinson & Sawdon did not apply for leniency, but it was given the opportunity of accepting the OFT's Fast Track Offer.¹³⁵²

II.1185. Since the Infringements described in this Decision, Robinson & Sawdon has been subject to a change in ownership. As the new parent company did not form part of the same economic entity as Robinson & Sawdon at the relevant times, it is not jointly and severally liable with Robinson & Sawdon for payment of the penalties that the OFT is imposing. For the avoidance of doubt, this Decision is not addressed to the new parent company of Robinson & Sawdon.

II.1186. This Decision is addressed to Robinson & Sawdon. The OFT considers that Robinson & Sawdon is liable for the Infringements described in this Decision and that it is liable for payment of the penalties that the OFT is imposing, on account of the participation in the Infringements of that undertaking.

- Victor William Semmens 1 April 2004 – 2006

II.1211. The following directors have been on the Board of Directors of both Wrights (Lincoln) and Simons Group during the periods mentioned below.¹³⁸³ The OFT considers that this provides evidence that Simons Group exercised decisive influence over Wrights (Lincoln)'s conduct at the time of the Infringements.

- Clifford Thomas Bryant 2001 – 6 January 2003
- Philip James Kendall 12 February 2001 – 2006

II.1212. The following directors have been on the Board of Directors of both Simons and Simons Group during the periods mentioned below.¹³⁸⁴ The OFT considers that this provides evidence that Simons Group exercised decisive influence over Simons' conduct at the time of the Infringements.

- Clifford Thomas Bryant 2001 – 6 January 2003
- Paul Richard Hodgkinson 2001 – 2006
- Philip James Kendall 12 February 2001 – 2006

II.1213. The following directors have been on the Board of Directors of both Wrights (Lincoln) and Simons during the periods mentioned below.¹³⁸⁵ The OFT considers that this provides evidence that Simons exercised decisive influence over Wrights (Lincoln)'s conduct at the time of the Infringements.

- Clifford Thomas Bryant 2001 – 6 January 2003
- Roger Alan Hall 2001 – 2006
- Philip James Kendall 12 February 2001 – 2006
- Colin Sargeant 1 April 2004 – 2006

II.1214. Wrights (Lincoln) and Simons applied for, and have been granted, leniency in accordance with the OFT's leniency programme.¹³⁸⁶ Their application was endorsed by Simons Group.¹³⁸⁷

II.1215. The OFT considers that Simons Group, as 100 per cent indirect owner of Wrights (Lincoln), can be presumed to have exercised decisive influence over Wrights (Lincoln)'s commercial policies during the relevant period and therefore forms part of the same economic entity. The OFT notes in addition the evidence of the exercise of decisive influence in the form of directors in common between Simons Group and Wrights (Lincoln). Simons Group and Wrights (Lincoln) are therefore jointly and severally liable for Wrights (Lincoln)'s participation in the Infringement which occurred during that period. Accordingly, they are jointly and severally liable for payment of the penalty that the OFT is imposing in respect of Infringement 141.

II.1216. The OFT considers that Simons Group, as 100 per cent owner of Simons, can be presumed to have exercised decisive influence over Simons' commercial policies during the relevant period and therefore forms part of the same economic entity. The OFT notes in addition the evidence of the exercise of decisive influence in the form of directors in common between Simons Group and Simons. Simons Group and Simons are therefore jointly and severally liable for Simons' participation in the Infringements which occurred during that period. Accordingly, they are jointly and severally liable for payment of the penalties that the OFT is imposing in respect of Infringements 59 and 218.

II.1217. This Decision is therefore addressed to Simons, Wrights (Lincoln), and Simons Group.

entity. The OFT notes in addition the evidence of the exercise of decisive influence in the form of directors in common between Barkbury and Sol. Sol and Barkbury will therefore be jointly and severally liable for Sol's participation in the Infringements. Accordingly, they are jointly and severally liable for payment of the penalties that the OFT is imposing, in respect of Infringements 142, 156 and 187.

II.1231. Since the Infringements described in this Decision, Sol and Barkbury have been subject to a change in ultimate ownership. As the new parent company did not form part of the same economic entity as Barkbury at the relevant times, it is not jointly and severally liable with Sol and Barkbury for payment of the penalties that the OFT is imposing. For the avoidance of doubt, this Decision is not addressed to the new parent company of Sol and Barkbury.

II.1232. This Decision is therefore addressed to Sol and Barkbury.

II.1282. The following directors have been on the Board of Directors of both Thomas Fish and Fish Holdings during the periods mentioned below.¹⁴⁵⁸ The OFT considers that this provides evidence that Fish Holdings exercised decisive influence over Thomas Fish's conduct at the time of the relevant Infringements.

- Charles Joseph Fish	11 June 2001 – 2006
- George Fish	11 June 2001 – 2006
- George William Fish	11 June 2001 – 2006
- Peter Donald Woodhouse	11 June 2001 – 2006

II.1283. Thomas Fish applied for, and has been granted, leniency in accordance with the OFT's leniency programme.¹⁴⁵⁹

II.1284. The OFT considers that Fish Holdings, as 100 per cent owner of Thomas Fish, can be presumed to have exercised decisive influence over Thomas Fish's commercial policy from 11 June 2001 to 2006 and therefore forms part of the same economic entity. The OFT notes in addition the evidence of the exercise of decisive influence in the form of directors in common between Fish Holdings and Thomas Fish. Thomas Fish and Fish Holdings are therefore jointly and severally liable for Thomas Fish's participation in the relevant Infringements. Accordingly, they are jointly and severally liable for payment of the penalties that the OFT is imposing, in respect of Infringements 89 and 126.

II.1285. This Decision is therefore addressed to Thomas Fish and Fish Holdings.

- Richard Alan Manning 2000 – 29 February 2000
- Adam William Radford 1 December 2000 – 2006
- Roger Inger Radford 2000 – 2006

II.1294. The following directors have been on the Board of Directors of both Thomas Long and Radford during the periods mentioned below.¹⁴⁷⁰ The OFT considers that this provides evidence that Radford exercised decisive influence over Thomas Long's conduct at the time of the Infringements.

- David Allen Burrows 1 January 2002 – 2006
- Roger Inger Radford 2000 – 2006

II.1295. Thomas Long did not apply for leniency, but both it and its ultimate parent company at the time of the Infringements, Radford, were given the opportunity of accepting the OFT's Fast Track Offer.¹⁴⁷¹

II.1296. The OFT considers that Radford, as 100 per cent owner of Thomas Long, can be presumed to have exercised decisive influence over Thomas Long's commercial policy during the relevant period and therefore forms part of the same economic entity. The OFT notes in addition the evidence of the exercise of decisive influence in the form of directors in common between Radford and Thomas Long. Thomas Long and Radford are therefore jointly and severally

- II.1323. Thorndyke did not apply for leniency, but it was given the opportunity of accepting the OFT's Fast Track Offer.¹⁵⁰²
- II.1324. The OFT considers that Thorndyke & Sons, as 100 per cent owner of Thorndyke, can be presumed to have exercised decisive influence over Thorndyke's commercial policy from 2000 until 4 October 2005 and therefore formed part of the same economic entity. The OFT notes in addition the evidence of the exercise of decisive influence in the form of directors in common between Thorndyke & Sons and Thorndyke. Accordingly, both Thorndyke & Sons and Thorndyke would have been jointly and severally liable for payment of the penalties that the OFT is imposing if Thorndyke and Sons had not been dissolved on 4 October 2005.
- II.1325. At the time of issue of the Statement, the OFT had been listed as having a potential 'contingent claim' in the liquidation of Thorndyke¹⁵⁰³ for any financial penalty that the OFT may in due course impose.
- II.1326. This Decision is therefore addressed to Thorndyke.

II.1346. Galliford Try did not apply for leniency, but it was given the opportunity of accepting the OFT's Fast Track Offer.¹⁵²⁷

II.1347. Try Accord and Galliford Construction did not apply for leniency.

II.1348. The OFT considers that Galliford Try, as 100 per cent owner of Galliford Construction, can be presumed to have exercised decisive influence over Galliford Construction's commercial policies during the relevant period and therefore they form part of the same economic entity. The OFT notes in addition the evidence of the exercise of decisive influence in the form of directors in common between Galliford Try and Galliford Construction. Galliford Try and Galliford Construction are therefore jointly and severally liable for the participation of Galliford Construction in the Infringements which occurred during that period. Accordingly, they are jointly and severally liable for payment of the penalties that the OFT is imposing in respect of Infringements 142 and 186.

II.1349. The OFT considers that Galliford Try, as 100 per cent indirect owner of Try Accord, can be presumed to have exercised decisive influence over Try Accord's commercial policies during the relevant period and therefore they form part of the same economic entity. II.1384. The following directors have been on the Board of Directors of both William Sapcote and Sapcote Holdings during the periods mentioned below.¹⁵⁶² The OFT considers that this provides evidence that Sapcote Holdings exercised decisive influence over William Sapcote's conduct at the time of the Infringements.

- Rodney Clive Blake	2001 – 16 April 2004
- Andrew John Lunson	2001 – 2006
- Peter Ambrose Perry	2001 – 8 December 2003
- Richard Elwin Sapcote	2001 – 2006

II.1385. William Sapcote did not apply for leniency, but both it and its ultimate parent company at the time of the Infringements, Sapcote Holdings, were given the opportunity of accepting the OFT's Fast Track Offer.¹⁵⁶³

II.1386. The OFT considers that Sapcote Holdings, as 100 per cent owner of William Sapcote, can be presumed to have exercised decisive influence over William Sapcote's commercial policy during the relevant period and therefore forms part of the same economic entity. The OFT notes in addition the evidence of the exercise of decisive influence in the form of directors in common between Sapcote Holdings and William Sapcote. William Sapcote and Sapcote Holdings are therefore jointly and severally liable for William Sapcote's participation in the Infringements. Accordingly, they are jointly and severally liable for payment of the penalties that the OFT is imposing.

II.1387. This Decision is therefore addressed to William Sapcote and Sapcote Holdings.

B. The OFT's Investigation

The initial contact

II.1444. The OFT was contacted by an Internal Audit Manager acting for the Queens' Medical Centre Nottingham University Hospital NHS Trust in Nottingham on 1 April 2004. The Internal Audit Manager alleged that, amongst other things, there had been collusion in the bidding process for tenders for works at the Queens' Medical Centre.

Section 27 inspections in November 2004

II.1445. As a result of this contact and the initial information gathered by the OFT which gave reasonable grounds to suspect collusive tendering in the construction industry in the East Midlands area, and possibly more widely throughout England, the OFT exercised its powers under section 27 of the Act to inspect the premises of the following eight companies without notice.

Name of undertaking	Power used	Date inspected
Baggaley & Jenkins	section 27 without notice	19 November 2004
Bodill	section 27 without notice	19 November 2004

II.1446. As a result of these inspections the OFT received applications for leniency from the following companies:

Section 28 searches of premises in June and July 2005

II.1447. As a result of these inspections and leniency applications, the OFT obtained considerable evidence of the widespread nature of collusive tendering in the construction industry throughout the East Midlands – see paragraph II.1460 below – and in particular the OFT obtained evidence that many other companies had engaged, along with those companies listed in the table following paragraph II.1445 above, in cover pricing and other bid rigging activities in relation to specific tenders. The OFT decided to focus its investigation on those companies which, according to the evidence in the OFT's possession at that time, appeared to have engaged in bid rigging activities in connection with at least five different Suspect Tenders. The OFT therefore proceeded to obtain warrants to enter and search the premises of the following 22 companies (including the five companies which had been the subject of the section 27 visits described in paragraph II.1445 above but had not applied for leniency), using its powers under section 28 of the Act.

II.1448. As a result of these searches the OFT received applications for leniency from the following 11 companies:

¹⁶²² The OFT conducted an additional search of the premises of ARG on 15 September 2005, with the company's consent.

¹⁶²³ The OFT conducted an additional search of the premises of Strata on 7 July 2005, with the company's consent.

II.1449. The section 28 visits in June and July 2005 and the subsequent leniency applications produced considerable amounts of additional evidence of collusive tendering, not only in the East Midlands, but also in areas adjoining the East Midlands (most notably Yorkshire and Humberside and areas to the south and west of the East Midlands) and also nationally across England – see paragraph II.1460 below. The OFT also obtained for the first time significant evidence that collusive tendering was being undertaken not only by small and medium sized companies but also by the larger nationally-operating companies. As a result of this additional evidence the OFT instigated two additional investigations in addition to the existing East Midlands investigation: one into collusive tendering in the Yorkshire and Humberside areas, and another into collusive tendering by national construction companies. The OFT then proceeded to undertake a further series of inspections and searches of premises as detailed in the following paragraphs.

Section 27 inspections in January 2006

II.1450. In relation to the East Midlands investigation, the OFT decided to focus its investigation on those companies which, according to the evidence in the OFT's possession at that time, had engaged in collusive tendering in relation to at least five separate Suspect Tenders. This led the OFT to exercise its powers under section 27 of the Act to inspect the premises of the following further 14 companies without notice.

Section 28 searches of premises in February/March 2006

II.1452. As noted above, the OFT instigated an additional investigation to focus in particular on the bid rigging activities of the larger, nationally operating construction companies. As in the case of the East Midlands investigation, the OFT focused its investigation on those companies which, according to the evidence in the OFT's possession at that time, appeared to have engaged in collusive tendering in connection with at least five separate Suspect Tenders. This led the OFT to obtain further warrants to enter and search the premises of the following nine additional companies, using its powers under section 28 of the Act.

Section 28 searches of premises in March 2006

II.1454. In relation to the Yorkshire and Humberside investigation, the OFT decided to focus on those companies which, according to the evidence in the OFT's possession at that time, appeared to have engaged in collusive tendering in connection with at least five separate Suspect Tenders, or had engaged in bid rigging activities on at least three tenders each having a contract value exceeding £0.5 million.¹⁶²⁵ The OFT proceeded to obtain warrants to enter and search the premises of the following eight additional companies, using its powers under section 28 of the Act. For a ninth company, York House, the OFT's search of the premises was conducted with the company's consent since it had applied for leniency shortly before the OFT's scheduled date for a search.¹⁶²⁶

¹⁶²⁴ One further company applied for leniency on 4 October 2006 but the OFT's subsequent investigation did not reveal sufficient evidence for it to meet the OFT's objective selection criteria (see paragraphs II.1459 to II.1469 below) and the OFT did not proceed against that company on the grounds of administrative priority. This company is not therefore a party to the investigation.

¹⁶²⁵ High tender values would generally indicate the possibility of greater consumer detriment.

¹⁶²⁶ York House submitted its leniency application on 23 March 2006, prior to the OFT's search with the consent of York House on 28 March 2006.

Interviews conducted in October/November 2006

II.1456. From October to December 2006, the OFT conducted interviews with employees, consultants and ex-employees of the following companies, focusing in particular on two discrete issues relating to the investigations, namely alleged compensation payments (see paragraphs IV.147 to IV.155 of the General comments on cover pricing section below) and trade associations alleged to have facilitated the bid rigging activities undertaken by the Parties to the investigation (the Nottingham Builders' Guild and the North Nottinghamshire Contractors' Guild – see paragraphs IV.128 to IV.146 of the General comments on cover pricing section below).

¹⁶²⁷ The OFT conducted an additional examination of documents from Propensity at the premises of its legal representatives on 9 August 2006, with the consent of the company which had applied for leniency by that date.

¹⁶²⁸ Although no search of Arthur M Griffiths' premises was conducted prior to this date, it applied for leniency after the incident of bid rigging described in paragraphs IV.6803 to IV.6837 of the Conduct of the Parties section below.

Section 27 inspections in January 2007

II.1457. Following these interviews, the OFT undertook some final inspections of premises in order to ensure that it had all of the relevant evidence in relation to the suspected instances of compensation payments. The OFT exercised its powers under section 27 of the Act to inspect the premises of the following two companies without notice.¹⁶²⁹

Section 26 notices sent during the course of the investigation

II.1458. Over 500 notices requiring documents and information under section 26 of the Act¹⁶³⁰ were sent during the course of the investigation. Full details of these ¹⁶²⁹ One additional company was visited by the OFT on 24 January 2007 but the OFT's subsequent investigation did not reveal sufficient evidence for it to meet the OFT's objective selection criteria (see paragraphs II.1463 to II.1466 below) and it was not therefore taken forward as a party to the investigation.

¹⁶³⁰ Section 26 of the Act empowers the OFT, for the purposes of an investigation under section 25

notices were made available to the Parties as part of the OFT's access to file process. In summary, the OFT issued the following main sets of section 26 notices to the following parties prior to issue of the Statement:

- a number of section 26 notices, issued to some of the Parties visited by the OFT either during or shortly after those visits;
- 450 section 26 notices to each of the clients whose tenders were the subject of alleged bid rigging, from 23 March 2007 to 29 March 2007, requesting details of those tenders including dates, tendering companies and bid amounts, as well as more general information to assist with the OFT's definition of the relevant markets (the OFT's 'Clients' Survey');
- 77 section 26 notices to each of the non-leniency Parties, on 10 May 2007 and 14 May 2007, requesting information to assist with the OFT's definition of relevant markets (the OFT's 'Suppliers' Survey'); and
- section 26 notices to liquidators and administrators of companies which were in the process of being liquidated or in administration, requesting information to assist the OFT in determining successor liability issues.

Consolidation of the investigation

II.1459. Following the searches in March 2006, the OFT conducted a comprehensive analysis of the information obtained at the premises of all of the companies visited, and through leniency applications. The information obtained included a considerable quantity of electronic material seized by the OFT during the section 28 visits in 2005 and 2006 using its 'seize and sift' powers under the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 (the 'CJPA').¹⁶³¹ This electronic material was sifted for relevance during August 2005 and during July and August 2006 respectively, and each relevant company was given the opportunity to examine the material considered by the OFT to be relevant to its investigations, and to make representations on relevance and legal privilege, before any agreed relevant non-privileged material was added to the OFT's file.

II.1460. By the autumn of 2006 the OFT had considerable general evidence relating to the widespread nature of collusive tendering in the construction industry throughout England – see paragraphs IV.10 to IV.18 below. In addition, the OFT had specific evidence of collusive tendering, including cover pricing and/or compensation payments, involving over 1,000 companies in connection with over 4,000 tenders, estimated to be worth around £3 billion. The companies alleged to be involved ranged from very small organisations with perhaps only one or two employees, through to organisations that ranked amongst the forty largest construction companies operating in Europe.¹⁶³² Geographically there was an emphasis on the East Midlands and neighbouring areas (in particular Yorkshire and Humberside) in view of the focus of the OFT's investigations, but it was clear to the OFT from the evidence that the practice of cover pricing in particular was widespread and that a concentrated focus on any different area in England would in all likelihood have produced considerable additional evidence of cover pricing in each new area and surrounding districts.

of the Act, to require any person to produce to it a specified document, or to provide it with specified information, which it considers relates to any matter relevant to the investigation.

¹⁶³¹ Section 50 of the CJPA empowers the OFT to seize electronic material from premises and to sift that material at a later date, in circumstances where it believes the electronic material contains data relevant to the investigation, and either it is not reasonably practicable to determine on the premises the extent to which this is the case and/or it is not reasonably practicable on the premises to separate out the relevant data without compromising its evidential value.

II.1461. The OFT's mission is to make markets work well for consumers. It achieves this by promoting and protecting consumer interests throughout the UK, while ensuring that businesses are fair and competitive. It was clear to the OFT that bid rigging, and more specifically cover pricing, was widespread in the construction industry in England. The OFT therefore needed to send a clear message to construction companies of all sizes that such practices are illegal and that companies found to have engaged in bid rigging can expect to receive appropriate financial penalties for such activities.

II.1462. Given the OFT's limited resources, it was necessary to consolidate the investigations in order to ensure that resources were targeted as effectively as possible, ensuring not only that those companies which had allegedly participated in such activity were subject to penalties accordingly, but also crucially that companies throughout the construction industry were effectively deterred from engaging in bid rigging, and more specifically cover pricing, going forward. In addition it was uppermost in the OFT's mind that effective enforcement also meant that the OFT should seek to complete its investigation, and proceed to any infringement decision, in as short a time as possible. The OFT therefore decided at this stage of its investigation to undertake a significant consolidation exercise involving the following five key steps.

II.1463. The first consolidation step undertaken by the OFT was to amalgamate the evidence from the three investigations, which previously had targeted separately companies in the East Midlands, companies in Yorkshire and Humberside, and the nationally-operating companies. This enabled the OFT to establish the total number of tenders in relation to which each company was suspected of collusive tendering.

II.1464. Secondly, the OFT undertook an initial categorisation of the evidence, using the following categories.

Evidence category	Description of evidence	Examples of evidence
1	Two stand-alone pieces of evidence of collusion on a specific tender from two different Parties corroborating each other	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Tender log from Party A and tender log from Party B • Tender log from Party A and witness statement from Party B
2	Two stand-alone pieces of evidence of collusion on a specific tender from one Party corroborating each other	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Tender log by Party A and witness statement by Party A
3	One uncorroborated piece of evidence which falls within one of the below scenarios: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • From a leniency Party: A witness statement or summary table produced for the purposes of leniency which has been corroborated generally by other evidence but where there is no specific corroboration of the individual tender in question; • From a non-lenieny Party: A contemporaneous tender log book which has been corroborated generally by other evidence but where there is no specific corroboration of the individual tender in question; or Any other piece of unambiguous and strong contemporaneous documentary evidence (e.g. a fax, email or contemporaneous note)

II.1465. The third consolidation step undertaken by the OFT was to limit its further investigation to those companies for which there was category 1, 2 or 3 evidence as described above of collusive tendering in relation to a minimum of five Suspect Tenders. The OFT considered that its investigation should focus on those companies for which it had the best available evidence, and those companies for which it had evidence of the most repeat behaviour. With a minimum of five Suspect Tenders, the OFT's investigation was able to focus on those companies that, on the evidence then available to the OFT, appeared to have engaged in bid rigging activities on the most occasions. That is not to say, however, that the OFT does not regard a single isolated occurrence of cover pricing as constituting a serious infringement of the Act.

II.1466. As a result of the consolidation steps described above, the OFT was able to reduce the scope of its investigation to a total of 122 companies, of which 37 had applied for leniency ('leniency Parties') and the remaining 85 had not ('non-lenieny Parties'). Of these remaining 85, only 20 companies were at this stage aware that they were under investigation following an inspection of their premises by the OFT as described in the above paragraphs.¹⁶³³

¹⁶³³ See paragraphs II.1502 to II.1506 below which explain how the OFT reached the final number of 112 Parties taken forward to the Statement.

- II.1467. The fourth consolidation step undertaken by the OFT was to continue to investigate only five Suspect Tenders for each of the non-leniency Parties. Only a few of these non-leniency Parties were involved in only the minimum of five Suspect Tenders necessary for inclusion in the investigation as described in paragraph II.1465 above, whereas most were involved in more and in several cases considerably more than five Suspect Tenders.
- II.1468. The five Suspect Tenders for each of the non-leniency Parties were chosen according to a set of objective criteria, the most important of which was the quality of the known evidence. Where the quality of the evidence in respect of two or more Suspect Tenders was identical, other factors were brought into play, being primarily the value of the tender (since high tender values would generally indicate the possibility of greater consumer detriment) and the time period over which the suspected infringements occurred thus demonstrating a pattern of repeated behaviour over time. The OFT also sought to ensure that the resulting general spread of Suspect Tenders amongst the leniency Parties was as even as possible (see paragraph II.1469 below); and sought to avoid tenders where this would implicate companies that had not made the objective minimum threshold for inclusion in the investigation described in paragraph II.1465 above.
- II.1469. For the leniency Parties, these companies were mostly party to at least five Suspect Tenders by virtue of their being counter-parties to Suspect Tenders chosen for the non-leniency Parties. Where this was not the case and a leniency Party was implicated in fewer than five such Suspect Tenders following completion of the process described in the preceding two paragraphs, the OFT undertook a fifth consolidation step and selected additional contracts for investigation in respect of that leniency Party, again using the objective criteria described in the preceding paragraph.

The position of the non-leniency Parties

- II.1470. The OFT's aim was that, at the conclusion of the investigation stage, it should proceed to a Statement of Objections for a maximum of three Alleged Infringements for each of the non-leniency Parties.¹⁶³⁴ The OFT considers that three proven instances of bid rigging by a company is sufficient to establish a pattern of behaviour, and that in order to balance the OFT's objectives of completing its investigation as quickly as possible whilst sending a clear deterrence message, it was therefore unnecessary to include more than three Alleged Infringements in the Statement for any of the non-leniency Parties. Notwithstanding this, the OFT takes this opportunity to emphasise that it regards even one proven occurrence of cover pricing as constituting a serious infringement of the Act, warranting enforcement action and the imposition of a penalty.
- II.1471. The OFT's decision to investigate at this stage five Suspect Tenders for each of the non-leniency Parties, discussed in paragraphs II.1467 to II.1469 above, was intended to ensure that in most cases there would be sufficient evidence to include in the Statement at least three tenders for each Party, allowing for the possibility that, at the conclusion of the investigation and prior to issue of the Statement, there might prove to be insufficient evidence in respect of one or more of the five Suspect Tenders selected. The OFT did not consider it necessary or appropriate to investigate more than five Suspect Tenders for each of the non-leniency Parties, given the additional resources and time that would be required and also the initial assessment of the quality of the evidence in the OFT's possession.

The position of the leniency Parties

- II.1472. For the 37 companies that had successfully applied for leniency, there was generally evidence in the OFT's possession of involvement in collusive tendering in relation to considerably more than five Suspect Tenders. With five Suspect Tenders for each of the 85 non-leniency Parties, there was potentially a total of 425 Suspect Tenders, which would equate to an average of over ten contracts each for the 37 leniency Parties. However, many of the Suspect Tenders involved more than two Parties, some involved only non-leniency Parties, others involved only leniency Parties, and some leniency Parties provided evidence of many more Suspect Tenders than other leniency Parties. At this stage of the investigation, the numbers of Suspect Tenders were therefore highly variable between each of the leniency Parties, partly due to the differing quantities of evidence found at the leniency Parties' premises, and partly due to the varying quality of the applications for leniency in terms of the number of tenders admitted and the documentary evidence provided to support those admissions.
- II.1473. If the OFT had proceeded against the leniency Parties and penalised them in relation to each of the Alleged Infringements in which they had admitted involvement, this would have resulted, following the consolidation steps outlined in paragraph II.1459 to II.1469 above, in the non-leniency Parties facing penalties for a maximum of three tenders each, while the leniency Parties, whose information had contributed significantly to the OFT's investigation, would have faced penalties for many more tenders, often mainly as a result of the information they had provided.
- II.1474. The effectiveness of the OFT's leniency policy is a fundamental component of the enforcement regime under the Act. The OFT considered that to impose penalties on leniency Parties in relation to significantly more Alleged Infringements than in relation to non-leniency Parties (in particular given that the OFT had evidence of many more infringements by both leniency Parties and non-leniency Parties alike) risked significantly undermining its leniency programme. The OFT therefore decided to take the following two steps.

But For tenders

- II.1475. The first step taken by the OFT was to decide that each of the leniency Parties would incur no penalty in relation to any instance of bid rigging on a tender about which the OFT would not have been aware but for the evidence provided by that leniency Party. For such But For tenders, that leniency Party would effectively receive 100 per cent immunity from any penalty, in the same way as a party coming to the OFT with information about cartel activity of which the OFT is not previously aware, will generally obtain 100 per cent immunity from penalty.¹⁶³⁵

¹⁶³⁵ Where two leniency Parties both informed the OFT, prior to being questioned by the OFT in interview, of bid rigging on a tender that involved both Parties, the Party that applied first for leniency is obtaining the benefit of the 100 per cent But For immunity on that tender. Where there were two instances of bid rigging

II.1476. For many of the leniency Parties, the majority of their Alleged Infringements were indeed But For tenders and this step was therefore sufficient to put them in no worse a position with respect to penalties than the non-lenieny Parties.

Fining for a maximum of three Not But For tenders

II.1477. However, some of the leniency Parties had many more than three Not But For tenders and would still have faced penalties for more than three tenders despite the step described in paragraphs II.1475 and II.1476 above. This generally occurred where the OFT had found a significant quantity of evidence at that leniency Party's premises or at another Party's premises before the leniency Party concerned had applied for leniency, and/or where information came to the OFT from another leniency Party's earlier leniency application.

II.1478. The OFT therefore decided to take a second step in respect of the leniency Parties. Although each leniency Party is named as a party to often many more than three Infringements, the OFT is imposing penalties on each leniency Party for no more than three Not But For tenders. In this way, any company found to have infringed the Chapter I prohibition, whether a leniency Party or a non-lenieny Party, is having penalties imposed in respect of no more than three Infringements, thus ensuring that the leniency Parties are in no worse a position with respect to penalties than the non-lenieny Parties and thereby safeguarding the integrity of the OFT's leniency programme.

Further interviews conducted

II.1479. The next stage of the investigation was for the OFT to conduct further interviews with those employees suspected of involvement in bid rigging activities in relation to the Suspect Tenders, that worked for the leniency Parties at the time of those Suspect Tenders. The OFT conducted interviews between February 2007 and December 2007 with employees and ex-employees that had worked for the following companies.

Closure of availability of leniency in the investigation

II.1480. By the beginning of 2007 the OFT had, as stated above, obtained evidence of bid rigging activities in relation to many thousands of tenders throughout England. The OFT needed to focus its resources in order to produce an outcome that would provide the most effective deterrent to all companies, in as short a time as possible. If other companies applied for leniency they would have been likely to have provided evidence not only in relation to the tenders that the OFT had decided to investigate further, but in relation to many other tenders and companies. It would not have been possible to progress the investigation in an efficient and sufficiently timely way due to the need to investigate all of these new tenders and make a fresh selection of tenders and companies for investigation. The OFT therefore decided that, at the same time as making the selection of tenders for investigation, it should close the door to further leniency applications in this case. This decision was announced by way of two press releases on 22 March 2007 – see www.of.gov.uk/news/press/2007/50-07 and www.of.gov.uk/news/press/2007/49-07.

The Fast Track Offer to non-leniency Parties

II.1481. In many investigations the OFT would seek also to obtain reports from those companies implicated in its investigation that had not applied for leniency, and in addition to request interviews with the employees that worked for those companies at the time of the alleged infringements. In the present case, however, it would have proved too time-consuming to conduct such an exercise in view of the number of companies involved, notwithstanding the extensive rationalisation of the investigation undertaken by the OFT. Nevertheless, the OFT wanted to give these companies early warning that they were under investigation, to inform them of the Suspect Tenders in respect of which they were suspected of engaging in bid rigging activities, and as part of its ongoing investigation to give them an opportunity to admit to those bid rigging activities and make certain ancillary promises in exchange for a guarantee that they would be given a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty that the OFT ultimately imposed in respect of any Suspect Tenders for which admissions were received.

II.1482. At this stage the OFT had not yet selected the Suspect Tenders for inclusion in the Statement (as described in paragraphs II.1495 to II.1503 below). Nor had it completed the process of interviewing witnesses as described in paragraph II.1479 above. Rather, the OFT intended that by giving the non-leniency Parties the opportunity to make admissions this would further assist the OFT in deciding which Suspect Tenders to include in the Statement and what further investigative steps it should undertake.

II.1483. The OFT wrote to 85 non-leniency Parties on 22 March 2007.¹⁶³⁷ The letter sent to each company informed them that the opportunity for leniency applications in the investigation had now ended, as discussed above in paragraph II.1480. It stated that the relevant company was implicated in the OFT's investigation, and included a schedule of Suspect Tenders in respect of which the OFT suspected the company had engaged in bid rigging activities. The OFT's evidence that gave rise to these suspicions comprised, in most cases:

- one contemporaneous incriminatory document (such as an annotated tender register of one of the implicated Parties); and
- an express written admission of participation in bid rigging activities by one of the leniency Parties which directly implicated that company in relation to that suspect tender.

II.1484. For each company, the OFT set out in the schedule a minimum of five and a maximum of twenty Suspect Tenders.¹⁶³⁸ For some companies, the OFT had evidence of bid rigging in relation to many more than twenty tenders, but the schedules were restricted to a maximum of twenty tenders for ease of administration by the OFT and the companies concerned.

II.1485. No evidence was provided to the Parties with the schedules, for a number of reasons:

- Firstly, the investigation was still ongoing and the OFT had not completed the compilation of the evidence.
- Secondly, compilation and presentation of the evidence in respect of so many Suspect Tenders would have taken many months and would also have duplicated the work necessary to prepare the Statement. The OFT's Fast Track Offer would have been unfeasible to operate at all if it could only have been sent after this work had been completed.
- Thirdly, the OFT did not intend to take forward all of the Suspect Tenders listed to Statement of Objections stage, therefore much of the preparation work would have been wasted and distracted the OFT from the focus of the investigation.

¹⁶³⁷ In November 2007, the OFT also wrote to those ultimate parent companies of the companies involved in the Infringements which had not been sent the March 2007 letter. See paragraphs II.1488 to II.1494 below.

¹⁶³⁸ The five Suspect Tenders for each non leniency party ultimately taken forward for further investigation by the OFT were selected from these schedules of five to twenty Suspect Tenders during the creation of the schedules – see paragraphs II.1467 to II.1468 above. In contrast with the representations made by Ackroyd & Abbott in paragraph 38 of its representations on the Statement, this was made clear by way of this explanation in footnote 1907 of the Statement. Furthermore, in response to Ackroyd & Abbott's comments in paragraph 39 of its representations, the OFT emphasises that it did have a contemporaneous incriminatory document and an express written admission of participation in bid rigging in the vast majority of cases, as set out in the Fast Track Offer letter and in paragraph II.1483 above. The OFT was able to select the five Suspect Tenders for investigation by differentiating according to the quality of the evidence, but all of the evidence for the Suspect Tenders in the Fast Track Offer schedules met the category 1, 2 or 3 standard as set out in the table following paragraph II.1464 above.

- Fourthly, the Parties were subsequently given ample opportunity to view and comment on the Infringements that were taken forward in the Statement, together with the supporting evidence for those Infringements, in accordance with the OFT's access to file procedures.¹⁶³⁹
- Fifthly, the letter made it clear that the company was under no obligation to reply to the letter.
- Sixthly, the letter gave each company time to conduct its own investigations and assess whether in its view and from its own records, the OFT's allegations had any credibility.
- Finally, all Parties had the option of withdrawing from the OFT's Fast Track Offer at any time up to issue of the OFT's Decision, including after seeing the evidence and the OFT's analysis of it in the Statement, although of course they would lose the benefit of the 25 per cent reduction in respect of any Suspect Tenders for which they withdrew.

II.1486. For any Suspect Tenders to which a company admitted engaging in bid rigging activities, in exchange for the 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty in respect of that tender the company agreed to the following:

- (i) admission of participation in bid rigging activities in relation to the specified Suspect Tender;
- (ii) specification of the details of the other company or companies with which it engaged in bid rigging activities in relation to the admitted Suspect Tender. Where the company was unable to confirm the identity of one or more of the other implicated company or companies, it was asked to confirm that it had used its best efforts to establish the identity of these companies but was unable to do so¹⁶⁴⁰;
- (iii) agreement to make no representations as to the company's participation in bid rigging activities in relation to the admitted Suspect Tender in response to any Statement of Objections or any supplementary Statement of Objections that the OFT may issue in this case. This would not, however, preclude the company from making representations on any other matters; and
- (iv) noting that if the company should appeal any OFT finding in a final decision that it had participated in bid rigging activities in relation to one or more admitted Suspect Tender(s), the OFT reserved the right to make an application to the court inviting the court to increase the penalty imposed by the OFT on that company for the relevant Suspect Tender and to require that company to pay the OFT's full costs of the appeal proceedings.¹⁶⁴¹

II.1487. Of the 85 non-leniency Parties that were sent Fast Track Offer letters by the OFT, 45 admitted engaging in bid rigging activities in all or some of the Suspect Tenders set out in their schedule.

¹⁶³⁹ Rule 5 of the Office of Fair Trading Rules (The rules are contained in Statutory Instrument 2004 No. 2751 The Competition Act 1998 \(Office of Fair Trading's Rules\) Order 2004.)

¹⁶⁴⁰ This may, for example, have been the case where the staff that dealt with the Suspect Tender no longer worked for that party and/or the relevant records relating to the Suspect Tender had been destroyed.

¹⁶⁴¹ Note that as in the case of (iii), this would not affect any appeals on any other matters, for example the level of the penalty imposed by the OFT.

The supplementary Fast Track Offer to ultimate parents of non-leniency Parties

- II.1488. In reviewing the responses to the OFT's Fast Track Offer and as part of its ongoing investigation more generally, it became clear to the OFT that a number of companies were owned by, or had previously been owned by, parent companies. For the reasons discussed in paragraphs III.10 to III.24 of the Legal Background section below, this Decision is addressed to each of the companies involved in the Infringements, and in addition where applicable to their respective ultimate parent companies which formed part of the same undertaking at the time of the Infringements.
- II.1489. It was therefore necessary for the OFT to write to those ultimate parents and to give them the opportunity to comment on their respective current or former subsidiaries' responses to the OFT's Fast Track Offer.
- II.1490. The OFT wrote to the ultimate parents in November 2007. The letters to the ultimate parents set out the details of the original Fast Track Offer made to their subsidiaries, as described in paragraphs II.1481 to II.1486 above, and in addition invited the ultimate parents to comment on their respective subsidiaries' acceptance or rejection of the OFT's Fast Track Offer.
- II.1491. Some of the ultimate parents chose expressly to endorse the original response from their subsidiary, while others decided to make no comment at that time. None of the ultimate parents' responses contradicted the response from their subsidiary. In three cases, the responses from the ultimate parents were in effect the first response received by the OFT from that corporate group, as follows.
- II.1492. In the case of Ballast and Greenwood, there had been no substantive response to the original Fast Track Offer since these companies had been dissolved. As described in paragraphs II.183 to II.204 above, the OFT decided that Ballast's ultimate parent at the time of the infringements, Ballast Nedam NV, should be liable for Ballast's infringements. Ballast Nedam NV accepted the OFT's Fast Track Offer in its entirety.
- II.1493. As described in paragraphs II.325 to II.344 above, the OFT decided that Greenwood's ultimate parent at the time of the infringements, Crown Point, should be liable for Greenwood's infringements. Crown Point rejected the OFT's Fast Track Offer.
- II.1494. In the case of Pearce, there were several issues relating to the company's corporate structure which the OFT needed to resolve before being in a position to decide on liability for the relevant Infringement. The OFT considered that it should hold both Pearce and its ultimate parent at the time of the relevant Infringement, Crest Nicholson, liable for the relevant Infringement and it therefore wrote to both of these Parties on 7 November 2007, with the OFT's Fast Track Offer. Both Pearce and Crest Nicholson rejected the OFT's Fast Track Offer. Upon further review of this issue following receipt of the Parties' representations on the Statement, and following the issue of a supplementary Statement of Objections in connection with this specific issue (see paragraph II.1589 below), the OFT has now concluded that, together with Crest Nicholson, it should also hold Pearce's immediate parent and principal, Pearce Group, jointly and severally liable for Pearce's involvement in the relevant Infringement, as described in paragraphs II.1000 to II.1036 above. Pearce Group also rejected the OFT's Fast Track Offer.

Final selection of tenders for the Statement

Non-leniency Parties

- II.1495. As discussed in paragraph II.1470 above, following receipt of the responses to the OFT's Fast Track Offer and having concluded the interview process the OFT proceeded to select a maximum of three Alleged Infringements for each non-leniency Party, to include in the Statement. The reasons for selecting a maximum of three Alleged Infringements are set out at paragraphs II.1470 to II.1471 above. The Alleged Infringements selected for each of the Parties were described in full in the OFT's Statement. Following consideration of the Parties' representations on the Statement, the OFT has decided not to proceed with a limited number of the Alleged Infringements (see paragraphs II.1591 to II.1593 below). The Infringements in respect of which the OFT is proceeding to decision are set out in full in the Conduct of the Parties section below, and are listed (together with paragraph numbers, for ease of reference) in the Navigation Table in Annex A, towards the end of this Decision.
- II.1496. The maximum of three Alleged Infringements for each non-leniency Party were chosen according to a set of objective criteria, the most important of which was the quality of the available evidence, including the admissions made in response to the OFT's Fast Track Offer. Where the quality of the evidence in respect of two or more Suspect Tenders was identical, other factors were brought into play, being primarily the value of the tender (since high tender values would generally indicate the possibility of greater consumer detriment) and the time period over which the suspected infringements occurred, thus demonstrating a pattern of repeated behaviour over time. The OFT also tried to ensure that the resulting general spread of Alleged Infringements amongst the leniency Parties was as even as possible; and avoided tenders that brought in companies that had not made the objective minimum threshold for inclusion in the investigation as discussed in paragraph II.1465 above.
- II.1497. In most cases the maximum of three Alleged Infringements to take forward to Statement of Objections were selected from the Suspect Tenders on which the OFT had carried out interviews, as described in paragraph II.1470 above. In some instances, however, the OFT considered that the interviews provided insufficient corroboration of the contemporaneous evidence for it to proceed with those Suspect Tenders. The OFT therefore selected alternative tenders with sufficient evidence from the relevant Party's Fast Track Offer schedule of five to twenty Suspect Tenders discussed in paragraph II.1484 above, in order to complete the relevant Party's maximum of three Alleged Infringements, and in most cases carried out supplementary interviews with leniency Parties on those alternative tenders. The OFT then took these alternative tenders forward to the Statement of Objections where there was sufficient corroboration of the contemporaneous evidence.
- II.1498. As a result of the OFT's selection process and sifting of the evidence, the Statement included fewer than three Alleged Infringements involving each of the following non-leniency Parties: B & A, John Sisk, PDH and Quarmby (Special Projects). Following the OFT's consideration of the Parties' representations on the Statement, the OFT's findings in relation to the following additional non-leniency Parties are also limited to fewer than the maximum of three Alleged Infringements per non-leniency party: E Manton, GAJ, GMI, Harper, Interclass, Interserve, Linford, North Midland, Pearce and Speller-

Metcalfe. As stated in paragraph II.1465 above, even one isolated occurrence of cover pricing constitutes an infringement of the Act and the OFT has therefore continued to proceed against those Parties in relation to one or two Infringements.

Leniency Parties

II.1499. For the leniency Parties, in most instances at least three Alleged Infringements were automatically chosen during the processes described in the preceding paragraphs, by virtue of their being counter-parties to the Alleged Infringements selected for the non-leniency Parties, and/or Parties to Alleged Infringements involving compensation payments (see next paragraph). However, where after completion of those processes a leniency Party still had fewer than three Alleged Infringements, the OFT proceeded to make a further selection from the list of tenders investigated for that leniency Party described in paragraph II.1469 above, in order bring the number of Alleged Infringements for that Party up to three.

Compensation payments

II.1500. A number of the instances of bid rigging that came to light during the OFT's investigation involved compensation payments. These are discussed in more detail in general terms in paragraphs IV.147 to IV.155 of the General comments on cover pricing section below. Two of these instances involved non-leniency Parties, Bowmer & Kirkland and Durkan, and were selected during the process of selecting three Alleged Infringements for each of those Parties. The remaining instances of compensation payments involved only leniency Parties.

II.1501. As discussed in paragraph VI.114 below, the OFT views compensation payments as a particularly serious form of bid rigging and therefore considers it necessary to include all infringements involving compensation payments for which there is sufficient evidence, even though this inevitably increases the number of Infringements involving some of the leniency Parties, in order to send the proper deterrent message regarding this type of behaviour.

Company groups

II.1502. In reviewing the responses to the first Fast Track Offer it became clear to the OFT that in some instances, two companies were actually part of one and the same undertaking. The OFT therefore made an assessment of all Parties to determine where these in fact formed part of the same undertaking.¹⁶⁴² This was necessary because the OFT had decided to include in the Statement a maximum of only three Alleged Infringements for each non-leniency Party. If two companies in fact formed part of a single undertaking, that undertaking might face fines on six Infringements rather than three, in the absence of this assessment.

II.1503. For the leniency Parties, as discussed above in paragraph II.1478, even where this Decision contains more than three Not But For Infringements for a leniency Party, that Party is only being fined for a maximum of three Infringements. Again, it was important to establish where two leniency Parties formed part of the same undertaking, so that the undertaking would be fined for a maximum of only three Infringements.

¹⁶⁴² See paragraphs III.10 to III.36 below.

Dissolved companies and companies in liquidation

- II.1504. For any dissolved companies, the OFT investigated whether there was any party with undertaking identity (see paragraphs III.26 to III.27 of the Legal Background section below). This would arise where the dissolved company had transferred significant assets to a successor during the process of liquidation. The OFT ascertained that two companies, Ballast and Greenwood, had transferred assets in this way and that there was therefore an appropriate entity to pursue in respect of the Alleged Infringements in which they had been involved.
- II.1505. For four other companies, including K W Brookes and Craske, the OFT was unable to establish an entity with undertaking identity and these four companies were therefore excluded from further investigation. However, both K W Brookes and Craske were counter-parties to Infringements that are the subject of this Decision. It has therefore been necessary to mention them in relation to those Infringements, but although the OFT finds that they engaged in bid rigging in those Infringements, no penalties can be levied on those companies in that regard.
- II.1506. For any companies in liquidation or administration, the OFT contacted their liquidators or administrators with a section 26 notice requesting details of the liquidation/administration procedure. Information relating to the anticipated dissolution date, the sale of any business as a going concern and the transfer of assets was sought. The OFT informed these companies that the OFT might have a contingent claim against the company for any infringement of the Act. Confirmation of the OFT's interest in the Party was therefore obtained. By these means the OFT preserved its ability to penalise the companies concerned for their involvement in the bid rigging Infringements that are the subject of this Decision.

Issue of the Statement

- II.1507. On 16 April 2008 the OFT issued the Statement to the Parties.¹⁶⁴³ In light of the adjustments discussed in paragraphs II.1502 to II.1503 above, and by virtue of the exclusion of certain dissolved companies, the number of Parties in the investigation at the time of the issue of the Statement was 112, comprising 33 leniency Parties and 79 non-leniency Parties, 45 of which had admitted engaging in bid rigging activities in all or some of the Suspect Tenders set out in their Fast Track Offer schedule.

Replies to the Statement

- II.1508. Following the issue of the Statement, the Parties were given the opportunity to consider the OFT's detailed allegations together with the documents on the OFT's file, and to make written representations to the OFT, supplemented by oral representations where requested. The OFT received written representations from over 100 Parties and one third party, the Construction Confederation, and in addition heard oral representations from 49 Parties.
- II.1509. This section summarises the main arguments advanced by the Parties in relation to the OFT's Investigation in their replies to the Statement, and the OFT's response to those representations. In summary, the OFT received representations on the following broad issues:

¹⁶⁴³ The press release which accompanied the Statement may be found at www.of.gov.uk/news/press/2008/52-08.

- (a) Representations on alternative remedies;
- (b) Representations on the length of the investigation;
- (c) Representations on the conduct of the OFT's investigation;
- (d) Representations on the consolidation of the OFT's investigation;
- (e) Representations on the leniency process; and
- (f) Representations on the OFT's Fast Track Offer.

(a) Representations on Alternative Remedies

II.1510. In response to the Statement, some Parties suggested that the OFT should not have conducted an investigation under the Act and that it should instead have educated the industry in relation to the illegality of cover pricing. For example, Stainforth, Caddick and Quarmby stated that as the conduct was endemic in the construction industry, the OFT should have educated the industry that 'simple' cover pricing was illegal.¹⁶⁴⁴ Several Parties also suggested that the OFT's investigation had already eradicated the practice of cover pricing and that it was therefore unnecessary for the OFT to take enforcement action against the Parties.¹⁶⁴⁵

II.1511. In addition, Thomas Vale commissioned RBB Economics to 'conduct an economic evaluation of the rationale for cover pricing and to assess the adverse effects that may result from the imposition of a discriminatory/ excessive level of financial penalties'.¹⁶⁴⁶ Thomas Vale stated that the RBB Report noted:

*'From an economic perspective it would be entirely perverse if the impact of penalties imposed on firms as a result of conduct which was deemed to restrict competition was to restrict competition on the same relevant markets. However, this is precisely what can be expected if the OFT makes an unqualified decision that the relevant construction companies have acted illegally. It would also be economically perverse, as well as inequitable, given the apparently widespread involvement in cover pricing within the industry, if the selection of a few firms for punishment were arbitrarily to cause high quality contractors to be displaced by low quality contractors who were also involved in cover pricing, but which the OFT chose not to pursue.'*¹⁶⁴⁷

II.1512. In response to this, first, the OFT does not accept that any presumption can be made that those companies penalised in this Decision were of 'higher quality' than any other contractors in the construction industry. Second, where penalties threaten the financial viability of firms and properly substantiated representations have been made to that effect, the need for a reduction in penalty has been considered at step 3 of the penalty calculation – see paragraphs VI.284 to VI.288 below.

- II.1513. Thomas Vale further stated that the scale of the cover pricing problem more properly merited a market investigation by the OFT and that it was not appropriate for the OFT to act under the Act. It stated that *'...the greater the scale of the problem; the more appropriate, fair and effective a market investigation reference will be, as opposed to an action under the [Act]. Further ... due to the scale of the investigation, together with the impact on the construction industry as a whole ... a market reference would have been more appropriate.'*¹⁶⁴⁸
- II.1514. However, the OFT cannot accept that the most widespread infringements of competition law should automatically be dealt with in ways that would not result in financial penalties for the parties involved. Such a suggestion would create perverse incentives for companies to ensure that cartel activity was endemic and maximised within an industry, resulting in greater harm to consumers. On the contrary, the prevalence of illegal practices makes it all the more necessary for the OFT to ensure that a proper deterrence message is given not only to the construction industry but also to all other industries where work is allocated by means of competitive tendering procedures.
- II.1515. The OFT does not consider that in the present case such deterrence would have been achieved by means of education alone. As noted above, the OFT had initial evidence of cover pricing in over 4,000 tenders involving over 1,000 companies and the industry had itself described the practice as endemic. In these circumstances, it is all the more necessary to demonstrate how seriously the OFT takes breaches of competition law in order to prevent their recurrence in the future.
- II.1516. Notwithstanding this, the OFT does recognise that there are several features of this case that would militate against imposing penalties at the highest possible levels in the present investigation. The Parties' representations on these matters, and the OFT's assessment of those representations, are discussed in section VI below.

(b) Representations on the length of the investigation

- II.1517. In response to the Statement, one Party, Pearce, contended that its rights of defence had been adversely affected due to the considerable time that had elapsed since the Infringements had taken place, the alleged delay by the OFT in bringing its case, and the fact that it was not given the opportunity to review the evidence against it until the issue of the Statement in April 2008.¹⁶⁴⁹
- II.1518. As noted in paragraph II.1523 below, the OFT considers that its procedures have been conducted fairly and that each Party has been afforded a reasonable opportunity to review the evidence against it and to make representations in response to the Statement.

¹⁶⁴⁸ Written representations of Thomas Vale, 27 June 2008, paragraph 8.7.

¹⁶⁴⁹ Written representations of Pearce Construction (Midlands) Limited, 14 July 2008, paragraph 1.6.

II.1519. Insofar as the alleged delay by the OFT is concerned, Pearce referred to *FEG v Commission*¹⁶⁵⁰ in which the ECJ considered the general principle of Community law that decisions adopted following administrative proceedings in competition matters should be adopted within a reasonable time.¹⁶⁵¹ However, this principle applies only to delays during the administrative procedure, which commences on the date when the Commission 'takes measures which imply an accusation of an infringement and must enable the Commission to adopt a position on the course which the procedure is to follow.'¹⁶⁵² This principle does not relate to the period of time between the infringements taking place and the commencement of an investigation. In the case of Pearce, the OFT first contacted Pearce Group in March 2007 alleging an infringement, and issued the Statement to Pearce on 30 April 2008 (as well as a supplementary Statement on 19 April 2009). The OFT does not consider the intervening period of time to be unreasonable.

II.1520. From the full description given in this section, it can be clearly understood that the OFT has, since the origins of this investigation in April 2004, been fully committed to, and engaged in, taking steps to bring the case to a final Decision as quickly as possible.

II.1521. Furthermore, the ECJ has also made clear that any breach of the 'reasonable time' principle must have adversely affected the rights of defence of the undertakings concerned. In this respect, it is insufficient to make general arguments to this effect; specific details would be required to support such a claim.¹⁶⁵³ The domestic courts have also noted that 'the threshold of proving a breach of the reasonable time requirement is a high one, not easily crossed.'¹⁶⁵⁴ Whilst refuting the allegation that there has been any unreasonable delay in issuing this Decision, the OFT also considers that Pearce has failed to meet this threshold.

(c) Representations on the conduct of the OFT's investigation

II.1522. In response to the Statement, GMI criticised the OFT for not attending its premises, examining its records or interviewing its personnel as part of the OFT's investigation.¹⁶⁵⁵

II.1523. However, each Party has been made aware of the allegations made against it and the supporting evidence in the Statement, and has been able to inspect the evidence on the OFT's file, to make both written and oral representations in response to the Statement, and to address the infringements particularised therein. The OFT considers that its procedures have been fair and that each Party has been afforded a proper opportunity to defend itself.

(d) Representations on the consolidation of the OFT's investigation

Selection of companies

II.1524. In response to the Statement, a number of Parties argued that it was unfair that the OFT had selected specific companies to investigate when cover pricing in the construction industry was endemic. Their arguments were two-fold.

II.1525. First, several Parties stated that due to the endemic nature of cover pricing, 'the OFT could, in truth, have started its investigation with almost any construction company in England or elsewhere in the United Kingdom'.¹⁶⁵⁶ These Parties stated that the fact that the OFT's investigation started following contact from the Queens' Medical Centre in Nottingham was a matter of chance.¹⁶⁵⁷

II.1526. Secondly, several Parties stated that the OFT's selection process was arbitrary and flawed. In short, these Parties argued that the fact that the OFT had 'singled out' the companies in the Statement was essentially a matter of chance.¹⁶⁵⁸ They claimed that the fact that the OFT was holding these companies responsible (accounting for 6 per cent of construction activity in the UK and, according to these representations, by implication clearing the remaining 94 per cent) was 'arbitrary and fundamentally unjust'.¹⁶⁵⁹ These Parties further argued that 'it cannot be fair and consistent with principles of justice for an arbitrarily selected few to be so heavily punished for an industry wide practice'.¹⁶⁶⁰

II.1527. In response to these representations, the OFT has a discretion to decide which cases it will pursue, and does not have a duty to investigate every case. When deciding which cases to pursue, the OFT targets behaviour that poses the greatest threat to consumer welfare, such as mass-marketed scams and cartel activity.¹⁶⁶¹ However, the OFT does not have unlimited resources and therefore targets its resources according to its prioritisation principles, including *'the need to ensure that we make appropriate decisions about which projects and programmes of work we undertake across all areas of our responsibility'*¹⁶⁶² and 'in seeking to target both our resources and enforcement strategy ... the ... need ... to consider a range of factors including impact on consumers, strategic significance, risks and resources'.¹⁶⁶³ The decision to pursue this case was consistent with these prioritisation principles.¹⁶⁶⁴

II.1528. Furthermore, it is well established in both the case law of the Community Courts and the UK domestic courts, including the CAT, that a competition

¹⁶⁶⁰ For example, written representations of F Parkinson, 25 June 2008, paragraph 80.–Further, several Parties stated that 'the OFT's plea of "limited resources" is, ironically, the same reason that companies engaged in cover pricing in the first place', contending that cover prices were submitted so as 'not to incur wasted overheads on putting together tenders for contracts ... they did not wish to secure' (written representations of F Parkinson, 25 June 2008, paragraph 79). However, see paragraph III.111 below which explain why subjective intent is irrelevant to a finding of an infringement.

¹⁶⁶⁴ Please see www.of.gov.uk/shared_of/about_of/of953.pdf. It is noted that the prioritisation and consolidation in this case pre-dated the publication of these principles; nevertheless, the OFT considers that it acted consistently with these principles.

authority has an administrative discretion in the way it exercises its statutory duties. The High Court judgment of Mr Justice Foskett in *Cityhook*¹⁶⁶⁵, for example, stated that ‘...ordinarily the allocation of limited resources to the implementation of statutory duties (and the discretionary exercises that inevitably arise) is a matter left to the body with which the responsibility lies...’.¹⁶⁶⁶

- II.1529. Neither was the OFT’s investigation either ‘arbitrary’ or ‘unjust’. The OFT’s investigation was focused initially on the East Midlands area because the initial contact drawing the OFT’s attention to the Parties’ unlawful activities was made by an auditor in Nottingham. At all times up to 22 March 2007, it was open to construction firms in any area that had engaged in anti-competitive activities to approach the OFT under the OFT’s leniency programme and thereby obtain either complete immunity (before the commencement of the investigation) or a reduction in penalty. In terms of focusing the investigation, as stated above, the OFT used fair and objective criteria to determine which companies should be taken forward for further investigation. As discussed in section VI below, the OFT is not imposing excessive penalties on the Parties.
- II.1530. Furthermore, the OFT can only proceed against cases in respect of which it has evidence. It is inherent in the rationale for imposing penalties that in doing so the OFT acts to deter not only those companies themselves from reoffending, but also those other companies which have not been proceeded against.¹⁶⁶⁷
- II.1531. In conclusion, the OFT’s decisions to investigate bid rigging conduct in the particular regions, and to focus its investigation in the manner that it did, are not inconsistent with either the OFT’s remit or the case law.

Maximum Number of Tenders

- II.1532. Several Parties also made representations on the number of Infringements per Party being pursued by the OFT. In response to the Statement, GMI claimed that ‘the OFT considers and accepts that three instances of alleged bid rigging are required in order to establish a pattern of behaviour’ and argued that if the OFT eventually succeeded in proving fewer than three infringements against GMI, then ‘any remaining (alleged infringements) should be dismissed on the basis that no pattern of behaviour has been established’.¹⁶⁶⁸ Further, G Hurst and PDH noted that in the Statement it was already being pursued for fewer than the maximum of three Alleged Infringements¹⁶⁶⁹, while Bullock also claimed that the fact that it was being pursued for only one Alleged Infringement was insufficient to establish a pattern of behaviour and that this should be taken into account in relation to penalty calculations.¹⁶⁷⁰
- II.1533. In response, the OFT makes the following points. Firstly, the OFT did not accept in the Statement that three instances of alleged bid rigging were required in order to establish a pattern of behaviour (that is, that three was a minimum number). Rather, the OFT stated that three instances were sufficient to establish a pattern of behaviour, that is, that it did not need to include more than three instances in the Statement and that three was a maximum number.

¹⁶⁷⁰ Written representations of Bullock, 26th June 2008, paragraph 6.16.37.

- II.1534. Secondly, the purpose of focusing the investigation in this way was to ensure that the OFT maximised the efficient use of its limited resources. In light of the widespread incidence of cover pricing within the construction industry, it was necessary for the OFT to focus its investigation at many stages – for example, by not visiting every one of the over 1000 companies against which it had initial evidence, by not investigating every one of the tenders for those companies that exceeded the initial threshold of five Suspect Tenders, and by not including every one of the Suspect Tenders for those companies in its Statement. The OFT has focused its investigation in a demonstrably objective way that does not discriminate between companies according to factors such as their size or target business and having regard to the need to ensure equal treatment. It would not have been in any company’s interest or in the public interest for the OFT to have taken the many years and consumed the vast amount of resources that would have been required to progress every one of the original Suspect Tenders through to decision. Establishing a ‘pattern of behaviour’ was merely one of the tools used by the OFT to focus its investigation on those companies against which the OFT held the most initial evidence of cover pricing.
- II.1535. Thirdly, the OFT considers that even a single instance of bid rigging constitutes a serious infringement of the Act. Although in this case, because of the widespread nature of cover pricing, there are many companies that have been proven to have infringed the Act on more than one occasion, this does not diminish in any way the seriousness of the Infringements for those companies which have been proven to have infringed on only one occasion. The OFT is, as discussed in section VI below, applying a separate penalty for each proven instance of bid rigging in this case, and the number of proven infringements is not a mitigating factor as Bullock has suggested. Rather, where a company is found to have engaged in bid rigging on more than one occasion, this is reflected in a higher penalty for that undertaking.
- II.1536. In the particular case of Bullock, its parent at the time of its Infringement, Renew, was being pursued for a total of three Alleged Infringements in the Statement and the OFT considered that it would have been inappropriate in the circumstances to pursue Renew for any more than those three Alleged Infringements, and did not therefore seek to pursue additional Suspect Tenders for Bullock.¹⁶⁷¹
- II.1537. Other Parties have claimed that the OFT should not pursue them for more than one infringement. For example, Wright (Hull) stated that:
- ‘(It) accepts that as a matter of law, each of the Alleged Infringements constitutes a separate and discrete infringement of the Chapter I prohibition and that the OFT is entitled to impose a penalty in respect of each Alleged Infringement. At the same time, the OFT should not use that to inflate artificially the total amount of the penalty imposed ... an organised, structured and formal bid-rigging cartel – could be expected to be far more serious an infringement and far more harmful to competition than three discrete “cover pricing” infringements of the type at issue here.’¹⁶⁷²*
- II.1538. However, in relation to pursuing a maximum of three Infringements, the OFT notes that it is not artificially inflating the penalty as it is entitled to impose a penalty for each Infringement. Indeed, in imposing penalties for a maximum of three Infringements per Party, the OFT has limited the number of penalties that could otherwise have been levied in relation to many companies. As regards the seriousness of the Infringements relative to broader bid rigging schemes, this is reflected in the starting point of the penalty calculations and is discussed in full in the section relating to step 1 of the penalty calculations in section VI below.

¹⁶⁷² Written representations of Wright (Hull), 27 June 2008, paragraph 28.

Selection of Tenders

- II.1539. The OFT also received a number of representations on its contract selection process. In response to the Statement, Caddick and Quarmby suggested that the OFT's contract selection process may have discriminated against some Parties because the OFT avoided tenders where evidence implicated companies that had not originally made the objective minimum threshold for inclusion in the investigation, and because *'the fact that some firms dropped down to fewer than three infringements is also arbitrary, when compared with other firms who were investigated initially but fell outside the scope because they had the good fortune of engaging in cover pricing with non-leniency parties, so the quality of evidence was poorer.'*¹⁶⁷³
- II.1540. However, the OFT does not consider that its contract selection process resulted in any form of discrimination. The OFT carried out its tender selection on the basis of an objective, reasoned process consistent with both the OFT's remit and the case law, as discussed in paragraphs II.1467 to II.1469 and in paragraphs II.1527 to II.1528 above.
- II.1541. In its representations, Ackroyd & Abbott questioned whether the OFT had indeed held evidence in respect of each of the Suspect Tenders when making the initial selection of contracts for investigation described in paragraph II.1468 above.¹⁶⁷⁴ In response, the OFT stresses that this was the evidence available to the OFT at the time, notwithstanding that the OFT had not yet concluded its investigation. It was not the case that the OFT 'did not have evidence' in relation to any of the Suspect Tenders – the OFT had evidence of category 1, 2 or 3 in relation to each Suspect Tender investigated and in relation to each Suspect Tender included in the Fast Track Offer schedules.
- II.1542. Ackroyd & Abbott further suggested that the OFT's contract selection process had been irrational because the OFT had selected three Suspect Tenders in respect of which Ackroyd & Abbott had denied engaging in bid rigging, in preference to those Suspect Tenders in respect of which Ackroyd & Abbott had admitted engaging in bid rigging.¹⁶⁷⁵ However, while admissions from non leniency Parties did form a key piece of evidence in respect of several Infringements as discussed in paragraph II.1567 below, this formed only a part of the overall evidential matrix and the OFT had to look at the overall quality of all the available evidence in respect of each Infringement when selecting the Suspect Tenders to take forward to the Statement. It is not the case that the quality of the evidence took second place to ensuring an even spread amongst leniency Parties – all of the leniency Parties that are counter-parties to Ackroyd & Abbott's Infringements have more than three Infringements in this Decision.

¹⁶⁷⁴ Written representations of Ackroyd & Abbott, 2 July 2008, paragraphs 35 and 36.

¹⁶⁷⁵ Written representations of Ackroyd and Abbott, 2 July 2008, paragraph 49.

The OFT does not agree that Ackroyd & Abbott has been discriminated against by virtue of the contract selection process.

II.1543. In response to the Statement, Caddick and Quarmby acknowledged that the OFT had a discretion as to which cases to pursue but suggested that the OFT should have focused on a minimum size of tender.¹⁶⁷⁶ However, given that cover pricing occurred across a broad range of tender sizes, the OFT considered that it was important to deter all bid rigging activity irrespective of the size of the tender, and accordingly rejected that approach in favour of the criteria described above.

(e) Representations on the leniency process

Availability of leniency

II.1544. In response to the Statement, Wright (Hull) argued that it did not have the same opportunity as was available to other undertakings to seek leniency.¹⁶⁷⁷ However, leniency was, prior to 22 March 2007, open to any company that had engaged in anti-competitive activity and it is notable that two firms¹⁶⁷⁸ applied for leniency prior to any contact with them initiated by the OFT. Until the OFT's Fast Track Offer was issued, there was nothing to prevent Wright (Hull) from availing itself of the OFT's leniency programme, and indeed obtaining complete immunity if it had come forward before the OFT's investigation started in April 2004.

Impact of the consolidation process on leniency parties

II.1545. In response to the Statement, Balfour Beatty expressed concerns over the fairness of the OFT's approach to the selection of the Alleged Infringements to be pursued, in relation to the leniency Parties. Balfour Beatty noted that the methodology used by the OFT to select the Alleged Infringements had resulted in non-leniency Parties being pursued for at most three Alleged Infringements, while several of the leniency Parties featured in more than three instances of cover pricing.¹⁶⁷⁹ It considered that this had the potential to distort future competition and noted that the OFT had initial evidence of many more than three instances of cover pricing in respect of the non-leniency Parties, and additional evidence against companies that did not satisfy the OFT's minimum criteria for inclusion in the investigation. Balfour Beatty noted that it had not been aware that the OFT would adopt its approach to consolidation of the investigation when it applied for leniency. Balfour Beatty also commented on the considerable assistance that had been provided to the OFT by the leniency Parties in this case at considerable expense, and contrasted this with the position of the non-leniency Parties which were not interviewed by the OFT.¹⁶⁸⁰ Thomas Vale also made representations that the selection process was unfair to leniency applicants¹⁶⁸¹, while Propensity suggested that the OFT should have only pursued 'But For' tenders in the Decision.¹⁶⁸²

¹⁶⁷⁶ Written representations of Quarmby, 27 June 2008, paragraph 6.8 and written representations of Caddick, 24 June 2008, paragraph 2.4.

¹⁶⁸² Written representations of Propensity, 27 June 2008, paragraph 3.16.

II.1546. As explained above in paragraph II.1529, the OFT considers that it focused this investigation in a fair and objectively justifiable way having regard to its resource limitations and the endemic nature of the practice of cover pricing. Pursuing additional infringements against non-leniency parties would not have alleviated the discrepancy in the number of Infringements for each leniency and non-leniency Party, as to do so would in almost all cases have implicated a leniency Party in addition to the non-leniency Party. In relation to the leniency Parties, the OFT considers that adequate steps were taken in this case to safeguard the integrity of the leniency process. First, the leniency Parties are receiving complete immunity in relation to any instance of bid rigging about which the OFT would not have known but for the evidence provided by that leniency Party. Secondly, the leniency Parties are receiving a substantial discount of between 35 per cent and 65 per cent on any Not But For tenders. Thirdly, the leniency Parties are only being penalised for a maximum of three Infringements. Given these safeguards, the OFT does not consider that it would have been appropriate to base its selection process on giving particular priority to But For tenders, rather than making an objective selection on the basis of the best evidence. Moreover, to focus exclusively on But For tenders would have resulted in leniency applicants effectively avoiding any penalty at all. The OFT does not consider that this would have been appropriate when none of the leniency parties qualified for 100 per cent immunity (as opposed to leniency) under the OFT's leniency policy.

II.1547. The OFT also notes that leniency Parties benefited from the OFT's consolidation and contract selection procedures, as the OFT has not pursued every tender in respect of which leniency applications were made. The OFT further notes that in the case of almost all of the leniency Parties, the OFT already had considerable evidence in relation to those Parties, having visited their premises prior to their leniency applications, and that this initial evidence almost invariably implicated them in many more tenders than were included in the Statement.

II.1548. Furthermore, it is clear from this Decision and from the accompanying publicity, which Parties took proactive steps to cooperate with the OFT under the leniency programme and hence can be expected to have taken steps to ensure their compliance with competition law.

(f) Representations on the Fast Track Offer

II.1549. In response to the Statement, several Parties claimed that the OFT's Fast Track Offer was unfair.¹⁶⁸³ Representations centred on the following five main points:

- that Parties were not shown the evidence that the OFT had in its possession at the time the OFT's Fast Track Offer was made;
- that Parties were unaware as to what would happen with their admissions and what further consolidation exercise, if any, the OFT would undertake in order to arrive at a final selection of tenders for inclusion in the Statement and any infringement decision;

¹⁶⁸³ For example written representations of Ackroyd and Abbott, 2 July 2008, paragraph 13; Written representations of B&A, 27 June 2008, paragraph 15; Written representations of Crown Point, 27 June 2008, paragraph 4.6; Written representations of GAJ Holdings, 26 June 2008, Appendix E, paragraph 5; Written representations of Pearce, 14 July 2008, paragraph 7.3 and written representations of Crest Nicholson, 27 June 2008, paragraph 8.28.

- that the OFT should provide a 25 per cent discount to Parties which admitted liability after viewing the OFT's evidence in the Statement;
- that the OFT's Fast Track Offer was unfair to leniency Parties as they had provided more assistance to the OFT's investigation; and
- that the Supplementary Fast Track Offer to parent companies was unfair.

(i) Representations regarding the fact that evidence was not provided to the Parties with the Fast Track Offer

II.1550. In its representations on the Statement, the Construction Confederation stated:

*'...companies were unduly pressurised into making admissions of "guilt" without...being aware of the evidence available to the OFT and unable to verify whether it was correct, accurate or reliable or alternatively they were unfairly denied the opportunity to benefit from the reduction of penalty offer. In our view, this could be regarded as unfair and effectively as a form of entrapment... the OFT should have incorporated two key elements into the terms of any "plea bargaining" offer: (i) the evidence on which the OFT purported to rely should have been disclosed up front to the companies involved, and (ii) the companies involved should have been able to understand what the relevant reduction in penalty would actually represent and how it would be calculated.'*¹⁶⁸⁴

II.1551. Several Parties also made representations on this issue. For example, Ackroyd and Abbott claimed that it could not be expected to admit to an infringement 'without being in possession of the full facts against it'.¹⁶⁸⁵ It also drew similarities between the OFT's Fast Track Offer and settlement proceedings and claimed that it was fundamental to an admission of liability that the parties saw the key evidence against them.¹⁶⁸⁶ Ackroyd and Abbott stated that 'The process was unfair and settlement procedures should not be based on assertions by the OFT without providing the evidence upon which these are based' and 'The process gives rise to discrimination between participants and breaches the principles of equal treatment'.¹⁶⁸⁷ GAJ Holdings stated that 'we feel we were pressurised into admitting guilt without any knowledge of the evidence against us'.¹⁶⁸⁸

II.1552. The OFT considers these concerns to be unwarranted. First, the OFT's Fast Track Offer was a specific initiative made in response to the unusual size of the case, and whose features were specific to the Offer such that direct comparisons cannot be drawn with settlements in other cases or, for that matter, with the OFT's leniency policy. To the extent that the OFT's Fast Track Offer may be compared with settlement or leniency, however, the OFT considers that of the two it was more akin to leniency than settlement, comprising as it did an offer made to the Parties voluntarily to admit to specified Suspect Tenders, at the point when the OFT had 'closed the door' on any further leniency applications. In the same way as under leniency, Parties had the opportunity to examine their own records and determine whether from their own perspective they considered they had engaged in bid rigging activities. Also, as with leniency, those that accepted the offer received a percentage reduction from a penalty yet to be calculated, rather than 'settling' a final sum.

- II.1553. Secondly, the OFT considers that arguments relating to equal treatment are misconceived since all Parties were treated equally in relation to the OFT's Fast Track Offer, and no Party was in a materially different position from any other. The OFT provided all companies with the same information about the types of evidence the OFT held, along with specific details (dates and names) of the tenders in respect of which the OFT had reasonable grounds to suspect involvement in bid rigging. In response to any requests for further information, the OFT provided those Parties with the names of estimators involved and/or tender values where this information was already available to it.
- II.1554. Invariably, in any large investigation by the OFT into historic infringements of competition law, some companies will have more information about the conduct in question than others. Some companies had disposed of their records or sold subsidiaries, and in some cases employees and directors had moved on. Many Parties had destroyed the records of tenders – it was apparently common practice for companies to destroy individual tender records where they did not win the tender, meaning that this had happened in most cases where companies took a cover price and in many cases where they gave a cover price – and the OFT had no way of knowing what further evidence, if any (such as tender registers) individual companies might themselves have retained in order to verify the OFT's suspicions.
- II.1555. The OFT does not accept that a fast track offer can be made only where a company is able to carry out its own internal investigations and determine for itself whether or not the OFT's suspicion of an infringement is well-founded. Indeed, it is noted that under the OFT's leniency programme a leniency applicant may be awarded a reduction of up to 100 per cent of any penalty that would otherwise have been imposed, in return for reporting its involvement in cartel activity and on-going cooperation with the OFT; the difficulty that some potential leniency applicants may have in identifying a possible infringement does not preclude the availability of leniency to other potential applicants without such difficulties.
- II.1556. There was no compulsion on the Parties to accept the OFT's offer. The alternative was to go through the normal process of receiving and responding to the Statement. The OFT's Fast Track Offer did not undermine that normal process for those unable or unwilling to accept it. If anything, the normal process was made quicker because of the number of Parties that were able and/or willing to assist the OFT by accepting the OFT's Fast Track Offer.
- II.1557. Some companies chose not to admit liability apparently because they were unable to establish the existence of the suspected illegal activity for themselves from an independent source. However, a significant number of other companies accepted the OFT's Fast Track Offer. Some of those companies may have accepted the offer simply because they regarded participation in bid rigging as very likely, or knew that it was widespread at the time; some may have been willing to accept liability on the basis of the description of specific tenders in the OFT's letter. Some companies informed the OFT that they were accepting the offer as a 'commercial' decision, having no evidence of illegal activity but wishing to benefit from the penalty reduction on offer, in the knowledge that the OFT would ultimately need to support any decision by reference to evidence and that they could withdraw from the OFT's Fast Track Offer later if they wished to do so.

- II.1558. Thirdly, one of the key reasons for not providing evidence with the OFT's Fast Track Offer, as set out in paragraph II.1485 above, was that the OFT's investigation was still ongoing and the OFT had not completed the compilation of the evidence or the consolidation of its investigation as described in paragraphs II.1479 and II.1495 to II.1499 above. Interviews had not been conducted and letters to procurers had not been sent. The OFT was therefore not in a position to make available all of the evidence on which it was subsequently to rely in the Statement. Moreover, any disclosure at that stage would have been only partial, and would therefore have been misleading, and have unfairly altered Parties' incentives as to whether to accept the offer.
- II.1559. Furthermore, the compilation and presentation of the evidence, including making the necessary confidentiality redactions prior to disclosure, would have taken many months. To some extent, this would have duplicated the work necessary to prepare the Statement, but much of this preparation would have been rendered unnecessary in the light of the subsequent focusing of the investigation to a maximum of three tenders per non leniency Party. Put simply, the OFT would not have made the offer given these difficulties and, following the necessary withdrawal of leniency in this case, the non leniency Parties would therefore have lost any opportunity to obtain a penalty discount.
- II.1560. Finally, had the OFT provided the Parties with the evidence in its possession, any admission by a Party in response to the OFT's Fast Track Offer could only be taken to reflect that Party's analysis of the evidence already available to the OFT, which would have been of limited value to the investigation. Instead, admissions and related facts provided without sight of the evidence have a much stronger corroborative value. From this it can be seen that in addition to calling into question one of the functions of the OFT's Fast Track Offer (to gain admissions that would enable the OFT to frame and advance its investigation), accepting admissions with no corroborative value would also not have justified the substantial 25 per cent discount, given the diminished benefit to the OFT.

(iii) Representations regarding the fact that Parties were unaware as to what would happen with their admissions and what further consolidation exercise, if any, the OFT would undertake in order to arrive at a final selection of tenders

- II.1561. In its representations on the Statement, Ackroyd and Abbott suggested that the OFT's subsequent consolidation exercise (explained by the OFT above and in paragraphs II.1596 – II.1602 of the Statement) should have been explained to the OFT's Fast Track Offer recipients as part of the offer, since it considered that all of the non-leniency Parties were of the understanding that all of the Suspect Tenders in their schedule would be pursued and that the OFT had the same level of evidence against each Suspect Tender.¹⁶⁸⁹
- II.1562. The OFT does not consider that it was incumbent on the OFT to set out its ongoing and future consolidation process at the stage it made the OFT's Fast Track Offer. The OFT asked each non leniency Party to make its own assessment of whether it had engaged in bid rigging activities from its own knowledge. Informing the Parties of the Suspect Tenders for which the OFT had the best evidence and the fact that these were the ones most likely to be included in the Statement (a) would have been impossible given that the OFT had not compiled all of the evidence at the time (as discussed above) and given that the responses to the OFT's Fast Track Offer were to form part of that evidence and part of the OFT's final selection process, and (b) would have altered the incentives for companies to accept or reject the OFT's Fast Track Offer on individual Suspect Tenders according to the extent to which they thought the OFT would be likely to take those tenders forward, rather than basing the decision on their own assessment of whether they had engaged in bid rigging activities on the particular Suspect Tenders. The fact that some Parties made admissions to some infringements that were not included in the Statement does not mean that they were discriminated against or that the process was unfair.

II.1563. Ackroyd & Abbott also stated in its representations that the OFT's Fast Track Offer did not explain that the reduction in penalty applied only in relation to each individual Suspect Tender listed or that individual tenders would be pursued as separate infringements.¹⁶⁹⁰ However, as explained in paragraph II.1486 above the Fast Track Offer letter did make it clear that any admissions were to be made on a tender by tender basis and that reductions in penalty would similarly apply only in respect of those Suspect Tenders that were admitted.

(iii) Representations that the OFT should provide a 25 per cent discount to Parties who admitted liability after viewing the OFT's evidence in the Statement

II.1564. In response to the Statement, several companies claimed that they wished to be afforded the equivalent of the 25 per cent discount granted under the OFT's Fast Track Offer as they were now prepared to admit to one or more of their Infringements, having viewed the contents of the Statement and the evidence presented against them.¹⁶⁹¹

II.1565. For example, B & A justified this claim for an equivalent discount by reference to the guidance given by the OFT to another Party at the time of the OFT's Fast Track Offer to the effect that the OFT 'did not want [that company] to admit to anything they were uncertain of'. B & A claimed that because the companies were 'legal fictions' they could only know what their employees and records told them, and that for many unsuccessful tenders that took place many years ago, they had not retained the records.¹⁶⁹² B&A claim that consequently, the Parties did not always have a proper opportunity to accept the offer at the time it was made. B & A also stated that 'the effect of a policy of granting discounts only for admissions at the fast track offer stage and not now would also be to discriminate against smaller companies'.¹⁶⁹³ B & A further stated, *'Nor can the OFT justify the discrimination in question by reference to a saving in work on its part. It has had to collect and present evidence even in cases where a fast-track admission has been made...'*¹⁶⁹⁴

II.1566. However, the OFT does not accept that smaller companies were in any different position from larger companies in relation to the OFT's Fast Track Offer. All companies faced the same potential issues with regard to record keeping and staff turnover. The OFT has discussed the general issues surrounding provision of evidence with the OFT's Fast Track Offer in the paragraphs above, including the fact that the OFT had not completed the compilation of the evidence at that time it made the OFT's Fast Track Offer to the Parties.

II.1567. In addition, and contrary to B & A's assertion, the responses to the OFT's Fast Track Offer provided considerable benefit to the OFT since the independent corroboration of the OFT's evidence provided by non-leniency Parties' admissions, often accompanied by the naming of counter-parties, in the absence of sight of the OFT's evidence, provided valuable additional evidence and assisted the OFT with the final selection of tenders as discussed above in paragraphs II.1495 to II.1506. This opportunity to focus the investigation was completed by the time the Statement was issued and the OFT cannot therefore justify granting a discount of a similar amount to Parties which make admissions having seen the OFT's evidence.

II.1568. Nevertheless, the OFT's penalty guidance recognises that cooperation in the course of an investigation that enables the OFT to conclude its enforcement process more effectively and speedily, can on occasions be a basis for a reduction at step 4 of the penalty calculation. The fact that some Parties have now admitted their involvement in certain Infringements has therefore been taken into account by the OFT in the setting of penalties, as described in section VI below. However, for the reasons outlined above, the OFT does not accept that new admissions made after the issue of the Statement should attract the same level of discount as that awarded for acceptance of the OFT's Fast Track Offer.

II.1569. Following the issue of the Statement, one Party, Crest Nicholson, specifically asked the OFT to reopen the OFT's Fast Track Offer so that it could consider whether to accept it, now that it had seen the evidence against it. The OFT refused to reopen the offer, which, in the OFT's view, would have resulted in unequal and preferential treatment being given to Crest Nicholson. Crest Nicholson applied for permission to judicially review the OFT's decision. The subsequent events are described in more detail in paragraphs II.1576 to II.1580 below.

(iv) Representations that the Fast Track Offer was unfair to leniency Parties as they had provided more assistance to the OFT's investigation

II.1570. In response to the Statement, Thomas Vale suggested that the OFT's Fast Track Offer was unfair to leniency Parties¹⁶⁹⁵ and stated that:

'This offer seriously undermined Thomas Vale's position as a proactive immunity and leniency applicant, by favouring companies who had not assisted the OFT's investigation; who had not provided detailed and practical information; and who would not usually have had the option of participating in a leniency programme. Unjustly, these companies were therefore able to obtain a reduction in financial penalties for much less costs, management time and effort than that which were offered to Thomas Vale, but, nonetheless, these companies still received offers of “significant”¹⁶⁹⁶ reductions in penalties.’

II.1571. The OFT does not consider that the leniency Parties have been treated unfairly in relation to the non leniency Parties that accepted the OFT’s Fast Track Offer. As stated above, the OFT’s Fast Track Offer discount was granted because of the considerable benefit to the OFT’s enforcement process provided by admissions from Parties that had not been granted sight of the evidence, and at a stage of the case which helped the OFT to select the tenders that would be included in the Statement. In all cases, leniency Parties have been granted a significantly larger reduction in penalty than the 25 per cent OFT’s Fast Track Offer discount. Furthermore, the leniency Parties have been granted the substantial additional concession of immunity from financial penalty on But For Infringements as described above in paragraph II.1475.

(v) Representations that the Supplementary Fast Track Offer to parent companies was unfair.

II.1572. In response to the Statement, Renew claimed that its rights of defence had *‘been seriously undermined by the fact that Renew was only notified by the OFT that it intended to find Renew jointly and severally liable for Bullock’s participation in any Alleged Infringements after Bullock had already accepted the OFT Offer [the OFT’s Fast Track Offer]. Renew was not then given any opportunity to comment on or influence Bullock’s response’.*¹⁶⁹⁷

II.1573. However, the OFT considers that it was open to Renew to reject the OFT’s Fast Track Offer when it was informed of Bullock’s admissions on 6 November 2007. The decision made by Renew not to comment on the factual admissions made by Bullock does not mean that Renew’s rights of defence have been compromised. The OFT has granted Renew and Bullock a 25 per cent discount based on Bullock’s admissions, but as discussed in II.1485 above, it remained open to any party to withdraw from the OFT’s Fast Track Offer at any time up to issue of the OFT’s Decision, including after seeing the evidence and the OFT’s analysis of it in the Statement. In terms of rights of defence, it remains open to Renew to appeal on liability for the Infringements as discussed in II.1486 above.

II.1574. In response to the Statement, McGinley Holdings claimed that *‘the OFT seeks to impose liability on MHL [McGinley Holdings] following [...] [C – its current parent’s] “admission”, extracted on a false pretence, and without MHL [McGinley Holdings] having the means to answer the allegations against JJM [J J McGinley]...’.*¹⁶⁹⁸

II.1575. The OFT notes that the original Fast Track Offer was addressed to [.....] [C], the current parent of J J McGinley. However the response to the OFT’s Fast Track Offer was received from J J McGinley, not [...] [C – its current parent]. In its response J J McGinley accepted the OFT’s Fast Track Offer, in respect of the majority of the Suspect Tenders on its schedule. The OFT subsequently wrote to McGinley Holdings, informing it of its former subsidiary’s response to the OFT’s Fast Track Offer. At that time it was open to McGinley Holdings to provide a different response to the OFT’s Fast Track Offer, if it wanted. The decision made by McGinley Holdings not to comment on the factual admissions made by J J McGinley does not mean that McGinley Holdings' rights of defence have been compromised. The OFT has granted McGinley Holdings and J J McGinley a 25 per cent discount based on J J McGinley's admissions, but as discussed in II.1485 above, it remained open to any party to withdraw from the OFT's Fast Track Offer at any time up to issue of the OFT's Decision, including after seeing the evidence and the OFT's analysis of it in the Statement.

Judicial review of the OFT's refusal to reopen the Fast Track Offer to Crest Nicholson after the Statement had been issued

II.1576. As noted above in paragraph II.1569, following the issue of the Statement, one Party, Crest Nicholson, applied for judicial review of the OFT's decision not to reopen the OFT's Fast Track Offer to it, now that Crest Nicholson had had the opportunity to see the OFT's evidence against it. Crest Nicholson claimed that the OFT's decision not to reopen the OFT's Fast Track Offer following the issue of the Statement was contrary to the principles of equal treatment and procedural fairness.¹⁶⁹⁹ Crest Nicholson considered that it had been at a particular disadvantage when responding to the OFT's Fast Track Offer, given that it was a historical parent company of the infringing companies, Pearce and its principal Pearce Group.¹⁷⁰⁰

II.1577. In its judgment on 24 July 2009, the Court ruled that the OFT has a wide discretion in the conduct of its investigations and in its penalty setting.¹⁷⁰¹ In particular the court rejected Crest Nicholson's claim that the OFT's decision not to reopen the OFT's Fast Track Offer following the issue of the Statement was contrary to the principles of equal treatment and procedural fairness.¹⁷⁰² Furthermore, the judgment went on to state that the OFT was entitled to adopt the approach it did in making the OFT's Fast Track Offer, including the non provision of evidence to the recipients of the OFT's Fast Track Offer, and that it was not required to reopen the OFT's Fast Track Offer for Crest Nicholson following the issue of the Statement.¹⁷⁰³

II.1578. However, the judgment did state that the OFT should have acknowledged that Crest Nicholson might have been in an objectively different position to other parties who were offered the OFT's Fast Track Offer.¹⁷⁰⁴ Then, if a difference was established, the OFT had to decide what effect, if any, that should have on any penalty.¹⁷⁰⁵

II.1579. Following the judgment the OFT wrote to all Parties, including Crest Nicholson, and invited them to make submissions on

- 'Whether, and if so how, [the Party] was in an objectively different position compared to other Fast Track Offer recipients which put it in a position where it could not fairly admit the allegations and accept the Fast Track Offer at the time it was made;

II.1580. The further submissions received by the OFT are addressed in paragraphs VI.343 to VI.368 in the penalties section below.

Amendments to representations by certain non leniency Parties in order to comply with the terms of their acceptance of the Fast Track Offer

II.1581. In response to the Statement, two non-leniency Parties¹⁷⁰⁷ made representations about their participation in the Infringements which, if maintained, the OFT considered would have contravened the terms of their acceptance of the OFT's Fast Track Offer. The OFT therefore wrote to these Parties on 4 December and 23 December 2008 respectively, asking them to confirm whether they intended to deny participation in the Infringements and thereby lose the benefit of the OFT's Fast Track Offer. Both Parties confirmed that they intended to maintain their acceptance of involvement in the Infringements and that their representations should be read in this light.¹⁷⁰⁸

Amendments to representations by certain leniency Parties in order to comply with the terms of their leniency agreement

II.1582. In response to the Statement, several leniency Parties¹⁷⁰⁹ made representations about the legal characterisation of their conduct which, if maintained, the OFT considered would have contravened the terms of their respective leniency agreements. The OFT therefore wrote to these Parties on 23 December 2008 expressing concern that their representations were inconsistent with their status as leniency applicants. Following further communications with the OFT, all of these Parties subsequently amended their representations to make them comply with the terms of their leniency agreements.¹⁷¹⁰

II.1583. One party, Wildgoose, later suggested that it had been unfairly pressured by the OFT into admitting liability.¹⁷¹¹ The OFT does not accept this suggestion. Wildgoose was perfectly free to decide whether it wished to apply for and sustain its leniency application. Furthermore, it is clear from the OFT's leniency policy that it is an integral requirement for an award of leniency that the applicant should admit its participation in cartel activity in breach of the Act and/or Article 81.¹⁷¹² Notwithstanding these representations, the OFT notes that Wildgoose has not in fact withdrawn its admission of cartel activity and the OFT accordingly relies on it in this Decision and is granting Wildgoose a penalty discount for leniency.

Supplementary Statements of Objections

II.1584. In the light of information that came to the OFT's attention following the issue of the Statement, the OFT issued the following supplementary Statements of Objections ('Supplementary Statements') to certain Parties. In each case, the addressees of the Supplementary Statements were given the opportunity to make written and oral representations.

1. Durkan company group and Infringements

II.1585. On 23 December 2008, the OFT issued a Supplementary Statement to Durkan Limited, Durkan Holdings, Concentra, and the counter-Parties to their Infringements, Mansell and Balfour Beatty. The need for this Supplementary Statement arose from the fact that the OFT now considers that Durkan Limited, and not Concentra as provisionally found in the Statement, was the company directly involved in Infringement 220. This Supplementary Statement also addressed certain representations made by Durkan Holdings and by Concentra in response to the Statement, regarding their liability for three of the Alleged Infringements described in the Statement, Alleged Infringements 135, 220 and 240. The content of and responses to the first Supplementary Statement are described in the Durkan company profile at paragraphs II.382 to II.442 above, and in the descriptions of Infringements 135, 220 and 240 in section IV below.

2. Lindum liability for Infringement 182

II.1586. On 9 February 2009, the OFT issued a Supplementary Statement to Lindum and Lindum Group, and the counter-Parties to Infringement 182, Jack Lunn and its ultimate parent at the time of this Infringement, Jack Lunn (Holdings). The need for this Supplementary Statement arose from the fact that the OFT now considers that Lindum, and not Lindum Homes as provisionally found in the Statement, was the company directly involved in Infringement 182. The content of and responses to this Supplementary Statement are described in the description of Infringement 182 in section IV below.

3. Amendments to relevant markets for certain Infringements

II.1587. On 18 March 2009, the OFT issued a Supplementary Statement to the Parties set out below. The need for this Supplementary Statement arose from the fact that the OFT considered the relevant product and/or geographic markets for Infringements 9, 20, 29, 54, 78, 108, 114, 128, 136, 141, 155, 204 and 208 to be different from the markets set out in the Statement. The content of and responses to this Supplementary Statement are described in the market definition section in section II below.

- ARG;
- Adam Eastwood and its controlling party the Eastwood Foundation;
- Admiral;
- Allenbuild and its ultimate parent Renew;
- Bodill;
- Derwent Valley and its ultimate parent Chevin Holdings;
- E Taylor;
- F Parkinson and its ultimate parent Mowbray;
- Francis and its ultimate parent Barrett;
- Greswolde and its ultimate parent Mantisson;
- Herbert Baggaley and its ultimate parent Baggaley Group;

- J J & A R Jackson;
- Loach;
- Mansell and its former ultimate parent Mansell plc and current ultimate parent Balfour Beatty plc;
- Milward;
- R Durtnell & Sons and its ultimate parent Durtnell Holdings;
- Robert Woodhead and its ultimate parent Woodhead Holdings;
- Simons and Wrights (Lincoln) together with their ultimate parent company Simons Group;
- Strata;
- Thomas Vale and its ultimate parent Thomas Vale Holdings;
- Thorndyke;
- W R Bloodworth;
- Wildgoose; and
- William Woodsend.

4. A H Willis liability for Infringement 224

II.1588. On 30 March 2009, the OFT issued a Supplementary Statement to A H Willis and the counter-Parties to Infringement 224, Mansell and Balfour Beatty. The need for this Supplementary Statement arose from the fact that the OFT considered it needed to adduce additional factual evidence and rely on additional legal reasoning relating to the creation of an agency relationship and an undertaking's liability for the acts of its agents, in relation to Infringement 224. The content of and responses to this Supplementary Statement are described in the description of Infringement 224 in section IV below.

5. Pearce Group liability for Infringement 75

II.1589. On 16 April 2009, the OFT issued a Supplementary Statement to Pearce, Pearce Group and Crest Nicholson, and the counter-Parties to Infringement 75, Thomas Vale, Balfour Beatty and Interclass. The need for this Supplementary Statement arose from the fact that the OFT considered that, by virtue of the fact that Pearce acted as the 'undisclosed agent' of its parent Pearce Group, Pearce Group should be regarded, together with Pearce, as having been directly involved in Infringement 75, and that Crest Nicholson, Pearce Group and Pearce should therefore be held jointly and severally liable for Pearce Group's and Pearce's participation in that Infringement. The content of and responses to this Supplementary Statement are described in the company profiles section at paragraphs II.1000 to II.1036 above, and in the description of Infringement 75 in section IV below.

6. Amendments to relevant markets for certain Infringements

II.1590. On 19 May 2009, the OFT issued a Supplementary Statement to the Parties set out below. The need for this Supplementary Statement arose from the fact that the OFT considered the relevant product markets for Infringements 8, 43, 80, 97, 129, 176, 220 and 240, all relating to work for Local Authorities, to be Public Housing rather than Private Housing as originally set out in the Statement. The content of and responses to this Supplementary Statement are described in the market definition section in section II below.

- Balfour Beatty and Mansell;
- Bodill;

- Durkan Holdings;
- Durkan;
- G & J Seddon and its ultimate parent Seddon;
- J J & A R Jackson;
- J J McGinley and its former parent McGinley Holdings;
- Richardson Projects;
- Strata; and
- William Woodsend.

Decision not to pursue certain Alleged Infringements

II.1591. Following consideration of the Parties' representations on the Statement, the OFT has decided not to make infringement findings in relation to 40 Alleged Infringements for which, in the OFT's view, the evidence was ultimately insufficient to sustain a finding that there had been an infringement of the Act in the terms set out in the Statement. For the following 38 Alleged Infringements, the evidence depended wholly or almost wholly on a single document where, in the OFT's view, the surrounding circumstances meant that the document alone¹⁷¹³ would have been insufficient to meet the requisite standard of proof:

- Alleged Infringements 10, 11, 12, 13, 15, 16, 19, 24, 25, 26, 28, 33, 51, 60, 71, 73, 76, 81, 87, 92, 99, 109, 111, 113, 117, 130, 131, 132, 145, 148, 151, 153, 161, 167, 170, 177, 200 and 223.

II.1592. New evidence was supplied in relation to Alleged Infringement 101, indicating that in that particular instance the client had not been deceived into thinking that a cover bid was genuine, such that the object or effect of the arrangement differed from other instances of cover bidding described in this Decision. Alleged Infringement 185 involved documentary evidence with conflicting witness explanations which, in the OFT's view, meant that the requisite standard of proof was not met.

II.1593. In addition, the OFT has decided not to pursue to Decision the following 5 Alleged Infringements, the commencement of which pre-dated the coming into force of the Act, as, by virtue of the transitional provisions of the Act, the Chapter I prohibition may not apply, despite elements of the arrangements occurring after 1 March 2000 (see paragraph III.220 below):

- Alleged Infringements 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5.

II.1594. As a result of this, the following nine of the parties to which the Statement was addressed are not addressees of this Decision as they have not been found to have engaged in any breach of the Act and are therefore entitled to the presumption of innocence:

- Adonis Construction Limited;
- Chase Norton Construction Limited together with its ultimate parent company Chase Midland plc;
- E.G. Carter Limited;

¹⁷¹³ See further paragraph III.203 regarding the need to take into account the particular context and particular circumstances when placing reliance on a single item of evidence.

- Frank Galliers Limited together with its former ultimate parent company Frank Galliers Holdings Limited;
- George Law Limited together with its ultimate parent company, then named Bosworth & Wakeford Limited;
- J. Guest Limited;
- Piper Construction Midlands Limited together with its ultimate parent company Piper Securities Holdings Limited;
- Robert Bruce Construction Limited; and
- Spicers (Builders) Limited.

II.1595. The number of Parties found to have infringed in this Decision is therefore 103, as compared with the 112 addressees of the Statement.

II.1596. Infringements in this Decision are numbered according to the numbering of the respective Alleged Infringements in the Statement, hence the inclusion of numbers up to 244 when only 199 infringement findings are made.

C. Definition of Relevant Markets

Industry background

- II.1597. The Parties to the Infringements described in this Decision are building contractors that provide construction and support services. The building contracting industry is classified as Division 45 of the UK Standard Industrial Classification ('SIC') 2003, which comprises 'general construction and special trade construction for buildings and civil engineering, building installation and building completion. It includes new work, repair, additions and alterations, the erection of prefabricated buildings or structures on site and also constructions of a temporary nature'.¹⁷¹⁴
- II.1598. The latest Construction Statistics Annual Report prior to the issue of the Statement on 16 April 2008¹⁷¹⁵ prepared by the Department for Business, Enterprise & Regulatory Reform (BERR)¹⁷¹⁶ indicated that Contractors' output in the construction industry was £111.7 billion¹⁷¹⁷ at then current prices in 2006.¹⁷¹⁸ The report showed that the market can be divided into two main types of work: new works which recorded an output of £64.4 billion, and repair and maintenance which had an output of £47.3 billion in 2006. Within the new works the report indicated that of the contractors' output, roughly three quarters (£48.8 billion) was accounted for by private sector works.¹⁷¹⁹ New works were split into the following categories of work: private sector housing (£19.6 billion), public sector housing (£3.4 billion), infrastructure (£6.5 billion), industrial (£5.0 billion) and commercial (£29.8 billion). Within repair and maintenance work, two thirds (£31.4 billion) was private sector work with this work split fairly equally between housing and non-housing works.
- II.1599. The Construction Statistics Annual report showed that there were 186,107 contractors' firms¹⁷²⁰ engaged in construction work in 2006. However, of these, 180,131 (97 per cent) had fewer than 25 employees and accounted for only just over a quarter of output¹⁷²¹ in terms of the value of work done in 2006. This shows the fragmented structure of the industry.

Approach to market definition in cartel cases

- II.1600. The primary purpose of defining the relevant market in cartel cases is to assist in the calculation of penalties. The CAT and the Court of Appeal have accepted that it is not necessary for the OFT to carry out a formal analysis of the relevant ¹⁷¹⁶ BERR has since become BIS (Department for Business Innovation and Skills) on 5 June 2009 but is referred to as BERR in this Decision when mentioning documents published before that day.

¹⁷¹⁷ All 2006 figures are provisional and comprise output by contractors, estimates of unrecorded output by small firms and self-employed workers and a small amount of output by public sector direct labour departments classified to construction.

¹⁷¹⁸ The Office of National Statistics Annual Business Inquiry First Release (16 November 2007) shows provisional results for the UK Construction Industry of £176.1bn measured in terms of turnover. This compares to £113.6bn figure for output of the construction industry based on BERR statistics shown in Table 2.1 Output – Construction Statistics Annual 2007.

product market in order to assess the appropriate level of the penalty.¹⁷²² Rather, the OFT must be 'satisfied on a reasonable, and properly reasoned basis, of what is the relevant product market affected by the infringement'.¹⁷²³ Consideration of the 'commercial reality', insofar as it 'can reasonably be shown that the products so grouped were "affected" by the infringement', is also a relevant consideration.¹⁷²⁴ The OFT considers that this principle also applies when assessing the relevant geographic market.

II.1601. The OFT is not bound by market definitions adopted in previous cases, either by itself or by other competition authorities, although earlier definitions can sometimes be informative when considering the appropriate market definition. Equally, although previous cases can provide useful information, the relevant market must be identified according to the particular facts of the case in hand.

Product market definition in the present case

II.1602. The process of defining the relevant market starts with the focal product that is the subject of the investigation. In this case, this is the supply of building works for a particular construction project (the 'Focal Product'). Market definition establishes the closest substitutes to the Focal Product. Such products are usually the most immediate competitive constraints on the behaviour of the undertaking controlling the Focal Product.¹⁷²⁵ When identifying the closest substitute products, it is necessary to consider both demand side substitution, that is, how customers of the Focal Product would respond to a small but significant increase in its price¹⁷²⁶, and supply side substitution, that is, how potential producers of the Focal Product would respond to a similar increase in its price.¹⁷²⁷

II.1603. On the demand side there is limited possibility for demand side substitution. Typically when customers seek quotes from building contractors it is for a particular type of building project, for example for a new shopping mall or a new house, or to refurbish an existing building. Although a customer may be able to vary the specification in response to a price increase, or even not enter into a contract at all, a customer is unlikely to enter into an entirely new contract in response to a small price rise.

II.1604. On the supply side there appears to be much greater ability to switch between different types of building works. The extent of supply side substitutability is determined by the extent to which firms can commence supply of a particular type of construction work quickly and without significant extra cost in response to a small increase in prices. Where this can be done within a year and without incurring substantial sunk costs¹⁷²⁸, it is likely that the products fall within the same relevant market.

- II.1605. To assess the extent to which different types of construction work fall within the same relevant market, questionnaires were sent to all of the construction companies under investigation in order to obtain information regarding the characteristics of the firms, the categories of work and sectors they work in, and the constraints they face to expanding output and the geographic reach of their work (Suppliers' Survey, reproduced in Annex D (1)). Questionnaires were also sent to all clients of Suspect Tenders both in the public and private sector to find out what types of construction work were being undertaken in these tenders and what factors affected the choice of contractors during the selection process (Clients' Survey, reproduced in Annex D (2)). Responses to the Suppliers Survey showed that all parties under investigation were general contractors that are defined in the Building Contracting – Key Note report as 'establishments engaged in building and civil engineering work (not sufficiently specialised to be classified elsewhere in the construction industry) and demolition work'.¹⁷²⁹
- II.1606. As discussed in the Statement, the OFT has constructed a database from the information supplied in the responses to the Suppliers' Survey and the Clients' Survey namely, the OFT's Construction Database (2007), from which the tables set out below have been prepared.
- II.1607. It is relevant to note that the data analysis was carried out in relation to the 244 Alleged Infringements as set out in the Statement. Despite the fact that not every Alleged Infringement is found to be an Infringement in this Decision and minor variations in the classification of certain specific infringements, given the size of the database and the comparatively minor reduction in the number of Parties since the Statement the OFT considers that the results of the survey and analysis of the Alleged Infringement data remain valid support for the definition of the relevant product and geographical markets in this case.
- II.1608. Similarly, this section incorporates many statistics and references to reports published during the year prior to the issue of the Statement. The OFT has received no information to suggest that more recent statistics or reports would indicate the need for changes to the OFT's definitions of relevant product and geographic markets in this case.
- II.1609. Table 1 provides some summary statistics taken from these initial surveys. These show a large variation in the size of companies under investigation, from those with a turnover of less than £1 million to those with a turnover of over £2 billion. Responses to the Suppliers' Survey indicated that some were small regionally based construction companies whilst others were much larger national construction companies albeit that many of these were structured on a regional basis.
- II.1610. Contract values for Alleged Infringements¹⁷³⁰ also varied considerably from as little as £2,215 to £8.5 million, with an average value of £1.2 million. In addition, it can be seen from Table 1 that the practice of collusive tendering was spread across both public and private sector tenders with 57 per cent of Alleged Infringements falling within the public sector.¹⁷³¹ Amongst Alleged Infringements just over 60 per cent were accounted for by new building ('NB') works, 34 per cent by repair, maintenance and improvement ('RMI') works and the remainder involved an element of both NB and RMI. The survey also provided an indication of the distances that suppliers are prepared to travel to undertake work. Although amongst the Alleged Infringements there was quite a wide variation in distance travelled by suppliers from less than a mile to over 114 miles, on average they travelled around 23 miles.

¹⁷²⁸ Market Definition - Competition Law Guideline published by the OFT in December 2004 states that 'In this context sunk cost is a cost incurred on entering a market that is not recoverable on exiting the market'.

¹⁷²⁹ Building Contracting; Key Note – Market Report 2006 (ISBN 1-84168-984-X), Definitions.

¹⁷³⁰ Alleged Infringements are those tenders that were selected from the pool of Suspect Tenders, for inclusion in the Statement, as described in paragraphs II.1495 to II.1506 above

- II.1611. The Infringements relate to tendered contracts both in the private sector and the public sector. One respondent described the tendering process as follows, *'The process for price-based competitive tendering in the construction industry is that the client (e.g. the Council or Local Authority) issues a number of invitations to specific companies to tender. The number can vary significantly – there can be as few as 2 or 3 or as many as 20 or 25 for example.'*¹⁷³²

¹⁷³¹ 'Public work' is work for any public authority such as government departments, public utilities, nationalised industries, universities, the Post Office, new town corporations and housing associations. 'Private work' is for a private owner or organisation or a private developer and includes work carried out by firms on their own initiative. It includes work where the private sector carries out the majority of the risk/gain, i.e. in principle, all PFI contracts are private. See ONS sector classification guide - <http://www.statistics.gov.uk/StatBase/Product.asp?vlnk=7163>.

II.1612. A tender is defined in a book on Procurement in the Construction Industry as 'an offer to carry out work for a stated price'.¹⁷³³ The book notes that for the client, tendering traditionally involves both selecting a contractor and agreeing a price. Under selective tendering the 'Client chooses to restrict competition to a selected number of contractors (usually between four to six) and this commonly involves a pre-qualification procedure for those wishing to make a tender list.¹⁷³⁴ The OFT notes that both traditional and selective (non-traditional) tendering constitute a tender process, and price is a part of the process regardless of which procurement method is utilised (see paragraphs II.1682 and II.1687 below).

II.1613. Table 2 below shows that for the Alleged Infringements the number of firms tendering ranged from two to 13, and the average number of firms tendering was 5.4.

II.1614. Clients were also asked in another part of the survey to rank certain factors in terms of their importance to whether a supplier was included on a tender list. Table 1 in Annex D (3) indicates that a key factor in selecting a contractor to bid for a tender is that it can demonstrate that it has already carried out a similar type of work. Firms can demonstrate that they have a proven track record in a particular type of work by showing in their promotional material that they have undertaken similar work for the client or other clients.¹⁷³⁷ The latter is an important factor as clients sometimes delegate the tendering process to local firms of architects or quantity surveyors. In many cases they will seek the advice of local firms of architects or quantity surveyors at the point where they are choosing their final tender list as these firms have experience of which contractors have carried out similar types of projects.

¹⁷³⁵ Public sector housing category includes the construction of student accommodation for public sector clients.

¹⁷³⁶ Private sector housing category includes the construction of student accommodation for private sector clients.

¹⁷³⁷ Firms provided examples of their promotional material in their market definition responses. For example, documents provided by Bodill and Loach in their market definition responses to the questionnaire, OFT Document Reference 5431 and 5692, contained pictures of a number of recently completed projects.

II.1615. The type of work undertaken by a building contractor is characterised in two main ways. Firstly, the work is undertaken within a particular sector as shown in the Construction Statistics Annual report.¹⁷³⁸ Secondly, the work involves either NB or RMI. The extent to which this categorisation impacts on the definition of the relevant market is discussed below.

The relevant product market

II.1616. As indicated above, each Infringement involves the provision of construction works which fall into a certain sector (for example, Retail). However in defining the relevant product market it is necessary to consider whether competition is constrained at the sector level or whether building firms actually compete according to the broader category of work (for example, Commercial). BERR categorises the following five main categories of construction work:

Public Sector Housing ('Public Housing');
Private Sector Housing ('Private Housing'); Infrastructure;
Commercial; and Industrial.

II.1617. Infrastructure falls outside the scope of this investigation. Parties to the investigation are general building contractors and consider that infrastructure projects are principally undertaken by firms specialising in civil engineering work that have specialist skills needed for these types of projects. One respondent to the survey indicated that the infrastructure market is dominated by much larger companies that operate nationally – and involve contracts of a large value.¹⁷³⁹ Another respondent considered 'Infrastructure to be a market for civil engineering firms only' and not for a general construction company like itself.¹⁷⁴⁰ There were no infrastructure projects amongst the Alleged Infringements and hence infrastructure falls outside the scope of this investigation.

II.1618. The BERR statistics show that each sector can be assigned to a particular category of work, along the lines indicated in Table 3 below.

II.1620. Some contracts cover more than one sector, for example where a tender involves a development that includes both retail outlets and private housing. A high proportion (67 per cent) of the Alleged Infringements fell within the commercial category of work, amongst which education, office and health work were well represented. The next most important categories of work were private sector housing and public sector housing which accounted respectively for 15 per cent and 13 per cent of all Alleged Infringements. Table 4 shows that some Alleged Infringements involved both NB and RMI. For example, of the 72 Alleged Infringements in the education sector, 51 contained only NB, 15 contained only RMI and 6 contained both NB and RMI elements of work.

¹⁷⁴¹ Note the term 'Social Housing' is often used in the industry instead of 'Public Housing'.

Extent of supply side substitutability

- II.1621. The ability and ease with which construction companies can reposition their work is dependent on the extent to which the skills and resources required for different types of construction work are generic. To the extent that specialist skills and/or experience are required for certain types of construction work this would support a segmentation of the market by sector or category of work.
- II.1622. To assist in the OFT's assessment of the relevant market the Suppliers' Survey included questions aimed at determining the time required to switch between sectors of work and what factors influenced the time required.¹⁷⁴³ The survey results revealed some variation between respondents, with 43 per cent of respondents who answered the question saying they were capable of entering another sector of work within a year, while 57 per cent said it would take longer.¹⁷⁴⁴ In addition 15 respondents reported that they were not considering new sectors of work – these are excluded from the analysis, shown in Table 5 below. For some this reflected the fact that they had been trading in a particular sector for a considerable time. For example one respondent noted that to start up in a new sector 'would require them to "break into" new markets that are outside the trading areas we have operated in since our inception [...] [C]'.¹⁷⁴⁵
- II.1623. Amongst the companies that considered that there are no significant barriers to entry and that they could easily enter a new sector were larger companies that were already active in a number of sectors. These companies said they could quite easily start work in a new sector by buying in specialist skills through sub contractors and suppliers. One respondent indicated that it is the norm in construction where typically 80 to 90 per cent of the cost is accounted for by 'bought in' services and products.¹⁷⁴⁶ Some of the responses pointed to the ease of switching to another sector within the public sector, which may reflect the fact that they were already conversant with public sector procurement methods. However, other construction companies considered that to enter a new sector successfully requires careful planning and the availability of suitable management and staff resources, and that in many cases it is impeded by the need to show a proven track record.

II.1624. Table 5 summarises the survey results for those companies that considered it would take more than a year to change sector.¹⁷⁴⁷ To the extent that the time to change sectors is greater than one year, then the factor represents a barrier to switching and contributes to a partitioning of the market. Many of the factors identified as constraining the switching of sectors apply equally at the category of work level. It is notable that those companies that considered there were no significant barriers to entry were already active in all sectors. The factors constraining the ability to switch are considered in greater detail below.

1. Management and staff resources

II.1625. The most significant factor influencing the time required by building contractors to change sector of work is the availability of management and staff resources. The constraint on bidding for new work can be not only having insufficient resources to provide estimates and bid for projects but also having the resources needed to carry out the work. One respondent already active in a number of sectors said that the only constraint was being given the opportunity to tender at a time when there was capacity in the estimating department and that costs were minimal.¹⁷⁴⁸

II.1626. Some respondents identified skill shortages as a constraint to switching to a new sector. For example, one respondent noted that 'Social Housing is generally not regarded as being as technically demanding as other types of construction and our staff would have difficulties if forced by us to retrain in order to undertake other work types'.¹⁷⁴⁹ It indicated that staff would leave, resulting in a need to incur considerable recruitment costs at a time when there was a severe skill shortage, making it almost impossible to replace large numbers of staff.

¹⁷⁴⁷ Table 5: Percentage figures show the proportion of respondents who believed switching sector would take more than a year and identified the factor as influencing the time required to change sector of work.

¹⁷⁴⁸ Admiral's market definition response to question 6 of questionnaire, OFT Document Reference 5749.

¹⁷⁴⁹ Richardson Projects' market definition response to question 7 of questionnaire, OFT Document Reference 6473.

2. Ability to obtain new clients

II.1627. A lack of a proven track record was also seen as a constraint to switching. One respondent already active in the public housing sector said that it would be difficult to switch to private sector housing as clients have preferred contractors with ongoing relationships that have been established over many years.¹⁷⁵⁰ An established track record in a closely related sector can make it easier to switch. An example of this was given by a company which was already active in private sector housing and considered that it would be easy and cost little or nothing for it to switch to public sector work.¹⁷⁵¹ Other constraints were identified such as a lack of a rating on Constructionline¹⁷⁵² acting as a barrier to entry.¹⁷⁵³

3. Additional finance/capital required

II.1628. The level of financing required can differ according to the sector or category of work. One respondent considered that financial risks are such that in particular markets clients will insist on a contractor providing significant increased levels of cover or larger than normal surety bonds.¹⁷⁵⁴ Opportunities in new sectors may require a move away from undertaking general construction work obtained by competitive tendering or negotiation to speculative developments with increased levels of capital required. Speculative developments are those where a company provides finance, buys land and develops it before finding the purchaser for the development.¹⁷⁵⁵

4. Need to undertake market research

II.1629. Survey responses also pointed to the need to undertake market research. One respondent noted that, 'to establish a credible presence in a new market sector, one has to know and to have formed a view as to our ability to work with them, the probable procurement routes, the nature and extent of competition, the potential risk/reward earnings ratios, the extent of available supply chain to support the initiative, and to have established that the company has the management experience capacity and competence to work in such sectors over the medium to long term'.¹⁷⁵⁶ Another respondent indicated that a switch to retail work would require the allocation of suitable marketing resources and would be difficult as the competition was established and very keen.¹⁷⁵⁷

5. Need to incur marketing costs

II.1630. In addition to market research a building company must incur marketing costs, which are usually considered to be sunk costs in that they cannot be recouped by the firm if entry to the sector is unsuccessful. Survey responses indicated that marketing costs can be substantial, amounting to £100,000 or more.

6. Lead in time on specialist materials

II.1631. To switch to a new sector of work a company must have access to the supply chain for materials needed for that type of construction. One respondent indicated that 'the company does not have established relationships with the supply chain in other categories. It would take considerable time to build such relationships. In addition, there are considerable pressures on the existing resources due to the high level of construction activity within the country and this would be likely to have detrimental effect on the company's ability to secure resources'.¹⁷⁵⁸

7. Difficulties in entering certain sectors

(a) Housing

II.1632. For some construction companies switching between more closely related sectors such as private sector housing and public sector housing can be fairly easy. However, some companies noted that the ability to switch can be constrained by a lack of access to a key resource such as suitable land upon which to build.

(b) Healthcare

II.1633. One respondent indicated that despite a turnover in excess of £40 million they found it difficult to enter the Healthcare market as 'larger schemes seem to be let under PFI, a facility we do not offer, and the smaller schemes tend to be bundled up and let under Framework arrangements'.¹⁷⁵⁹

(c) Defence

II.1634. A number of responses to the survey indicated that the defence sector was one market which companies found difficult to enter. Reasons given included lengthy pre-qualification procedures, opportunities that were strictly limited due to the location of defence sites, and the fact that most of the work was already covered by long term contracts. Defence work is largely undertaken through Regional Prime Contracts, whereby one large construction company is responsible for undertaking all of the contracting within a defined geographic region. If the Prime Contractor is unwilling or unable to allocate its work to another contractor other local firms will not secure defence works. It is notable that most of the respondents worked as main contractors which may explain their reluctance to work in the defence sector if it meant working for the Prime Contractor.

8. Costs associated with switching

II.1635. For work within different sectors to fall within the same relevant market, companies wishing to switch to a different sector must not incur significant extra costs. The responses to the OFT's questionnaire indicated that the costs of switching vary quite considerably, and in certain cases can be considerable, although relative to total turnover the costs are on average a small proportion. Table 6 shows the costs associated with change of sector of work.

¹⁷⁵⁸ Bullock's market definition response to question 6 of questionnaire, OFT Document Reference 6849.

II.1636. Some quite small companies saw minimal costs (i.e. costs related solely to tendering) of entering a new sector and the only constraint was having capacity in the estimating department.¹⁷⁶⁰ As indicated above certain larger firms saw few constraints to switching and considered the costs of switching to be moderate. One respondent indicated that *'they could start operations in another customer sector within the construction and housing categories (for example, defence) fairly quickly, within a year, and at modest cost (typically recruiting a few individuals with experience and/or knowledge of the customer and their specific requirements – say an investment of around £100,000.)'*¹⁷⁶¹

II.1637. However certain large companies in their responses identified substantial upfront investment costs to expansion into a new sector of £1 million excluding any specific investment in plant, equipment and people.¹⁷⁶² Even some of those companies such as Thomas Vale that already operated in all categories of work and most sectors, identified investment costs of £0.5 million associated with a requirement to set up a new regional office.¹⁷⁶³ Another company that was then active in public sector housing refurbishment considered that it faced no barriers to access the public sector. Costs of entry were considered to be minimal, as it could be undertaken on a controlled gradual basis and new work could be secured using existing marketing and estimating resources with initial entry costs likely to be in the region of £10,000 to £50,000.¹⁷⁶⁴

II.1638. It is clear from the above that views on the ease of moving between different sectors of work were highly varied, with the majority of companies suggesting that it would take longer than a year, citing principally management and staff resource issues and the ability to obtain new clients, but a significant minority suggesting that less time would be needed. Although the evidence is mixed, particularly in relation to the costs associated with such moves, the OFT has decided to take a cautious approach in relation to this issue, and concluded that for the purposes of this case each sector constitutes a different relevant product market.

Switching between categories of work

- II.1639. In reaching the conclusion set out in the previous section, the OFT also considered the extent to which it would be appropriate to adopt a wider market definition than sector of work, based on the categories of work undertaken by firms. As regards public housing work and private housing work there is no distinction between category and sector. However, for the remaining categories of work the surveys supplied evidence of constraints to switching at the sector level, as described in the previous section, which would not lend support to the market being defined more widely.
- II.1640. When contractors were asked whether there were constraints to moving between categories of work, as shown in Table 7 below, many of the factors identified were the same as those mentioned in response to the questions regarding constraints to switching to different sectors. 29 per cent of respondents who answered the question said they were capable of entering another category of work within a year, while the majority (71 per cent) said it would take longer.¹⁷⁶⁵ Amongst those firms that considered that they could switch within a year to another category of work were those that were already active in most categories of work. Sometimes this response was given by quite small firms who said they were quite flexible and could subcontract work. However, it was not clear to what extent this reflected quite a small scale of entry rather than a sustainable entry strategy which could represent a competitive constraint on the market.
- II.1641. Table 7 shows that amongst those factors that constrain switching, availability of management and staff resources was the factor most cited as a constraint. Lack of opportunities given geographic location could also be a constraint. Significant costs of switching were also identified including costs relating to establishing that the market is available and its long term viability, research into the availability of specialist staff/equipment, producing marketing material and establishing sources for procuring tender enquiries, recruiting related personnel and redundancy or training costs for other staff, estimated by some companies at around £100,000 to £250,000 without taking into account loss of revenues from existing workstreams. One respondent noted that there was little construction activity in the industrial category within its geographic location.¹⁷⁶⁶

II.1642. In addition, views sometimes differed, for example a company that was already involved in private housing indicated that it was relatively easy to switch to public housing work. However, another respondent with a turnover of £38.5m¹⁷⁶⁷ already active in public housing indicated that it 'would not operate in the private housing or infrastructure markets as we do not have the relevant skills or track record. We do not have a land bank suitable for private dwelling development'.¹⁷⁶⁸

II.1643. Switching to industrial construction work can also pose challenges. One respondent with a turnover of £28 million¹⁷⁶⁹ indicated that it had tried to get into industrial construction but with little success as it was not able to match the competitive price levels of established operators, it lacked a track record of successful previous delivery, and that these contracts tend to be of higher value, well outside its financial operating range.¹⁷⁷⁰ Another respondent active in private housing, commercial construction and industrial construction with a turnover of £41 million¹⁷⁷¹ indicated that any significant change in core categories of work would require changes in senior management, recruitment of new personnel and retraining of existing employees, and additional finance and capital, market research, assessment and product marketing expenditure estimated to cost in the region of £250,000 each year.¹⁷⁷²

II.1644. The OFT has therefore concluded that it would not be appropriate to adopt a wider market definition than sector of work.

II.1645. In the following sections the OFT considers the possibility of further subdividing the markets according to other factors, namely type of work, size of contract and method of procurement.

Type of work

NB and RMI

- II.1646. The Infringements also relate to two principal types of work, namely NB and RMI work. The BERR statistics define RMI as work which is either repairing something which is broken, or maintaining it to an existing standard.¹⁷⁷³ The BERR statistics define Housing RMI as including repairs, maintenance, improvements, house/flat conversions, extensions, alterations, redecorations etc on existing housing. However, the BERR statistics define Non-housing RMI as including only repairs, maintenance and redecoration to existing buildings, because in the Non-housing area, extensions, major alterations/improvements, site preparation and demolition are classified by BERR as NB.
- II.1647. In response to the Statement, some Parties argued that the fact that the distinction between NB and RMI is recognised by the Office of National Statistics ('ONS') is prima facie evidence that the OFT should segment the market according to type of work in this case.¹⁷⁷⁴ However, as discussed above in paragraphs II.1600 to II.1602, the OFT has an approach to market definition in cartel cases that follows a logical set of steps and that has been supported by the CAT and the Court of Appeal. If the results of this approach are supported to a greater or lesser extent by ONS statistics then this may provide additional foundation for the OFT's conclusions but the OFT does not consider that such statistics would normally provide the sole or primary basis for market definition, particularly where the OFT has other evidence and analysis available to support its approach.
- II.1648. As discussed in the Statement, the OFT is of the view that in relation to substitutability between NB and RMI, on the demand side it is clear that clients request building contractors to supply either NB or RMI and there is little possibility of substitution. However, on the supply side, contractors may be able to switch amongst these different types of work. The extent to which contractors would switch in response to a small increase in price will determine whether different markets are identified for each sector split into NB and RMI. In summary, the OFT has concluded that although it is unlikely that NB and RMI are demand side substitutes, these types of work are supply side substitutes and the markets for each sector should not therefore be split between NB and RMI, for the reasons outlined below.

- II.1649. Table 8 shows that amongst the Parties, while a minority specialised in either NB or RMI, the vast majority (89 per cent) of surveyed companies carried out both types of work. This would suggest that it is relatively easy for a firm to switch between different types of work. To examine this further the responses are broken down to assess the extent to which firms specialised by type of work (NB or RMI) at the category level. Table 9 shows the extent to which the Parties specialised between NB and RMI according to the category where work was undertaken. The headings show the percentage of suppliers' work that falls within NB – this figure can be deducted from 100 per cent to obtain the percentage that falls within RMI. For example, it can be seen that only 15 per cent of suppliers providing services to the private sector housing category undertook zero per cent of their work in NB, and therefore focused 100 per cent of their work on RMI.

II.1650. Table 9¹⁷⁷⁵ shows that some firms did choose to operate predominantly in NB or RMI according to the category of work. For example amongst respondents there was quite a high level of specialisation in private housing NB with 31 per cent of respondents being engaged in NB only. In the industrial category of work 28 per cent specialised in NB. Amongst those respondents active within public housing, almost 30 per cent specialised in RMI. However, in every category of work the majority of firms undertook at least some work in both NB and RMI, and overall as outlined in Table 8 above, the vast majority of firms surveyed carried out both types of work.

II.1651. In the Statement, the OFT also considered why sectoral specialisation was apparent from some of the responses to the Suppliers' Survey. One respondent, with a turnover in excess of £30 million and specialising in RMI, indicated that the company's then present structure was specifically dedicated to the refurbishment and repair market.¹⁷⁷⁶ It stated, 'For example our Site Managers would not be able to use equipment to set out new buildings nor would our bricklayers be able to work economically on the line with large quantities of brickwork'. It noted that 'Our market is very specialised, we are working in peoples' houses and not on a building site. We employ specialist labour and subcontractors'.¹⁷⁷⁷ Another smaller contractor specialising in RMI noted that 'Breaking into new sectors is very difficult as we are established locally in refurbishment of these areas. Architects and surveyors tend to only consider us for schemes of this nature. As noted previously to enter into new build markets on a large scale would lead to us replacing trained staff with subcontractors to be competitive'.¹⁷⁷⁸

- II.1652. Another respondent remarked that a move into RMI might take more than a year as 'this is a highly specific market, based on large volumes of low value orders for works undertaken on a 24/7 basis, and does not align itself well with resources of a construction contractor'.¹⁷⁷⁹ This company undertook improvement work in private housing and commercial construction, suggesting that for this company, the latter work was a closer substitute to construction activity than repair and maintenance work. Another company mentioned the specialist nature of property services work which it delivered through a separate business unit. It noted that property services work grew rapidly in the 1990s as a result of local authorities' decisions to outsource their maintenance departments.¹⁷⁸⁰
- II.1653. However, despite the particular reasons that some firms may have had for specialising in either NB or RMI, it is clear from the overall results as set out in Tables 8 and 9 that for most firms there is the potential for supply side substitutability with regard to type of work. The OFT does not therefore accept the contentions from some Parties that there are significant barriers to switching due to NB and RMI work requiring access to significantly different types of assets, skills and experience.¹⁷⁸¹ The OFT has instead concluded that NB and RMI are supply side substitutes, for the reasons explained below.
- II.1654. First, as outlined above and illustrated in Table 8, by far the majority of firms surveyed operated in both NB and RMI. Only 4 per cent of firms surveyed exclusively carried out NB work, whilst only 7 per cent of the firms surveyed carried out exclusively RMI work.¹⁷⁸² On this point, the OFT notes that Haymills has argued in its representations on the Statement that the fact that most firms undertook both NB and RMI work does not make them supply side substitutes.¹⁷⁸³ William Woodsend and Baggaley & Jenkins also contended that the fact that many construction firms chose to operate in both segments does not mean that a segmentation between NB and RMI should not occur.¹⁷⁸⁴ The OFT accepts that although a company may perform two different operations, this does not prove definitively that these operations are supply side substitutes and hence part of the same relevant market. However the OFT does not agree with Haymills' assertion that 'this evidence tells us nothing about supply-side substitution'.¹⁷⁸⁵ When the overall majority of firms perform two activities, the logical conclusion is that there are close complementarities between the two activities. That is, the performing of one activity makes it easier and less expensive to perform the other activity. As set out above, the OFT has found that over 89 per cent of companies surveyed were active in both RMI and NB.

This evidence is entirely consistent with NB and RMI activities being supply side substitutes.¹⁷⁸⁶

II.1655. The second reason for the OFT's conclusion that NB and RMI are supply side substitutes is that there is no clear distinction evident either from the BERR categories or from within the body of Infringements in this case that would allow clear categorisation between types of work. The Infringement types range from obvious RMI projects to obvious NB projects, but there are many projects in between that are relatively arbitrary to classify as one or the other. For example, it is not clear at what point an extension moves away from being an improvement and becomes a new build. This is especially the case when one considers renovations or conversions of public buildings into flats. This is pertinent because the same skills needed for a large scale conversion of a public building (RMI) are needed for building a new one (NB). This indicates that a clear segmentation into different markets as some Parties have suggested, is unwarranted. This blurring of the different types of work can be seen from the evidence set out below.

- (a) First, the BERR categories¹⁷⁸⁷ do not provide a clear distinction between NB and RMI projects. For example, BERR classifies all 'Improvements, Extensions and Alterations' projects within the public and private housing sectors as RMI. However it classifies the same 'Improvements, Extensions and Alterations' projects as NB if they are in the non-housing sector. Furthermore, even within housing projects BERR classifies houses converted to other uses as NB, but housing converted to flats, as RMI. In essence, it is far from clear that the same skills are not required for both such projects.
- (b) Secondly, there are a substantial number of Infringements within this Decision which could be classified either as RMI or NB depending upon relatively arbitrary interpretations. For example, in the Suppliers' Survey, four firms indicated that they had not worked in NB Housing or NB Non-Housing; however, using the BERR definition, all of these Parties had Infringements which could be classified within precisely these segments.¹⁷⁸⁸ This indicates that even the Parties find it difficult to distinguish whether a project is NB or RMI.
- (c) Thirdly, it is not possible to make a clear distinction between the two types of work based on the segment in which the Infringements took place. There were substantial numbers of Infringements in both the RMI and NB segments and many of these could be ambiguously categorised. For example, Infringement 220, 'External Structural Refurbishment Works', could be interpreted as either RMI or NB depending on the extent of the structural work.

¹⁷⁸⁶ A possible exception to this might be if there was an asymmetric constraint between NB and RMI activities. That is, whilst companies performing NB activities may be able easily to enter RMI activities, the opposite may not be true. If this were the case one would expect to see a high number of companies that only carry out RMI work, but a very low number of companies that only carry out NB work. In fact, as shown in Table 8, there is very little difference. Only seven per cent of companies completely specialise in RMI whilst only four per cent completely specialise in NB. This does not suggest that the constraint is asymmetric or that supply side substitution would not flow from RMI to NB.

¹⁷⁸⁷ Construction Statistics Annual 2007 – BERR – August 2007.

¹⁷⁸⁸ B&A (Infringements 95 and 229), Beaufort (Infringement 152), Dukeries (Infringement 207) and Francis (Infringement 234).

- (d) Fourthly, in several Infringements, the fact that the tender preparation work for both RMI and NB Infringements was carried out by the exact same individuals within particular Parties is also consistent with RMI and NB being supply side substitutes. Of the ten companies which had Infringements in both RMI and NB, to the OFT's knowledge at least six involved a common individual working on both RMI and NB tenders.¹⁷⁸⁹ Thus it was the same individual making the proposal for both RMI and NB tenders. This suggests that the relevant individuals in all of these companies had expertise in tendering for both RMI and NB work. Furthermore, in most cases the Parties subcontracted out much of the more specialised work to electrical, plumbing, roofing etc subcontractors, making it even less likely that specialist skills would be needed for NB or for RMI projects.

II.1656. In response to the Statement, the OFT also received a number of representations from Parties claiming that their own business operations illustrated the barriers to supply side substitution. For example, Dukeries contended that because the responsive property maintenance division of its company does not carry out the type of RMI work typically performed by building contractors, the turnover of that division should be deducted from the relevant market.¹⁷⁹⁰ On this point, it is important to note that the OFT defines the relevant product market according to 'what is the relevant product market affected by the infringement'¹⁷⁹¹, and in this instance it does not follow that the fact that the work of this Party's property maintenance division does not involve a competitive tender in some instances, would mean that the turnover of its responsive property maintenance division should be deducted from penalty calculations.

II.1657. Another example is Haymills, which stated that it operates NB and RMI as two separate operations under separate managements, with RMI now undertaken by a separate subsidiary, and that these divisions are subject to different tendering processes. Haymills further stated that the two operations use separate staff with different skill sets, require estimators with different skills and experience, use two different types of equipment and require different management skills. Lastly, it stated that NB contractors usually need to provide a completion bond, and a firm with little experience in NB would find this more difficult to obtain. It further stated that some of the barriers to switching from NB to RMI can be overcome by hiring equipment and using sub-contractors, but that this would not overcome all barriers to switching. A H Willis also claimed that despite the fact that it participates in both types of work, this is carried out through separate segments of its business and there is little scope for substitution between these types of work.¹⁷⁹²

II.1658. Although it is clear that some companies do choose to structure their operations according to a split between NB and RMI, the OFT considers that the majority of companies are at least able to carry out both types of work, and the facts set out in paragraphs II.1649 to II.1655 above lead to the conclusion that there is supply side substitutability between NB and RMI.

¹⁷⁹⁰ Written representations of Dukeries, 27 June 2008, paragraph 64.

¹⁷⁹¹ Argos Limited and Littlewoods Limited v OFT and JJB Sports plc v OFT [2006] ECWA Civ 1318, paragraph 170.

¹⁷⁹² Written representations of A H Willis, 27 June 2008, paragraphs 20 and 27.

- II.1659. In their representations on the Statement, two Parties contended that the OFT should differentiate between NB and RMI due to some examples they gave of contractors choosing or refusing to bid for a particular project because the type of work was more or less suited to the work profile of that company.¹⁷⁹³ However, the OFT considers that the fact that in a few instances contractors expressed a preference based on type of work does not indicate more general difficulties in supply side substitution as these parties contended. A preference for type of work, taking into consideration resource, skills sets and experience of a firm, does not mean that the company, with sufficient financial incentive, would not be able to supply the service at short notice or without incurring substantial sunken costs. Indeed, the fact that the contractor in each example given by these Parties gave consideration to undertaking different types of work means that it may have remained a consideration for the company to undertake the work.
- II.1660. In response to the Statement, some Parties made representations that although they agreed with the OFT that there is little possibility of demand side substitution according to type of work, they disagreed that NB and RMI are supply side substitutes, citing significant barriers to supply side substitution.¹⁷⁹⁴ For example, Durkan submitted that the OFT's provisional conclusion in the Statement that NB and RMI form part of the same market, disregarded the lack of demand side substitution between NB and RMI and attached too much emphasis to alleged supply side substitution between the two sectors.¹⁷⁹⁵ John Sisk and Sicon also stated that the recognition by the OFT that there is little possibility for demand side substitution coupled with the fact that there are limits on supply side substitutability indicate that segmentation of the market should occur.¹⁷⁹⁶ Durkan submitted that, according to the OFT's guidelines, 'supply-side substitution should not be taken into account "unless it is reasonably likely to take place and already has an impact by constraining the supplier of the product or group of products in question"'.¹⁷⁹⁷
- II.1661. However the OFT does not consider that its guidelines preclude the OFT from considering supply side substitutability in this case. The paragraph cited by Durkan goes on to state 'What matters ultimately is that all competitive constraints from the supply side are properly taken into account in the analysis of market power. Whether a potential competitive constraint is labelled supply side substitution (and so part of market definition) or potential entry (and so not within the market) should not matter for the overall competitive assessment. If there is any serious doubt about whether or not to account for possible supply side substitution when defining the market and calculating market shares, the market will be defined only on the basis of demand side substitutability, and the supply side constraint in question will be considered when analysing potential entry.' It is clear from this that the OFT has a duty to consider supply side substitutability in relation to the definition of the market in this case, in order to ensure that all competitive constraints from the supply side are properly taken into account.

¹⁷⁹⁴ For example, see representations of A H Willis, 27 June 2008, paragraph 30; written representations of William Woodsend, 27 June 2008, paragraph 43; and written representations of Haymills, 27 June 2008, paragraph 4.

¹⁷⁹⁵ Written representations of Durkan, 27 June 2008, paragraph 35.

¹⁷⁹⁶ Written representations of John Sisk and Sicon, 27 June 2008, paragraph 147.

¹⁷⁹⁷ Written representations of Durkan, 27 June 2008, paragraph 37, referring to OFT Market Definition Guidelines (OFT 403), December 2004, paragraph 3.18.

II.1662. Durkan also submitted in its representations that in the Statement the OFT 'further notes that its Survey showed that a move into the repair and maintenance sector may take more than a year, because 'this is a highly specific market... and does not align itself well with resources of a construction contractor ''.¹⁷⁹⁸ However this interpretation of the Statement is incorrect. It is clear that the OFT did not necessarily adopt the above or even consider it to be representative of Parties' responses to the Survey. The above quote was merely a reproduction of one Party's opinion on the question relating to supply side substitutability in the survey, and is not indicative of the OFT's conclusion on this point.

II.1663. In conclusion, for all of the reasons outlined above, the OFT has concluded that the vast majority of firms are capable of carrying out both NB and RMI activities within a reasonable period of time, and that there is no justification for further segmentation of the market by type of work.

Segmentation of education sector

II.1664. In its response to the Statement, Milward stated that although it is broadly comfortable with regard to the market definition adopted by the OFT in the Statement, it believes that 'the "Education" sector within the "Commercial" category of work should be split further so as to distinguish between projects for schools and those for universities and other providers of tertiary education'.¹⁷⁹⁹ Milward argued that it would take a construction company some time to be able to switch from providing works for schools to works for universities (or vice versa). Milward claimed that this is due to the different procurement process often involved and the size of the contract. Milward argued that the OFT should therefore segment out 'education' contracts which relate to universities.¹⁸⁰⁰

II.1665. However, for the reasons outlined in paragraphs II.1687 to II.1688 below, the OFT has concluded that traditional and non-traditional methods of procurement belong in the same market, as evidence on both the demand and supply sides shows that consumers and suppliers are able to switch between procurement methods without incurring significant switching costs. Further, as outlined in paragraphs II.1666 to II.1672 below, the OFT has concluded that there is no clear segmentation of the market according to size of contract and that there is therefore no justification for separating the market in relation to this factor. For these reasons, the OFT concludes that there is sufficient supply side substitutability between schools and universities and therefore does not exclude universities from the education sector.

Size of contract

II.1666. Table 10 shows that there are a number of constraints that prevent companies from bidding for work, one of the most significant of which is contract size. There were 118 respondents to this question in the survey. Amongst respondents to the market definition questionnaire some argued that the market should be segmented by size of contract. As shown above in Table 1 the Parties in the Statement operated across a wide variation in the size of Alleged Infringements, ranging from £2,215 - £22.3 million with an average of £1.0 million.

II.1667. The range of contract values undertaken by construction companies varies considerably and even quite small firms undertake some contracts with high values and large firms undertake some low value contracts. Charts 1 and 2 in Annex D (4) show the extent of overlap between small and large values in terms of the size of contracts undertaken by construction companies. From this it is clear that it would be difficult to delineate the relevant markets in terms of contract size. Indeed it seems that contract size reflects primarily the type of construction work being undertaken and that it is this that differentiates the market rather than simply the value of the contract.

II.1668. Responses to the questionnaires indicated that some companies did split their internal organisation into small works and large works. However, this varied quite widely and there was no clear distinction as to where the line was drawn between small and large works and it was more a reflection of the individual way that a firm chooses to operate rather than a market-wide distinction upon which inferences about market segmentation might be drawn.

II.1669. Ranges of contract values differed amongst the larger construction companies. There were some large companies where the minimum contract value was quite low, for example, Haymills which had a turnover of £106.7 million¹⁸⁰¹ in 2006 and a minimum contract value of [.....] [C].¹⁸⁰² Other large companies had much higher minimum contract values, for example, Willmott Dixon which had a turnover of £279.6 million¹⁸⁰³ in 2006 and a minimum contract value of [.....] [C].¹⁸⁰⁴ However, even some medium sized companies had quite high minimum contract values, for example R Durtnell with a turnover of £43.1 million¹⁸⁰⁵ in 2006 and a minimum contract value of [...] [C].¹⁸⁰⁶

II.1670. The maximum contract values for some companies were very high, for example Mowlem had contracts of up to [...] [C]¹⁸⁰⁷ and Balfour Beatty had several contracts in excess of [...] [C]¹⁸⁰⁸ (both of which were Public Private Partnership ('PPP') contracts). One respondent noted that 'common sense dictates that companies such as Balfour Beatty and Mowlem would be less likely to appear on a tender list for a contract of relatively low value; and smaller companies such as Wildgoose would be unlikely to appear on a tender list for a large contract value. These are, however, merely assumptions which are sometimes incorrect. For many reasons a company may choose to operate outside its usual sector e.g. to maintain an existing client relationship'.¹⁸⁰⁹

II.1671. As indicated above, in infrastructure work the market is dominated by companies that operate nationally and involves contracts of a large value. Similarly, for industrial construction involving high value contracts to build oil or gas works it is the nature of the work rather than the value of the contract that segments the market. The above suggests that there may not be a clear segmentation of the construction market by contract size and that instead contract size is often a reflection of the category of work being undertaken.

II.1672. From the foregoing, the OFT has concluded that there is no clear segmentation of the market according to size of contract and that there is therefore no justification for separating the market in relation to this factor.

Method of procurement

II.1673. The OFT has considered the extent to which non-traditional methods of procurement (which include negotiated, framework, partnered and two stage bids) might be in separate product markets from traditional methods of procurement (single stage open tenders).

II.1674. Negotiated arrangements are sometimes part of a framework arrangement where a contractor is one of a number of contractors with whom a client has decided to work on a regular basis. Partnered arrangements are an approach used by contractors and the client to work together to maximise the effectiveness of each of the participants' resources. The approach is based on mutual objectives, an agreed method of problem resolution, and an agreement to achieve continuous improvement by working together. Two-stage bids occur where a number of contractors are provided with a limited amount of information on a project by a client and are asked to provide the client with an outline of the contract programme and an estimate of preliminary costs, overheads and profit margins. The client then selects his contractor based on the information provided and then finalises the details and price of the project with this contractor.

II.1675. Table 11 sets out the time required and costs of bidding for both traditional and non-traditional tendered contracts. Whilst the time taken and costs are greater for non-traditional tendered contracts than for traditional tendered contracts, such additional costs will be recoverable through the price set for the project. Hence on cost grounds there are limited reasons to consider that building contractors would be prevented from entering into such arrangements. In addition the Survey responses showed that many building contractors engage with the market place through a combination of competitive tendering, framework and negotiation. This suggests that on the supply side there is a high degree of substitution and that these arrangements do not segment the market.

II.1676. In response to the Survey, some Parties suggested that the market might be segmented according to the type of contract entered into. For example, one respondent to the Survey suggested that a distinction should be drawn between traditional building contracts and design and build contracts. The main difference between these types of contract is the risk that the contractor takes in relation to the responsibilities for the design.¹⁸¹¹ In response to the Statement, some Parties have also argued that design and build contracts should form a separate market from single stage tendering based on the different types of contracts involved.¹⁸¹² For example, Galliford Try stated that two stage Design and Build tenders are not substitutable for traditional methods of procurement. This point is addressed below.

¹⁸¹⁰ Note that only a few respondents provided detailed cost breakdown by method of procurement so the figures shown in this table are indicative rather than statistically representative of those surveyed.

¹⁸¹² For example, written representations of Galliford Try, 27 June 2008, paragraph 3.11.

II.1677. Under traditional contracts the contractor is responsible for the project as specified in the contract in accordance with the information from the client and works to an agreed timetable. The client will provide design and drawings and normally the bills of quantities which the contractor will use to prepare his quote. Under traditional contracts the architect is responsible for designing the building and certifying the work done. In response to the Survey, building contractors pointed to a growing market for design and build projects where it is the contractor, not the architect, who is responsible for ensuring that the design of the building conforms to the criteria and specification set out by the client. One building contractor explained, 'This involves the client providing prospective construction companies with an "Employer's Requirements" document giving details of the performance and use requirements of the building. This leaves the contractor to select materials and methods of construction to create a building meeting the requirements. The details are then returned to the client with a build programme and brief cost analysis'.¹⁸¹³

II.1678. Table 11 indicates that the cost differential between traditional and design and build projects is not that great and is presumably reflected in the final price that clients have to pay for this type of building work. Increasingly many of the companies surveyed undertake building works using both traditional and design and build contracts and the OFT does not consider that the distinctions between them are sufficient to justify a further segmentation of the market.

The different characteristics of traditional and non-traditional methods of procurement and the scope for cover pricing

II.1679. In their responses to the Statement, some Parties argued that non-traditional methods of procurement and traditional methods of procurement are not in the same relevant market due to their different characteristics.¹⁸¹⁴ Some Parties claimed that non-traditional methods of procurement could not be affected by cover pricing as the commercial reality is that there is no scope for giving or receiving cover prices in respect of non-traditional methods of procurement because these methods are not tendered works.¹⁸¹⁵ For example, Simons Group stated that cover pricing relates exclusively to competitive tendering.¹⁸¹⁶ Several companies claimed¹⁸¹⁷ '...the practice of cover pricing, by definition, only arose in relation to work that was put out to tender by clients. The practice of cover pricing has no conceivable relevance to non-tendered work, such as work in which a client negotiated directly with a selected construction company and for which no tenders were invited'.¹⁸¹⁸ They further stated that *'The OFT should have found different markets within each of the product markets for tendered and non-tendered work and that only the former is a market affected by the infringements in question.'*¹⁸¹⁹

¹⁸¹⁹ Written representations of Interclass, 27 June 2008, paragraph 19.

II.1680. In response to this, although the Parties have asserted that it is not possible to enter into a collusive agreement when using non-traditional methods of procurement, they have not provided sufficient evidence to the OFT in order to substantiate this claim. Indeed, six of the Infringements occurred by way of non-traditional methods of procurement.¹⁸²⁰ Four of these Infringements were design and build contracts and two of them were two stage bids. This provides conclusive proof that it is possible to enter into collusive agreements for non-traditional methods of procurement.

II.1681. Parties also contended that a non traditional procurement process is based largely on reputation and contains no price element, and therefore cannot be subject to cover pricing.¹⁸²¹ Parties stated that negotiated arrangements are not tendered works and there are very different conditions of competition between a tendered and non-tendered work. John Sisk and GMI argued that the practice of cover pricing only arose in relation to tendered work¹⁸²² and Durkan stated that in a negotiated arrangement there are no competing parties.¹⁸²³ Stainforth also stated that the turnover for relevant markets should exclude negotiated contracts which are not tendered for¹⁸²⁴, whilst Willmott Dixon claimed that the commercial reality is that it is not possible to engage in cover pricing in relation to projects that are not tendered.¹⁸²⁵ Ackroyd & Abbott and Harlow & Milner also represented that cover pricing cannot affect 'negotiated contracts and therefore these cannot fall within the market affected by the infringement'.¹⁸²⁶

II.1682. The OFT does not accept that non-traditional methods of procurement contain no consideration by the client or supplier of the cost of the contract, either by way of example of past contracts completed by the client or an estimation of future costs. Although the selection process for a negotiated agreement or a framework agreement involves various elements of quality and reputation, there is usually some form of price competition at some stage of the process.¹⁸²⁷ In any event, if the reputational aspect does indeed form a large part of entering into a framework or negotiated agreement, it follows that if a company has previously, or at the time of entering the negotiated or framework agreement, engaged in cover pricing, that reputation will be largely a result of work completed, including work that was subject to cover pricing. This link illustrates that cover pricing does affect negotiated and framework agreements.

II.1683. Wright (Hull) also stated that its in-house works were not procured, therefore there was no element of competition for the construction element.¹⁸²⁸ Therefore, it claimed that the OFT should exclude development work carried out in-house by the company. However, for the reasons outlined above in the 'Type of work' section¹⁸²⁹, the OFT does not consider that in-house construction turnover should be excluded from relevant turnover in the context of penalty calculations unless its inclusion would result in double counting.¹⁸³⁰

II.1684. Finally, even if it were not possible to directly enter into cover price agreements using non-traditional methods of procurement, the relevant question when determining market segmentation is whether entering into cover price agreements using traditional methods of procurement could have resulted in higher prices for non-traditional procurement methods. This question turns on whether traditional and non-traditional methods of procurement are in the same relevant market and is considered below.

Demand and supply side substitutability between different methods of procurement

II.1685. A number of Parties argued that non-traditional methods of procurement should be in separate product markets from single-stage open tenders, citing a lack of substitutability which they said reflected the different customers' requirements and appetite for risk in each case.¹⁸³¹

II.1686. For the purposes of market definition, the relevant question is whether there exists sufficient demand and supply side switching from traditional methods of procurement, such that a hypothetical monopolist controlling all traditionally procured contracts, could not profitably raise the price of these contracts by 10 per cent. To address this, the OFT has considered evidence as set out above and in the Statement, on both the supply and demand side.

II.1687. On the demand side, the evidence outlined above shows that non-traditional methods of procurement are likely to constrain the price of traditional methods for the reasons set out below.

- (a) First, evidence presented to the OFT indicates that customers weigh up their choice of procurement methods on the basis of the best value for money, taking account of the price, time, reliability and risk of the process.¹⁸³² Evidence presented to the OFT indicates that all procurement methods have some element of price negotiation in them.¹⁸³³ It may be that non-traditional procurement methods such as framework and negotiated agreements are more costly than traditional procurement methods to use initially, however non-traditional methods of procurement may cost less in the longer term.¹⁸³⁴ The PCS Paper published by the OGC in 2007 indicates that the principle behind adopting a procurement method should be on the basis of 'value for money over the life of the facility and not the initial capital cost ¹⁸³⁰ See paragraph 4 of the Schedule to SI2000/309.

¹⁸³³ For example oral representations of Hobson & Porter, 23 July 2008 and Framework Agreements OGC Guidance September 2008 at paragraph 4.

¹⁸³⁴ The PCS paper at page 14 states "The expectation is that savings in cost and time will come from the following: • no requirement for rebidding of each individual project; • continuous improvement by transferring learning from one project to another; • improved working relationships; • continuous workflow; • speed of procurement."

alone'.¹⁸³⁵ It states that '... a traditional procurement process may result in the lowest cost contract but a non traditional procurement process may mean that there is more scope for the overall risk of the project to be transferred to the supplier, as well as improved working relationships, continuous workflow and better value for money for the client.'¹⁸³⁶

- (b) Secondly, the evidence provided to the OFT does not indicate that there are significant barriers to switching methods of procurement for customers.
- (c) Thirdly, even if there were small switching costs, most customers would find it profitable to switch because a five to ten per cent increase in the price of a non-traditional method of procurement could amount to over £100,000 on some of the large projects involved in the Infringements.¹⁸³⁷
- (d) Fourthly, evidence has been presented to the OFT indicating that in April 2000, the government introduced a policy promoting projects to be procured by non-traditional methods when more efficient than traditional methods. Customers operating in the public sector are aware of this policy. The OFT understands that a majority of procurers who previously conducted tenders using traditional methods of procurement have switched to non-traditional methods. Further, a significant number of respondents to the Statement have suggested that procurers that previously conducted traditional tenders have now shifted to open tenders.¹⁸³⁸ For example, the Construction Confederation has stated that 'in recent years, there have been major changes in public procurement practices. Bids are increasingly being judged on best value rather than lowest price and long term relationships governed by framework contracts are fast replacing cut price competition for individual contracts. This rapid trend towards two (or more) stages of tendering, which now dominates the way in which construction work is procured in the UK...'¹⁸³⁹ It has not been suggested to the OFT that procurers had any difficulties with this transition, which strongly suggests that traditional and non-traditional projects are likely to be demand side substitutes.
- (e) Fifthly, some of the Infringements in this Decision show that the same procurers can and do use different methods of procurement. For example, Infringements 110 and 144 illustrate that Tuntum Housing

¹⁸³⁵ The PCS Paper at page 4 outlines that the same outcomes can be achieved by different types of procurement models: "Using a single contractor as the sole point of responsibility to a public sector client for the management and delivery of a construction project on time, within budget (defined over the lifetime of the project) and fit for the purpose for which it was intended, including demonstrating during the initial period of operation that operating cost and performance parameters can be met in accordance with a pre-agreed cost model". The paper further states that "Traditional contract strategies, where the design and construction are provided separately, should only be used where it can be clearly demonstrated that this approach will provide better value for money than the preferred integrated procurement routes highlighted above."

¹⁸³⁷ The average value of all of the Alleged Infringements is equal to approximately £1.2 million.

¹⁸³⁸ For example, written representations of Durkan, 27 June 2008, paragraph 33; and written representations of John Sisk and Sicon, 27 June 2008, paragraph 137.

¹⁸³⁹ Written representations of Construction Confederation, 16 June 2008, paragraph 2.5.

Association has used both traditional and non-traditional methods of procurement.

II.1688. Further, on the supply side, non-traditional methods of procurement are likely to constrain the price of traditional methods for the following reasons:

- (a) First, at the time of the Infringements, the OFT understands that there were no significant barriers to switching procurement methods for suppliers.¹⁸⁴⁰ In addition, the OFT understands that there were no regulatory barriers that impeded firms from freely supplying under a range of different procurement methods, nor have the respondents to the Statement provided any evidence of such barriers.
- (b) Secondly, as stated above, in April 2000 the government introduced a new policy to promote projects to be procured by non-traditional methods of procurement where they are more efficient than traditional methods. Firms working in the public sector have been aware of this policy. The OFT understands that procurers which previously conducted bids using traditional methods of procurement have switched to non-traditional methods. The OFT also understands that firms managed this transition with minimal problems. It follows that traditional and non-traditional methods of procurement are likely to be supply side substitutes.
- (c) Thirdly, as with the demand side, even if there were small switching costs most suppliers would find it profitable to switch. A hypothetical monopolist which controlled all traditionally tendered projects increasing the price by five to ten per cent would effectively increase the price of a project by hundreds of thousands of pounds.¹⁸⁴¹ Such an increase would rapidly generate interest from non-traditional tendering suppliers to enter into the traditionally tendered projects.
- (d) Fourthly, the Statement (and the evidence outlined above) reports several instances of the same companies using both traditional and non-traditional tenders. This evidence is consistent with suppliers being able to switch from one method to the other with relative ease.

II.1689. In light of the foregoing, the OFT has concluded that traditional and non-traditional methods of procurement belong in the same market. First, there were Infringements in both traditional and non-traditional segments. Second, the evidence on both the demand and supply side shows that consumers and suppliers are able to switch between procurement methods without incurring significant switching costs. Further, the OFT has been provided with evidence that both consumers and suppliers have switched in the past, as well as evidence that consumers and suppliers can, and do, use the two methods. Parties' representations that non-traditional methods of procurement contain no price element are unsubstantiated and as described above, even if this were the case, the pertinent question is whether non-traditional and traditional processes are part of the same relevant market. Given the factors identified by the OFT, it would be expected that any increase in the price of a traditional tendering process would result in an increase in the price of a non-traditional tendering process through either demand or supply side forces.

¹⁸⁴¹ See average infringement value at footnote 1837.

Partnered agreements

II.1690. One area where activity of building contractors may be more restricted is for PFI projects or other major PPP programmes such as NHS Local Improvement Finance Trust¹⁸⁴² and NHS ProCure 21¹⁸⁴³, due to high start up costs and the need to tie up capital for long periods of time.¹⁸⁴⁴ Some respondents to the Survey indicated that PFI projects are in a separate product market as the competition that occurs is focused on the bid to run and invest in the PFI project, rather than the subsequent construction work that is undertaken.¹⁸⁴⁵ PFI projects represent one of a number of PPP projects which, according to the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister, bring the public and private sector together in a long term partnership for mutual benefit. PFI is a procurement mechanism by which the public sector contracts to purchase quality services on a long term basis, in order to take advantage of private sector management skills incentivised by having private finance at risk.¹⁸⁴⁶ PFI projects are often of long duration, 10 or 20 years and cover all elements of a major contract e.g. finance, build, operation of completed project and provisions of long-term building services.¹⁸⁴⁷

II.1691. Smaller building contractors may be prevented from directly bidding for PFI projects as they do not have sufficient financial strength to provide the guarantees required by funders.¹⁸⁴⁸ The cost of bidding for PFI/PPP contracts is greater and the negotiation phase more protracted. For example, one respondent estimated that for PFI/PPP related construction contracts the cost of bidding is one per cent of the value of the contract to preferred bidder stage, increasing to three per cent to financial close. Time costs are estimated at an initial 12 to 18 weeks plus a further eight to 10 weeks for contractual clarification.¹⁸⁴⁹ Tendering costs for complex projects are greater when account is taken of the likelihood of winning the contract. Professor Hughes' book indicates that 'Taking the estimates of costs of tendering previously mentioned of ½-1 per cent for traditional contracts and 2-3 per cent for those involving finance, and assuming that for traditional contracts contractors obtain one in six contracts bid for and one in four for complex projects, then the total costs of obtaining work becomes 3-6 per cent for traditional work and 8-12 per cent for complex projects'.¹⁸⁵⁰

II.1692. Smaller construction companies may nevertheless participate in PFI/PPP contracts as sub-contractors. For example, one company noted that in recent years it had acted as a sub-contractor to a main contractor in 'strategic' PFI contracts in the education sector with three projects with a total value of £11 million. In each case the sub-contract was for a complete package of building works (not a specialist trade), for example for the provision of a complete new school or accommodation block that formed part of a larger project.¹⁸⁵¹ However these smaller companies do not enter directly into the bidding process and hence are unlikely to exert a competitive constraint.

II.1693. In conclusion, for more complex projects such as larger PPP projects including PFI projects, supply side substitution by construction companies may be more limited and as such for the purposes of this investigation the OFT has concluded that such contracts fall outside the relevant market definition.

Conclusion on market segmentation by method of procurement

II.1694. The OFT has examined arguments that a narrower relevant market should be adopted in this investigation based on the different methods of procurement. With the exception of large PPP projects (inclusive PFI projects), where lack of financial resources and expertise restrict supply side substitution, the remaining methods of procurement are accessible to most building contractors. For the reasons set out above, the OFT has concluded that for the purposes of this investigation it is appropriate to exclude large PPP projects from the definition of the relevant market, but that all other traditional and non-traditional methods of procurement should be in the same market.

Conclusion on the relevant product market

II.1695. The OFT has considered the possibilities for demand and supply side substitution between sectors of work. On the demand side there is limited possibility for demand side substitution, since a customer is unlikely to enter into an entirely new contract in response to a small price rise. In terms of supply side substitution between sectors of work there is evidence that almost 60 per cent of suppliers that would consider switching said it would take longer than a year to switch sector. These companies considered that to enter a new sector successfully requires careful planning, the availability of suitable management and staff resources and the need to show a proven track record. A significant minority, 13 per cent, indicated that they had no intention of switching. Amongst those who find it easier to switch were larger companies many of whom are already active in a number of sectors.

II.1696. Although it may be possible to group some sectors of work in the same market given the findings in the previous paragraph, the OFT is taking a cautious approach, and has concluded that in the case of the Infringements, the relevant product market can be defined in terms of the identifiable sector of work.

II.1697. As regards further segmentation of the product market according to other factors, namely type of work, size of contract and method of procurement, however, for the reasons set out above, the OFT does not consider that such segmentation of the relevant market can be supported.

II.1698. Within these relevant product markets all construction works are included with the exception of those relating to PFI projects or other major PPP programmes. The Survey indicated that with the exception of large private public partnership tenders the costs of bidding is unlikely to be a constraint on switching sector. Even for PPP projects it is not the absolute cost that constrains the ability to compete but having the financial strength and established reputation required to bid for such projects. For these reasons the relevant market comprises all construction works in the sectors listed below with the exception of those relating to large PPP projects.

II.1699. The OFT therefore concludes that for the purpose of calculating penalties each of the Infringements falls into one of the relevant product markets listed below.

- Private Housing
- Public Housing
- Defence
- Education
- Entertainment (including Leisure)
- Garages
- Health
- Office
- Places of Worship
- Police/Fire & Rescue
- Prisons
- Retail
- Distribution
- Other Industrial Buildings
- Warehousing

II.1700. The table in Annex B sets out the relevant product market and the relevant geographic market (as to which, see further below) into which the OFT considers each of the Infringements falls, and which forms the basis of the starting point for the OFT's calculation of the penalty for each of the Parties in respect of each of those Infringements.

The relevant geographic market

II.1701. The relevant geographic market comprises the area in which the undertakings concerned are involved in the supply and demand of products or services in which the conditions of competition are sufficiently homogeneous and which can be distinguished from neighbouring areas because the conditions of competition are appreciably different in those areas.¹⁸⁵²

II.1702. The OFT considers that a building contractor is likely to compete most directly with other building contractors that offer comparable building services. The survey results indicate that building contractors competing for the tenders that were under investigation prefer to work near to their offices, suggesting that competition is relatively localised and is likely to form into a series of regional markets. Table 12 provides a breakdown of the Alleged Infringements by administrative boundaries using information taken from the Clients' Survey.¹⁸⁵³

II.1703. Although the OFT recognises that competition does not take place according to administrative boundaries, for the purpose of calculating relevant turnover and determining penalties, it is necessary to adopt a precise definition of the market boundaries. Administrative boundaries can be defined in terms of Government Office Regions ('GOR') according to the classification set out by the ONS.¹⁸⁵⁴ Since 1996 these regions have become the 'primary classification for the presentation of regional statistics' (National Statistics (2004)). These regions do not have an average size, as they are formed of complete unitary authorities.¹⁸⁵⁵ Table 1 shows that over 50 per cent of the Alleged Infringements involved construction work for public authorities that had structural links to GOR. It is notable that a number of larger companies that were under investigation were structured on a regional basis on a broadly similar basis to GORs. This approach has been adopted in several cartel construction cases involving the roofing sector¹⁸⁵⁶ and there are no reasons to believe that any other set of geographic aggregations would give more reliable results. In response to the Statement, some Parties argued that the OFT has 'arbitrarily' adopted GOR to define the geographical regions. However, the OFT believes that the GORs do represent an appropriate basis for the relevant geographical markets in this case and the specific representations on this point are addressed below.

II.1704. Table 12 shows that the regions where the greatest numbers of Alleged Infringements were located were East Midlands, West Midlands and Yorkshire & Humberside, which is to be expected given that these were the areas on which the OFT's investigation was centred. However some Alleged Infringements were found in the East of England, London, North East, North West and South East regions showing that the practice of cover pricing was pervasive across different regions and sectors of the construction industry, as discussed in Section IV.B (General Section on Cover Pricing) below.

The demand side

- II.1705. As with the product market, the objective of market definition is to identify substitutes which are sufficiently close that they would prevent a hypothetical monopolist of the Focal Product in one area from profitably sustaining prices above competitive levels.¹⁸⁵⁷ The process starts by looking at the Focal Area, which in this case would be defined for each Infringement centred on where the work was supplied and determined by the distance within which suppliers participating in the tenders were drawn.
- II.1706. The Clients' Survey provided a list of those building contractors that were asked to bid for each Alleged Infringement. Using geographic postcode data this information was used in combination with MapInfo¹⁸⁵⁸ to show the GOR from which building contractors bidding for the projects were drawn.¹⁸⁵⁹ Annex D (5) provides a summary for each Alleged Infringement of the administrative regions from which competitors were drawn. This shows that for some Alleged Infringements competitors were drawn solely from the region in which the project was located. For other Alleged Infringements building contractors were also drawn from neighbouring administrative regions which may reflect the geographic location of the project with respect to administrative boundaries.
- II.1707. The Clients' Survey results summarised in Table 13 below indicate that almost 65 per cent of Suspect Tenders were located within 25 miles of the nearest office of the building contractor bidding for that project. This is quite a high percentage and suggests that competition is relatively localised. This result is confirmed by further analysis of the Clients' Survey of the distances between those competing for Suspect Tenders. Responses to Schedule A of the Clients' Survey provide information concerning which building contractors competed for each of the 527 Suspect Tenders. Using geographic mapping techniques, information on the postcodes of competitors was used to determine the distances between competitors for each Suspect Tender. Table 14 shows that over half of the companies bidding for tenders were located within 25 miles of each other rising to over 80 per cent within a 50 mile radius. Almost 18 per cent of those building contractors asked to tender came from within a 10 mile radius. One reason for this is that clients often include in tender lists firms that have been recommended by local firms of architects and other professionals for whom they have worked.¹⁸⁶⁰

- II.1708. Suppliers generally have a preference for work situated close to their main areas of operation, both in terms of convenience and also because where it is further away the company incurs additional costs. One respondent to the Survey

¹⁸⁵⁷ See OFT Guideline 403 'Market Definition', December 2004, paragraph 4.1 to 4.10.

¹⁸⁵⁸ For the geographical mapping, Mapinfo Professional 7.8 was used. The underlying road data is the Streetline 2004 road network. Drive times were calculated using Drivetime 6.2. The distances given are by road, rather than as the crow flies, and are those associated with the fastest drive time between two points.

indicated that it set pricing in terms of local market conditions such that if work was further away the company had to pay travelling time etc to its employees.¹⁸⁶¹ In Table 13, Suppliers' Survey results are based on the distance travelled between the suppliers and the construction projects. The table shows that building contractors chose to undertake work relatively close to their offices with almost 70 per cent of work taking place within 25 miles and that only in certain exceptional circumstances were they prepared to travel longer distances.

II.1709. A number of respondents to the Suppliers' Survey pointed to competition occurring at a regional level. For example, Henry Boot submitted that 'Whilst some of HBC (UK)'s competitors may not operate within the same regional boundaries, we would submit that the likely regional markets would be the Liverpool/Manchester area as one region (HBC UK) NW and Yorkshire/East Midlands is another (HBC (UK) NE) with (GWD) being a combination of the two regions'.¹⁸⁶³ Mansell noted that its businesses were defined either by geographic region and/or by nature of work.¹⁸⁶⁴ Its general definition of 'geographic area' for each business unit was work within a 50 mile radius or within 1 ½ hours' travelling time, and the projects for each business area would be carried out within such a radius.¹⁸⁶⁵

II.1710. Amongst those surveyed there were a few companies that operated on a national basis. One respondent noted that it operated nationally principally in the commercial sector where its main area of business activity was the construction of motor dealerships.¹⁸⁶⁶ Another respondent noted that retailers tend to roll out an image across their outlets and therefore use shop fitting companies who travel throughout the country rather than more regional contractors.¹⁸⁶⁷ That said, competitor analysis from the Clients' Survey shows that for the majority of the Alleged Infringements in the retail sector,

II.1711. For the Suppliers' Survey, information on the location of competitors was obtained from responses to a question asking them to provide a list broken down by sector, category of work and geographic location (as appropriate) of those companies who they considered to be their main competitors. The Suppliers' Survey responses showed that of the building contractors under investigation, almost 25 per cent of their competitors were drawn from within a 10 mile radius, 60 per cent within 25 miles and 86 per cent within 50 miles.

II.1712. The responses given by firms to the question relating to the basis for setting contract prices also supported the view that the markets are local or regional, rather than national. Table 15 shows that the majority of building contractors priced on the basis of local market conditions or identified factors on which they based pricing which were local in nature (e.g. firms' costs at local level).

Table 15: Extent to which pricing reflects local market conditions

II.1713. The view that the relevant geographic market is local or regional rather than national is supported by comments given by contractors. For example, one firm's response noted that 'pricing is set purely on local market conditions with each scheme pricing to reflect the individual characteristics of the scheme. There are no national pricing arrangements'.¹⁸⁶⁸ Another respondent remarked that all contracts were priced on a bespoke basis, based solely on local market conditions.¹⁸⁶⁹ Another large building contractor indicated that competitive tenders were priced based on local market conditions and never determined at a national level.¹⁸⁷⁰ Another respondent explained that the price of each contract was built up on a bottom-up basis from the cost of subcontractors, labour, materials and plant, to which a risk-adjusted margin was added. It indicated that a large majority of the cost elements was sourced either locally or regionally and pricing was largely on the basis of local or regional market conditions and was not determined nationally.¹⁸⁷¹ One respondent noted that 'the closer the contract is to London the higher a premium is charged again because of increased costs of travelling and extent of wear and tear on equipment'.¹⁸⁷²

- II.1714. Further evidence of the regional nature of the market is provided by the analysis prepared by independent consultants, Regional Construction Research ('RCR').¹⁸⁷³ RCR prepares quarterly bulletins that monitor the activity of construction industry on a regional basis.¹⁸⁷⁴ RCR also prepares forecasts for the annual value of output, in constant prices, for each of the 13 regions up to three years ahead with national forecasts up to four years ahead. The forecasts are shown by nine sectors of activity for each region, six for new work and three for refurbishment. The detailed forecasts broken down by region and sector indicate the extent to which the activity of construction companies can be analysed on a regional basis.¹⁸⁷⁵
- II.1715. As mentioned above, in response to the Statement, a number of Parties argued that the OFT's provisional conclusions did not properly reflect its extensive market research (as reproduced above), suggesting that it 'arbitrarily' adopted GORs to define the geographical regions.¹⁸⁷⁶ R Durnell argued that the OFT divided England into nine large groups of administrative regions for the sake of convenience.¹⁸⁷⁷ The OFT does not accept these contentions, for the reasons set out below. The analysis carried out by the OFT led directly to the OFT's conclusion that the adoption of GORs for geographical market definition in this case was both appropriate and justified.
- II.1716. As previously discussed, the starting point for the relevant geographic market comprises the area in which the undertakings are involved in the supply and demand of construction services. The relevant geographic market is distinguished from neighbouring areas because the conditions of competition are different in those areas. The relevant geographic market is defined by taking into account both the competitive constraints faced by the building contractors and the necessity to standardise boundaries in order to facilitate a practical geographic market definition that does not involve defining separate markets for each Infringement.

II.1717. In summary, the OFT has concluded that the GORs are a good approximation of the geographic market for the following reasons:

- (a) Over half of the Alleged Infringements involved construction work for public authorities that had structural links to GORs.
- (b) A number of larger companies were structured on a regional basis that was similar to GORs.
- (c) The use of GORs has a precedent in the roofing sector.¹⁸⁷⁸
- (d) Firms compete on a regional basis rather than on a national basis.
- (e) The use of GORs is a practical alternative to defining individual geographic markets for each Infringement.

II.1718. In their responses to the Statement, some Parties argued that the GORs are greater in radius (one party quoted East of England as 48.5 miles) than evidence from the Statement would suggest to be representative¹⁸⁷⁹ and questioned the relevance of the GORs for market definition.

II.1719. In response, the OFT has further considered the adoption of GORs in this case and has concluded that the GORs are indeed an appropriate and valid basis for its geographic market definition. The OFT's conclusions are informed by the evidence outlined below.

- (a) First, although Haymills noted that the East of England GOR is equivalent in size to a catchment area with a radius of 48.5 miles, this GOR is in fact one of the largest regions in England and on average the GORs are 40.6 miles in radius. A conservative estimate of the survey data indicates that approximately 18 per cent of an average firm's construction jobs lie between 25 and 40 miles from the firm's location.¹⁸⁸⁰ Given this is nearly one-fifth of an average construction firm's jobs, it is highly likely that the firm will provide a competitive constraint within this area (i.e. 25 to 40 miles from its location – equivalent in size to the average GOR). Expanding the area to 50 miles, on average 30 per cent of a construction firm's jobs lie between 25 miles and 50 miles. Once again it is highly likely that, given this number, firms travelling outside of their 25 mile radius will constitute an important competitive constraint. Furthermore, 92 per cent of all construction firms surveyed had completed at least one job between 25 miles and 50 miles from their respective locations.

¹⁸⁸⁰ On average 63 per cent of firm jobs are below 25 miles, whilst 93 per cent are below 50 miles. Making the conservative assumption that the jobs are uniformly distributed across the distance from 25 miles to 50 miles, 81 per cent would be distributed between 0 and 40 miles.

- (b) Secondly, in considering the differences between GORs and in particular the largest GORs, it is important to consider the possibility of wider relevant markets in areas with low population density. It follows that in lower density areas construction firms have to travel longer distances in order to address the same population. For example, the data from the suppliers' survey shows a weak but positive relationship between the size of the GOR and the distance that construction firms travel. This is consistent evidence with the hypothesis that firms are likely to be willing to travel further in larger GORs than in smaller GORs, and hence the GORs are a useful approximation to the relevant geographic market.
- (c) Thirdly, the relevant question in considering whether 25 miles to 50 miles is relevant to the geographic market definition is not the number of clients that firms already have, but the willingness of firms to travel if there is a five to ten per cent relative price difference between the 0 to 25 mile and 25 to 50 mile areas. The data in the Tables above represents the actual distance travelled by firms to jobs without a price differential, not the firms' willingness to travel given an additional price differential. The fact that nearly all (92 per cent) of the construction firms surveyed were already accepting jobs from clients beyond 40 miles (and up to 50 miles), suggests that up to 50 miles is a reasonable geographic market definition. This is particularly significant when one considers that the survey does not factor in the increased willingness to travel if the job provided five to ten per cent more revenue.
- (d) Finally, in geographic markets, chains of substitution are particularly important when determining the extent of the relevant geographic market. These chains of substitution can arise from the demand side, or the supply side. Even if firms were only willing to travel 25 miles, the existence of chains of substitution is likely to lead to a wider geographic market definition of 50 miles. For example, a customer might be located between two firms, on the 25 mile boundary of each of them. When tendering for a contract the customer can consider whether to accept an offer from the firm 25 miles to the east of it, or from the firm 25 miles to the west of it. Each firm knows that it faces competition from the other firm, and hence the firms' prices are constraining each other even though they may be 50 miles apart. Furthermore when it is also taken into account that 92 per cent of firms travel up to 50 miles, this suggests that the actual geographic market may actually be significantly larger (up to 100 miles radius) than the 40 miles implied by the average GOR. For this reason the market definition defined in the GORs is likely to be a conservative estimate of the actual constraints that firms apply. This was supported by representations from Balfour Beatty, which considered that competition for major projects takes place at a national level, and that there is no clear delineation between regions within which smaller companies operate and, in effect, a chain of substitution operates across different regions.¹⁸⁸¹

¹⁸⁸¹ Written representations of Balfour Beatty, 27 June 2008, paragraphs 11.17 and 11.19.

- II.1720. In addition to the above, certain Parties argued in their representations that the OFT provided evidence in the Statement that geographic markets were local, yet adopted a regional approach to defining relevant geographic markets. These Parties argued that the two terms are not interchangeable.¹⁸⁸² These Parties also stated that the OFT had presented a GOR region as being narrower than a local market when they argued that the reverse was the case. In response, the OFT considers that in the light of the above analysis and because of the appropriateness of utilising GORs, the interchangeability of the terms 'local' and 'regional' would have no effect on the geographical market definition.
- II.1721. Several Parties suggested in their representations that the OFT should conduct a thorough analysis of market definition in relation to each Infringement.¹⁸⁸³ Robert Woodhead argued that the Infringements affected isolated, discrete contracts and had no effect on the market in general, and therefore claimed it was inappropriate for the OFT to adopt a company's turnover in the relevant market as the basis for step 1 of the penalty calculation.¹⁸⁸⁴ It further stated that the relevant geographic markets identified by the OFT were markets of convenience based on administrative boundaries and had the effect of discriminating against it due to the fact that most if not all of its turnover was derived from the East Midlands. It stated that those undertakings which derived their turnover from a concentrated area would be similarly affected, whereas large companies with a wider geographical spread of turnover would benefit. It claimed that such a definition breaches the principle of equal treatment.¹⁸⁸⁵
- II.1722. However, the OFT considers that analysis of the market individually in relation to each Infringement is both excessive and unwarranted in a Chapter I case.¹⁸⁸⁶ Further, the OFT considers that no breach of the equal treatment principle has occurred as the GORs are an appropriate and valid approximation for the relevant geographic market definition for each of the Infringements and each of the Parties. Therefore, the reason for selecting GORs is objectively justified.
- II.1723. Taking each of the points discussed above in paragraph II.1719 both separately and together, the OFT has concluded that the relevant geographic market is likely to be at least 50 miles in radius and hence the GORs are a good approximation. Indeed, the OFT considers that the GORs may well be a conservative approximation for the true relevant geographic market of each construction firm.

Conclusion on the relevant geographic market

- II.1724. The OFT concludes from the above analysis that, in the case of the Infringements, the relevant geographic market is localised and that appropriate regional markets for the purposes of calculating penalties can be identified based on administrative boundaries defined in terms of GOR.
- II.1725. The OFT has therefore concluded that each of the Infringements falls into one of the following geographic markets:

¹⁸⁸² Written representations of Linford, 26 June 2008, paragraph 5.5; written representations of Greswolde, 27 June 2008, paragraph 4.6; and written representations of Bullock, 26 June 2008, paragraph 4.1.

II.1726. The table in Annex B sets out the relevant product market and the relevant geographic market into which the OFT considers each of the Infringements falls, and which forms the basis of the starting point for the OFT's calculation of the penalty for each of the Parties in respect of each of those Infringements.

Conclusion on Definition of Relevant Markets

II.1727. In summary, the OFT has maintained its position as set out in the Statement and concluded that for the purpose of calculating penalties each of the Infringements falls into one of the relevant product markets based on the sectors listed below. This is without prejudice to the OFT's discretion to adopt a wider or narrower definition in any subsequent case, in particular where further evidence becomes available.

- Private Housing
- Public Housing
- Defence
- Education
- Entertainment (including Leisure)
- Garages
- Health
- Office
- Places of Worship
- Police/Fire & Rescue
- Prisons
- Retail
- Distribution
- Other Industrial Buildings
- Warehousing

II.1728. In reaching this conclusion it must be noted that the relevant markets may well be broader than an individual sector of work and there is no evidence sufficient to support defining a relevant market that is narrower than an individual sector of work. Within the relevant product markets all construction works are included with the exception of those relating to major PPP programmes.

II.1729. In summary, the OFT has maintained its position as set out in the Statement and concluded that for the purpose of calculating penalties each of the Infringements falls into one of the regional geographic markets listed below defined in terms of GOR. This is without prejudice to the OFT's discretion to adopt a wider or narrower definition in any subsequent case, in particular where further evidence becomes available.

- East Midlands
- West Midlands
- Yorkshire & Humberside
- North East
- North West
- East of England
- London
- South East

II.1730. Annex D (5) shows that competitors for each Infringement may be drawn from more than one GOR. However the relevant geographic market for the purpose of calculating penalties for each Infringement as shown in Annex D (4) is defined in terms of the administrative region within which that construction tender is located. Whilst the geographic market is likely to be wider than the GOR in which the work is located a cautious approach is being adopted given the difficulties of defining precisely the exact geographic boundaries for such a large number of Infringements. However what is clear is that whilst it may well be possible to adopt a wider geographic market definition for each Infringement, there is very little evidence to support a narrower market definition.

II.1731. The table in Annex B sets out the relevant product market and the relevant geographic market into which the OFT considers each of the Infringements falls, and which forms the basis of the starting point for the OFT's calculation of the penalty for each of the Parties in respect of each of those Infringements.

Reclassification of market for certain Infringements

II.1732. In response to the Statement, the OFT received a number of representations on the classification of the Infringements set out in Annex B of the Statement.

II.1733. In light of these responses, the OFT conducted a review of its market classifications and considered that a number of changes should be made to those classifications. For this reason, the OFT issued two Supplementary Statements of Objections in relation to the reclassification of Infringements ('Market Definition Supplementary Statements') to those Parties affected by the reclassification ('the Affected Parties'). In some instances, the OFT took account of new information and/or evidence, in which case the additional information and evidence was set out in the relevant Supplementary Statement. In other instances, the OFT simply altered its appreciation of the information and evidence already relied on in the Statement.

First Market Definition Supplementary Statement – 18 March 2009

II.1734. On 18 March 2009, the OFT issued the first Market Definition Supplementary Statement in respect of the following Infringements, Affected Parties and market classifications:

II.1735. The reasons for each reclassification were as follows.

Infringement 9 – Police Fire & Rescue to Office

II.1736. In the Statement, the OFT classified this Infringement as falling within the product market for 'Police/Fire & Rescue'. In its response to the Statement, ARG stated that '...this tender related to the conversion of a first floor flat for office use which was submitted to Nottinghamshire County Council and should be classified in the Office sector...'.¹⁸⁸⁷ In this respect, the OFT notes that paragraph IV.996 of the Statement also stated that the tender related to the conversion of a flat for office use. The OFT therefore considers that Infringement 9 should be classified as falling within the product market for 'Office'.

Infringement 20 – Public Housing to Private Housing

II.1737. In the Statement, the OFT classified this Infringement as falling within the product market for 'Public Housing'. In its response to the Statement, Greswolde stated, 'As the Sir Josiah Mason Trust [the client organisation involved in this Infringement] is a private charity organisation funded by private donations, Greswolde submits that AI 20... should instead be categorised as 'private housing''.¹⁸⁸⁸ Having considered Greswolde's representations, the OFT considers that Infringement 20 should be classified as falling within the product market for 'Private Housing'.

Infringement 29 – Private Housing to Public Housing

II.1738. In the Statement, the OFT classified this Infringement as falling within the product market for 'Private Housing'. In its response to the Statement, E Taylor stated that the job involved '...the refurbishment of council houses on behalf of Nottingham City Council. It was paid for out of a government modernisation grant (public sector money). These contracts were carried out under the supervision of Allan Joyce Architects (who were employed by Nottingham City Council to supervise the works)... In our view the AI should therefore be re-categorised as Public Sector Housing...'.¹⁸⁸⁹

¹⁸⁸⁹ Written representations of E Taylor, 27 June 2008, paragraph 4.1.

II.1739. Having considered E Taylor's representations that the project was carried out on behalf of a public authority, the OFT considered that Infringement 29 should be classified as falling within the product market for 'Public Housing', in accordance with footnote 1731.

Infringements 78, 141 and 208 – Private Housing to Public Housing

II.1740. In the Statement, the OFT inadvertently classified these Infringements, all relating to work for Housing Associations, as falling within the product market for 'Private Housing'. However, in accordance with footnote 1731, the OFT considers that the relevant product market for these three Infringements should in fact be 'Public Housing'.

II.1741. In response to this Market Definition Supplementary Statement, Robert Woodhead claimed that 'The reclassification of the relevant product market for ... [Infringement 78] appears to be a market of convenience adopted by the OFT for the purpose of determining the level of fine to be imposed on Woodhead and does not analyse the competitive conditions that may or may not exist as between public and private sector housing in respect of the AI'.¹⁸⁹⁰

II.1742. However, the OFT considers that the ONS definition, which is the basis upon which the OFT's 'Public Work' category is classified, is a reasonable objective basis upon which the OFT can proceed in relation to categorisation of this Infringement (i.e. housing association work as public work).

Infringements 136 and 155 – Private Housing to Public Housing

II.1743. In the Statement, the OFT classified these Infringements as falling within the product market for 'Private Housing'. As these two Infringements involved work undertaken on behalf of a public authority (respectively, North East Derbyshire Council and London Borough of Ealing Council), the OFT considered that they should be classified as falling within the product market for 'Public Housing', in accordance with footnote 1731.

Infringement 114 – Office to Police Fire & Rescue

II.1744. In the Statement, the OFT classified this Infringement as falling within the product market for 'Office'. In its response to the Original Statement, Bodill stated, 'The contract related to work at a police station and should therefore fall under the 'Police, Fire & Rescue' category'.¹⁸⁹¹ In this respect, the OFT notes that paragraph IV.3636 of the Statement also stated that the tender related to the conversion and extension of a CCTV control room at Beeston Police Station. The OFT therefore considers that Infringement 114 should be classified as falling within the product market for 'Police/Fire and Rescue'.

Infringement 128 – Education to Entertainment (inc Leisure)

II.1745. In the Statement, the OFT classified this Infringement as falling within the product market for 'Education'. In its response to the Statement, F Parkinson stated, 'The project was to build a youth and community centre for Stockton on Tees Borough Council. The project comprised of the construction of a sports hall and changing block extension to the existing youth and community centre and not to a school or any educational facility.... Accordingly, this falls within the Entertainment (inc Leisure) infringement sector'.¹⁸⁹²

¹⁸⁹⁰ Letter from Robert Woodhead, 27 March 2009.

II.1746. Paragraph IV.3996 of the Statement described this tender as being for a new sports hall extension at Robert Atkinson Youth & Community Centre. The OFT has also taken into account information published on the website of Stockton on Tees Borough Council, which describes the youth and community centre as offering 'a broad programme that includes health issues, crafts, cooking, holiday activities and visits, games and socialising'.¹⁸⁹³ Whilst some of the activities offered by the centre could be characterised as educational, many involve leisure pursuits. The OFT therefore considers that Infringement 128 should be classified as falling within the product market for 'Entertainment (inc Leisure)'

Infringements 54 and 108 – East Midlands to West Midlands

II.1747. In the Statement, the OFT inadvertently classified these Infringements as falling within the geographic market for the 'West Midlands'. However, the OFT notes that Nottingham (where the construction work for these two Infringements was carried out) falls within the 'East Midlands' geographic market.

Unchanged classification – Infringement 204

II.1748. In addition, in the Market Definition Supplementary Statement the OFT adduced new evidence in relation to the relevant product market for Infringement 204. In the Statement, the OFT classified this Infringement as falling within the 'Office' product market. In its response to the Statement, Bodill submitted that 'This tender is incorrectly described as 'office units'. The tender was for the construction of four 'workspace units'...and should be classified in the product market, 'Other Industrial Buildings' rather than 'Office''.¹⁸⁹⁴

II.1749. The OFT subsequently made enquiries of the client, Nottingham City Council, as to the intended and current use of the constructed units. In light of this evidence, and for the reasons set out in the Statement, the OFT remains of the view that Infringement 204 falls within the 'Office' product market. As such, the first Market Definition Supplementary Statement did not affect Annex B of the Statement insofar as Infringement 204 was concerned.

Second Market Definition Supplementary Statement – 19 May 2009

II.1750. On 19 May 2009, the OFT issued the second Market Definition Supplementary Statement, amending the product market classification from 'Private Housing' to 'Public Housing' for the Infringements and Affected Parties set out in the table below. These Infringements all involved work for Local Authorities, which should be classified as 'Public Housing' in accordance with footnote 1731.

Other representations on reclassification made in response to the Statement

II.1751. In response to the Statement, a number of Parties made representations in relation to the OFT's market classification of certain other Infringements. Having considered these representations the OFT has concluded that a reclassification is not justified, for the reasons set out in the following paragraphs.

Infringement 85 – Product Market

- II.1752. In response to the Statement, Bowmer & Kirkland stated that 'product markets in relation to all of the Alleged Infringements should be further sub-divided according to the nature and to the value of the project'.¹⁸⁹⁵ Further, with specific reference to Infringement 85, Bowmer & Kirkland believed that the correct product market should be 'civil engineering' instead of 'Other Industrial Buildings'. In oral representations, Bowmer & Kirkland stated *'we describe it as civil engineering ... it's the laying of heavy duty foundations... to pits to facilitate large pieces of plant ... I think the industry would call that civil engineering... we certainly do and that's why our civil engineering division did the work.'*¹⁸⁹⁶
- II.1753. In relation to Bowmer & Kirkland's first point, the OFT has set out at paragraphs II.1695 to II.1697 above, why it does not consider that further segmentation of the product market can be supported.
- II.1754. In relation to Infringement 85, the OFT has taken into consideration the descriptions of this job given by the client, by Bowmer & Kirkland and by Herbert Baggaley (the other Party to this Infringement), and has concluded that this Infringement should not be reclassified as 'Infrastructure', as which civil engineering works would normally be classified.
- II.1755. The client described this job as the 'removal of existing and formation of a new press base and associated works inside the existing Press Hall building... (with) alterations of structural steelwork to allow the installation of the new press', and classified the project as 'industrial buildings', matching the OFT's market classification of this Infringement.¹⁸⁹⁷ The OFT considers that this was likely to be a complex job with elements of civil engineering. However, this does not of itself support a reclassification as 'Infrastructure'. Although infrastructure work does not fall within the scope of the OFT's investigation as it is carried out by specialist civil engineering firms¹⁸⁹⁸, this is not the same as excluding all work involving elements of civil engineering.
- II.1756. Furthermore, in its response to the Market Definition Questionnaire when asked to fill in the proportion of work that was RMI work for each category of work, Bowmer & Kirkland stated 'We have excluded the Private Housing, Public Housing and Infrastructure headings as no work is undertaken in these categories'.¹⁸⁹⁹ Therefore, by Bowmer & Kirkland's own admission, it did not consider that it carried out Infrastructure work and the mere fact that this project might have involved elements of civil engineering and some specialist skills does not mean that it should be categorised as 'civil engineering' or 'Infrastructure'.
- II.1757. The OFT further notes that the client invited Herbert Baggaley to tender for this project, indicating that it was a project which could be carried out by a building contractor without specialist civil engineering skills. Herbert Baggaley did not identify the project as being civil engineering, instead stating that: '...

*Baggaleys' decision not to price this job with a view to winning the tender was due to the problems and risks involved in the job ...*¹⁹⁰⁰

II.1758. Therefore, for the reasons outlined above, the OFT does not consider that a reclassification of the market for this Infringement is warranted.

Infringement 96 – Product Market

II.1759. In the Statement, the OFT categorised this tender as falling within the market for 'Education' construction works in the 'East Midlands'. The tenders sought were for refurbishment, adaptations and internal and external repairs to the main and sundry buildings of Sir John Moore Primary School.

II.1760. In its response to the Statement, Linford submitted that the OFT had '...erroneously classified the relevant product market for [this Infringement] as being "Education". The work on Sir John Moore School was done by the "Linford-Bridgeman" division because it was historic building work. Linford's competitors on such projects are not contractors who would specialise in school work, but those who specialised more in restoration.' and the OFT appear to have classified [this Infringement] not on the basis of competitive factors such as supply and demand side substitutability, but on non-economic and inappropriate factors such as the purpose for which the building in question was being used by the client. Linford observes that this classification as "Education" is arbitrary and, in fact, there is no category listed in the [Statement] in to which it could be appropriately classified.¹⁹⁰¹

II.1761. The OFT does not accept Linford's submission that the relevant product market has been defined erroneously, nor does it accept that non-economic factors were used as the basis for relevant market definition or that treating this tender as being within the 'Education' market is at all arbitrary.

II.1762. For reasons given in paragraphs II.1646 to II.1663 above, there is no basis for defining the relevant product market according to types of work – i.e. for treating NB and RMI as being in different markets. The evidence seen by the OFT, in particular the responses to its Suppliers' Survey, indicates supply side substitutability between these types of work, and hence a single market for NB and RMI work. The OFT therefore does not consider the fact that this tender was for restoration work – hence RMI – affects the market into which it falls, or that the OFT has defined the market incorrectly.

II.1763. The OFT has set out at paragraphs II.1695 to II.1700 and II.1727 to II.1728 above, the reasons why it is appropriate in this case following a proper market definition exercise to define the relevant product markets on the basis of identifiable sectors of work, including education, rather than categories of work.

II.1764. Within the relevant product markets all construction works have been included, with the exception of PFI and PPP projects. The relevant product market contains NB and RMI segments and the restoration work category forms part of the latter segment.¹⁹⁰² The OFT did not consider it appropriate to segment the relevant market into NB and RMI for the reasons set out in paragraphs II.1647 to II.1655 above.

II.1765. For these reasons, the OFT does not consider that a reclassification of the market for this Infringement is warranted.

SECTION III – LEGAL BACKGROUND

A. Introduction

- III.1. This Part of the Decision sets out the legal framework against which the OFT has considered the evidence in this case.
- III.2. The legal provisions prohibiting agreements which prevent, restrict or distort competition are contained in the Chapter I prohibition of the Act and Article 81(1). Both provisions are relevant to this case, by reason of the Modernisation Regulation. The relevant parts of both provisions are therefore set out below, followed by a detailed examination of the key concepts contained within each, together with the law on the burden and standard of proof.

B. The Chapter I Prohibition

In General

- III.3. The Chapter I prohibition prohibits agreements between undertakings, decisions by associations of undertakings or concerted practices which may affect trade within the UK¹⁹⁰³ and which have as their object or effect the prevention, restriction or distortion of competition within the UK, unless they are excluded or exempt in accordance with the provisions of Part I of the Act.¹⁹⁰⁴ The Chapter I prohibition applies in particular to agreements, decisions or concerted practices which directly or indirectly fix selling prices or other trading conditions.¹⁹⁰⁵
- III.4. In order to find an infringement of the Chapter I prohibition, the OFT must establish the existence of an agreement, a decision or a concerted practice between undertakings which may affect trade within the UK and which had as its object or effect, the appreciable prevention, restriction or distortion of competition.

Consistency with EC Law

- III.5. Section 60(1) of the Act sets out the principle that, so far as is possible (having regard to any relevant differences between the provisions concerned), questions arising in relation to competition within the UK are dealt with in a manner which is consistent with the treatment of corresponding questions arising in EC law in relation to competition within the EC. In particular, under section 60(2) of the Act, the OFT must act (so far as it is compatible with the provisions of the Act) with a view to ensuring that there is no inconsistency between its decision and the principles laid down by the EC Treaty and the European Courts and any relevant decision of the European Courts. Under section 60(3) of the Act, the OFT must, in addition, have regard to any relevant decision or statement of the Commission.
- III.6. The provision in EC competition law that is equivalent to the Chapter I prohibition is Article 81 of the EC Treaty, on which the Chapter I prohibition is modelled. Accordingly, the case law of the European Courts interpreting Article ¹⁹⁰³ Under section 2(3) of the Act, subsection (1) applies only if the agreement, decision or practice is, or is intended to be, implemented in the UK, and under section 2(7), 'United Kingdom' means, in relation to an agreement which operates or is intended to operate only in a part of the UK, that part.

¹⁹⁰⁴ The Chapter I prohibition came into force on 1 March 2000.

¹⁹⁰⁵ Section 2(2)(a) of the Act.

81 is relevant when applying the Chapter I prohibition. This is independent of the relevance of this case law in the context of the OFT's separate duty to apply Article 81(1) in the present case, as to which see paragraphs III.7 to III.9 below.

C. Article 81 of the EC Treaty

- III.7. Following the coming into force of the Modernisation Regulation from 1 May 2004¹⁹⁰⁶, when the OFT applies national competition law to agreements and/or concerted practices between undertakings which may affect trade between Member States, it is required also to apply Article 81 of the EC Treaty, where it is applicable.¹⁹⁰⁷
- III.8. Since some of the infringing agreements and/or concerted practices particularised in this Decision were entered into or continued after 1 May 2004, the OFT considers that it is under an obligation to consider the applicability of Article 81 to the circumstances of this case.
- III.9. Whether Article 81(1) is in fact applicable to the circumstances of this case depends on whether the infringing agreements and/or concerted practices 'may affect trade between Member States' within the terms of Article 81(1). The OFT sets out the principles relevant to the determination of this question at paragraphs III.191 to III.196 below, and sets out its conclusions at paragraphs V.15 to V.25 of the Legal Assessment section below. As discussed in those paragraphs, the OFT does not consider that any of the agreements and/or concerted practices described in this Decision fulfil this criterion; Article 81(1) is not therefore in fact applicable.¹⁹⁰⁸

D. Undertakings

Concept of an undertaking

- III.10. The word 'undertaking' is not defined in the Act or in the EC Treaty. It is a wide term that the ECJ has held to cover 'any entity engaged in an economic activity, regardless of the legal status of the entity and the way in which it is financed'.¹⁹⁰⁹ In the particular context of Article 81(1), undertakings have been described as 'economic units which consist of a unitary organization of personal, tangible and intangible elements which pursue a specific economic aim on a long-term basis and contribute to the commission of an infringement of the kind referred to in that provision'.¹⁹¹⁰
- III.11. An 'undertaking' therefore designates an economic unit rather than a legal entity, and may describe a unit which itself consists of several persons, natural or legal.¹⁹¹¹ In particular, where a parent has the ability to exercise decisive

¹⁹⁰⁷ Article 3, Modernisation Regulation.

¹⁹⁰⁸ In any event, in the particular circumstances of the present case the OFT's proposed action, including the imposition of and level of penalties, would be no different whether or not Article 81 had been infringed in addition to the Chapter I prohibition.

influence over a subsidiary at the time of an infringement so as to deprive it of real autonomy in determining its conduct on the market, the two entities form part of the same undertaking for the purposes of Article 81(1) even though they have distinct legal personalities.¹⁹¹²

- III.12. In this regard, it is important to note that the effective enforcement of competition law depends on ensuring that all legal entities with responsibility for the commission of an infringement are susceptible to the relevant sanctions for that infringement. This includes (current and former) parent companies who, although not directly involved in the infringing acts, could have influenced the policies and conduct of their subsidiaries to prevent such infringements but failed to do so.

Wholly owned companies

- III.13. The exercise of decisive influence can be presumed where a subsidiary is wholly owned by its parent, whether directly or indirectly.¹⁹¹³ The presumption will be further supported where additional indicia of decisive influence exist, such as the use of the same commercial name or logo¹⁹¹⁴, a parent being active on the same or adjacent markets to its subsidiary¹⁹¹⁵, direct instructions being given by a parent to a subsidiary¹⁹¹⁶ or the two entities having shared directors.¹⁹¹⁷ The CFI has made it clear that it can generally be presumed that a wholly-owned subsidiary essentially follows the instructions given to it by its parent, without needing to check whether the parent company in fact exercised that power.¹⁹¹⁸
- III.14. Where the presumption of decisive influence arises, the OFT is entitled to find that the parent and subsidiary form the same undertaking, and to hold the parent company responsible for an infringement committed by its subsidiary, unless the parent company has proved that the subsidiary determines its conduct on the market autonomously.¹⁹¹⁹ Although not necessary in this Decision, the OFT has in any event identified other indicia of influence, such as directors in common between the parent and subsidiary.

III.15. A few Parties submitted that a 100 per cent shareholding is not sufficient to give rise to a rebuttable presumption that a parent and its subsidiary are a single economic unit, but that something more is required.¹⁹²⁰ Whilst these Parties cited CFI case law in support of their representations¹⁹²¹, the CFI clearly states in *Akzo Nobel*¹⁹²² and *Schunk*¹⁹²³ that a 100 per cent shareholding is sufficient in itself to give rise to a rebuttable presumption that decisive influence is exercised by the parent company (see also the cases cited in footnote 1913).¹⁹²⁴ This has recently been confirmed by the ECJ in Akzo Nobel:¹⁹²⁵

'... the Court of First Instance did not commit any error of law in holding that where a parent company has a 100% shareholding in its subsidiary there is a rebuttable presumption that that parent company exercises a decisive influence over the conduct of its subsidiary.'

III.16. A few Parties submitted in response to the Statement that, in order to find that a parent and its wholly owned subsidiary form part of the same undertaking, the OFT must establish not only that the parent could have exercised decisive influence over its subsidiary, but also that it did in fact exert that influence.¹⁹²⁶ However, as noted above, the European courts have made clear that, where a subsidiary is wholly owned, there is a rebuttable presumption that the parent company did exert decisive influence over its subsidiary's conduct. In Avebe v Commission, the CFI noted that:

'In the case giving rise to the judgment in Stora Kopparbergs Bergslags v Commission... the Court of Justice recognised that when a parent company holds 100% of the shares in a subsidiary which has been found guilty of unlawful conduct, there is a rebuttable presumption that the parent company actually exerted a decisive influence over its subsidiary's conduct' (emphasis added).¹⁹²⁷

III.17. In that situation, it is for the parent company to rebut that presumption by adducing evidence to establish that its subsidiary was sufficiently autonomous.¹⁹²⁸ As set out in Section II, some Parties have asserted that their parent company is a holding company only, or that the subsidiary has its own management board, or that the parent is not involved in the subsidiary's day to day management. The OFT does not consider that these assertions alone are

¹⁹²¹ For example, Case T-109/02 Bolloré v Commission [2007] ECR II-947, at paragraph 132 (overturned on appeal to the ECJ, Case C-322/07 P, judgment of 3 September 2009, without further discussion of this point); Case T-325/01 DaimlerChrysler v Commission [2005] ECR II-3319, at paragraph 218. Crest Nicholson also cited three Commission decisions, dating from the period 2002 to 2004.

¹⁹²³ Case T-69/04 Schunk, judgment of 8 October 2008, at paragraphs 56 to 58.

¹⁹²⁴ The OFT also considers that in more recent decisions, the Commission has also found a presumption that a parent company exercises decisive influence over its wholly owned subsidiary. See, for example, Commission Decision in Case COMP/F/38.899 Gas Insulated Switchgear, 24 January 2007, at paragraph 335.

¹⁹²⁵ Case C-97/08P Akzo Nobel NV v Commission, 10 September 2009, at paragraph 63.

sufficient to rebut the presumption that a parent and subsidiary are a single economic entity. In order to rebut the presumption, a parent must adduce evidence relating to the economic and legal organisational links between the two legal entities to demonstrate that the subsidiary operates autonomously on the market. This has recently been upheld and confirmed by the ECJ.¹⁹²⁹

'... the conduct of the subsidiary on the market cannot be the only factor which enables the liability of the parent company to be established, but is only one of the signs of the existence of an economic unit. ... [I]n order to ascertain whether a subsidiary determines its conduct on the market independently, account must be taken not only of the factors set out in paragraph 64 of the judgment under appeal, but also of all the relevant factors relating to economic, organisational and legal links which tie the subsidiary to the parent company, which may vary from case to case and cannot therefore be set out in an exhaustive list.'

- III.18. Several Parties submitted that common directorships cannot be relied on as an indicator of decisive influence if the directors are not implicated in the infringements.¹⁹³⁰ The OFT does not accept this argument. The CFI has stated that 'It is...not because of a relationship between the parent company and its subsidiary in instigating the infringement or, a fortiori, because the parent company is involved in the infringement, but because they constitute a single undertaking...that the Commission is able to address the decision imposing fines to the parent company of a group of companies'.¹⁹³¹ As a result, *'...attribution of an infringement by a subsidiary to the parent company does not require proof that the parent company influences its subsidiary's policy in the specific area in which the infringement occurred.'*¹⁹³²

Majority-owned companies

- III.19. In circumstances where a subsidiary is majority-owned, rather than wholly-owned by its parent company, the principles applicable to presuming that the parent exercised decisive influence may nevertheless apply where there is a clear ability to exercise control. This follows naturally from the principles set out in paragraphs III.11 to III.18.
- III.20. In other words, where the level of shareholding, coupled with any other economic and legal organisational links, are such as to allow the parent to direct the conduct of its subsidiary, the OFT is entitled to presume, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, that the parent company did in fact exercise decisive influence over its subsidiary. Where the shareholding is close to 100 per cent, the need to identify other links will be less than where the parent owns a bare majority.
- III.21. Certain parties suggested that the OFT was not entitled to rely on a presumption of decisive influence in circumstances where the shareholding was less than 100 per cent, seeking to rely on a number of cases in support of that view.¹⁹³³ The OFT notes that almost all of the case law does relate to wholly owned companies but does not accept that any of these cases preclude the application of the presumption where the shareholding is less than 100 per cent.¹⁹³⁴

- III.22. Similarly, the case law identifies a number of relevant economic and legal organisational links indicative of a parent company's ability to control its subsidiary. In Section II, the OFT has considered such indicia for each of the corporate groups where shareholdings are less than 100 per cent when concluding that the exercise of decisive influence can be presumed. However, the OFT does not accept that every one of the various indicia identified by the case law must be present in order for the presumption to apply¹⁹³⁵, and therefore where parties have identified the absence of a particular link, that does not undermine the application of the presumption.
- III.23. In line with the position for wholly-owned subsidiaries, where the presumption of decisive influence arises, the OFT is entitled to find that the parent and subsidiary form part of the same undertaking, and to hold the parent company responsible for an Infringement committed by its subsidiary, unless the parent company has rebutted that presumption by proving that the subsidiary determined its conduct on the market autonomously.
- III.24. Durkan Holdings submitted that it was insufficient for the OFT to demonstrate that a parent was able to exert decisive influence over its subsidiary but it must also check whether that influence was actually exerted.¹⁹³⁶ In making this submission, Durkan Holdings relied on the first and second sentences of paragraph 136 of the CFI's judgment in Avebe.¹⁹³⁷ However, the OFT notes that the CFI went on in the remainder of that paragraph to state that the actual exercise of decisive influence could be presumed in the case of 100 per cent shareholding (see paragraph III.16). The CFI then considered the facts of the particular case (the entity in question had two parents, each with 50 per cent shareholding and joint management power) in order to reach a presumption (analogous to that arising with 100 per cent shareholding) that the joint parent actually exerted decisive influence over the subsidiary. As the applicant had not adduced any evidence to rebut the presumption, the CFI concluded that the entity and its joint parents formed a single undertaking.¹⁹³⁸ The OFT considers that the CFI's judgment in Avebe provides further support for its conclusion that a presumption of the exercise of decisive influence is not confined to the situation where a parent company holds 100 per cent of the shares in its subsidiary.

As set out in Section II, at the time of the relevant Infringements, Durkan Holdings had a 51 per cent shareholding in Durkan.

¹⁹³⁴ The OFT also notes in this regard that the European Commission has previously considered a 98 per cent shareholding to be sufficient in itself to give rise to a presumption of decisive influence. Commission decision in MCAA, OJ L353, 13 December 2006, page 12, at paragraph 258.

Succession

- III.25. Since the concepts of undertakings and legal personality are distinct, in attributing liability for breaches of Article 81(1) to an undertaking, 'when a violation is found to have been committed, it is necessary to identify the natural or legal person who was responsible for the operation of the undertaking at the time when the violation was committed, so that it can answer for it' (emphasis added).¹⁹³⁹ The ECJ has confirmed that *'the concept of an undertaking covers any entity engaged in economic activity, irrespective of its legal status and the way in which it is financed...When such an entity infringes competition rules, it falls, according to the principle of personal responsibility, to that entity to answer for that infringement.'*¹⁹⁴⁰ It is therefore irrelevant if a legal entity responsible for an infringement has been sold or transferred to another entity since the violation was committed; provided the original legal entity still exists, liability remains with it and a new parent company will usually not be liable for infringements which pre-date its acquisition unless that new parent company forms part of the original undertaking responsible for the infringement.¹⁹⁴¹
- III.26. Where, however, the original legal entity no longer exists, it is necessary to consider whether there is functional and economic continuity ('undertaking identity') between the original entity and any new entity into which it may have merged.¹⁹⁴² This involves considering whether the physical and human assets which were responsible for the infringement have been acquired by another entity.¹⁹⁴³
- III.27. The ECJ has confirmed that events such as organisational changes should not enable liabilities for competition law breaches to be evaded:

*'...it must be noted that if no possibility of imposing a penalty on an entity other than the one which committed the infringement were foreseen, undertakings could escape penalties by simply changing their identity through restructurings, sales or other legal or organisational changes. This would jeopardise the objective of suppressing conduct that infringes the competition rules and preventing reoccurrence by means of deterrent penalties...the legal forms of the entity that committed the infringement and the entity that succeeded it are irrelevant. Imposing a penalty for the infringement on the successor can therefore not be excluded simply because...the successor has a different legal status and is operated differently from the entity that it succeeded.'*¹⁹⁴⁴

Agency relationships

- III.28. Under EC law, an agent is a legal or natural person who is vested with the power to negotiate and/or conclude contracts on behalf of another person (the principal) for the sale or purchase of goods or services by the principal. It is immaterial whether the agent acts for one or several principals.¹⁹⁴⁵
- III.29. An agency relationship arises at English common law where one party, the principal, consents that another party, the agent, should act on his behalf, and the agent consents to do so. An agent may be an employee of the principal, an independent contractor, a partner or any other person given authority to act on the principal's behalf. An agency relationship can be created by agreement (express or implied), by the ratification of the agent's acts by the principal or, in certain circumstances, by the operation of law. These principles are further outlined in the following paragraphs.
- III.30. No contractual document is required to create an express agency agreement; any means (including oral¹⁹⁴⁶) by which the principal expresses his consent for the agent to act on his behalf will suffice.¹⁹⁴⁷ Moreover, an agency agreement can be implied from the principal's acquiescence to, or recognition of, the acts of the agent. Likewise, the agent's consent to act on behalf of the principal can be implied from his actions.¹⁹⁴⁸ It may also be inferred that an agent will have such authority as is usual or customary, given the position he holds.¹⁹⁴⁹ In this respect, both parties' conduct should be interpreted objectively. An express or implied agency agreement will give the agent actual authority to represent his principal.
- III.31. As noted above, if a person purports to act on behalf of another, but without prior authority, subsequent ratification by the second person will retrospectively confer authority and will create an agency relationship in respect of the ratified act. Ratification can be implied from any act demonstrating an intention to adopt the relevant transaction, in certain circumstances even through silence.¹⁹⁵⁰
- III.32. A principal may also be bound by the acts of an agent where the principal has, by words or conduct, represented to a third party that the agent has authority to act on his behalf and the third party acts in reliance on that representation and alters his position as a result. In these circumstances, the agent is said to have 'ostensible' or 'apparent' authority to act on behalf of the principal.¹⁹⁵¹
- III.33. According to European case law, an agent can be regarded as part of the same undertaking as its principal:

¹⁹⁴⁵ See paragraphs 12 and 13 of the European Commission Guidelines on Vertical Restraints, OJ C291/4, 13 October 2000. *'It is clear from case-law that, where an agent works for his principal, he can in principle be regarded as an auxiliary organ forming an integral part of the latter's undertaking bound to carry out the principal's instructions and thus, like a commercial employee, forms an economic unit with this undertaking.'*¹⁹⁵²

- III.34. A principal and agent will be regarded as forming part of the same undertaking where the agent does not assume financial and commercial risk, and does not determine its own conduct on the market independently.¹⁹⁵³ This will be the case, for example, where:
- (a) property in the goods sold does not vest in the agent, or the agent does not himself supply the contract services;
 - (b) the agent does not contribute to the costs relating to the supply of the goods or services;
 - (c) the agent is not obliged to invest in sales promotion;
 - (d) the agent does not maintain stocks of the contract goods at his own cost or risk;
 - (e) the agent does not create and/or operate an after-sales service, repair or warranty service (or operates one reimbursed by the principal);
 - (f) the agent does not make market-specific investments in equipment, premises or training of personnel;
 - (g) the agent does not undertake responsibility for product liability towards third parties;
 - (h) the agent does not take the risk of the customers' non-performance of the contract.¹⁹⁵⁴
- III.35. For the avoidance of doubt, the OFT considers that the identification of companies forming an undertaking is primarily a matter of EC law, but has nonetheless set out the relevant common law principles where they assist in the identification of an agent/principal relationship.
- III.36. Once it is established that a principal and agent form part of the same undertaking, the principal is unable to avoid liability for the actions of its agent by claiming it was unaware of the agent's actions, or did not authorise or approve those actions.¹⁹⁵⁵

E. Agreements or concerted practices between undertakings

III.37. Note that this Part E (Agreements or concerted practices) and Part F (Prevention, restriction and distortion of competition), set out the general legal principles in relation to those matters. The application of those principles to the types of Infringement particularised in this Decision is then set out in Parts G (Cover bidding) and H (Compensation payment arrangements)

Agreement 'and/or' concerted practice

III.38. Both the Chapter I prohibition and Article 81(1) apply to 'agreements' and/or 'concerted practices'.¹⁹⁵⁶

III.39. The ECJ has confirmed that it is not necessary for the purposes of finding an infringement, to characterise conduct exclusively as an agreement or as a concerted practice.¹⁹⁵⁷ The concepts of agreement and concerted practice are not mutually exclusive and there is no rigid dividing line between the two; on the contrary, they are intended:

'to catch forms of collusion having the same nature and only distinguishable from each other by their intensity and the forms in which they manifest themselves'.¹⁹⁵⁸

III.40. The ECJ explained this in Anic as follows:

'The list in Article [81(1)] of the Treaty is intended to apply to all collusion between undertakings, whatever form it takes... The only essential thing is the distinction between independent conduct, which is allowed, and collusion, which is not, regardless of any distinction between types of collusion'.¹⁹⁵⁹

This reasoning has been expressly cited by the CAT in several cases.¹⁹⁶⁰

III.41. While there is a particular overlap between the concepts of agreements and concerted practices in the case of single complex infringements of long duration¹⁹⁶¹, the same principle will apply to discrete infringements of short duration. As the CAT has confirmed in its judgments in both the JJB Sports/AllSports and Argos/Littlewoods cases, both of which involved discrete infringements of comparatively short duration:

See also Apex Asphalt and Paving Co Limited v OFT [2005] CAT 4, at paragraphs 201 and 206(ii); and Makers UK Limited v OFT [2007] CAT 11, at paragraph 103(ii).

¹⁹⁶¹ See the decision of the European Commission in Citric Acid OJ L239, 6 September 2002, page 18, at paragraph 143 (not challenged on appeal: see Case T-59/02 Archer Daniels Midland [2006] 5 CMLR 28 and Case T-43/02 Jungbunzlauer, judgment of the Court of First Instance of 27 September 2006).

*'It is trite law that it is not necessary for the OFT to characterise an infringement as either an agreement or a concerted practice: it is sufficient that the conduct in question amounts to one or the other'.*¹⁹⁶²

This position has since been upheld by the Court of Appeal.¹⁹⁶³

- III.42. It is not therefore necessary for the OFT to come to a conclusion as to whether the behaviour of the Parties specifically constitutes an agreement or a concerted practice in order to demonstrate an infringement of the Chapter I prohibition in the present case.

Agreements

- III.43. An agreement does not have to be a formal written agreement to be caught by the Chapter I prohibition. Nor does an agreement have to be legally binding, or contain any enforcement mechanisms.¹⁹⁶⁴ The Chapter I prohibition is intended to catch a wide range of agreements and concerted practices, including oral agreements¹⁹⁶⁵ and 'gentlemen's agreements'¹⁹⁶⁶, since anti-competitive agreements are, by their nature, rarely in written form.¹⁹⁶⁷

- III.44. The test is whether there has been:

*'a concurrence of wills between at least two parties, the form in which it is manifested being unimportant, so long as it constitutes the faithful expression of the parties' intention'.*¹⁹⁶⁸

The intention of the parties must be to conduct themselves on the market in a specific way.¹⁹⁶⁹ For example, an adherence to a common plan that limits or is likely to limit their individual commercial freedom by determining lines of mutual action or abstention from action in the market.¹⁹⁷⁰

- III.45. The precise manner in which the parties' intention to behave on the market in accordance with the terms of the relevant agreement is expressed, is not therefore significant; an agreement may be express or it may be implied from the conduct of the parties.¹⁹⁷¹ It may also consist of either an isolated act or a series of acts or a course of conduct.¹⁹⁷²

- III.46. The fact that a party may have played only a limited part in the setting up of the agreement, or may not be fully committed to its implementation, or may have participated only under pressure from other parties does not mean that it is not party to the agreement (although these facts may be relevant to the level of penalty).¹⁹⁷³

Concerted Practices

Undertakings Concerting Together

- III.47. A concerted practice does not require an actual agreement (whether express or implied) to have been reached. Rather, as the ECJ held in Dyestuffs, a concerted practice is:

*'a form of co-ordination between undertakings which, without having reached the stage where an agreement properly so-called has been concluded, knowingly substitutes practical co-operation between them for the risks of competition'.*¹⁹⁷⁴

- III.48. The concept of a concerted practice must be understood in light of the principle that each economic operator must determine its policy on the market independently. The ECJ explained this in its judgment in Suiker Unie in the following terms:

*'the criteria of coordination and cooperation laid down by the case-law of the Court, which in no way require the working out of an actual plan, must be understood in light of the concept inherent in the provisions of the treaty relating to competition that each economic operator must determine independently the policy which he intends to adopt on the common market including the choice of the persons and undertakings to which he makes offers or sells'.*¹⁹⁷⁵

III.49. The requirement of independence was further explained as follows:

*'...although...[the]...requirement of independence does not deprive economic operators of the right to adapt themselves intelligently to the existing and anticipated conduct of their competitors, it does however strictly preclude any direct or indirect contact between such operators, the object or effect whereof is to influence the conduct on the market of an actual or potential competitor or to disclose to such a competitor the course of conduct which they themselves have decided to adopt or contemplate adopting on the market in question, where the object or effect of such contact is to create conditions of competition which do not correspond to the normal conditions of the market in question, regard being had to the nature of the products or services offered, the size and number of the undertakings and the volume of the said market...'*¹⁹⁷⁶

III.50. A concerted practice may occur, in particular, where there are reciprocal contacts between undertakings which have the object or effect of removing or reducing uncertainty as to future conduct on the market.¹⁹⁷⁷ Reciprocal contacts are established:

*'where one competitor discloses its future intentions or conduct on the market to another when the latter requests it or, at the very least, accepts it...'*¹⁹⁷⁸

and:

III.51. In order to prove concertation, it is not therefore necessary to show that the competitor in question has formally undertaken, in respect of one or several others, to adopt a particular course of conduct or that the competitors have expressly agreed a particular course of conduct on the market. It is sufficient that, by its statement of intention, the competitor should have eliminated or, at the very least, substantially reduced uncertainty as to the conduct on the market to be expected on his part.

- III.52. Moreover, the requirement of concertation may be satisfied by the unilateral disclosure of information by one party to another, where that information is 'at the very least' accepted by the recipient. Thus, in Tate & Lyle the CFI held that:

'...the fact that only one of the participants at the meetings in question reveals its intentions is not sufficient to exclude the possibility of an agreement or concerted practice'.¹⁹⁸⁰

- III.53. Similarly, the mere receipt of information concerning competitors may be sufficient to give rise to concertation. As noted by the CFI in Tate and Lyle:

'an undertaking, by its participation in a meeting with an anti-competitive purpose, not only pursued the aim of eliminating in advance uncertainty about the future conduct of its competitors but could not fail to take into account, directly or indirectly, the information obtained in the course of those meetings in order to determine the policy which it intended to pursue on the market. The Court considers that the conclusion also applies where, as in this case, the participation of one or more undertakings in meetings with an anti-competitive purpose is limited to the mere receipt of information concerning the future conduct of their market competitors'.¹⁹⁸¹

- III.54. In Aalborg Portland, the ECJ stated that an undertaking which receives information relating to an anti-competitive arrangement without manifestly opposing it will be taken to have participated in a concerted practice unless that undertaking puts forward evidence to establish that it had indicated its opposition to the anti-competitive arrangement to its competitors:

'According to settled case-law, it is sufficient for the Commission to show that the undertaking concerned participated in meetings at which anti-competitive agreements were concluded, without manifestly opposing them, to prove to the requisite standard that the undertaking participated in the cartel. Where participation in such meetings has been established, it is for that undertaking to put forward evidence to establish that its participation in those meetings was without any anti-competitive intention by demonstrating that it had indicated to its competitors that it was participating in those meetings in a spirit that was different from theirs'.¹⁹⁸²

- III.55. The rationale for this principle of law is that:

'...a party which tacitly approves of an unlawful initiative, without publicly distancing itself from its content or reporting it to the administrative authorities, effectively encourages the continuation of the infringement and compromises its discovery... That complicity constitutes a passive mode of participation in the infringement which is therefore capable of rendering the undertaking liable in the context of a single agreement'.¹⁹⁸³

- III.56. Nor is the fact that an undertaking does not act on the outcome of a meeting having an anti-competitive purpose such as to relieve it of responsibility for the fact of its participation in a cartel¹⁹⁸⁴, unless it has publicly distanced itself from what was agreed in the meeting.¹⁹⁸⁵

Conduct on the Market

- III.57. According to the case law of the ECJ, the concept of a concerted practice requires, besides undertakings concerting together, conduct on the market pursuant to those collective practices, and a relationship of cause and effect between the two.¹⁹⁸⁶

- III.58. Where an undertaking participating in concerting arrangements remains active on the market, there is a presumption that it will take account of information exchanged with its competitors. In Anic, the ECJ held that:

'subject to proof to the contrary, which it is for the economic operators concerned to adduce, there must be a presumption that the undertakings participating in concerting arrangements and remaining active on the market take account of the information exchanged with their competitors when determining their conduct on the market, particularly when they concert together on a regular basis over a long period, as was the case here'.¹⁹⁸⁷

This is because it is assumed that 'the recipient of the information in question cannot normally fail to take that information into account when formulating its policy on the market'.¹⁹⁸⁸

- III.59. The ECJ has recently confirmed that this presumption applies even if the concerted action is the result of a single meeting between undertakings.¹⁹⁸⁹

F. Prevention, restriction or distortion of competition

No need to prove anti-competitive effect where anti-competitive object established

- III.60. In the context of Article 81(1) EC, the ECJ has held that 'there is no need to take account of the concrete effects of an agreement once it has as its object the prevention, restriction or distortion of competition'.¹⁹⁹⁰ Equally, where the conduct in question is a concerted practice, the ECJ has held that although the concept presupposes conduct of the participating undertakings on the market, it does not necessarily imply that conduct should produce the concrete effect of restricting, preventing or distorting competition;¹⁹⁹¹ under Article 81(1), concerted practices are therefore prohibited regardless of their effect, when they have an anti-competitive object.¹⁹⁹²
- III.61. It follows that the OFT is not, when applying the Chapter I prohibition, obliged to establish that an agreement or concerted practice has an anti-competitive effect where it is found to have as its object the prevention, restriction or distortion of competition.¹⁹⁹³
- III.62. Several Parties submitted that this approach is incorrect, on the basis of the CFI's judgment in GlaxoSmithKline.¹⁹⁹⁴ A number of different submissions were put forward on the basis of this judgment; namely:
- (a) the OFT must carry out a competitive analysis to determine whether the provision in question has an anti-competitive object or effect;¹⁹⁹⁵
 - (b) the OFT is required to consider the legal and economic context in which the undertakings operate¹⁹⁹⁶, which, it is said, the OFT has failed to do (contrary to its previous practice¹⁹⁹⁷);

- (c) an agreement may only be presumed to have an anti-competitive object if it may properly be presumed to deprive final consumers of the advantages of competition.¹⁹⁹⁸
- III.63. Caddick cited several European cases in support of its representation that, where it is not obvious that an agreement has the object of restricting competition, it is necessary to establish what anti-competitive effects would flow naturally from the agreement if implemented.¹⁹⁹⁹
- III.64. In response to these arguments, the OFT notes that the ECJ has recently made clear that, in order to find an ‘object’ infringement, an agreement or concerted practice need only be capable in an individual case, having regard to the legal and economic context, of preventing, restricting or distorting competition.²⁰⁰⁰ The OFT is therefore not required to conduct a competitive analysis to demonstrate an actual prevention, restriction or distortion of competition in any particular case.²⁰⁰¹ Moreover, an impact on consumer prices is not a pre-requisite to the finding of an ‘object’ infringement²⁰⁰², as the competition rules are *‘designed to protect not only the immediate interests of individual customers or consumers but also to protect the structure of the market and thus competition as such.’*²⁰⁰³
- III.65. Nor does the finding of anticompetitive object amount to a presumption of effects rebuttable by an analysis of actual effects.²⁰⁰⁴ In her Opinion in T-Mobile Netherlands, Advocate General Kokott explained this principle as follows:

*‘Ultimately...the prohibition on ‘infringements of competition by object’ resulting from Article 81(1) EC is comparable to the risk offences...known in criminal law: in most legal systems, a person who drives a vehicle... when significantly under the influence of alcohol or drugs is liable to a criminal or administrative penalty, wholly irrespective of whether, in fact, he endangered another road user or was even responsible for an accident. In the same vein, undertakings infringe European competition law and may be subject to a fine if they engage in concerted practices with an anti-competitive object; whether in an individual case, in fact, particular market participants or the general public suffer harm is irrelevant.’*²⁰⁰⁵

- III.66. For the reasons given in paragraphs III.71 to III.157 below, the OFT considers that the agreements and/or concerted practices particularised in this Decision are capable of preventing, restricting or distorting of competition. In reaching that conclusion, the OFT has taken into account the legal and economic context in which the agreements and/or concerted practices were applied (see Sections II.C (Market Definition) and IV.B (Cover Pricing Background)).
- III.67. In light of the OFT's finding (at paragraphs V.8 to V.9 of the Legal Assessment section below) that the agreements and/or concerted practices described in this Decision had as their object the prevention, restriction or distortion of competition, the OFT sets out below details of the law on anti-competitive object, but not effect. Whilst a number of Parties submitted that the Infringements in which they were involved did not result in any anti-competitive effect, these representations are not considered further here (although they are taken into account, to the extent relevant to the seriousness of the Infringements, as part of the assessment of penalty in Section VI (Enforcement)).

The law on anti-competitive object

- III.68. The 'object' of an agreement and/or concerted practice is not assessed by reference to the parties' subjective intentions when they enter into it, but rather is determined by an objective analysis of its aims.²⁰⁰⁶
- III.69. Where the obvious consequence of an agreement or concerted practice is to prevent, restrict or distort competition, that will be its object for the purpose of the Chapter I prohibition.²⁰⁰⁷ This will be the case even if the agreement or concerted practice had other objectives.²⁰⁰⁸
- III.70. It is irrelevant whether the parties to the agreement and/or concerted practice have considered the anti-competitive nature of their conduct and appreciated that the object or effect of it might be anti-competitive. The only test is whether the object or effect of the conduct is in fact to prevent, restrict or distort competition.²⁰⁰⁹

Bid rigging

- III.71. Tendering procedures are designed to provide structured competition in areas where it might otherwise be absent. An essential feature of this system is that prospective suppliers prepare and submit tenders or bids independently.²⁰¹⁰ As noted by the CAT, the importance of the independent preparation of bids is sometimes recognised in tender documentation by requiring tenderers to certify that they have not had any contact with each other in the preparation of their bids.²⁰¹¹

- III.72. Any tenders submitted as the result of collusion between prospective suppliers, which reduce the uncertainty of the outcome of the tender process, are likely to have an appreciable effect on competition. Indeed, the OFT considers that bid rigging agreements and/or concerted practices, by their very nature, restrict competition to an appreciable extent.²⁰¹² Both the Commission and the CFI have also accepted that collusive tendering has the object of restricting competition.²⁰¹³
- III.73. There are two key forms of tender processes: open and selective. Where the process is only open to selected bidders, whether on an invitational, list or other basis, rather than to all potential bidders, the loss of independence as a result of collusion with other bidders can have an even greater distortionary effect on the tendering process.²⁰¹⁴ This is because the undistorted level of competition is already limited by the restricted number of bidders.
- III.74. This Decision addresses two key forms of collusive tendering or bid rigging, which are considered more fully in parts G and H below:

- (a) Cover pricing or cover bidding occurs when a supplier/bidder (Bidder A) submits a price for a contract that is not intended to win the contract; rather, it is a price that has been decided upon in conjunction with another supplier/bidder (Bidder B) that wishes to win the contract.²⁰¹⁵ It therefore only gives an impression of competitive bidding, as the token bid submitted by Bidder A is higher than the bid of Bidder B who seeks to win the contract. Whether or not the decision by Bidder A not to submit a genuine competitive bid was taken in conjunction with Bidder B, the level of the uncompetitive bid submitted by Bidder A was set using commercially sensitive price information obtained from Bidder B.

Furthermore, a cover pricing arrangement may also include the payment by Bidder B to Bidder A of an agreed amount of money or other consideration to 'compensate' Bidder A for the fact that Bidder A has no prospect of winning the contract and/or to compensate for tendering costs already accrued by Bidder A (referred to in this Decision as a 'compensation payment'); and

- (b) Compensation payment arrangements (without cover bidding) occur where two suppliers/bidders each prepare and submit their own bids, ²⁰¹⁵ One Party submitted that, in giving a cover price, Bidder B does not necessarily wish to win the contract. Regardless of whether this assertion is factually correct, this is not critical to the OFT's Decision in this case. The understanding between Bidder A and Bidder B, that A will submit a bid at or above the level of the cover price given by B, will restrict competition whether or not B wishes to win the tender. The manner in which competition is restricted is illustrated by the factors described at paragraph III.99 below.

but agree that the winning party will pay the losing party an agreed sum of money, again often expressed by the parties as a payment to compensate for lost tendering costs and referred to in this Decision as a 'compensation payment'. Although, unlike cover bidding, both parties may still be hoping to win the tender, the level of bids is above the competitive level as a result of these arrangements. In some of these arrangements, the agreed level of compensation is expressly agreed to be added to the final tender bid(s).

- III.75. Although not relevant to the question of whether or not certain conduct does or does not infringe the Chapter I prohibition, a number of Parties made representations concerning the terminology used by the OFT to describe the conduct which is the subject of this Decision. In common with many other competition authorities, practitioners and other organisations, the OFT uses the terms 'bid rigging' and 'collusive tendering' interchangeably. This is demonstrated by the OFT's published guidance, which refers to 'collusive tendering (bid rigging)' and, elsewhere 'bid rigging (collusive tendering)'.²⁰¹⁶

Price fixing

- III.76. Price fixing may involve fixing either the price itself or the components of a price, and may also take the form of an agreement or concerted practice to restrict price competition. An agreement may therefore constitute a price fixing agreement or concerted practice where it restricts price competition even if it does not entirely eliminate it.²⁰¹⁷ Accordingly, any provision in an agreement and/or concerted practice between competitors which, directly or indirectly, in isolation or in combination with other factors under the control of the Parties, fixes the prices at which goods or services are sold, will amount to an infringement of the Chapter I prohibition.
- III.77. For the reasons set out in parts G and H below, the OFT considers that all of the cover pricing Infringements referred to in this Decision constitute forms of price fixing, and that the compensation payments described in this Decision may also do so.
- III.78. Several Parties disputed this conclusion in their responses to the Statement. Wright (Hull) highlighted the distinction in section 188(2) of the Enterprise Act 2002 between price fixing and bid rigging.²⁰¹⁸ The OFT accepts that not all instances of bid rigging will necessarily also involve price fixing, hence the distinction between bid rigging and price fixing in section 188(2) of the Enterprise Act 2002 - there may be arrangements which are caught by section 188(2)(f), but not by section 188(2)(a). However, the OFT does not accept the inference that price fixing and bid rigging arrangements must be viewed as mutually exclusive.
- III.79. Milward argued that bid rigging is a form of customer sharing, rather than price fixing, citing the European Commission decision in Building and Construction in the Netherlands and leading textbooks in support of this argument.²⁰¹⁹ As noted above, the OFT does not view the various potential categories of anti-competitive behaviour caught by the Chapter I prohibition and/or Article 81(1) as being mutually exclusive. An agreement or concerted practice may, depending on the particular facts of the case in question, be categorised as one or more of price fixing, customer/market sharing, bid rigging, information exchange, etc.²⁰²⁰

- III.80. In relation to whether a penalty may be imposed on a small agreement, section 39(9) of the Act has a specific definition of 'price fixing agreement' for this purpose. The application of this section is considered further in paragraphs VI.31 to VI.37 below.

Exchange of competitively sensitive information

- III.81. The case law in relation to agreements and concerted practices cited at paragraphs III.38 to III.59 above includes a significant number of cases in which information, including pricing information, had been shared amongst competitors. The exchange of pricing information is particularly sensitive from a competition law perspective. Indeed, the mere disclosure of such information to competitors will almost certainly infringe the Chapter I prohibition where it is capable of influencing their future conduct on the market, as will its receipt (see paragraphs III.50 to III.55 above).
- III.82. The exchange of commercially sensitive pricing information between competitors is rarely acceptable. Such exchange eliminates uncertainty and replaces 'the risks of competition and the hazards of competitors' spontaneous reactions by co-operation'.²⁰²¹ The Commission has explicitly stated that 'it is contrary to the provisions of Article [81(1)]...for a producer to communicate to his competitors the essential elements of his price policy'.²⁰²²
- III.83. The CFI has previously held that the exchange of information between building contractors regarding the cost components of the contract, the characteristics of the tenders and the prices proposed by each contractor was anti-competitive:

'Where there is concertation by undertakings regarding the manner in which they intend responding to an invitation to tender, involving the exchange of information regarding, inter alia, the costs of the product concerned, its specific characteristics and a breakdown of the price tenders, having in particular the object and effect of revealing to its competitors the course of conduct which each contractor has decided to adopt or contemplates adopting on the market and being capable of leading to the fixing of certain conditions for the transaction, practical cooperation between contractors is deliberately

²⁰²⁰ In Elevators and Escalators (COMP 38.823 Press Release of 21 February 2007), the Commission concluded that the undertakings involved had infringed Article 81 by way of bid rigging, price fixing, allocation of projects, market sharing and the exchange of information. This case also involved instances of cover bidding. (On appeal Cases T-145/07 etc. OTIS and others v Commission.) Likewise, in Gas Insulated Switchgear (COMP 38.899, Press Release of 24 January 2007), the Commission found that the undertakings involved had infringed Article 81 by way of market sharing, allocation of projects, market sharing, bid rigging and exchange of information. (On appeal Cases T-145/07 etc. Siemens v Commission.)

substituted for the risks of competition and an infringement of Article [81(1)] of the Treaty is thereby committed'.²⁰²³

III.84. The OFT considers that the exchange of such information has the object and/or effect of revealing to competitors the course of conduct which each contractor decides to adopt on the market. Practical cooperation between competitors is thereby deliberately substituted for the risks of competition, and such information exchange therefore infringes the Chapter I prohibition.²⁰²⁴

III.85. Admiral disputed whether sharing commercially sensitive information between competitors is wrong. In describing the practice of cover bidding, Admiral stated:

*'There is certainly communication, between, normally two bidders. There is certainly the exchange of commercially sensitive information. There is certainly a use put to that commercially sensitive information. Of course there is nothing wrong with sharing commercially sensitive information. It is intellectual property which can either be withheld from or shared with others. What is done with it is entirely the choice of the owner of it.'*²⁰²⁵

III.86. This is a complete misstatement of the law relating to anti-competitive conduct. As the ECJ noted in Asnef-Equifax v Ausbanc:

*'According to the case-law on agreements on the exchange of information, such agreements are incompatible with the rules on competition if they reduce or remove the degree of uncertainty as to the operation of the market in question with the result that competition between undertakings is restricted (John Deere v Commission, paragraph 90, and Case C-194/99 P Thyssen Stahl v Commission [2003] ECR I-10821, paragraph 81).'*²⁰²⁶

III.87. Quarmby and Stainforth submitted that, as they were not involved in hardcore cartel activity, any exchange of information which took place would therefore need to be analysed by reference to its effects before an infringement could be established.²⁰²⁷

III.88. The OFT considers that all of the Infringements particularised in this Decision involve bid rigging and also restrict price competition. Accordingly, it is not necessary to consider whether these agreements or concerted practices had an anti-competitive effect.

G. Cover bidding

III.89. As noted above, cover bidding occurs when a supplier/bidder (Bidder A) submits a price for a contract that is not intended to win the contract, rather it is a price that is the same as, or based on, a price given to it by another supplier/bidder ²⁰²⁵ Written representations of Admiral, 26 June 2008, paragraph 16. Admiral did not dispute, however, that its cover bidding amounted to bid rigging (Letter to the OFT from Admiral's legal representatives, Irwin Mitchell, dated 15 January 2009).

(Bidder B) that wishes to win the contract, and is higher than Bidder B's own intended bid.

III.90. It is clear that in communicating with one another to establish the price at which Bidder A will bid and the fact that Bidder B will be bidding below that price, the parties to a cover bidding arrangement knowingly distort the normal tendering process in which each bid would be independently formulated to ensure competition (see paragraphs III.71 to III.72 above). Collusion of this sort between bidders fundamentally undermines the specific competitive mechanism that has been put in place by the client.

III.91. It is also clear that by communicating in this way, the parties to a cover bidding arrangement 'knowingly substitute practical co-operation between them for the risks of competition'. Bidder A is avoiding the risk of winning a contract he does not want, without the risks and disadvantages that he may face if he chose not to submit a bid or unilaterally submitted a high bid in the hope it was unsuccessful. Bidder B is reducing (or in some cases eliminating) the risk that he will not win the contract by ensuring that a competitor's bid is higher than his own.

Cover bidding as a form of concerted practice

III.92. The principles for identifying a concerted practice, described at paragraphs III.47 to III.59 above, were applied by the CAT in the context of cover bidding in Apex.²⁰²⁸

III.93. The CAT held that where (1) the tenderer receiving cover had had contact with the tenderer giving cover, and (2) the tenderer giving cover then gave cover by sending the tenderer receiving cover figures for a cover bid, this constituted concertation.²⁰²⁹ The CAT highlighted that these facts:

- (a) showed that the conduct was not unilateral;
- (b) infringed against the principle that each undertaking must determine independently the policy it intends to adopt on the market; and
- (c) constituted direct contact between participants which had as its object or effect:
 - i. the disclosure by one participant to another of the course of conduct which the former was to adopt or was contemplating adopting in the tendering process; and
 - ii. influencing a participant's conduct on the market.²⁰³⁰

III.94. This conduct was expressly held to contravene the principle against direct or indirect contact, set out at paragraph III.49.²⁰³¹ It was also held to constitute a prohibited reciprocal contact in that the disclosure by the party receiving cover of its future intentions on the market was accepted by the party giving cover.²⁰³² As a result, the parties substituted practical cooperation for the risks of competition which substantially eliminated the uncertainty they each faced as to the conduct of the other in the tender process.²⁰³³

- III.95. In Apex, the CAT also applied the concept of conduct on the market, following the principles set out in *Anic*²⁰³⁴ (see paragraph III.58 above).²⁰³⁵ There, the tenderer giving cover was presumed to have taken account of the information that the tenderer receiving cover was not intending to submit a competitive bid when determining its own conduct in the tendering process, while the tenderer receiving cover was similarly presumed to have taken account of the figures it received for a cover bid when determining its conduct in the tendering process.
- III.96. The CAT explicitly noted that it was not necessary for the tenderer receiving cover to actually place a cover bid with the information received in order for the conduct of the undertakings in question to constitute a concerted practice.²⁰³⁶

The anti-competitive object of cover bidding

- III.97. The OFT considers that cover bidding has as its obvious consequence the prevention, restriction or distortion of competition, for the reasons set out at paragraphs III.90 and III.91 above, and described further below. Accordingly, in order to establish an infringement of the Chapter I prohibition in these circumstances, it is not necessary for the OFT to demonstrate that it also had this effect.
- III.98. The practice of cover bidding has previously been accepted by the CAT as having an anti-competitive object. In *Apex*²⁰³⁷ the CAT concluded that the parties' conduct in giving, or in receiving and considering, a cover price had as its object the prevention, restriction or distortion of competition.²⁰³⁸
- III.99. Having rejected Apex's argument that the object of its conduct was to remain on its customers' tender lists²⁰³⁹, the CAT went on to conclude that the submission of a cover bid has an anti-competitive object or effect in that:
- (a) it reduces the number of competitive bids submitted in respect of that particular tender;*
 - (b) it deprives the tenderee of the opportunity of seeking a replacement (competitive) bid;*
 - (c) it prevents other contractors wishing to place competitive bids in respect of that particular tender from doing so;*
 - (d) it gives the tenderee a false impression of the nature of competition in the market, leading at least potentially to future tender processes being similarly impaired'.²⁰⁴⁰*

- III.100. The OFT considers that each of these consequences arise in every instance of cover pricing found to be an Infringement in this Decision. Not only do these four consequences indicate that the object of the arrangements was anti-competitive, but also that the arrangements were, at a minimum, capable²⁰⁴¹ of anti-competitive effects. The restriction, prevention and/or distortion of competition which results from these four factors is in itself the anti-competitive object or effect of the cover bidding arrangement; it is not the case that an anti-competitive object or effect only arises where there is a direct inflation of the price paid by the customer or a complete elimination of competition from the tender process.
- III.101. Several Parties questioned the CAT's conclusion²⁰⁴², or stated that these factors do not arise in the context of their particular Infringements.²⁰⁴³ First, these Parties argued that, instead of submitting a cover bid, they could have unilaterally submitted an inflated bid or declined to bid, which would also have reduced the number of competitive bids (see sub-paragraph (a) above), but without breaching competition law.²⁰⁴⁴ However, cover bidding infringes the Act because it arises as a result of collusion between competitors. The fact that the same result may arguably arise as a result of wholly unilateral action cannot absolve the Parties of liability, nor does it lead to the conclusion that a cover bid is a 'genuine' or 'competitive' bid.²⁰⁴⁵ A competitive bid is one which reflects the bidder's own perception of the potential risks and rewards involved in the project and in the wider marketplace. Whilst a bidder might unilaterally submit a high bid in the hope of not winning a tender, in doing so it will take into account the risk that the bid could be so low as to win the job, or so high as to damage its credibility. Where a bidder submits a cover price, however, this risk is curtailed as the price has simply been obtained from a competitor. In this way, a bidder submitting a cover price deliberately substitutes practical cooperation for the risks of the competitive process²⁰⁴⁶ and the bid cannot, therefore, be regarded as 'genuine' or 'competitive'.
- III.102. In relation to (b) and (c) of paragraph III.99, several Parties submitted that their customers would have been extremely unlikely to seek a replacement bid, or that this would have been unfeasible.²⁰⁴⁷ Whilst recognising that the customer may not seek a replacement bid in every instance in which a tender is declined or withdrawn, the OFT does not agree that the likelihood of a customer inviting a replacement bid is 'extremely low'.²⁰⁴⁸ It is notable that within this Decision, there are several examples of tenders where clients did seek a replacement bidder after an invited tenderer declined to bid, such as Infringements 164 and 207, and in certain cases, such as Infringement 164, the replacement bidder tendered a bid which eventually won. Moreover, regardless of the likelihood of replacements being sought, the submission of a cover bid in any event deprives the customer of the opportunity of seeking a replacement bid.

III.103. With respect to (d) of paragraph III.99, the Parties put forward two main arguments. First, it was argued that future tenders are unlikely to be impaired as the Infringements are individual and discrete, as opposed to previous cover bidding cases where the contact between competitors was more regular and long term, and often involved all tenderers making payments and rotating bids.²⁰⁴⁹ The OFT does not consider this characterisation of its previous findings to be accurate. In particular, in *West Midlands Flat Roofing*²⁰⁵⁰ (which gave rise to the CAT's decision in Apex), the OFT concluded that there was a series of individual agreements or concerted practices, which had the object of fixing prices, each of which was treated as a discrete infringement. Apex itself was involved in two instances of cover bidding, each with different counter-parties, and involving none of the factors put forward to suggest that this aspect of the CAT's analysis should not apply to the present case.

III.104. The Parties also contended that any impairment of future tenders would be a separate infringement and should therefore not be taken into account by the OFT in this Decision.²⁰⁵¹ This argument rests on a misinterpretation of the CAT's remark in Apex, which refers to harm to future tenders caused not by collusion in relation to those future tenders (which would indeed be a separate infringement), but to lasting harm or potential harm caused by the collusion on the current infringement, as shown by the CAT's comments on duration of the infringement:

*'[I]n the present case the effect of the infringement is not restricted to the short period referred to above but has a potential continuing impact on future tendering processes by the same tenderees.'*²⁰⁵²

III.105. Such impact may arise in the following ways:

- (a) having submitted a bid with the intention of staying on the tenderer's lists for future tenders, new entrants who might otherwise have been invited to compete may not be able to gain entry to those lists for future tenders;
- (b) future tendering processes are more susceptible to cover bidding because the competitors who have successfully stayed on the tender lists are aware of one another's willingness to engage in cover bidding, thus reducing the risks involved for one firm to approach another to suggest such conduct;

- (c) tenderers' perceptions as to what constitutes a competitive price will be distorted by seeing inflated cover bids, which may affect their assessment when deciding whether to accept future tendered bids.

III.106. It is notable that many Parties justified their decisions to submit cover bids on the basis that they wished to remain on a client's tender list for future work. This highlights those Parties' perceptions that replacement bidders would otherwise be sought for future work, to the detriment of the Party in question and to the benefit of potential competitors, and that the purpose of cover bidding was to prevent that change in the competitive environment from occurring.

III.107. A large number of Parties submitted in their responses to the Statement that the instances of cover bidding in which they were involved did not have the obvious consequence of preventing, restricting or distorting competition and, consequently, did not have an anti-competitive object.²⁰⁵³ Reasons advanced in support of this argument include the following:

- (a) in the absence of cover bidding, the company taking a cover price would unilaterally submit an inflated bid, or no bid at all, so the cover bidding made no difference to the outcome of the tender;²⁰⁵⁴
- (b) other 'genuine' bidders participated in the tender, so the practice of cover bidding did not deprive the customer of a competitive outcome;²⁰⁵⁵
- (c) the bid submitted by the company giving a cover price was unaffected, as (i) it was only asked for a cover price after it had calculated (alternatively, after it had submitted) its own bid; and/or (ii) although it had a degree of certainty about one competitor's bidding intentions, it did not have any certainty with respect to other potential bidders, such that it would still be constrained by competition in calculating its bid.²⁰⁵⁶

III.108. The OFT considers these to be variants based on the same premise; namely that cover bidding made no difference to the outcome of the tender process. In the OFT's view, these arguments are aimed at analysing the effects of the cover bidding arrangement by reference to a counterfactual scenario. As the CAT noted in Argos and Littlewoods, 'If an agreement or concerted practice is established on the facts, the question of what the pricing position might have been in the absence of that agreement or concerted practice is irrelevant to the issue of liability.'²⁰⁵⁷ Moreover, none of the submissions listed in the preceding paragraph undermine the reasoning of the CAT identified in paragraph III.99 above. The representations listed in sub-paragraphs (a) and (b) above are similar to those advanced by the appellant in *Apex*²⁰⁵⁸, and were not accepted by the ²⁰⁵³ Alternatively, cover bidding does not reveal, in itself, an alteration of competition (for example, written representations of Ackroyd & Abbott, 2 July 2008, paragraph 63 to 64).

²⁰⁵⁴ For example, written representations of Bowmer & Kirkland, 4 July 2008, paragraphs 22 to 27; Written representations of Stainforth, 27 June 2008, paragraphs 2.14 to 2.16; Written representations of Quarmby, 27 June 2008, paragraphs 3.13 to 3.15.

CAT. However, the OFT has addressed these arguments, to the extent relevant, in considering the seriousness of the Infringements in Section VI (Enforcement).

- III.109. Quarmby sought to rebut the OFT's conclusion that cover pricing has as its object the restriction of competition by adducing in evidence an economics report which concluded that the Party's conduct could not be presumed to have any economic effect.²⁰⁵⁹ Several other Parties submitted that it cannot be assumed that cover bidding is likely to produce negative effects on the market and lead to a reduction in consumer welfare such as to raise a presumption that, by its very nature, it would restrict competition.²⁰⁶⁰
- III.110. As noted in paragraph III.65, however, a finding of anticompetitive object does not amount to a presumption of effects rebuttable by an analysis of actual effects. Moreover, it is not necessary to find an actual reduction in consumer welfare in each case where an 'object' infringement is found.²⁰⁶¹ The OFT nevertheless considers that cover bidding is at a minimum capable of leading to a reduction of consumer welfare as it suppresses the competitive process which would otherwise exist (either if the party taking a cover price submitted a properly estimated bid, or if it withdrew from the tender process and enabled the customer to seek a replacement bid). It also deceives the customer into believing that tender prices have been independently determined, when they have not, thereby giving him a distorted view of the market.
- III.111. Several Parties submitted that cover pricing is motivated by a desire not to be dropped from customer tender lists and/or not to upset or delay the tender process.²⁰⁶² Wright (Hull) submitted that it had no intention of fixing or attempting to fix prices.²⁰⁶³ However, the motivation of an undertaking in submitting a cover bid, whether rational – such as seeking to remain on a selective tender list – or not, is irrelevant. The object of an agreement and/or concerted practice is not assessed by reference to the parties' subjective intentions when they enter into it.²⁰⁶⁴ A motive of needing to supply a price in order to continue to receive tender enquiries was explicitly considered and rejected by the CAT in Price.²⁰⁶⁵
- III.112. Other Parties submitted that customers would have been aware of the practice of cover bidding and can be assumed to have taken this into account in designing their tender process²⁰⁶⁶ Again, the OFT rejects this submission as customers cannot be assumed to have knowledge of cover bidding in relation to a specific tender when the intention of a Party engaging in this practice was to appear to submit a 'genuine' bid. In particular, a customer would have no means of identifying if any or all of the bids it received were from tenderers engaged in cover pricing. Moreover, an infringement of the Act cannot be rendered lawful simply because the client could have taken greater precautions to prevent the unlawful arrangements from occurring or taken greater steps to minimise the effects of the unlawful arrangements.

²⁰⁵⁹ Written representations of Quarmby, 27 June 2008, paragraph 3.2. The economics expert's report adduced in evidence purports to assess the effect of the conduct against a counterfactual scenario (Written representations of Quarmby, 27 June 2008, Annex 1, paragraphs 15 to 24).

²⁰⁶⁶ See, for example, written representations of Allenbuild, 4 July 2008, paragraph 4.16; Written representations of Quarmby, 27 June 2008, paragraph 3.12. Similarly, McGinley Holdings stated that the OFT had failed to ask customers whether they were aware of cover pricing, and whether this was a factor in determining how many bidders they would invite to tender (Written representations of McGinley Holdings, 27 June 2008, paragraph 23).

- III.113. As a result, the OFT does not consider the above arguments undermine its conclusion that the cover bidding Infringements did have an anti-competitive object.

Tenders where no contractor is ultimately appointed

- III.114. In a few Infringements, the customer conducted a tender process but either did not appoint a contractor, or it appointed a contractor but ultimately did not proceed with the tendered job. The OFT does not consider, however, that this detracts from its analysis of the relevant Infringements. In particular, the Parties in these circumstances entered into an agreement and/or concerted practice with the object of preventing, restricting or distorting competition and also acted in pursuance of that arrangement. As such, the Infringement took place at a time before it was known that the contract would not proceed. As the OFT is not required to analyse the effects of the arrangement (see paragraphs III.60 to III.67 above), the fact that the tender process was subsequently abandoned is immaterial to the finding of an infringement. The OFT also notes that the customer in *Price*²⁰⁶⁷ ultimately did not appoint a contractor, but this did not preclude the finding of an 'object' infringement.

Cover bidding as a form of bid rigging

- III.115. Some Parties suggested that cover bidding is not as serious as bid rigging as it does not entail bid rotation, bid allocation or payments between bidders, each of which are characteristics of hardcore collusive tendering.²⁰⁶⁸ The OFT does not accept that bid rigging necessarily involves any or all of bid rotation, bid allocation or payments between bidders. Bid rigging can take a myriad of forms, including cover bidding.
- III.116. One Party submitted that cover bidding does not constitute bid rigging, as the cover pricing arrangement does not involve all bidders in the tender process.²⁰⁶⁹ Again, any suggestion that bid rigging must necessarily involve all potential bidders in a tender process is not supported by case law. By the same analogy, an agreement or concerted practice whereby competitors directly fix the sale price of a particular product would have to involve every single supplier of that particular product before it could constitute price fixing under Chapter I / Article 81(1). In the OFT's view, this reasoning is clearly unsustainable.

Whether cover bidding is a less serious form of bid rigging

- III.117. Several Parties accepted that their conduct amounted to bid rigging, and an object infringement of the Act, but considered that the practical effects were at the lowest end of the scale of seriousness for bid rigging infringements. As the ²⁰⁶⁸ See, for example, written representations of Stainforth, 27 June 2008, paragraphs 2.8 to 2.9; Written representations of Allenbuild, 4 July 2008, paragraph 4.18.

²⁰⁶⁹ Written representations of A H Willis, 27 June 2008, paragraph 33. Alternatively, the company giving the cover price was still constrained by competition due to the presence of other 'genuine' bidders.

OFT considers that the Infringements have as their object the prevention, restriction or distortion of competition, it is not required to consider the effects of the conduct in order to establish a breach of the Chapter I prohibition. The seriousness of the Infringements is, however, reflected in the starting point adopted at Step 1 of the penalty calculation and these representations are considered, to the extent relevant, in Section VI (Enforcement).

III.118. Several Parties submitted that as they were not making supra-competitive profits, their conduct could not be considered to be 'hardcore'.²⁰⁷⁰ The OFT does not consider the level of a Party's profits to be a decisive factor in establishing its involvement in an Infringement. Moreover, as the OFT considers that the agreements and/or concerted practices particularised in this Decision had the object of restricting, preventing or distorting competition, there is no need to consider their effects (see paragraph III.60, above) and therefore neither the Party nor the OFT is in a position to know what the Parties' levels of profits might have been absent the Infringements.

Cover bidding as a form of price fixing

III.119. In cover bidding arrangements price competition is restricted in two ways. First, the party receiving cover submits a price determined directly or indirectly by the party giving cover. Secondly, the party giving cover determines its price in the knowledge that the party receiving cover will be submitting a high bid not intended to win the tender.

III.120. A number of Parties submitted that cover pricing (alternatively, the particular instance of cover pricing in which they engaged) does not constitute price fixing. A number of arguments were advanced in support of this conclusion.

III.121. Wright (Hull) submitted that the conduct it engaged in did not constitute price fixing 'in the sense in which the ordinary person would understand those words'.²⁰⁷¹ The OFT notes that the Chapter I prohibition operates on the basis of a statutory interpretation informed by case law.

III.122. Bramall/Frank Haslam submitted that it was not involved in any centralised system where the ability of the various competitors to set their prices freely was limited, and its conduct was therefore less serious.²⁰⁷² The OFT rejects any suggestion that price fixing necessarily involves a centralised system with regular exchanges of detailed price information. As noted above, the CAT concluded in JJB Sports/AllSports and *Argos/Littlewoods*²⁰⁷³ that the appellants had engaged in price fixing, although both cases involved discrete infringements of comparatively short duration.

III.123. A few Parties submitted that cover pricing cannot be regarded as price fixing, as other 'genuine' bidders will be involved in the tender so the company giving a cover price will still have to compete to win.²⁰⁷⁴ The suggestion that a price fixing arrangement must involve all potential suppliers of the product or service in question is spurious (see also paragraph III.116). Similarly, R Durnnell submitted that, where a cover pricing arrangement has little effect on price competition, then it should not be considered price fixing.²⁰⁷⁵ The OFT refers to paragraph III.76, and reiterates that an agreement that restricts price competition even if does not eliminate it will nonetheless constitute a price-fixing agreement. Moreover, the price that is 'fixed' need not be the price that ultimately wins the tender (or is intended to win the tender). Accordingly, the understanding between the giver and receiver of the cover price that the receiver will submit a price at or above the level discussed will amount to price fixing regardless of whether the tender process involves other bidders unconnected with the cover pricing arrangement.

- III.124. Propensity and Bowmer & Kirkland stated that, as cover prices are exchanged at the end of the tender process, a bidder giving cover would have already determined its own price, which would therefore not be impacted by the knowledge that the company taking cover was not intending to win.²⁰⁷⁶ The OFT notes that a cover price will typically be requested some time in advance of the tender submission date, even if the actual cover price is not given until just before the tender deadline.²⁰⁷⁷ A bidder giving a cover price is, therefore, likely to know that its competitor is not intending to win the tender at the time it determines its own price, even if the cover price is not actually given until after that time. In any event, even if the scenario put forward by these Parties were factually correct in relation to any particular Infringement, price competition would still be restricted as the bidder receiving cover would submit a price determined directly or indirectly by the party giving cover.

Cover bidding and the exchange of commercially sensitive information

- III.125. The giving and receiving of cover bids as part of a tendering process is one example of the anti-competitive exchange of pricing information. Similarly, the disclosure of an intended tender bid, or any elements comprising the first round or provisional price tendered during the tender process prior to final bids, similarly constitute unlawful exchanges of pricing information in breach of the Chapter I prohibition.
- III.126. A H Willis disputed this conclusion, arguing that the disclosure of information about whether a party intends to compete for a tender is unimportant, particularly given that tenders generally involve multiple parties. As a result, A H Willis submitted that the information exchanged does not constitute a serious infringement of the Chapter I prohibition.²⁰⁷⁸ This argument ignores the fact that, in addition to the disclosure of one party's intention not to compete for a tender, pricing information will also be communicated between competitors, with the intention that one party will bid at or above this price, and the other below that price. In any event, the OFT considers that the disclosure to a competitor of whether or not a party intends to compete for a tender is also capable of anti-competitive object or effect (whether or not pricing information is also exchanged) as it substantially reduces the uncertainty faced by that competitor on the market.

Cover bidding involving compensation payments

- III.127. As noted above, some cover bidding arrangements include the payment by the party giving cover to the party receiving cover of an agreed amount of money (a compensation payment). A compensation payment is often expressed by the parties concerned as a payment to compensate for lost tender costs, although, in some instances, it is also referred to as payment to 'back off' or 'stand down'.
- III.128. The OFT considers that the principles as to why cover bidding has an anti-competitive object and is capable of anti-competitive effects (as described in paragraph III.99 above) apply whether or not, in addition to the provision of a cover bid, a compensation payment is also agreed.
- III.129. It is wholly irrelevant that a compensation payment made in conjunction with a cover bid may be expressed as being to cover the recipient party's tender costs. The object of the agreement remains the same as for any other cover bid arrangement, namely an agreement not to compete against each other. As such, it is irrelevant that the Parties may claim that their intention was to use compensation payments as 'an insurance policy against expensive tendering costs'.²⁰⁷⁹ The object of an agreement and/or concerted practice is not assessed by reference to the parties' subjective intentions when they enter into it, but rather is determined by an objective analysis of its aims.²⁰⁸⁰
- III.130. Cover bidding infringements in which participants offer (or request) inducements (such as compensation payments) to (or from) other cartel participants are more serious than infringements where no such inducement is offered. Such an agreement further distorts the tender process: the supplier providing the cover and who will make the compensation payment is at the least incentivised to recover the cost of that payment by further inflating his tender price in addition to any inflation due to reduced competition from the provision of a cover price.
- III.131. Moreover, the OFT considers that it is clear that the Parties were fully aware that an agreement to make a compensation payment was not legitimate, as in all instances compensation payments were processed between the relevant Parties by means of false invoices. The relevant Parties were therefore careful to take steps to cover up the fact that they had entered into such an arrangement.
- III.132. Bowmer & Kirkland stated that, in order to constitute an infringement of the Chapter I prohibition, the offer of a compensation payment must be conditional on the recipient of the offer (Bidder A) withdrawing or submitting an uncompetitive tender. If A was not intending to compete in the first place, the situation must be analysed by reference to the competition which would have existed in the absence of the offer of payment. Bowmer & Kirkland therefore submitted that, if Bidder A was not intending to compete in the first place, ²⁰⁸⁰ Cases 29/83 and 30/83 Compagnie Royale Asturienne des Mines SA and Rhein zinc GmbH v Commission [1984] ECR 1679, at paragraphs 25 to 26.

there would have been merely an attempt to prevent restrict or distort competition, which is not actionable under the Act.²⁰⁸¹

III.133. The OFT considers this argument to be without merit, as it is aimed at analysing the effects of the arrangement by reference to a counterfactual scenario, rather than being an objective analysis of its aims. As the CAT noted in Argos and Littlewoods, 'If an agreement or concerted practice is established on the facts, the question of what the pricing position might have been in the absence of that agreement or concerted practice is irrelevant to the issue of liability.'²⁰⁸² The OFT's analysis of the aims and consequences of cover bids accompanied by compensation payments is applicable whether or not the party offered a compensation payment was intending to compete prior to receiving that offer.

III.134. This submission also fails to take account of the fact that, by entering into the arrangement and accepting the offer of payment, Bidder A has indicated to Bidder B its intended course of conduct on the market and accepted from Bidder B similar information.

III.135. The OFT considers that an agreement to make a compensation payment in conjunction with cover bidding has as its obvious consequence the prevention, restriction or distortion of competition, for the reasons set out in paragraphs III.99 and III.130. Accordingly, in order to establish an infringement of the Chapter I prohibition in these circumstances, it is not necessary for the OFT to demonstrate that it also had this effect.²⁰⁸³

H. Compensation payment arrangements

III.136. A compensation payment agreement or concerted practice (not involving cover pricing) occurs where two suppliers each prepare and submit their own bids but agree that the winning party will pay the losing party an agreed sum of money, again often expressed by the parties as a payment to compensate for tendering costs. Unlike cover bidding involving a compensation payment, the identity of the winning party will not be known to the two suppliers at the time of entering into the compensation arrangement.

III.137. In its response to the Statement, Wildgoose objected to the use of the term 'compensation payment', stating '...it is clear that this is a phrase of the OFT's own coining and does not reflect everyday usage within the industry.'²⁰⁸⁴ In the OFT's view, the particular terminology used to describe these payments (and the origin of that terminology) is unimportant. The conduct of the participants, and the legal analysis of that conduct, remains the same regardless of whether the term 'compensation payment' or some other descriptive term is used. Wildgoose accepted this in principle, but objected specifically to the use of the term 'compensation payment' both in the context of cover bids, and as a standalone infringement.²⁰⁸⁵ The OFT accepts that there are differences ²⁰⁸¹ Written representations of Bowmer & Kirkland, 4 July 2008, paragraph 30.

²⁰⁸³ Whilst the OFT received representations that cover bidding in conjunction with a compensation payment has only limited (or no) anti-competitive effects, as the OFT has concluded that the conduct was anti-competitive by object, it does not consider these representations further here. To the extent that any of these arguments are relevant to the seriousness of the Infringements, they will be taken into account in Section VI (Enforcement).

²⁰⁸⁴ Written representations of Wildgoose, 3 July 2008 (as amended on 1 April 2009), paragraph 4.42.

between compensation payments made in these two different situations and has, therefore, analysed them separately at paragraphs III.127 to III.132 and III.138 to III.157, respectively (albeit, there will be aspects of the OFT's analysis which apply equally to both scenarios).

Compensation payment arrangements as a form of agreement and/or concerted practice

III.138. As noted at paragraphs III.47 to III.59 above, a concerted practice may occur, in particular, where there are reciprocal contacts between undertakings which have the object or effect of removing or reducing uncertainty as to future conduct on the market.²⁰⁸⁶ Where an undertaking remains active on the market, there is a presumption that it will take account of information exchanged with its competitors.²⁰⁸⁷

III.139. Compensation payment arrangements generally take the form of agreements, but at a minimum involve a form of concertation such as to amount to a concerted practice, in that such an arrangement:

- (a) involves reciprocal contacts, followed by the making of a payment which is not unilateral conduct;
- (b) infringes against the principle that each undertaking must determine independently the policy it intends to adopt on the market; and
- (c) constitutes direct contact between participants in a tender process which has as its object or effect:
 - i. the disclosure by each participant to the other of the course of conduct that it intends to adopt or is contemplating adopting in the tendering process; and/or
 - ii. the influencing of each other's conduct on the market, in particular through the obligation to pay or the opportunity to receive a compensation payment.

III.140. In arrangements to make compensation payments, the Parties disclose their intention to make a payment conditional on winning the tender. In some cases, the Parties also disclose details about the level of their bids and/or it is expressly agreed that one or more Party(ies) will include the amount of the agreed compensation payment in their tender bids. Whether or not there is such an express agreement, discussion of and agreement on the level of compensation, and the obligation to pay or the prospect of receiving the payment, can be presumed to influence the Parties' conduct in the tender process, as it influences the level of risk (of wasted costs) assumed by each party when making a bid and may also influence the formulation of a final bid price as described further below. The object of the contact between the Parties is therefore to create conditions of competition which do not correspond to the normal conditions of the market (see paragraph III.49).

- III.141. Wildgoose submitted that, in the absence of cover pricing or agreement to add the amount of the payment to the tender price, (i) an arrangement to make a compensation payment has no influence on the participants' conduct on the market, and the OFT is not entitled to rely on a presumption to this effect²⁰⁸⁸, and (ii) the parties reveal nothing about their respective intentions on the market.²⁰⁸⁹
- III.142. Even in the absence of a cover payment or agreement to add the amount of the payment to their tender price, the Parties will reveal their intention to make a payment to the other, conditional on winning the tender. As noted above, where an undertaking participating in concerting arrangements remains active on the market, the OFT is entitled to presume that it will take account of information exchanged with its competitors.²⁰⁹⁰ It should also be recalled that the reasoning at paragraph III.139 is relevant to the establishment of a concerted practice. Where two Parties have entered into an agreement to make a compensation payment, the same test does not apply.

Anti-competitive object of compensation payments (without cover pricing)

- III.143. The OFT considers that an agreement by one bidder to pay to another an agreed level of compensation, if the former wins the tender, has as its obvious consequence the prevention, restriction or distortion of competition as the parties 'knowingly substitute practical co-operation between them for the risks of competition' in that
- (a) it is clear that in communicating with one another to establish whether each has a genuine intention to bid with a view to winning, and if so, whether they would each be prepared to compensate the losing bidder if they won the tender, the parties to a compensation payment arrangement knowingly distort the normal tendering process in which each bid would be independently formulated to ensure competition;
 - (b) the arrangement is capable of reducing the parties' incentives to compete for the relevant tender, as the risks of wasting tender costs as a result of losing a competitive tender are substituted by the certainty of a payment to cover all or part of those costs;
 - (c) in some, but not all, cases, the parties to such an arrangement also communicated either the intended levels of their bids or the levels of a first-stage bid that would normally remain confidential as between rival bidders; and ²⁰⁸⁸ Written representations of Wildgoose, 3 July 2008 (as amended on 1 April 2009), paragraphs 4.23 to 4.31. As noted above, Wildgoose accepted that its conduct amounted to an infringement of the Chapter I prohibition and, by implication therefore, that it was a party to an anti-competitive agreement or concerted practice.

- (d) in some, but not all, cases, the parties to such an arrangement added the amount of the compensation payment to their tender price, directly inflating the price payable by the customer.

III.144. It is wholly irrelevant that an agreed compensation payment may be expressed as being to cover the losing party's tender costs. It is a normal feature of a competitive bidding process that there will be losing bidders as well as a winning supplier, and the losing party would usually bear its tender costs. At the very least, by agreeing to make a compensation payment, the Parties negate the risks of competition by recouping the costs of an unsuccessful tender submission from a competitor. By communicating in this way, the Parties also knowingly distort the normal tendering process in which each bid would be independently formulated (see paragraphs III.71 to III.72 above), as they cannot fail to take into account the obligation to pay, or the prospect of receiving payment, when participating in the tender process (even in the absence of an express agreement to add the amount of the payment to their bid prices).

III.145. Durkan disputed the OFT's conclusion that a losing bidder would normally expect to bear its tender costs. It submitted that, in respect of a two-stage tender process, it 'was one of the unwritten rules of engagement in the industry' that provision would be made for the client to reimburse second stage tender costs if the negotiations, by that stage with a single firm, proceeded to contract but subsequently failed. As a result, Durkan argued that the compensation payment was intended to recoup costs which 'in the ordinary course', would have been paid by the client.²⁰⁹¹ Even if this scenario is factually correct (which the OFT does not necessarily accept), achieving a level of remuneration or cost recovery, which the Parties consider to be 'in the ordinary course', will not legitimise concertation between competitors. Each firm must independently determine its conduct on the market, including deciding whether or not to accept the risks of participating in tender processes where costs are not recoverable from the customer.

Agreement to add the amount of compensation to bid prices

III.146. The OFT considers that an agreement between competitors to pay an agreed level of compensation conditional upon winning a tender, and to add this amount to their respective bid prices, constitutes illegal price fixing, the object of which is to restrict competition. The concept of price fixing includes fixing a component of the price, such as a surcharge. The CFI has explicitly held that 'the prohibition of agreements and concerted practices which directly or indirectly fix prices also extends to agreements relating to the fixing of a part of the final price'.²⁰⁹²

III.147. The CFI has also stated that:

²⁰⁹¹ Written representations of Durkan, 27 June 2008, paragraphs 90 to 91.

²⁰⁹² See the judgment of the CFI in Cases T-45/98 etc Krupp Thyssen [2001] ECR II-3757, paragraph 157 (not challenged on appeal: see Case C-65/02 P ThyssenKrupp [2005] ECR I-6773); also the decision of the European Commission in COMP IV/34.503 Ferry Operators – Currency Surcharges OJ 1997 L 26/23, paragraphs 55 to 58. This is also expressly stated at paragraph 3.5 of the OFT's Guideline 401 – Agreements and concerted practices.

*'competition between contractors regarding their calculation costs is restricted by the system of reimbursements for calculation costs and the client is thus deprived of the benefits of such competition'.*²⁰⁹³

and:

III.148. Several Parties submitted that, where a compensation payment was added to a tender price in a particular instance, this was a minimal sum which would have had little impact on the customer.²⁰⁹⁵ Firstly, the OFT does not necessarily accept this assertion as being factually correct in the context of each relevant Infringement. For example, Wildgoose argued that a compensation payment of £7,000, which it admits adding to the tender price, was minor in the context of the value of the contract.²⁰⁹⁶ In the OFT's view, a £7,000 additional charge to the customer is unlikely to be minor. In any event, such arguments about the actual level of increased price are irrelevant when assessing the object of an agreement.²⁰⁹⁷

No express agreement to add the amount of compensation to bid prices

III.149. Herbert Baggaley admitted that an agreement to pay compensation between itself and another bidder was an infringement of the Act, but stated that there was no evidence that the parties either agreed to add the amount of the compensation payment to their tender price, that they did in fact do so, or that the tender price was above the competitive level.²⁰⁹⁸

III.150. The OFT considers that price competition is suppressed by an agreement to make a compensation payment, even in the absence of an express agreement to add the amount of the payment to the tender price. Payments from one competitor to another without consideration in the form of goods or services are not normal commercial practice. By entering into an agreement to make a compensation payment to a competitor, the inevitable consequence is that a tenderer either (a) inflates its tender bid by the amount of the compensation payment such that it can make the payment to its competitor, without reducing its own profit margin, at the expense of the customer; and/or (b) chooses to accept a lower profit margin, but rather than adopting a normal commercial ²⁰⁹⁷ See paragraphs III.60 to III.66 above. Whilst the OFT has received representations that an arrangement to make a compensation payment has only limited (or no) anti-competitive effects, the OFT does not consider these arguments further in this Section, as it has concluded that the conduct was anti-competitive by object. To the extent that any of these representations are relevant to the seriousness of the Infringements, they will be taken into account in Section VI (Enforcement).

²⁰⁹⁸ Written representations of Herbert Baggaley, 27 June 2008, paragraph 33.

strategy of thereby lowering its bid in order to be more competitive (which would benefit the customer), it instead pays a sum to a competitor, for which there is no legitimate commercial rationale. Thus, whether or not the level of payment was expressly agreed to be added to the tender price(s) submitted, the payment is made at the expense of a potentially lower tender price, resulting in pricing above the competitive level. Such an agreement therefore has the obvious consequence, and thus the object, of restricting or distorting competition and is capable of an effect on price.

- III.151. Moreover, since an arrangement to make a compensation payment has as its object an obvious restriction or distortion of competition, it is not necessary for the OFT to prove that either party added all or part of the level of agreed compensation payment to its final bid price. Where an agreement has as its object a restriction or distortion of competition, it is immaterial whether it also has an anti-competitive effect. In any event, in all cases that are the subject of this Decision, the agreed level of compensation was paid following award of the relevant tenders.
- III.152. In the circumstances, and noting that compensation payment arrangements constitute a form of bid rigging and involve the exchange of commercially sensitive information (see further below), it is not necessary for the OFT to determine whether the conduct also amounts to a form of price fixing where there is no express agreement for one or more Parties to add the amount of compensation to tender prices.
- III.153. Durkan stated that, despite entering into a compensation payment arrangement, its tender price was not above the competitive level (by reference to the prices submitted by another independent bidder).²⁰⁹⁹ However, this does not detract from the conclusion reached by the OFT as to the anti-competitive object of the arrangements. In making a compensation payment, the tenderer gives the benefit of the reduction in its profit margin to a competitor, rather than to the customer and thus distorts competition. Even if a tender price reflects favourably when compared to another competitor's price, it could have been even lower if the customer had benefited from the tenderer's reduced profit margin, rather than that reduced margin instead arising from a payment made to a competitor. As noted above, it is sufficient for a finding of infringement that an agreement or concerted practice restricts or distorts price competition, even if it does not entirely eliminate it.²¹⁰⁰
- III.154. Wildgoose admitted that, in a number of instances where it made compensation payments, it absorbed this cost in reduced margins. However, it went on to state that 'These margins would not have been available to customers'.²¹⁰¹ As noted above, if the Party was willing to accept a reduced margin on the particular tender, but chose to apply the reduced margin for the benefit of a competitor but not for a customer, then in so doing, competition on that tender was distorted.
- III.155. Bid rigging infringements in which participants offer (or request) inducements (such as compensation payments) to (or from) other cartel participants are more serious than infringements where no such inducement is offered. Whether or not there is express agreement to inflate the tender bids to include the agreed compensation sum, a supplier who may be obliged to make the compensation payment is at the least incentivised to recover the cost of that payment by further inflating his tender price in addition. Moreover, the OFT considers that it is clear that the Parties were fully aware that an agreement to make a compensation payment was not legitimate, as in all instances compensation payments were processed between the relevant Parties by means of false invoices. The relevant Parties were therefore careful to take steps to cover up the fact that they had entered into such an arrangement.

Compensation payments and the exchange of commercially sensitive information

- III.156. When communicating with one another regarding a compensation payment, the Parties disclosed, and received, information regarding their respective bidding intentions. In some compensation payment Infringements, the Parties went so far as to exchange details of their tender prices. The OFT considers that this reduced or removed the degree of uncertainty each Party faced, with the result that competition between them was restricted (see paragraphs III.81 to III.88).
- III.157. Even where the Parties did not exchange details of their tender prices, the exchange of information regarding the level of compensation to be paid also has an influence on the pricing of the contracts in question, for the reasons given in paragraphs III.146 to III.154 (whether or not the Parties expressly agreed to include the level of compensation payments in their bids).²¹⁰²

I. Parties' representations on the applicability of previous CAT judgments

- III.158. As noted above, several Parties attempted to distinguish the previous CAT cases involving cover bidding²¹⁰³, and in particular Apex, from the Infringements. The arguments employed differed somewhat between Parties, but can be summarised as follows:
- (a) Apex, Makers and Price involve 'aggravated' cover bidding, which have an anti-competitive object, as opposed to instances of 'simple' cover bidding, which do not have an anti-competitive object, and must therefore be analysed by reference to their effects; or
 - (b) in Apex, cover prices were given by the eventual winner of the tender to other companies, which should be distinguished from the situation where a cover price is given by a company that is not the eventual winner.

- III.159. Two Parties analysed the sets of tenders involved in *Apex*²¹⁰⁴, as follows:

'(i) In relation to the FHH Contracts, the OFT found that Apex (Bidder B) asked Briggs (Bidder A) to take a cover and Briggs agreed to do so. While Apex ²¹⁰² One Party asserted that the OFT's argument set out in paragraph III.70 of the Statement was unconvincing, and submitted that this paragraph therefore fell short of demonstrating an infringement (Written representations of Wildgoose, 3 July 2008 (as amended on 1 April 2009), paragraph 4.97). Wildgoose accepted, however, that its conduct could be deemed to have the object of restricting competition, so the OFT does not consider this submission any further.

²¹⁰³ Apex Asphalt and Paving Co Limited v OFT [2005] CAT 4; Makers UK Limited v OFT [2007] CAT 11; Richard W Price (Roofing Contractors) Limited v OFT [2005] CAT 5.

²¹⁰⁴ Apex Asphalt and Paving Co Limited v OFT [2005] CAT 4.

disputed this version of events, this is not an example of simple cover pricing but would fall more readily into the hardcore collusive tendering category. The CAT also considered an alternative version of events as suggested by Apex (which is more akin to simple cover pricing) which is arguably obiter. The case is also complicated by the fact that the Apex estimator was a former employee of Briggs.'

*'(ii) In relation to the Dudley Contracts, the OFT found that Howard Evans (Bidder B) contacted Apex (and apparently other potential bidders) (Bidder A) to inform them that they were compiling a list of bidders. This is again not a case of simple cover pricing, suggestive more of hardcore collusive tendering which conclusion is supported by the fact that two other bidders took covers off Howard Evans.'*²¹⁰⁵

- III.160. The Parties therefore draw a distinction between what they term 'simple' and 'aggravated' cover bidding based on the identity of the party initiating the contact (this being the only difference between the OFT's and Apex's version of events with respect to the FHH contracts in that case).
- III.161. The OFT does not accept this distinction between 'simple' and 'aggravated' cover bidding. In its judgment, the CAT considered both Apex's and the OFT's version of events in relation to the FHH Contracts and concluded that, on either set of facts, the elements of a concerted practice had been made out, and, crucially, that the conduct of Apex and Briggs had an anti-competitive object. In relation to the scenario where Briggs contacted Apex to request a cover price (which the Parties suggest is more akin to 'simple' cover bidding), the CAT concluded that: *'In our judgment the conduct of Apex and Briggs in Apex providing, and Briggs receiving and considering, a price for this purpose has at its object the prevention, restriction and distortion of competition.'*²¹⁰⁶
- III.162. Furthermore, in the OFT's view, the fact that the Apex estimator was a former employee of Briggs was not a determining factor in the CAT's conclusion that Apex's and Briggs' conduct had an anti-competitive object.
- III.163. In relation to the Dudley contracts, the CAT concluded that *'...the requirement of concertation is met by Apex contacting Howard Evans and Howard Evans sending Apex a fax with figures to submit.'*²¹⁰⁷ Whilst the CAT noted in its summary of the facts that Howard Evans had previously been in contact with Apex, the OFT does not consider this was material to the CAT's finding of a concertation and, therefore, to the infringement. The OFT therefore rejects the argument that Apex can be distinguished on this basis.
- III.164. Pearce submitted in its response to the Statement that the OFT is not entitled to conclude that all forms of cover bidding constitute a 'per se' infringement of the Act. Pearce highlighted that the CAT in *Apex*²¹⁰⁸ stated that a cover price 'in these circumstances' had an anti-competitive object or effect, and not cover bidding generally.²¹⁰⁹ The OFT notes that the essential elements of cover bidding arrangements assessed by the CAT (see paragraphs III.93 and III.99) were also present for each of the cover bidding infringements described in this Decision. In each of the various instances of cover bidding assessed by the CAT, it found that the conduct constituted an infringement without the need to carry out any analysis of the effects of the conduct in question.

²¹⁰⁵ Written representations of Stainforth, 27 June 2008, paragraphs 2.22; Written representations of Quarmby, 27 June 2008, paragraphs 3.17 to 3.18. The wording of the Parties' submissions was identical in respect of the quoted paragraphs. Wildgoose similarly argued that there was a dispute of fact in both Apex and Makers such that, on one version of the facts, the agreement or concerted practice was more akin to a market sharing cartel than 'normal' cover bidding (Written representations of Wildgoose, 3 July 2008 (as amended on 1 April 2009), paragraphs 4.18 to 4.19).

²¹⁰⁷ Apex Asphalt and Paving Co Limited v OFT [2005] CAT 4, at paragraph 242.

- III.165. Other Parties attempted to distinguish Apex on the basis that cover prices in that case were given by the eventual winner of the tender to other companies, thereby removing a potential competitor from the tender process. The argument advanced is that, where a cover price is given by a company that is not the eventual winner, then there is no appreciable distortion of competition and the company giving the cover price has gained no benefit.²¹¹⁰
- III.166. The OFT considers this essentially to constitute a consideration of the effects of the arrangement, whereas the OFT has concluded that the Infringements covered by this Decision have an anti-competitive object. In any event, the CAT made clear in Apex that 'Concertation the object of which is to deceive the tenderee into thinking that a bid is genuine when it is not, plainly forms part of the mischief which section 2 of the Act is seeking to prevent.' The practice of cover bidding will deceive the tenderee into thinking the bid is genuine, regardless of whether or not the company giving the cover price is the eventual winner. In analysing whether cover bidding has as its object the distortion or restriction of competition, the OFT therefore considers the identity of the eventual winner of the tender to be immaterial. See also paragraph III.114, concluding that even where there is no eventual winner, cover bidding on that tender process nonetheless constitutes an infringement.
- III.167. Several Parties also suggest that the other two CAT cases involving cover bidding can also be distinguished as 'aggravated' cases on the following bases:²¹¹¹
- (a) *Price*²¹¹² superficially appears to be a case of 'simple' cover bidding, but Price's argument that it was motivated by a desire to stay on the tender lists was undermined by the fact that it had not traded in the area for approximately 18 months, which clearly suggests that there was another motivation for taking a cover price inconsistent with a 'simple' cover bidding scenario;
 - (b) *Makers*²¹¹³ was not a straightforward cover bidding allegation, but had more to do with the alleged sub-contracting arrangement between Makers (Bidder A) and Asphaltic (Bidder B) where Makers knew that Asphaltic was bidding on the main contract against it, and Asphaltic provided Makers with a price for the entire project, which is not consistent with a simple cover bidding scenario.

²¹¹² Richard W Price (Roofing Contractors) Limited v OFT [2005] CAT 5.

²¹¹³ Makers UK Limited v OFT [2007] CAT 11.

- III.168. The OFT considers these attempts to distinguish Price and Makers to be without merit.
- III.169. In particular, some Parties submitted that Price would have been a 'simple' cover bidding case (which, it is contended, does not constitute an 'object' infringement) except that the appellant's stated motivation to stay on the tender lists was questionable by reference to the facts. However, in line with its previous decision in Apex, the CAT clearly stated that Price's motivation for engaging in cover bidding was irrelevant when deciding whether there was a restriction of competition. When assessing the facts that amounted to a concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition, the CAT specifically excluded reference to the perceived need to stay on tender lists.²¹¹⁴ Having assessed the facts as amounting to an infringement, the CAT then reiterated that 'The subjective intentions of a party to a concerted practice are immaterial where the obvious consequence is to prevent, restrict or distort competition' (emphasis added).²¹¹⁵ As the CAT clearly viewed the subjective intention of Price as irrelevant in assessing its conduct, the OFT does not accept these Parties' attempts to distinguish Price.
- III.170. The OFT also does not accept that Makers can be distinguished as a case involving 'aggravated' cover pricing on the basis that it involved a sub-contracting relationship. The appellant asserted that a sub-contracting relationship was in existence as an alternative plausible explanation of the evidence. This was, however, rejected by the CAT²¹¹⁶, which instead concluded that Makers had obtained a cover price from one of its competitors (either from Rock or Asphaltic) and that, in either scenario, this amounted to an infringement.²¹¹⁷ The OFT does not accept therefore that Makers can be distinguished as an 'aggravated' case of cover pricing.
- III.171. On this basis, the OFT does not accept that any factual differences between the present case and Apex, Price or Makers would result in the principles set out in Parts E to G being inapplicable.

J. Appreciable restriction of competition

- III.172. An agreement and/or concerted practice will infringe the Chapter I prohibition if it has as its object or effect the appreciable prevention, restriction or distortion of competition in the UK. However, it will fall outside the Chapter I prohibition if its impact on competition is not appreciable. As the ECJ held in Völk v Vervaecke in relation to the corresponding provision of the EC Treaty:

'An agreement falls outside the prohibition in Article [81(1)] where it has only an insignificant effect on the market, taking into account the weak position which the persons concerned have on the market of the product in question'.²¹¹⁸

- III.173. The OFT takes the view that an agreement and/or concerted practice will generally not restrict competition to an appreciable extent if the aggregate market share of the parties to the agreement or concerted practice does not exceed 10 per cent of the relevant market affected by the agreement, where it is made between competing undertakings (i.e. undertakings which are actual or potential competitors on any of the markets concerned).²¹¹⁹

- III.174. However, there will be circumstances where this is not the case. In particular, this approach will not apply to any agreement and/or concerted practice which directly or indirectly fixes prices, shares markets and/or rigs bids. The OFT will generally regard such agreements and/or concerted practices as being capable of restricting competition to an appreciable extent even where the parties' combined market share falls below the 10 per cent threshold.²¹²⁰ ,
- III.175. Moreover, the OFT considers that agreements and concerted practices to fix prices, share markets or rig bids will by their very nature restrict competition to an appreciable extent.²¹²¹
- III.176. The agreements and/or concerted practices described in this Decision involve price fixing and/or bid rigging. The OFT accordingly concludes that those agreements and/or concerted practices had the object of preventing, restricting and/or distorting competition to an appreciable extent, whether or not the Parties' combined market share in the relevant market fell below 10 per cent.
- III.177. One Party submitted, in its response to the Statement, that the OFT had failed to satisfy the burden and standard of proof to establish that the particular agreements and/or concerted practices in which it participated were capable of restricting competition to an appreciable extent.²¹²² These representations are addressed in Section IV, in the context of each Infringement. Another Party argued that cover pricing could not have an appreciable effect on competition where the party taking a cover had already decided that it would bid in a manner designed not to win the contract, the communication of a cover price may have occurred at a late stage in the tender process, and there were other 'genuine' bidders participating in the tender.²¹²³
- III.178. Another Party accepted that agreements and/or concerted practices which rig bids are capable of having an appreciable effect on competition, but disputed that the instances of cover pricing in which it was involved did, in fact, have as their object an appreciable restriction of competition.²¹²⁴ As stated in paragraph III.175, the OFT considers that bid rigging agreements and/or concerted practices by their very nature restrict competition to an appreciable extent. The OFT has not received any representations which lead it to conclude that cover bidding (or indeed, the particular instances of cover bidding in which this Party was involved) differ from other forms of bid rigging and price fixing in this respect.
- III.179. Such representations also ignore the basis on which cover bidding is found to be anti-competitive, which does not depend on the elimination of competition from the tender process or an actual direct impact on the price submitted by the giver of the cover price. As previously noted (see paragraph III.99), the following ways in which cover bidding may prevent, restrict or distort competition were identified by the CAT:

- '(a) it reduces the number of competitive bids submitted in respect of that particular tender;*
- (b) it deprives the tenderee of the opportunity of seeking a replacement (competitive) bid;*
- (c) it prevents other contractors wishing to place competitive bids in respect of that particular tender from doing so;*
- (d) it gives the tenderee a false impression of the nature of competition in the market, leading at least potentially to future tender processes being similarly impaired'.²¹²⁵*

III.180. With every instance of cover bidding set out in this Decision having these consequences, the competitive process is clearly affected to an appreciable extent whether or not other genuine bidders remain and whether or not the party submitting the cover might otherwise have declined to bid for the tender. Similarly the timing of the communication of the cover bid from one party to another is irrelevant.

III.181. Furthermore, and as noted above, a selective bidding process is designed to engender competition between a small number of tenderers. An essential feature of this system is that bids are prepared entirely independently. The loss of independence as a result of collusion with other bidders in a selective bidding process can therefore have an even greater distortionary effect on the tendering process, than in an open bidding process (see paragraphs III.71 to III.73 above). It is within this context that the appreciability of any restriction of competition should be considered. In the context of a selective tender process, the OFT considers that market shares do not provide a reliable indicator of the actual or potential impact of the Parties' conduct.

III.182. As such, the OFT remains of the view that the agreements and/or concerted practices particularised in this Decision had the object of preventing, restricting and/or distorting competition to an appreciable extent.

K. Effect on trade

III.183. It is necessary for the purposes of the Chapter I prohibition that the agreement and/or concerted practice may affect trade 'within the United Kingdom'. Likewise, it is necessary for the purposes of Article 81(1) that the agreement and/or concerted practice may affect trade 'between Member States'. In this section, the OFT addresses the legal principles underlying these requirements in turn.

Effect on trade within the United Kingdom

III.184. By virtue of section 2(1)(a) of the Act, the Chapter I prohibition applies only to agreements or concerted practices which:

'may affect trade within the United Kingdom'.

²¹²⁵ Apex Asphalt and Paving Co Limited v OFT [2005] CAT 4, at paragraph 251. See also Makers UK Limited v OFT [2007] CAT 11, at paragraphs 14 to 15.

- III.185. For the purposes of the Chapter I prohibition, the UK includes any part of the UK where an agreement and/or concerted practice operates or is intended to operate.²¹²⁶
- III.186. One Party suggested in its response to the Statement that this provision of the Act is in conflict with Article 81(1), where there is a requirement that the relevant part be a 'substantial part'. This Party submitted that the conflict between national and EC law should be interpreted in its favour, and the limited geographical coverage of its contracting works means that there was no effect upon a 'substantial part' of the UK.²¹²⁷
- III.187. The OFT rejects the suggestion that there is any such conflict between Article 81 and section 2 of the Act. Article 81 applies where an arrangement 'may affect trade between Member States' (see paragraphs III.191 to III.196 below).²¹²⁸ The two separate requirements as to whether the practice must affect 'trade between Member States' or 'trade within the United Kingdom' are clearly intended to ensure that Article 81 and section 2 of the Act have different geographic scopes. It would therefore be nonsensical to require the same degree of geographic coverage to find an infringement of the Chapter I prohibition as for Article 81. When applying Article 81 and section 2 of the Act to an agreement operating in only a part of the UK, any divergence in treatment is due to the inherent differences in the territorial scope of each provision, and does not signal a conflict between domestic and European law.
- III.188. It should also be noted that, to infringe the Chapter I prohibition, an agreement and/or concerted practice does not actually have to affect trade as long as it is capable of affecting trade.
- III.189. One Party submitted that, to the extent that there was an effect on trade within the UK as a result of the Infringements in which it participated, any such effect would be minimal.²¹²⁹ However, the CAT has confirmed that the test does not import a requirement that the effect on trade should be appreciable.²¹³⁰ Around 20 Parties submitted representations referring to *P&S Amusements*²¹³¹, in which the CAT's interpretation of the law on this point was questioned by the Chancellor of the High Court.²¹³² Whilst noting the comments made in that case, the OFT will continue to have regard to the CAT's interpretation, unless this is overturned by the Court of Appeal.
- III.190. Finally, agreements and concerted practices to fix prices, share markets or rig bids appreciably restrict competition by their very nature, and so are inherently capable of affecting trade.²¹³³ Moreover, for the specific reasons listed at paragraph III.179 above, and in particular the fact that other contractors are deprived of the opportunity to bid, the OFT considers that cover bidding practices are capable of an appreciable effect on trade.

Effect on trade between Member States

III.191. Pursuant to Article 3(1) of Regulation 1/2003, which entered into force on 1 May 2004, where a National Competition Authority, such as the OFT, applies national competition law to agreements, decisions of associations of undertakings or concerted practices within the meaning of Article 81 of the EC Treaty that may have an effect on trade between EU Member States within the meaning of the provision, then it must also apply Article 81 to such agreements, decisions or concerted practices. Thus, Article 81 will apply in parallel to national competition law. Since a number of the Infringements took place after 1 May 2004, the OFT considers that it has a duty to consider whether trade between Member States may have been appreciably affected, in order to determine whether Article 81 is applicable as well as the Chapter I prohibition.

III.192. The concept of ‘trade between Member States’ implies that there must be an impact, actual or potential, on cross-border activity involving at least two Member States, whether all or part of them.²¹³⁴ In this context, the concept of ‘trade’ has a wide scope, and includes trade in services as well as goods.²¹³⁵

III.193. In order that trade ‘may’ be affected by an agreement or concerted practice, the ECJ has held that:

*‘it must be possible to foresee with a sufficient degree of probability on the basis of a set of objective factors of law or fact that it may have an influence, direct or indirect, actual or potential, on the pattern of trade between Member States’.*²¹³⁶

III.194. Finally, the agreement or concerted practice must affect trade between Member States to an appreciable extent.²¹³⁷ This is a jurisdictional requirement demarcating the boundary between EC competition law and national competition law.²¹³⁸ Appreciability can be assessed by reference to the market position and importance of the undertakings concerned, and will be absent where the effect on the market is insignificant because of their weak position on the market.²¹³⁹ For example, the Commission has indicated that agreements between small and medium-sized undertakings, the activities of which are normally local, or at most regional in nature, are unlikely to have an appreciable effect on trade between Member States.²¹⁴⁰

III.195. Horizontal cartels covering the whole of a Member State are normally capable of affecting trade between Member States. The Community Courts have held in a number of cases that agreements extending over the whole territory of a Member State by their very nature have the effect of reinforcing the partitioning of markets on a national basis by hindering the economic penetration which the EC Treaty is designed to bring about. The capacity of such agreements to partition the internal market follows from the fact that the undertakings participating in cartels in only one Member State normally need to take action to exclude competitors from other Member States.²¹⁴¹ In contrast, agreements that cover only part of a Member State are not likely appreciably to affect trade between Member States, unless they have the effect of hindering competitors from other Member States from gaining access to part of the Member State, which constitutes a substantial part of the common market.²¹⁴² Agreements that are local in nature are in themselves unlikely to have this effect.²¹⁴³

III.196. The OFT sets out in paragraphs V.15 to V.25 of the Legal Assessment section below, its reasons for considering that the Infringements set out in this Decision are not, individually or in aggregate, capable of appreciably affecting trade between Member States. The OFT considers as a result that it is not obliged to apply Article 81 to the Infringements.

L. Burden and standard of proof

Burden of proof

III.197. The burden of proving an infringement of the Chapter I prohibition lies upon the OFT. The CAT held in Napp that:

'95. As regards the burden of proof, the Director²¹⁴⁴ accepts that it is incumbent upon him to establish the infringement, and that the persuasive burden of proof remains on him throughout. However, that does not necessarily prevent the operation of certain evidential presumptions...

100. In our view it follows from Article 6(2) [of the European Convention on Human Rights] that the burden of proof rests throughout on the Director to prove the infringements alleged'.²¹⁴⁵

Standard of proof

III.198. As regards the standard of proof, the CAT has held, also in Napp, that:

'...formally speaking the standard of proof in proceedings under the Act involving penalties is the civil standard of proof, but that standard is to be applied bearing in mind that infringements of the Act are serious matters attracting severe financial penalties. It is for the Director to satisfy us in each case, on the basis of strong and compelling evidence, taking account of the seriousness of what is alleged, that the infringement is duly proved, the undertaking being entitled to the presumption of innocence, and to any reasonable doubt there may be'.²¹⁴⁶

III.199. The CAT has since provided further elucidation on this passage in JJB Sports plc and AllSports Limited v Office of Fair Trading, stating:

'...the reference by the Tribunal to "strong and compelling" evidence at [109] of Napp should not be interpreted as meaning that something akin to the criminal standard is applicable to these proceedings. The standard remains the civil standard. The evidence must however be sufficient to convince the Tribunal in the circumstances of the particular case, and to overcome the presumption of innocence to which the undertaking concerned is entitled'.²¹⁴⁷

III.200. In other words, the standard of proof is no higher than the balance of probabilities but, in deciding whether this is met, regard should be to any surrounding circumstances which might increase, or decrease, the probability that an infringement of the Act occurred.²¹⁴⁸ In this case, the OFT takes full account of the fact that infringements of the Act are serious matters attracting severe financial penalties, but also notes that, by many of the Parties' own admissions, cover pricing was a widespread practice in the construction industry at the time when the Infringements took place. The OFT considers that both matters are relevant considerations when assessing the evidence to determine whether facts amounting to cover pricing have been established on the balance of probabilities.

²¹⁴⁵ Napp Pharmaceutical Holdings Ltd v Director General of Fair Trading [2002] CAT 1, at paragraphs 95 and 100. The CAT confirmed this approach in the recent Replica Kit judgment JJB Sports Plc and AllSports Ltd v OFT [2004] CAT 17, at paragraph 164; as upheld in Apex Asphalt and Paving Co Limited v OFT [2005] CAT 4, at paragraph 60. See also Argos Limited and Littlewoods Limited v OFT [2004] CAT 24, at paragraph 158.

²¹⁴⁸ This has been confirmed in recent decisions of the House of Lords, in other contexts but of general application, confirming that there is only one civil standard of proof, see Re D (Northern Ireland) [2008] 1 WLR 1499 at paragraph 28.

Evidential presumptions and inferences

- III.201. The OFT must adduce precise and consistent evidence to give grounds for a firm conviction that the infringement took place.²¹⁴⁹ One Party submitted that it is only when a particular document meets these criteria that the OFT can draw inferences from that document.²¹⁵⁰ However, the CFI has previously made clear that not every item of evidence has to satisfy those criteria in relation to every aspect of the infringement. Rather, it is sufficient if the body of evidence, viewed as a whole, meets those criteria.²¹⁵¹
- III.202. Indeed, it is clear that neither the burden nor the standard of proof preclude the OFT, where appropriate, from relying on evidential presumptions. As the ECJ has held, the evidence must be assessed as a whole.²¹⁵² Equally, the CAT has noted that:

'[This] approach does not in our view preclude the Director, in discharging the burden of proof, from relying in certain circumstances, on inferences or presumptions that would, in the absence of any countervailing indications, normally follow from a given set of facts, for example...that an undertaking's presence at a meeting with manifestly anti-competitive purpose implies, in the absence of explanation, participation in the cartel alleged'.²¹⁵³

Evidence required to establish a concerted practice

- III.203. Specific guidance was given in relation to establishing concertation in price-fixing cases under the Chapter I prohibition in Replica Kit, where the CAT noted:

'206. As regards price-fixing cases under the Chapter I prohibition, the Tribunal pointed out in Claymore Dairies²¹⁵⁴ that cartels are by their nature hidden and secret; little or nothing may be committed to writing. In our view even a single item of evidence, or wholly circumstantial evidence, depending on the particular context and the particular circumstances, may be sufficient to meet the required standard: see Claymore Dairies at [3] to [10]...²¹⁵⁵ As the Court of Justice said in Cases 204/OOP etc. Aalborg Portland v Commission, judgment of 17 January 2004, not yet reported, at paragraphs 55 to 57:

'55. Since the prohibition on participating in anti-competitive agreements and the penalties which offenders may incur are well-known, it is normal for the activities which those practices and those agreements entail to take place in a clandestine fashion, for meetings to be held in secret, most frequently in a non-member country, and for the associated documentation to be reduced to a minimum.

56. Even if the Commission discovers evidence explicitly showing unlawful conduct between traders, such as the minutes of a meeting, it will normally be only fragmentary and sparse, so that it is often necessary to reconstitute certain details by deduction...

57. In most cases, the existence of an anti-competitive practice or agreement must be inferred from a number of coincidences and indicia, which, taken together, may, in the absence of another plausible explanation, constitute evidence of an infringement of the competition rules'.²¹⁵⁶

- III.204. This approach has subsequently been applied by the CAT in the specific context of cover bidding.²¹⁵⁷
- III.205. Several Parties submitted that the OFT has failed to adduce evidence of direct contact or an exchange of information between themselves and another Party, contrasting this with *Apex*²¹⁵⁸, where the OFT adduced direct contemporaneous evidence of faxes exchanged between the parties.²¹⁵⁹
- III.206. First, as demonstrated by the cases cited above (see paragraphs III.203 to III.203), both the ECJ and the CAT have noted that the very nature of a cartel may result in a lack of documentary evidence and, as such, the OFT may have to rely on inferences and circumstantial evidence to prove an infringement.
- III.207. Secondly, whilst a concerted practice may occur where there is reciprocal contact between competitors (see paragraph III.50 above), the OFT is not required to provide contemporaneous documentary evidence of this contact. The CFI noted in Dresdner Bank that: *'As anti-competitive agreements are known to be prohibited, the Commission cannot be required to produce documents expressly attesting to contacts between the traders concerned. The fragmentary and sporadic items of evidence which may be available to the Commission should, in any event, be capable of being supplemented by inferences which allow the relevant circumstances to be reconstituted.'*²¹⁶⁰ The CAT has also confirmed that the OFT is not required to adduce documentary evidence in order to prove an infringement: *'in our view, there is no rule of law that, in order to establish a Chapter I infringement, the OFT has to rely on written or documentary evidence.'*²¹⁶¹

²¹⁶¹ Claymore Dairies v OFT [2003] CAT 18, at paragraph 8.

- III.208. Finally, the nature of the evidence available to the OFT will obviously differ from one case to the next. The OFT does not accept the proposition that, because a certain type of evidence was adduced in the decision appealed in Apex, this obliges the OFT to produce equivalent evidence in all subsequent cases involving a similar type of infringement.
- III.209. One Party referred to *Scottish Flat Roofing (I)*²¹⁶² and *Scottish Flat Roofing (II)*²¹⁶³, in which the OFT had concluded that there was insufficient evidence to prove that certain entities had committed an infringement. This Party suggested that the OFT should apply the same principles in the present case, in respect of the evidence adduced in relation to that Party.²¹⁶⁴
- III.210. When reaching each decision, the OFT assesses the evidence relating to a potential infringement as a whole²¹⁶⁵, taking into account any relevant surrounding circumstances. As the CAT has noted, in issuing an infringement decision the OFT will weigh up the evidence before it, and is entitled to place such weight on witness evidence as it thinks fit.²¹⁶⁶ The assessment of evidence will necessarily be fact-specific and case-specific. Consequently, the OFT does not consider that parallels can usefully be drawn between the action it has taken in one case and the action it should take in another separate case, which is based on different facts and evidence, other than to note that the OFT has applied the same burden and standard of proof in this Decision as in those past cases.

Documentary evidence and conduct on the market

- III.211. Guidance has also been given in relation to establishing conduct on the market. Where undertakings seek to adduce proof to rebut a presumption of such conduct, this is a high burden to discharge, especially where the proof of the concerted practice is based upon documentary evidence.²¹⁶⁷ In PVC II, the CFI held that where the Commission's decision was based upon documentary evidence:

'the burden is on the applicants not merely to submit an alleged alternative explanation for the facts found by the Commission but to challenge the existence of those facts established on the basis of the documents produced by the Commission'.²¹⁶⁸

- III.212. One Party asserted that this principle does not apply to it, because the evidence adduced by the OFT does not amount to 'documentary evidence' and, consequently, it is sufficient for it to put forward a plausible explanation of the facts as an alternative to the one adopted by the OFT.²¹⁶⁹ This Party referred to *Coats Holdings*²¹⁷⁰, where the CFI considered whether the evidence before it amounted to documentary evidence, but concluded that the evidence in question was ambiguous:

*'Since the evidence calls for interpretation, the Commission's argument is not convincing. According to the Commission, as there is documentary evidence, it is not sufficient for the applicants to provide a plausible explanation. However, that evidence is 'documentary evidence' only if the Commission's rather than the applicants' explanation is accepted. It follows that, in the present case, there is no documentary evidence within the meaning of the case law. As far as the inter-conditional obligations are concerned, the applicants are thus free to put forward a 'plausible explanation' of the facts as an alternative to the one adopted by the Commission.'*²¹⁷¹

III.213. Section IV below particularises the evidence adduced by the OFT in respect of each Infringement and addresses the Parties' submissions about the interpretation and strength of this evidence. However, as a general point, the OFT does not consider the documentary evidence adduced in this Decision to be akin to that in Coats Holdings.²¹⁷² Certain documents adduced in evidence in this case, such as tender registers, incorporate coding within the document in order to record where a cover price was taken or given. Witness evidence may be used to explain the coding system and the way in which the document was prepared and used. However, this does not equate to a situation where there may be alternative plausible explanations of a neutral document, as was the case in Coats Holdings. Consequently, it is insufficient for the Parties merely to put forward an alternative explanation for the documents found by the OFT, but they must also challenge the existence of the facts established by the documentary evidence as explained by witnesses (see the test set out in PVC II at paragraph III.211 above).

Witness evidence

- III.214. One Party submitted that the OFT is not entitled to rely on the uncorroborated evidence of a competitor in order to reach an infringement decision.²¹⁷³ This Party cites the CFI's judgment in *Bolloré v Commission*²¹⁷⁴, which stated that 'an admission by one undertaking accused of having participated in a cartel, the accuracy of which is contested by several other undertakings similarly accused, cannot be regarded as constituting adequate proof of an infringement committed by the latter unless it is supported by other evidence.'²¹⁷⁵
- III.215. The OFT refutes the suggestion that this should be interpreted so broadly as to mean it is not entitled to place reliance on the witness evidence of a competitor (or its employees); rather, in each case, the OFT considers all the evidence in the round, having particular regard to the extent of the corroboration but also taking into account the credibility of the witness in question and his motivation for giving evidence.
- III.216. Indeed, the CFI has noted that where a witness is considered to be reliable, the degree of corroboration required is less, in terms of precision and depth, than would be the case if the witness were not credible.²¹⁷⁶ In this respect, the CFI has stated:

*'...where a person who has been asked to comment on documents... admits that he committed an infringement and thus admitted the existence of facts going beyond those whose existence could be directly inferred from the documents in question, that fact implies, a priori, in the absence of special circumstances indicating otherwise, that that person had resolved to tell the truth.'*²¹⁷⁷

- III.217. The OFT therefore considers that it is entitled to rely on the evidence of a credible witness, particularly where that evidence is supported by surrounding circumstances. Indeed, in this Decision, the witness evidence for each Infringement is 'supported' by other evidence/indicia and is therefore not uncorroborated.

Conclusion

- III.218. In using the term 'strong and compelling' to describe its evidence in the Conduct of the Parties section below, the OFT has followed the principles described in this section. The OFT considers that the evidence set out below is sufficient to satisfy the civil standard of proof and hence to overcome the presumption of innocence, to which the Parties are entitled.²¹⁷⁸ As noted above, submissions by a Party which are particular to a piece of evidence or an Infringement are addressed in Section IV below.

M. Matters pre-dating 1 March 2000

III.219. The Act came into force on 1 March 2000. The OFT has considered two issues in respect of matters pre-dating its entry into force, namely agreements which cannot conclusively be shown to have been made after 1 March 2000, and evidence which pre-dates 1 March 2000.

Agreements which might have been concluded before 1 March 2000

III.220. The OFT accepts that in respect of a limited number of the infringements that were alleged in its Statement it cannot be established conclusively that the restrictive agreement was made after 1 March 2000.

III.221. Certain of these infringements are nonetheless pursued. The OFT considers it likely, on the balance of probabilities, that the agreements to provide/accept a cover price in these instances were made after 1 March 2000. However, to the extent that they may have been made before 1 March 2000 the OFT considers that the Chapter I prohibition does still apply to them.

III.222. To establish that the Chapter I prohibition does not apply to an agreement made before 1 March 2000, but continuing after that date, it must be shown inter alia that that agreement would not have been void under Section 35(1)(a) Restrictive Trade Practices Act 1976 ('the RTPA') immediately before 1 March 2000.²¹⁷⁹ In effect, if an agreement was considered anti-competitive and thus illegal under the regime which preceded the Act it cannot escape the operation of competition law simply because the Act came into force - rather, its illegality is to be dealt with by way of Chapter I instead.

III.223. The OFT considers that all of the Infringements involving cover pricing which are being pursued would (if they were concluded before 1 March 2000) have been void under the RTPA as:

- (a) The construction or carrying out of buildings, structures and other works by contractors is a supply of goods for the purposes of the RTPA;²¹⁸⁰
- (b) An agreement to provide/accept a cover price for construction work is a 'restriction' under the RTPA. Under such an agreement, one bidder agrees not to offer to supply goods at a price above the level of the cover price, while the other agrees not to offer to supply goods at a price below the level of the cover price. It thus entails restrictions being accepted by both parties, in respect of the prices to be quoted and charged to the procuring party;²¹⁸¹

[2005] CAT 25, at paragraphs 115 to 116; as cited in Makers UK Limited v OFT [2007] CAT 11, at paragraph 46.

²¹⁷⁹ Paragraph 19 of Schedule 13 to the Act. The Chapter I prohibition is dis-applied only to the extent that an agreement made before 1 March 2000 is within the scope of the provisions for a transitional period.

²¹⁸⁰ Section 43(3) RTPA

²¹⁸¹ Section 6(1)(a) RTPA The OFT also notes that in the case In re Electrical Installations Agreement [1970], 1 WLR 1391 at 1394, decided under Restrictive Trade Practices Act 1956, the Registrar of Restrictive Trading Agreements listed as a restriction: 'Cover prices given or received. Not to offer to supply

- (c) An agreement to provide/accept a cover price for construction work was therefore registrable;²¹⁸²
- (d) Such an agreement would not benefit from the exemption for certain 'non-notifiable' agreements. For reasons given in paragraphs III.119 to III.124 of this Decision the OFT considers agreements to provide/accept a cover price to be price fixing agreements, and these are outside the scope of the 'non-notifiable' exemptions;²¹⁸³
- (e) None of the agreements in question were registered with the OFT, as they were required to be. They were all, therefore, void.²¹⁸⁴

III.224. The OFT is therefore satisfied that even if the agreements in question were made before 1 March 2000 the Chapter I prohibition would still apply to them. It is therefore not necessary to establish conclusively that these agreements were made after 1 March 2000.

Evidence which pre-dates 1 March 2000

III.225. As noted above, the Act came into force on 1 March 2000 and any infringement would operate from no earlier than that date. However, the OFT takes the view that evidence relating to facts which arose before that date may be important for the understanding of the facts and matters at issue on and after 1 March 2000.

III.226. In this regard, the OFT notes the statement of the CAT in Napp:

*'It goes without saying that there can be no infringement of the Chapter I and Chapter II prohibitions on any date earlier than 1 March 2000...Nonetheless, in a case such as the present it is impossible to understand the situation as it was during the period of alleged infringement...without also understanding how that situation arose as a result of facts arising before 1 March 2000. In our view it is relevant to take facts arising before 1 March 2000 into account for the purpose, but only for the purpose, of throwing light on facts and matters in issue on or after that date.'*²¹⁸⁵

III.227. The OFT has, therefore, taken into consideration such evidence where it is available and relevant.

III.228. One Party questioned in its response to the Statement whether facts in existence before 1 March 2000 had been taken into account in assessing mitigating factors for the purpose of penalty calculations.²¹⁸⁶ The OFT confirms that where relevant evidence put forward by Parties in support of mitigating goods in response to an invitation to tender at a price below that given to him by another person invited to tender for the supply of such goods or at a price above that which he has given to another such person in either case without first notifying that other'.

Although the Restrictive Practices Court did not rule upon the Registrar's analysis (the contractors having accepted that their agreement was a registrable restriction), the OFT considers this confirmation of its view that an agreement to provide/accept a cover price is a restriction under the RTPA.

²¹⁸² Section 1(1)(a) RTPA.

factors pre-dates 1 March 2000, the OFT would take that evidence into account. Mitigating factors are addressed in Section VI (Enforcement) below.

SECTION IV – THE CONDUCT OF THE PARTIES

A. Structure of this section

IV.1. This section is formed of three parts, each of which should be read in conjunction with the others:

(i) Section B: General comments on cover pricing and other bid rigging activities in the construction industry in England

This section sets out certain common themes that have emerged in the course of the OFT's investigation, concerning the way in which construction companies conducted the practice of cover pricing and other bid rigging activities during the period under investigation. The widespread and endemic practice of cover pricing in the construction industry was carried out in a relatively standard way, and the comments in this section should be read as applying to all Parties and all of the Infringements that are described in the following sections, except where otherwise stated in the descriptions of the Infringements.

(ii) Section C: A description of the general cover pricing and other bid rigging activities of each of the 37 companies that originally applied for leniency (now forming 33 Parties since some of these companies are treated together as part of one undertaking)

In order to avoid extensive repetition, the OFT sets out in this section the way in which each of the leniency Parties engaged in cover pricing and other bid rigging activities, including a brief explanation of the documents from each such Party evidencing the provision or receipt of cover prices. As many of the leniency Parties were party to more than three Infringements, the OFT sets out in this section much of the information that is common to all of the Infringements in which these companies participated. The activities of the leniency Parties are described in alphabetical order.

(iii) Section D: A description of each of the Infringements

This section sets out the specific evidence in respect of each Infringement, and the inferences and conclusions drawn by the OFT from that evidence. The Infringements are described in chronological order.

IV.2. Thus for each Infringement, reference should be made not only to the particular part of section D setting out details of that Infringement, but also to the relevant part(s) of section C detailing the cover pricing activities of any leniency Party(ies) involved in that Infringement, and in addition to the general comments on cover pricing and other bid rigging activities in section B.

IV.3. The OFT has therefore included, in Annex A towards the end of this Decision, a Navigation Table, which details the paragraphs in which the case against each Party may be found in relation to each relevant Infringement. Each Party is found by the OFT to be a party to a number of Infringements, in most cases three but in some cases two or one, and in the case of leniency Parties, often more than three. In the Navigation Table, the Parties are listed in alphabetical order and against each Party are listed the Infringements in which the OFT has found that Party engaged in bid rigging activities, together with references to the relevant paragraphs in section D describing that Infringement and the relevant paragraphs in section C describing the cover pricing activities of the leniency Party(ies) involved in that Infringement, where applicable.

- IV.4. The Navigation Table also sets out in respect of each Infringement,
- a. for a leniency Party, whether: (i) it will receive either full 100 per cent immunity for that Infringement (because it is a But For Infringement for that Party); or (ii) alternatively its allocated leniency percentage deduction from the penalty for that Infringement (because it is a Not But For Infringement for that Party)²¹⁸⁷; or (iii) it will receive no penalty for that Infringement (because the Infringement is not amongst the most recent three Not But For Infringements for the Party); and
 - b. for a non-lenieny Party, whether it will receive a 25 per cent deduction from the penalty for that Infringement (because it accepted the OFT's Fast Track Offer in respect of that Infringement) or alternatively will not be entitled to any deduction from penalty for that Infringement (because it did not accept the OFT's Fast Track Offer in respect of that Infringement).

B. General comments on cover pricing and other bid rigging activities in the construction industry in England

Cover pricing in the construction industry in England

- IV.5. This Decision is concerned with bid rigging activities that took place in relation to tendered works in the construction industry in England between the coming into force of the Competition Act on 1 March 2000, and December 2006.
- IV.6. When a purchaser wishes to purchase construction services, it typically invites a number of (what it believes to be) suitably qualified contractors to submit tender bids detailing the price at which they could undertake the work specified, in order to have competition for the individual contract between those contractors and obtain a competitive price. Any co-ordination or co-operation between competitors invited to tender in relation to the manner in which they intend to respond to the tender including individual tender prices which has the object or effect of preventing, restricting or distorting this competition (i.e. collusive tendering or bid rigging activities) is likely to amount to a serious infringement of the Chapter I prohibition.
- IV.7. The majority of the bid rigging activities discovered during the course of this investigation by the OFT involved cover pricing. Cover pricing occurs when a potential bidder obtains a price from a competitor in the tender process which is not designed to win the contract but is intended to give the appearance of competition. The CAT has fully endorsed the OFT's decision in its investigations into the roofing industry that cover pricing is anti-competitive and contravenes the Chapter I prohibition.²¹⁸⁸
- IV.8. In addition the OFT found a number of instances of compensation payments agreed and exchanged between bidders, discussed in general terms in paragraphs IV.147 to IV.155 below.

²¹⁸⁷ Each leniency Party's individual penalty calculation (to be found in Section VI (Enforcement) below) also sets out the relevant Infringements for which penalties are being calculated.

²¹⁸⁸ See, for example, Apex Asphalt and Paving Co Limited v Office of Fair Trading, 24 February 2005, www.catribunal.org.uk/documents/Jdg1032Apex240205.pdf.

IV.9. As noted above, the OFT describes in separate general sections for each of the leniency Parties, at paragraphs IV.158 to IV.751 below, how each of them would approach the giving and receiving of cover prices, and how such activities would be recorded. Certain common themes emerge, however, between all of the Parties in this investigation, and these are described in this section. It would be impractical to include all of the many comments on these general themes received by the OFT in leniency applications, in interviews with witnesses from leniency Parties, in responses to the OFT's Fast Track Offer, and in responses to the Statement. The OFT has therefore included in this section only a representative selection of comments received from these sources.

The widespread nature of cover pricing in the construction industry in England

IV.10. As stated in paragraphs II.1447, II.1449 and II.1460 of the OFT's Investigation section above, the OFT has obtained considerable evidence of the widespread and longstanding nature of cover pricing, also referred to as 'taking help' or 'giving assistance' by its participants²¹⁸⁹, in the construction industry in England, amongst companies of all sizes. First, many of the leniency Parties testified to the endemic nature of the practice both in their leniency applications and through the testimony of their employees in interview; second, several non-leniency Parties made reference to it in their responses to the OFT's Fast Track Offer; and third, many Parties made representations to this effect in their responses to the Statement.

IV.11. In relation to the leniency Parties, for example, Loach stated 'cover pricing in this area ... is a long standing practice which has been so prevalent and so well known within the industry to both buyers and potential purchasers alike that it has not occurred in the past to those involved that it might in any way be improper'.²¹⁹⁰

IV.12. Clegg stated 'Cover pricing is a universally accepted practice within the construction industry and has been so for as far back as most people can remember ... cover pricing is so common as to be regarded as endemic within the construction industry, and has been practiced by all companies regardless of their size'.²¹⁹¹

IV.13. Herbert Baggaley stated 'The practice of cover pricing within the general contracting industry is decades long. It has been known to individual estimators and directors within the industry as long as they have worked within it. In the course of their dealings with other estimators, the Estimating Department of HBC has not had occasion to explain the practice to another estimator. It is therefore considered to be endemic within the industry and that it would be unlikely for there to be more than a handful (if any at all) of Contractors who did not participate during the use of it'.²¹⁹²

IV.14. Thomas Vale stated 'The practice of cover pricing is widespread in the construction industry and has been for many years. It has been described by estimating personnel within Thomas Vale and by organisations including the National Federation of Builders and other trade bodies as “endemic”, “custom and practice” and “commonplace”.²¹⁹³

- IV.15. In interview, Robert Walker, a Director of Mansell, stated in response to the question ‘you were aware that, that Mansell had up to ... the time when you were talking then, had been involved in cover pricing?’, ‘Well, not specifically but it was just such an industry-wide practice that it would have been amazing if the business hadn’t have been. I think it was, it was more ... the exception would have been that a company’s not doing it’.²¹⁹⁴
- IV.16. A number of non-leniency Parties also, of their own volition, testified to the widespread and endemic nature of cover pricing in England in their responses to the OFT’s Fast Track Offer. For example, four companies, Interclass²¹⁹⁵, Richardson Projects²¹⁹⁶, Speller-Metcalf²¹⁹⁷ and Wygar²¹⁹⁸, all described cover pricing as a ‘universally common practice’ in relation to tendered works. Thomas Long described it as ‘normal trading practice within the industry for many years’.²¹⁹⁹ E Manton stated ‘The company accepts it was unwise to get involved in cover pricing but it was such a common and widespread activity for so many years, that no one in the construction industry viewed it as an illegal practice’.²²⁰⁰ Finally, J J & A R Jackson stated ‘We did not applied (sic) for leniency, as we believe that giving and receiving covers was widely established in the industry. We expected your investigation would highlight an accepted practice, used by thousands of contractors as well as sub contractors such as steel erectors, plumbers, electricians etc’.²²⁰¹
- IV.17. As stated above, in their responses to the Statement, many Parties agreed that the practice of cover pricing was endemic, ‘in the sense of being a standard and accepted practice since time immemorial’.²²⁰² Many companies made claims to the OFT that ‘...the practice was widely understood and accepted, even being taught on courses for industry personnel’.²²⁰³ F Parkinson stated that ‘...cover pricing was a practice accepted to such an extent that it formed part of their (staff’s) education in the fundamental custom and practice of the construction industry’.²²⁰⁴
- IV.18. R Durnell stated that the practice of cover pricing involved as many as 186,107 companies²²⁰⁵, and ‘therefore the problem has been not one of a deliberate flouting of the law but of a total failure on the part of the government, the various advisory and educating bodies, the trade associations and trade press and magazines to effectively communicate that the practice of cover pricing as carried out in the construction industry was considered to be in breach of the law'.²²⁰⁶ R Durnnell further stated that '...the OFT did not need to investigate to discover cover pricing... the whole industry knew of it'.²²⁰⁷

Publications and training regarding cover pricing

IV.19. The extent to which the practice was regarded as both legitimate and widespread in the construction industry is further demonstrated by a text book on the bidding process (Construction Planning, Programming and Control by Brian Cooke and Peter Williams, Blackwell Publishing 2004) that contained the following advice to bidders:

'Degree of competition

- How many contractors have been invited to tender?
- Which contractors are on the tender list?
- Obtain details of competitors by making contact with material suppliers or specialist subcontractors listed in the contract documents
- Do we want the work or should we take a cover price (i.e. an arrangement whereby one contractor is given a price by another contractor which is then submitted as a tender offer. The price will be sufficiently realistic to look like a bona fide tender but high enough so as not to win the contract)?'.²²⁰⁸

IV.20. In response to the Statement, many Parties stated that the textbook to which the OFT referred above was not the only one to have 'taught cover pricing'. Parties stated that in *Construction Contracts: Law and Management*²²⁰⁹ by Murdoch and Hughes, a textbook described in its introduction as 'the UK's leading textbook on the law governing construction contracts', reference was made to contractors submitting a 'cover bid', in the following terms: 'if the job is not wanted the contractor will submit an inflated tender, called a cover bid'.

IV.21. However, the OFT notes that Construction Contracts: Law and Management does not suggest that an inflated tender should be arrived at as a result of collusion with competitors. There is no prohibition in competition law against a company unilaterally deciding to submit an inflated bid and calculating and submitting that inflated bid without any form of collusion with its competitors. The OFT defines cover pricing in paragraph IV.7 above as 'when a potential bidder obtains a price from a competitor in the tender process which is not designed to win the contract but is intended to give the appearance of competition' (emphasis added).

IV.22. On this point, several Parties accepted that unilaterally submitting a cover bid ²²⁰⁸ Construction Planning, Programming and Control by Brian Cooke and Peter Williams, Blackwell Publishing 2004, page 196. The OFT wrote to the publishers on 17 March 2006 and suggested that this text be amended, given that cover pricing is a breach of the Act, OFT Document Reference 5950. On 20 March 2006 the publishers confirmed that the text would be amended at the next reprint, OFT Document Reference 5951.

would not infringe the Chapter I prohibition, but argued that 'anyone working in the construction industry and taking a course using Murdoch and Hughes as their textbook would know that it would be necessary to obtain realistic tender figures in order to submit a cover bid as instructed, as is clear from Cooke and Williams' more recent textbook referred to by the OFT'.²²¹⁰

- IV.23. Another example provided by R Durtnell was the 'Honeywood File' by H B Creswell²²¹¹, which made reference to obtaining a cover price 'from another builder who is making a bona fide offer' if the builder was too busy to prepare a competitive tender.²²¹² In addition, in response to the Statement, Parties gave further examples of instances that they believed provided evidence that cover pricing was 'taught' as a 'legitimate activity'.²²¹³ In relation to this, as outlined above, the OFT accepts that this practice was regarded as both legitimate and widespread in the industry.
- IV.24. A number of Parties made representations relating to mitigation of penalties, in light of the foregoing and these are addressed in Section VI (Enforcement) below. Several Parties represented that although they did not seek to argue that cover pricing was not an infringement of the Act, nevertheless they considered that its illegality was '...not known to the construction industry at large, and moreover that the leading textbooks used in teaching those in the industry specifically instructed personnel undergoing courses on how to engage in cover pricing. This is believed to be a unique circumstance in any of the OFT's investigations, and is thus powerful mitigation when it comes to penalty calculations'.²²¹⁴ GMI stated that *'... even an acknowledged textbook on the bidding process includes cover pricing as an accepted matter to be considered by potential tenderers ... this must lessen the seriousness of such a cover pricing exercise and this should be reflected in a lessening of any proposed penalty.'*²²¹⁵
- IV.25. Some Parties claimed that the practice of cover pricing was probably also known to, and accepted by, the clients themselves.²²¹⁶ One of those Parties went further, suggesting that it was aware that in certain circumstances, clients have colluded in the process of cover pricing to satisfy their procurement regime (i.e. to meet requirements to receive a certain number of bids) by asking other contractors to submit bids that were higher than the already negotiated figure with a preferred contractor. In relation to the latter, the OFT notes that it has not been provided with any evidence of this having taken place in relation to the Infringements. Moreover, such arrangements may not amount to cover pricing as defined in this Decision (i.e. a form of collusion between competitors), albeit that they may give rise to restrictions or distortions of competition and may therefore amount to infringements of the Chapter I prohibition.

- IV.26. In relation to the more general assertion that some or all clients were aware of the practice of cover pricing in general, the OFT notes that a fundamental feature of a cover price is giving the illusion of a competitive tender. Thus, to the extent that any client was aware of the practice of cover pricing in general, that did not imply awareness that any specific tender was the subject of cover pricing, so no client was in a position to prevent the restriction or distortion of competition arising from the cover bidding.
- IV.27. The OFT is of the view that Parties engaging in discussions with competitors about the pricing of contracts and submitting false tenders must at the very least have realised that this involved a distortion of the competitive process thereby restricting or distorting competition. In each cover pricing Infringement, one Party provided the other(s) with prices which they could use to ensure that they did not win the contract and which, although bogus, would appear to the client to be genuine. To the extent that any of the Parties may not have appreciated that this involved a distortion of competition, the OFT considers that the Parties were, at the very least, negligent in failing to realise this.
- IV.28. Moreover, it is apparent from the representations of certain Parties that they understood cover pricing to be anti-competitive and had instructed staff not to engage in this conduct. For example, Lindum stated that it had *'...explained the effects of the Competition Act when it came into force and there was no doubt on the part of the estimators that cover pricing breached the competition rules' (emphasis added).²²¹⁷ If certain Parties were in no doubt that cover pricing was anti-competitive, then the OFT considers that other Parties must have been at least negligent in their failure also to recognise this. Neither the widespread nature of the practice, nor the fact that it may have been recommended to estimators or bidders by others in the industry, in any way legitimises a practice which amounts to an infringement of the Act for the reasons set out above in the Legal Background section (Section III) and at paragraphs IV.45 onwards below.
- IV.29. Notwithstanding this, the OFT has taken into account the Parties' representations on this issue when determining the level of penalty to be imposed in this case as discussed in Section VI (Enforcement) below.

Reasons given for cover pricing

- IV.30. The reason given by most of the leniency Parties for the practice of cover pricing is that it enabled them to remain on the tender lists of those involved in arranging contracts for the provision of building services. In response to the Statement, many other Parties also cited this motive.
- IV.31. In relation to leniency Parties, Loach explained that 'It is known that a company that does not respond to an invitation to tender will be regarded as being disinterested in the work or, alternatively, too busy to undertake the work with the result that their name will be removed from future tender lists. Thus, it has been perceived that a company that wishes to remain on the lists but who does not wish, for whatever reason, to undertake the specific contract needs to respond but submit a price which it knows will not be acceptable. The completion of a tender and the calculation of a price involves many hours of work and, therefore, constitutes a considerable cost to the company ... in respect of those contracts which the company does not seek to attain but where it is necessary to tender solely to remain on the tender lists, that cost and the expenditure of time has been avoided by obtaining a cover price from a competitor company who is known to be submitting a tender'.²²¹⁸

IV.32. Thomas Vale stated that 'It is a feature of both the private and the public sector tendering process that if a company fails to return a tender, it will be placed at the bottom of the client's tender list and may ultimately be removed from such list'.²²¹⁹

IV.33. Irwins listed the various factors which led to cover prices being taken as:

- 'a) The limited resources of the estimating function.*
- b) Unsolicited enquiries with inadequate/poor information.*
- c) Additional post tender work on previous tenders.*
- d) The limited information available with current enquiries.*
- e) The short tender period with inflexible deadlines.*
- f) Inability to obtain material or sub-contract quotations.*
- g) The realisation that after initial work, inspection of the site and documentation, that the company would not be in a position to offer a competitive price.*
- h) Orders received during the tender period resulting in inability to carry out the project efficiently if awarded'.²²²⁰*

IV.34. Sol stated that tenders could be received at unexpected times or at times where it had insufficient capacity to carry out the work. It said that 'The choices available to the Company in these instances were: to return the tender and risk alienating the client with the consequence that we may be removed from tender lists for their future work; to submit a tender based purely on ... our experience of similar projects (but as no two projects are identical this would involve a substantial addition for risk which would produce a high price and potentially damage the Company's reputation by appearing uncompetitive); the final alternative being to obtain a cover price from one of the other companies tendering. Choosing to obtain a cover price had the benefit of a tender being submitted, with a price that was generally competitive, and would lessen the likelihood of upsetting the client, which would happen if the tender was returned'.²²²¹

IV.35. However, when the scores of witnesses from the leniency Parties were asked by the OFT in interview whether they could recall any particular instance of a client removing them from a tender list as a result of their not tendering for a particular contract, almost without exception they were unable to do so.

- IV.36. This was borne out by the responses to the OFT's surveys carried out in connection with market definition before issue of the Statement. The OFT sent out the Market Definition questionnaire to more than 350 clients. Question 5 of the questionnaire requested these clients to rank criteria used 'for drawing up a list of building contractors who are to be asked to tender for a project'. 106 clients responded that their first criterion was the ability of the bidder to 'demonstrate that it has already done similar type of work'. 55 clients ranked 'good reputation in industry' as the primary criterion. 33 clients required that the company 'has passed the external accreditation processes' in the first place. 56 clients considered competitive pricing to be the most important criterion. Only eight clients considered the 'local firm' to be the most important criterion. 26 clients considered other factors as prevalent. Significantly, only two out of the 350 clients contacted by the OFT said that they recognised 'availability' and 'availability to tender and carry out works at required time' as the most important criteria.
- IV.37. However, in response to the Statement, many Parties echoed the comments of the leniency Parties cited above and stressed that the reason they engaged in cover pricing activity was a genuine fear of removal from tender lists.²²²² For example:
- 'the risk of being removed from a tender list in the event of ... refusing an invitation to tender was a real one'.²²²³
 - '...the primary motivation of the cover pricing in the admitted infringements was to allocate scarce estimating resources to other work opportunities or to avoid taking on work where Baggaley and Jenkins might have capacity constraints in properly performing the contract without thereby incurring the risk (as a result of not submitting a tender or of submitting an artificially high one) of damaging client relations or not being invited to tender in the future'.²²²⁴
 - 'in order to cope with such a heavy workload, estimators have to carefully schedule tenders ...if the tender has to be withdrawn after acceptance there is a real possibility of being struck off the client tender list permanently'.²²²⁵
 - 'there are a variety of reasons why a cover may be taken, essentially to get Hall "out of a hole" and not to "lose face" in the eyes of the client'.
- IV.38. However, this last Party also stated that when it was not concerned about being on a client tender list or where a tender was received from a new client that it would rather not work with at the time, it would normally return the tender.²²²⁶ Several other Parties stated that it had been their policy for years to return tenders when they did not wish to bid, and that they had done so on ²²²² For example written representations of Thomas Long, 26 June 2008, paragraph 2.7.

²²²³ Written representations of Bodill, 26 June 2008, paragraph 2.8

many occasions.²²²⁷ In particular, one Party stated that whilst it recognised delisting concerns and a company could be placed under significant pressure from a client to make a bid for a contract, it sought to reduce that risk by returning tenders early if they were not appropriate, and building relationships with its clients and educating them as to its skill sets and abilities.²²²⁸ This Party submitted that even where a company was unable or unwilling to return a tender unpriced, it had a variety of legitimate means of arriving at a realistic price for a contract without committing a significant level of resource, such as utilising sub-contracting quotes, pricing manuals, freelance estimators and pre-tender advisors or clients' pre-tender estimates.²²²⁹

- IV.39. Some Parties were able to provide examples of where they believed they had been 'struck off the tender list' or 'relegated to the bottom of the rotation process' when they did not return a tender.²²³⁰ In relation to the latter, the OFT notes that moving to the bottom of a tender list may be a natural consequence of a rotation process, whether a tenderer declines to quote or provides a bid, and that such instances do not therefore provide clear support for the Parties' arguments in mitigation. Some Parties also provided evidence of correspondence that indicated that tendering history would be a factor when assessing tender lists.²²³¹
- IV.40. However, the majority of Parties claimed that it was difficult to provide such evidence because it is only infrequently communicated to parties, particularly in a written form.²²³² For example, one Party stated that the fact that Parties were unable to recall particular instances of a client removing them from a tender list as a result of not submitting a tender showed that '...the risk was not illusory... it may not objectively have been so great as tenderers imagined, but subjectively, the risk was plainly real'.²²³³
- IV.41. Some Parties stated that it was unlikely that a client would communicate to them that the reason they had not been asked to tender again was because they returned a bid.²²³⁴ A few Parties stated that 'It is extremely unlikely that a contractor would know the reason why he is not being invited to tender for a particular job. Even if the contractor was aware that he had not been invited to tender the client or his professional advisers would be most unlikely to give as a reason the failure to respond to an earlier tender'.²²³⁵
- IV.42. It has also been represented that the OFT interviewing leniency Parties in relation to this question may have provided a skewed result as leniency Parties may not be able to recall not tendering in the first place, and therefore not be able to provide examples of being removed from tender lists.²²³⁶ In this respect, the OFT does not consider that the leniency Parties should be in a different position from any other Party in this case.

- IV.43. One Party stated that 'the reasons witnesses can not recall any particular instance of a client removing them from a tender list as a result of their not tendering for a particular contract was because in most cases at that time they avoided the scenario by submitting a cover price'.²²³⁷ Other Parties made similar representations²²³⁸ and/or suggested that a direct question was not asked in relation to this issue²²³⁹, with one Party stating that it did not specifically have this question put to it in interview and that it could recall a few occasions where this might have occurred.²²⁴⁰
- IV.44. The OFT has been given few examples of Parties actually being removed from tender lists as a result of declining to bid. Nevertheless, the OFT does accept that there was a relatively widespread perception amongst the Parties that they could be removed from a tender list if they declined to bid for a tender and that there may be instances where this has occurred. While the OFT has taken this into account when determining the starting point for penalty calculations (as discussed in paragraph VI.108 below), the OFT does not accept that it provides any sort of defence for illegal activity.
- IV.45. As discussed above in the Legal Background section, in paragraph III.111, the CAT has confirmed that the motivation of an undertaking in submitting a cover-bid, whether rational – such as seeking to remain on a selective tender list – or not, is irrelevant.
- IV.46. Thus, in essence, an undertaking's motive for cover pricing is irrelevant. It is no defence to an allegation of cover pricing for an undertaking to say that the cover bid was only put in so as to remain on the client's contractor list.²²⁴¹
- IV.47. Some companies told the OFT that they engaged in cover pricing partly because of the expense of calculating genuine figures for every tender they received – for example, see paragraph IV.31 above. Hugh McElhill, Senior Estimator at Balfour Beatty stated, 'Estimating is an expensive process [sic] so if we're given the job to price then, then it's to get the job'.²²⁴² Nicholas Greene, Director of John Cawley stated, 'And physically it costs a lot of money to price. We physically could not afford to price every job that came in. Because there's a financial element in every – pricing a job takes up man hours'.²²⁴³
- IV.48. This was reiterated in several Parties' representations to the OFT in response to the Statement.²²⁴⁴ For example, one Party stated in oral representations that

'because of our limited resources we were not able to deal with a tender in any other way other than submitting a cover price'. Another Party stated that the 'trend for public authorities in recent years to invite tenders for all contracts both large and small have increased the pressure on contractors' estimating resources...the taking of a cover price has developed as a mechanism for dealing with those cases where a contractor is unable or unwilling to prepare a tender offer but does not wish to reject the invitation to tender'.²²⁴⁵

- IV.49. As stated previously an undertaking's motivation in seeking and/or providing a cover bid, whether rational or not, is not a defence to a breach of Chapter I or Article 81. Moreover, as discussed by the Commission in its decision on the Building and construction industry in the Netherlands,

'... in theory, there are two ways of recovering calculation costs: either the client remunerates the price tender separately; or the building and construction firm includes the costs in its general business costs. The first possibility cannot be applied in principle in so far as, in civil law, the invitation to submit a tender and the submission of a tender do not give rise to any contractual payment obligations. The second possibility is thus the appropriate and generally applied method throughout the Community of recovering calculation costs, in the same way as promotion costs and the costs of marketing products form part of the general expenses of an undertaking'.²²⁴⁶

- IV.50. There is no prohibition on the unilateral inflation of a bid, whether to include the cost of calculating the tender or for other reasons. However, collusion with competitors during a tender process is prohibited since it artificially distorts the competitive process.

Potential effects of cover pricing

- IV.51. The OFT is not, when applying the Chapter I prohibition, obliged to establish that an agreement or concerted practice has an anti-competitive effect where it is found to have as its object the prevention, restriction or distortion of competition.²²⁴⁷ In the present case, the OFT is not making any findings that any of the Infringements had the effect of restricting or distorting competition. As set out in paragraphs III.93 to III.113 of the Legal section above, cover pricing has its object a restriction of competition. The OFT needs only to show that the practice was capable of preventing, restricting or distorting competition.²²⁴⁸ However, a number of Parties have made representations that the Infringements to which they were party had no effect on the tender process in question. The OFT sets out below its view that, in relation to some of the Infringements, it is clear that the provision of a cover price had an effect on the particular tender process and that all of the instances of cover pricing were, at the very least, capable of restricting or distorting competition.

- IV.52. The submission of cover prices gives the illusion that there are more companies competing for a tender than is in fact the case. By substituting the certainty of co-operation for the risks of competition, the companies involved in cover pricing and other bid rigging activities knew that competition for any particular tender was reduced and those companies interested in winning the work may have therefore been able to submit higher bids than would otherwise have been the case.

- IV.53. In the Statement, the OFT noted that companies often insisted that where they exchanged a cover price with only one competitor, this did not distort the competitive process since it still left a number of companies submitting competitive tenders. For example, Les Pursey, estimator for Balfour Beatty stated 'in normal circumstance, six people pricing, if one person takes a cover they've still, still got to beat the other four'.²²⁴⁹
- IV.54. However, the OFT notes that in a number of tenders, one company gave cover prices to three (or more) other tenderers. If four companies were tendering in these circumstances, then the client would not receive any genuinely competitive tender bids, despite having received four apparently independent bids. In other tenders only the companies engaging in cover pricing put in any form of tender bid, while all the other companies declined to bid. Again, in these circumstances the client will have received no competitive bids. As stated above, the practice of cover pricing was widespread and endemic in the construction industry and the OFT had initial evidence of cover pricing taking place in many more instances than feature in this Decision. Consequently, it is highly likely that clients were receiving no genuinely competitive bids in many more instances than those of which the OFT is aware, and the OFT considers that the widespread nature of the practice must have caused harm.
- IV.55. In response to the Statement, many Parties stated that the OFT has not proven the effect of cover pricing and that knowing that the competition was reduced had no effect on whether a genuine bid was submitted.²²⁵⁰ Parties stated that they did not accept that it was the case that clients were receiving no genuinely competitive bids. These Parties said that in cases where they were concerned, when they gave a cover price, they submitted a genuinely competitive bid, and when they took a cover price, they had no way of knowing which other bids were competitive.²²⁵¹ A number of Parties said that in relation to their specific Infringements, the competitive process was not distorted.²²⁵² One Party claimed that the practice of cover pricing was considered harmless and that it was not intended to have any effects on the ultimate price paid by the customer.²²⁵³ Some Parties stated that only the Party giving the cover would know that competition had been reduced by one.²²⁵⁴
- IV.56. Another Party noted that the OFT had not identified any instance in which the company inflated its bid above the competitive level as a result of requests for cover prices. It stated that in the majority of cases, 'cover pricing requests from even a number of competitors would not provide a company with certainty that it was the only company seeking to win the contract, since it would be necessary to know the full list of tender parties (not normally information distributed freely by clients in advance for obvious reasons) in order to be confident that every company that had been invited to tender was either not doing so or was not seeking to win'.²²⁵⁵ The OFT discusses below the various ways by which the parties to a tender may become aware of other parties on a tender list (for example, through discussions with subcontractors and trade associations).²²⁵⁶

- IV.57. Several other Parties stated that the decision to submit a cover price was 'made independently by each contractor and cover pricing was just an effective way of carrying out that decision... cover pricing does not therefore alter the fact that inflated bids would be put in by those companies that had already decided to do so'.²²⁵⁷ However, it is obvious that if a party has decided independently to submit an inflated bid, it should do so without collusion with its competitors. Cover bidding infringes the Act because it arises as a result of collusion between competitors. The fact that the same result may arguably arise as a result of wholly unilateral action cannot absolve the Parties of liability, nor does it lead to the conclusion that a bid submitted after collusion with competitors, is a 'genuine' or 'competitive' bid.²²⁵⁸
- IV.58. Several Parties also submitted that it would be impossible in practice to submit a highly inflated bid as the client's professional quantity surveyor would have a clear budget price in mind and to inflate the figure by as much as 10 per cent is unrealistic, as reflected in their profit figures.²²⁵⁹ Another Party stated that most clients are well advised on tenders by teams of professionals and any attempt by a contractor to inflate a tender price would have been likely to be unsuccessful.²²⁶⁰ However, it is clear from the tender figures set out in many of the Infringements in this Decision that it was perfectly feasible for a company to submit a bid that was more than 10 per cent in excess of some of its competitors, without apparently arousing any suspicion on the part of the client. Indeed, some of the cover bids were calculated at amounts of 10 to 15 per cent or more above the giver's tender bid.²²⁶¹
- IV.59. More generally in relation to the above representations, the OFT notes that there were some instances where Parties provided cover prices to all of the other Parties that submitted tenders.²²⁶² Further, even where this was not the case, it is clearly conceivable that a company, equipped with the knowledge that a competitor was receiving a cover, could have chosen to artificially inflate its own tender price or at least bid less keenly than might otherwise have been the case.²²⁶³ At the same time, the company submitting the cover price was in no position to know whether the remaining bidders were submitting genuine bids or not, that is, as is the situation with a number of the Infringements in this Decision, there could have been no bids that were not tainted by either the giving or taking of a cover price.

- IV.60. Moreover, it is important to note that a restriction or distortion of competition is not limited to a direct inflation of the winning tender price. Harm to the competitive process, with a consequent reduction in the likelihood that the best possible price has been obtained, can arise in other, less direct ways.
- IV.61. Distortion of competition by engaging in bid rigging has been confirmed by the CAT to be a contravention of the Chapter I prohibition because '(a) it reduces the number of competitive bids submitted in respect of that particular tender; (b) it deprives the tenderee of the opportunity of seeking a replacement (competitive) bid; (c) it prevents other contractors wishing to place competitive bids in respect of that particular tender from doing so; (d) it gives the tenderee a false impression of the nature of competition in the market, leading at least potentially to future tender processes being similarly impaired'.²²⁶⁴
- IV.62. Even where, for example, two out of six bidders have been found by the OFT to have engaged in cover pricing, distortion of competition occurs or may occur in the following ways.
- IV.63. First, the client is deliberately deceived into thinking that it has received a certain number of genuine bids when in fact only a proportion of them are genuine and unaffected by unlawful contact with other parties.
- IV.64. Secondly, the client is deprived of obtaining an alternative bid from another contractor who genuinely wants to win the work. That other bidder might be more efficient than any of the bidders currently in the race and able to submit a lower bid. The client may also have some form of requirement to obtain a certain number of genuine bids in order to satisfy carefully agreed procurement rules that are designed to guarantee effective competition, and will unknowingly have been thwarted in his attempt to satisfy that requirement.
- IV.65. Thirdly, a potentially more efficient bidder that wants the job is deprived of the opportunity to win the work. This represents a form of barrier to entry that prevents new entrants from being added to the list of tenderers.
- IV.66. These second and third reasons can be linked directly to many Parties' stated reasons for engaging in cover bidding, that is, to stay on tender lists for future work. By doing so, the effect would be to stagnate tender lists, preventing other contractors, whether new entrants or existing competitors, from being given the chance to tender on future work (as well as the chance to bid on the tender in question). In this way, it can clearly be seen that the practice of cover bidding was capable of restricting or distorting competition for future tenders, and moreover, that such distortion may have been a primary motive of many Parties.
- IV.67. The OFT also observes that it did not have sufficient resources to visit every construction company in England or indeed in the regions that are the subject of the tenders in this Decision, and given the historically endemic nature of cover pricing it is very possible that other bidders were providing cover prices to each other, further reducing the number of genuinely competitive bids.

²²⁶⁴ Apex Asphalt and Paving Co Limited v OFT [2005] CAT 4, at paragraph 251. See also Makers UK Limited v OFT [2007] CAT 11, at paragraphs 14 to 15.

- IV.68. The OFT is therefore of the view that cover pricing invariably has the potential to at least distort competition although as noted above, the OFT is not making any findings in this Decision as to the effect of any of the Infringements.

How cover pricing was carried out

Contact was almost exclusively by telephone

- IV.69. Unlike with many of the OFT's previous investigations into cover pricing in the roofing industry²²⁶⁵, the OFT has uncovered very little evidence of written communications such as faxes being exchanged between competitors in the construction industry in order to facilitate cover pricing. In this investigation the evidence has been overwhelmingly that most contacts between competitors took place by telephone. In response to the Statement, many Parties confirmed that the conduct was routinely carried out over the phone.²²⁶⁶
- IV.70. For example, Henry Boot stated that 'Exchanges pertaining to cover pricing were almost invariably done by way of a quick telephone call'.²²⁶⁷ Stephen Bradbury, Managing Director of Jack Lunn, confirmed that with regard to the exchange of covers, 'I'm not aware of it happening in any other way than by telephone'.²²⁶⁸
- IV.71. The occasional examples in this Decision of exchange of information between competitors by e-mail or fax generally followed on from a telephone call, usually where a client had requested a detailed breakdown of tender figures from the lowest two or three bidders in the tendering process.

Contact in each tender was reciprocal

- IV.72. Other than in respect of two Infringements, the OFT has uncovered no evidence that any companies giving cover prices in respect of particular tenders made the initial contact and/or actively sought to ensure that all of the other tenderers were provided with cover prices.²²⁶⁹ Such activities are usually associated with more organised bid rotation or market sharing schemes and the OFT has no evidence that this occurred in this case. One Party stated in response to the Statement that this is evidence for the fact that the motivation in taking cover was not to assist the giver of the cover, but to allocate scarce estimating resources without damaging client relationships or being struck off tender lists.²²⁷⁰
- IV.73. Instead, most of the instances of cover pricing described in this Decision arose out of a reciprocal contact, where the company wanting a cover price made the initial contact by telephoning a company that it knew to be bidding for the tender, and asking it for a cover price. Similarly, agreements to pay compensation arose out of a telephone call from one company to another bidder. In many instances of cover pricing, a second call was then made close to the tender deadline, usually but not exclusively by the provider of the cover price, during which the cover price was given. There is no evidence that any cover price or compensation payment was given unilaterally. In all cases, the provision of a cover price and/or a compensation payment followed an initial request for a cover price and/or a mutual arrangement to pay compensation.

- IV.74. For example, in its leniency application Bluestone stated, 'There is no evidence whatsoever of Bluestone initiating the giving of a cover price to a competitor'.²²⁷¹
- IV.75. Christopher Stubbs, Company Director and employee of Adam Eastwood, explained 'We would get a telephone call probably I don't know a week before the tender was due in ["can you give us a cover (?") and if we were giving a cover out we would wait until the 11th hour so that all they had to do was fill in their slip and get it away and vice versa. If we were expecting a cover it more often than not came in on the morning of the tender. We just used to put the figure on the sheet put it in the envelope and away we went'.²²⁷²
- IV.76. Similarly, Richard Milner, Managing Director of Harlow & Milner, was asked in interview whether a cover price would be arranged some days in advance of the tender closing date. He replied, '... if you've sort of made the decision the week before, or you may know who's pricing it, in that case it might be, 'can you help us out' and it'll be... 'yea we'll let you know on the day', we'd very rarely get a price days before, if we were taking a cover from somebody else it would always be on the day that the tender went in, you'd never have a load of notice because generally speaking, estimators being of the type that they are, you know, the nature of the beast if you like, it always takes to the wire'.²²⁷³
- IV.77. Matthew Pickering, Senior Estimator for Phoenix, confirmed that if he wanted a cover price, 'you would probably try and ring up a few days before the tender date just to make sure that they can give you a cover price...if they'd say, yes they can help you, you would wait for a phone call, probably ring them a day before the tender's due back'.²²⁷⁴
- IV.78. On other, less common occasions, particularly where the first call was made close to the tender deadline, the cover price was communicated back immediately to the person making the request during the first (and only, in these circumstances) telephone call.
- IV.79. For example, Ivan Peter Nelson, an Estimating Director of Irwins, explained 'You'd probably get to about two or three days before and realise that you were just not going to get a figure together and then probably on the night before or sometimes on the day, sometimes even after they're due to go in, I'd ring around and get a figure that I knew was going to be, reasonably all right over the top ... It worked well because it meant that I could always have another second look at each enquiry and be more choosy ... and it was a way, really, of, dealing with a, a tender, at the last minute and not upsetting, the clients and the architects and quantity surveyors'.²²⁷⁵

Obtaining details of bidding competitors who could provide a cover price

Subcontractors

- IV.80. Companies requesting cover prices would find out who else was tendering for a contract, and therefore companies from whom they might obtain cover prices, by a variety of means. Often they would find out from subcontractors whom they would ask to bid for a part of the work, such as the roofing or the electrical works. Sometimes the subcontractors would tell them without being asked that they were also being asked by a specified other company to bid for the same work.
- IV.81. For example, Malcolm Welsby, an estimator for Henry Boot, stated 'You sometimes get the competition without even trying. Sub-contractors, suppliers will ring up and say, "I'm preparing a quotation for roofing, I know that you're tendering, can I send you my quotation", and you say, "Yeah fine, by the way who else are you quoting?", it comes out very easy ...'.²²⁷⁶
- IV.82. Julian Kaweck, Estimating Surveyor, Estimating Director and later Managing Director at Strata, stated that estimators would find out who was pricing the tender 'From subcontractors suppliers ringing around. You always got to find out the competition, everybody does'.²²⁷⁷
- IV.83. Arthur Fox, Estimating Director at Wrights (Lincoln) until April 2003, explained that he would not actively try and find out who his competitors were on a particular contract, '... we'd just find out as a matter of course. Suppliers will tell us, or subcontractors will...that's just part of a normal conversation with subcontractors and suppliers, and it, it happens all the time'.²²⁷⁸
- IV.84. On other occasions the subcontractor would be asked for the names of other companies bidding for the main contract, and these names would be provided.
- IV.85. For example, Stephen Bradbury, Managing Director of Jack Lunn, confirmed that if requested then subcontractors would pass on competitor information, '... we might ask a subcontractor, are you pricing it for anyone else? And they'll say yes, we're pricing it for two or three, we're pricing it for so and so...'.²²⁷⁹
- IV.86. Similarly, Steve Rhodes, a Bid Manager for Totty (Propensity), said that 'when you start talking to ... any of the key subcontractors ... when you're chasing your quotations or even when you're having a dialogue about whether they'd like to price the job ... it's a general question "Who else have you had enquiries from?'''.²²⁸⁰

Competitors

- IV.87. On occasions companies would simply phone competitors who they thought might be bidding for the tender, and ask them whether they were bidding and if so whether a cover price could be provided.
- IV.88. For example, Martyn Etheridge, an estimator for Balfour Beatty stated 'There are some contractors who, I mean, obviously all in the telephone book, so you'd ring them up and ask for, say, the chief estimator and he'd say, yeah, yeah we're pricing it'.²²⁸¹
- IV.89. Peter Goodbun, Estimating Manager at Mansell stated 'We would ring up one of our competitors to enquire as to whether they are pricing the job. We ... then inform them that we were unable to and would they give us a figure that we could go in on, which would obviously be in excess of theirs'.²²⁸²

The Builders Conference

- IV.90. Certain organisations provided information more generally to construction companies. The Builders Conference collected information on a regular basis and provided it to construction companies. By this means this organisation helped to facilitate the exchange of cover prices between construction companies, although the OFT has no evidence that this was its intention. Christopher Stubbs, Company Director at Adam Eastwood, explained how he would find out who Adam Eastwood's competitors were from the Builders Conference, '... they would ring round, are you pricing this work [?], yes ...they would have details of who else was tendering and you would say, yes I am pricing this work and they would say you are up against x, y and z'.²²⁸³
- IV.91. Richard Blount, Director of J H Hallam stated '... the Building Conference quite often will phone us up and say are you tendering and we will say yes and they will tell us who else is tendering'.²²⁸⁴
- IV.92. Cliff Davey, Chief Estimator for Balfour Beatty stated 'if we were called by a Conference to ask if we were on a particular tender list, then we would declare that we were'.²²⁸⁵

Glennigans

- IV.93. Another organisation, Glennigans, carried out a similar function. Jonathan Kirby, Commercial Director for Totty (Propensity), explained how Totty would find out the identity of other bidders for a tender, 'There were two routes, one you would [use] quite often, you know, during the tender process sub-contractors would just actually tell you ... And then there was also an outfit who actually found out. I don't know what they did but you could ring this outfit [Glennigans] and they told you who was on the tender lists'.²²⁸⁶
- IV.94. Roger Hayes, former Chief Estimator for Herbert Baggeley stated 'There are agencies [which assist in finding out who the competition is on a particular tender] and I'm trying to think of their names now ... people like that, Glennigans'.²²⁸⁷

Trade Associations

- IV.95. Sometimes trade associations would provide bidder information in addition to their other activities. In the Nottingham area, the OFT uncovered evidence of two particular trade associations that facilitated the exchange of information and thereby the exchange of cover prices, the Nottingham Builders' Guild and the North Nottinghamshire Contractors' Guild. The work of these organisations is described at paragraphs IV.128 to IV.146 below. Allan Gregory, Managing Director of ARG, explained, 'the guild ... John Wooley, the secretary, used to phone around everyone on a weekly basis to gather intelligence. So if you needed assistance on a particular job, whether it was at the beginning ... whether you'd got halfway through the tender ... I've had to phone John Wooley, get a name, get a cover price, get on the bike, and get out and get the tender in'.²²⁸⁸

Giving a cover price by informing a competitor of the company's own bid

- IV.96. When providing a cover price to a competitor, the providing company would on occasions inform the company receiving the cover price of the amount it intended to bid, and the receiving company would then submit a tender a small percentage in excess of the provider's bid price. For example, see Infringement 180 below. A number of Parties noted in their responses to the Statement that this was not the case in relation to any of the cover prices they gave or received.²²⁸⁹

Giving a cover price by telling a competitor what it should bid

- IV.97. More often, the providing company would calculate a figure somewhat in excess of its bid and inform the receiver of that cover price, and that was generally the tender bid that would be submitted by the receiver of the cover price. For example, with regard to providing a cover, Steve Rhodes, Bid Manager Public Division of Totty, said, *'a phone call halfway through the process, can you help us out. And typically I'd say yes without asking anybody. And then obviously we'd ring somebody up and dictate to them what figure they should put....'*²²⁹⁰
- IV.98. Robert Lowe, Regional Chief Estimator for Mansell stated 'I would look at my figure that I've arrived at, or if I hadn't arrived at it, the latest level I'd got to with it if we hadn't actually finalised it, and I would add a percentage onto that to suggest a figure that would not win'.²²⁹¹

Calculating a cover price

- IV.99. Companies would calculate the cover price so that it was sufficiently above their own figure for the receiver of the cover price not to end up accidentally winning the contract, but not so far above that it looked ridiculously high and either might have, in their view, led to the receiver of the cover price being rejected for future tenders due to being uncompetitive, or might have led to suspicion on the part of the client that organised the tender.

- IV.100. Many of the leniency Parties commented on this process in these terms. For example, Christopher Stubbs, Company Director at Adam Eastwood, explained '... I tried not to give it as an actual 5% or 6% we would look at the contract and you know we would give them a reasonable percentage above what ours was so that it didn't harm them in any way... you didn't use to put 50% on because that would then look a ridiculous figure ...'.²²⁹²
- IV.101. David Goodhead, an estimator at Davlyn, explained '... I always ended up trying to think in terms of putting, say ... something in the region of, four, five per cent ... away from where we were ... not to put them miles away ... which to me slightly embarrasses them ... I suppose it's a case of do unto others as ... you would expect [them to do to you]'.²²⁹³
- IV.102. In its leniency application, Wildgoose stated that 'Companies would generally endeavour to provide the requesting contractor with a competitive figure as, if the figure was too high, it would make the party requesting the cover look ridiculous in the eyes of the client and that contractor would be reluctant to provide assistance in the future. Therefore, contractors would tend to provide a figure as close to their own figure as they felt comfortable with, usually around 4-5% above'.²²⁹⁴
- IV.103. On occasions companies receiving cover prices would go to great lengths to ensure that clients' suspicions were not aroused. For example, Clive Simpson, senior quantity surveyor at Thomas Fish, said that 'if we were taking a cover on a job, nothing was done unless, unless there was a feeling that a site visit was necessary, in which case, a site visit would be undertaken, so that the client, you cover your tracks so that the client wouldn't think, oh, there's only ever been two people come to visit the site, how could the other two possibly have priced it, so you went through the motions, but that was as far as it went'.²²⁹⁵
- IV.104. Although the majority of the examples given above and in this part of the Decision involved differences in price of around 5 per cent, these examples are by no means exclusive and the OFT did not intend them to be so in the Statement. It is abundantly clear from the Infringements set out in this Decision that cover prices given to competitors were regularly calculated at amounts of 10 to 15 per cent or more above the giver's tender bid.²²⁹⁶ Thus, it cannot be accepted that tender prices more than 5 per cent above a competitor's submitted bid are inconsistent with, or incapable of, being cover prices. The arguments of certain Parties on this issue are addressed further in relation to specific Infringements below.

Companies caught out and asked to submit additional details

- IV.105. Occasionally the receiver of a cover price was caught out by the cover price being slightly too low or by there being too few bidders in the tendering

process, so that their tender ended up being second and the client asked them to submit additional details, for example a breakdown of their tender. It was the practice of many clients to invite tenders from around six companies, and then to ask the two companies submitting the lowest bids to provide a detailed breakdown of their figures, so that the client could ensure that the bid was realistically planned.

IV.106. In such circumstances the receiver of the cover price would have no detailed background information to give to the client and would have to go to the provider of the cover price and ask it for additional figures that could then be communicated to the client.

IV.107. For example, Arthur Paul Taylor ('APT'), a senior estimator at Wildgoose, stated '... the idea is to keep the other contractor as close to your figure as you would feel comfortable with, usually around 4-5% above. We would not want it to be too close as it may mean that he is asked for further information by the client which we would then be obliged to supply'.²²⁹⁷

IV.108. A number of tenders in this Decision feature the recipient of the cover price having been caught out in this way. These are often also the tenders that provide the infrequent examples of written communication between the Parties, since it proved necessary in these instances for detailed breakdown figures to be faxed or e-mailed from one company to the other and the normal telephone contact was unsuitable for these purposes.

IV.109. For example, in the tender for an apartment development at Speculation Street, dated 25 February 2004, Infringement 182 below, Steven Bradbury, Managing Director at Jack Lunn, stated 'the client has ... seen Jack Lunn's is the lowest figure and Lindum's in number two. Now at that stage he doesn't understand ... exactly how those prices are made up. And it may well be that Jack Lunn have missed something off, so as that their price ends up the lowest ... So in effect, he's not confident that both contractors are comparing apples with apples ... So ... what is normal then ... is that the client will contact the bottom two contractors and ask them for the contracts sum analysis, which gives all the break-down of how they've arrived at that price. ... So what's actually happened is, Lindum have contacted Jack Lunn and said to Jack Lunn, we've got a problem now because the client has asked us to give him a contract sum analysis and because we took a cover off you, we haven't got one. Can you help us out? ... And Lindum still want to appear to the client as if they've put a bona fide bid in'.²²⁹⁸

Adding a further amount to the cover price

IV.110. Generally companies would submit the cover price that had been given to them by a competitor, as the figure for their tender bid. Alan Loveday, Commercial Manager at Propensity, said '...it's an unwritten rule that if somebody gives you a cover price that's the minimum price that you put in. And generally speaking we always stick with that price so that when a tender result is issued to everyone once the contract's awarded, which is common practice by the client,

then you can see that people have actually maintained the position that you gave them'.²²⁹⁹

IV.111. Sometimes, however, the receiver of a cover price would not use the precise figure given to them, perhaps adding on a little more to ensure that they did not win the contract or be caught out in the manner described in paragraph IV.105 above, or amending a round figure to a less rounded figure so that it looked more realistic. For example, Ivan Peter Nelson, an Estimating Director of Irwins, explained that the tender submitted by Irwins was not necessarily the figure supplied by a competitor for a cover price, 'perhaps I'd add a little bit more or... You wouldn't knock any off but you'd add a bit more on perhaps'.²³⁰⁰

IV.112. Wildgoose stated in its leniency application that 'Some contractors would provide an exact cover figure to enter on the tender form and others might indicate that Wildgoose should price around a particular figure'.²³⁰¹

Refusal to give a cover price

IV.113. In the Statement, the OFT noted that there were very few circumstances in which a request for a cover price would be refused. Duncan Ironmonger, Senior Estimator and subsequently Chief Estimator at Strata until October 2004, explained, 'You ring up the competition, are you pricing it. No matter who, you weren't bothered who, just as long as you didn't win the work, that's all that mattered. So, you'd ring up, we don't want it, can you give us a cover. Most of them would just say yes, obviously, because they know they're reducing their competition'.²³⁰²

IV.114. Steven Bradbury, Managing Director at Jack Lunn, stated 'there are some companies you wouldn't trust... the whole basis of cover, both giving and taking, depends on an element of trust and if you don't particularly trust a company you won't get involved with them'.²³⁰³

IV.115. In response to the Statement, a number of Parties stated that they were prepared to decline to tender and had even introduced policies on refusing to engage in cover pricing.²³⁰⁴ The OFT welcomes such measures that will help to ensure that cover pricing is eradicated from the construction industry for the future.

An unwritten reciprocal arrangement

IV.116. It was clear that the construction companies that engaged in cover pricing generally saw it as a reciprocal arrangement, in which each abided by the longstanding custom to provide assistance in response to a request for a cover price from a competitor. One Party claimed this was the sole reason for engaging in cover pricing in relation to two of its Infringements.²³⁰⁵

²³⁰⁵ Written representations of R Durnell, 27 June 2008, paragraph 96.

IV.117. For example, Andrew Eato, Contracts Director for ARG, while describing in interview the process of arriving at a figure to give a competitor, stated ‘... you just ... go in give them something slightly higher than your own figure ... you would hope that they would do similar for you’.²³⁰⁶ Allan Gregory, Managing Director of ARG also explained that he would have added, ‘three, four, five, six, seven percent, just to make it – make it look as if he’s done the work. And obviously, the unwritten law is that then, in the future, he would reciprocate for our situation’.²³⁰⁷ In its leniency application, Richard Bodill, Managing Director of Bodill talked about the practice of cover pricing in terms of it being a ‘system’ which ‘operated ... to overcome the consequences of sending back tender enquiries’.²³⁰⁸

IV.118. Similarly, Wildgoose stated in its leniency application that ‘Whilst it is accepted that a company giving a cover price to another would pitch that price such that its own tender would not be undercut, the object of the exercise (at least so far as Wildgoose understood it) was not to determine the outcome of the tender process as a whole but rather to offer assistance to another company unable to find the resources to price a given job accurately - in the knowledge that such assistance could be reciprocated at a future date’.²³⁰⁹

Completion of non-collusion statements

IV.119. The OFT notes that it is not uncommon for a client organising a tender procedure to require the firms invited to tender to complete a detailed non-collusion statement expressly confirming that the tender submitted is a competitive offer and that there have been no undue contacts with any competing company in connection with the tender offer (for example, 21 October 2003 – Ashgate Hospice²³¹⁰, 11 June 2004 – Malton, Norton and District Hospital²³¹¹ and 25 July 2005 – 71 – 75 Wright Street, Hull²³¹²). For the avoidance of doubt, the OFT is of the view that it is not necessary to show that a party completed such a non-collusion statement for the OFT to find that a party infringed the Chapter I prohibition intentionally (or indeed negligently). This issue is discussed further in the Enforcement section, at paragraph VI.41 below.

Cover bidding scenarios involving more than two undertakings

IV.120. In some of the tenders, one bidder gave cover to more than one other potential bidder, or two bidders gave cover to two or more other potential bidders. In such scenarios, certain bidders may have only been aware of the involvement of one other bidder, whereas others would have been aware of the multiple cover bid arrangements.

IV.121. For the purposes of this Decision, the OFT has presented the evidence for such scenarios within a single ‘Infringement’ section, within which the OFT describes its analysis of whether there was more than one agreement or concerted practice.

Availability of contemporaneous documentary evidence

- IV.122. As described above, the OFT has uncovered very little evidence of written communications between competitors in the construction industry in order to facilitate cover pricing. In this investigation the evidence has been that contact between competitors took place by telephone and often a day before, or on the day, that a tender return was due.
- IV.123. Furthermore, many companies would not make any record of the contact or of the fact that a cover price was submitted and, in many cases, the relevant tender file would be destroyed since it no longer needed to be kept, either during the tendering process because the company knew it would not win the contract, or after the tendering process once the company had received confirmation that it had lost the contract.
- IV.124. For example, Loach explained that 'The obtaining or provision of a cover price did not usually result in the creation of any documentation. The essence of the scheme was to save the time otherwise spent on the creation of documentation. A cover price would be secured orally and the tender price would be submitted but because the tender would not result in a contract, then no paperwork would be created or retained'.²³¹³
- IV.125. Derwent Valley stated 'As far as documentary evidence is concerned, the nature of cover pricing is such that generally there will be no such evidence. It takes place by way of telephone conversations. Also, whether or not cover pricing has taken place, where a tender is unsuccessful, the volume of paperwork and resulting storage implications are such that documents are generally destroyed within 9 to 12 months'.²³¹⁴
- IV.126. Herbert Baggaley stated 'the use of covers was so endemic within the industry as an accepted standard practice ... HBC's Estimating Department has confirmed that it's (sic) members could not recall an instance where, prior to the OFT's current investigation, discussions regarding giving or receiving covers had met with any surprise or need of explanation by any third party. The actual words 'cover pricing' were rarely used, if at all. The practice was so routine that phrases used would be "taking help" or "giving assistance". The practice was considered so routine that no further consideration had been given prior to this investigation in (sic) compiling statistics or keeping specific records ... No need was felt to maintain any records of covers'.²³¹⁵
- IV.127. The OFT has therefore had to proceed on the basis of limited contemporaneous documentary evidence for this investigation. Notwithstanding this, for most tenders included in this Decision there is at least one contemporaneous document evidencing bid rigging activities, often comprising one of the colluding companies' tender registers or forms of tender in which they recorded the giving and/or taking of cover prices, and in addition this is supported by a transcript of an interview with an employee or ex-employee of one of the leniency Parties. The OFT is therefore satisfied that the evidence set out in this Decision is sufficient to meet the required standard of proof described in the Legal section above.

Trade associations and other information exchanges

- IV.128. As discussed in paragraph IV.95 above, certain organisations provided information more generally to construction companies. In the Nottingham area, the OFT uncovered evidence of two particular trade associations, the Nottingham Builders' Guild ('NBG') and the North Nottinghamshire Contractors' Guild ('NNCG') (together the 'Guilds'), that facilitated the exchange of information and thereby the exchange of cover prices. They collected information on a regular basis and provided it to their members. The Guilds ceased their activities as a direct result of the OFT's investigation. In response to the Statement, one Party noted that none of these organisations ever gave warning that cover pricing was unlawful and therefore they themselves had no awareness that cover pricing was illegal. This does not constitute an excuse for cover pricing – see paragraph IV.27 above.
- IV.129. The OFT has considerable evidence that the exchange of cover prices was facilitated by the activities of these organisations. It is clear from the evidence described below that a number of the Parties used the Guilds as a forum for exchanging information about tenders, which enabled them to identify potential providers of cover prices. However, given that the OFT has uncovered a significant amount of evidence of cover pricing from the Parties directly, and given the exceptional size of this case and the limited resources of the OFT, the OFT considered that, in this particular case, it was not appropriate to address the Statement to the Guilds. Consequently, it is not necessary for the OFT to determine whether the Guilds have infringed the Chapter I prohibition.
- IV.130. Notwithstanding that the Guilds were not addressees of the Statement, their activities are nonetheless described in detail below, as they were an important mechanism for the provision of cover pricing in the Nottingham area.

Activities of the Guilds

- IV.131. The rules and objects²³¹⁶ of the Guilds were, amongst others, 'd) to assist in the maintenance of fair and equitable conditions of tendering and to secure the mutual support and co-operation of members in a fair and equitable level of prices' and 'k) to promote the exchange of information between the members with respect to (i) the existence of invitations to tender for particular contracts and conditions thereof, (ii) the name of persons making tenders for such contracts at any time, but not the amounts of such tenders'. In addition, members were required to report any invitations to tender worth over £1000 to the Secretary, John Wholey. John Wholey was the Secretary of both Guilds.
- IV.132. When interviewed, John Wholey confirmed that the main purpose of the Guilds was to provide 'a contract information service' and that there was no difference between the two Guilds, apart from the geographical difference.²³¹⁷ He confirmed that he contacted contractors on a weekly basis and that they would advise him of the tenders that they had been invited to bid for ('the tender reporting system').²³¹⁸ In turn, he would 'advise them of the reports that we received'. The information provided was for the members' intelligence and 'what they did with the information was entirely up to them'.²³¹⁹ However, he agreed that the Guilds facilitated cover pricing 'because they [the contractors] knew the names of the other contractors who were tendering'.²³²⁰ Moreover, he confirmed that members could indicate to him that they needed help with a tender and he would provide them with the list of other tenderers.²³²¹ In his view, the object 'was to provide the information and then the builders would use it for whatever purposes they wished to use it for. It might have been cover pricing, it might have been to assess...what kind of opposition they were up to in terms of the price of the product'.²³²² In response to the Statement, one Party confirmed that finding out the identity of the competition on a job was utilised not only for cover pricing, but also for market intelligence to assess the attractiveness of a job in terms of how many competitors were bidding and the likelihood of winning the contract.²³²³

Members' perspective of the Guilds

- IV.133. It would appear that the majority of the members regarded the Guilds as a forum for social gatherings. For example, in respect of the NNCG, Allan Gregory of ARG stated that the advantage of membership was 'first and foremost, very much on a social theme'.²³²⁴
- IV.134. Sol provided the following statement about the NBG: '...it is our understanding that the Guild's main function was the organization of social activities. These included a bi-monthly luncheon, a Christmas luncheon and an evening AGM dinner...As a major local construction company we felt we should show some support and our Managing Director very occasionally attended the social events'.²³²⁵
- IV.135. W R Bloodworth stated the following in respect of the NBG: 'Activities of the Guild have become increasingly limited and focussed around the annual meeting, drinks and dinner. Mr Bloodworth and his father...confirm that they have no recollection of any discussion of cover pricing nor wider bid-rigging nor compensation payments. The event is very much a "social" occasion and their experience has been that members are most reluctant to discuss the details of their business/current contracts work levels etc'.²³²⁶
- IV.136. Andrew Arbon Davis of Loach said that the purpose of the tender reporting system was 'just purely to record the level of activity in the area...I think the idea then was that he [John Wholey] would amalgamate all the information from all the builders and probably then report at the AGMs that members of the Guild [NBG] had tendered for X million pounds worth of work and secured Y million pounds worth of work. So purely a record of the activity local in the industry'.²³²⁷
- IV.137. Notwithstanding the social function of the Guilds, it is clear that members of the NBG utilised the NBG as a forum for exchange of information about tenders. For example, in the minutes of the Annual General Meeting ('AGM') of 15

November 2000, Richard Bodill (then Chairman of the NBG) refers to 'the activities of the Guild which centred on the need for members to regularly and consistently report tender enquiries. There remained a constant need to preserve the confidentiality and integrity of the Guild even within their own organisations and even more so when dealing with individuals or organisations who were not members'.²³²⁸

IV.138. Richard Bodill reported in the minutes of the NBG AGM of 14 November 2001 that 'the main activities of the Guild remained constant with the reporting of tender enquiries and social activities when members were able to discuss the industry'.²³²⁹

IV.139. Similarly, in respect of the NNCG, the following was recorded in the minutes of the AGM of 19 November 2003: 'The Chairman said the Secretary had maintained contact with a number of non-member organisations in order to ensure as much information as possible was available on local tender enquiries. The Chairman said the Guild's principal service continued to be the reporting of tender enquiries and he hoped all members had found the information provided has been useful and helpful. He hoped members would continue to maintain confidentiality in their dealings with the information provided and thereby maintaining the integrity of the Guild at all times'.²³³⁰

IV.140. The parties interviewed have confirmed that they knew that if they wanted any information about tenders, the person to contact was John Wholey. For example, Juris Rozentals, Chief Estimator at Bodill, confirmed that it was possible to contact John Wholey in order to find out information about tenders: '...We also sometimes, if it's reported to the Guild, we may find out information from them, you know if we're struggling to find out who's pricing a job...'.²³³¹

Facilitation of cover pricing

IV.141. It is clear that a number of companies used the tender reporting system to obtain cover prices. Andrew Bodill, an estimator at Bodill confirmed that the company would only contact the NBG 'if we wanted to receive a cover price' and that 'the initial purpose was for the intelligence; just to try and find who were pricing about'.²³³²

IV.142. Richard Greene of John Cawley confirmed that he would contact John Wholey in order to find out which competitors might be tendering for a particular contract, and that the purpose of doing this would be to find out who he could approach to obtain a cover price.²³³³ Nick Greene of John Cawley stated that one of the reasons for the tender reporting system was to facilitate cover pricing.²³³⁴

IV.143. Simon Blackburn, Managing Director of Clegg, said that although he had no involvement with the NBG, he was aware of John Wholey and the NBG and that as far back as the 1980s and 1990s 'there was a time you could ring John

Wholey, ask who was on the list and he would generally know who was on the list and would tell you who you could get a cover from'. In addition, 'John Wholey used to ring round and ask you if you were pricing a scheme and you'd say yes, I'm pricing it'.²³³⁵

- IV.144. Martin Ledingham, an estimator at Frudd, said that John Wholey's reporting system helped in terms of obtaining cover pricing.²³³⁶ Frudd's leniency application, and in particular the report by the Managing Director David Frudd, set out that the purpose of the NCG was 'to provide bona fide Nottingham building contractors with a contact to register the tenders where they can request or register the need for help. Help would be the requirement to be able to ask whoever else is quoting for the works to give a cover figure which was always expected to be higher so the work would not be won'.²³³⁷
- IV.145. Similarly, in respect of the NCG, Andrew Eato, the Contracts Director of ARG, confirmed that he was aware of the tender reporting system operated by John Wholey and that 'the purpose of it obviously prior to the investigation was you got the information who was tendering and if you couldn't price it or was left with the problem and you needed assistance you could get names and contacts to go and get some help to enable you to get a tender in'. He also stated that John Wholey 'provided a tool' for cover pricing.²³³⁸
- IV.146. Richard Ian Baggaley, Managing Director at Herbert Baggaley, confirmed that the tender reporting system operated by the NCG was useful because 'if you needed to seek a cover you would know who to approach for a cover...it would give you access to the names of bidders....It was a source of information if you needed to take a cover'.²³³⁹

IV.147. In addition to cover pricing, the OFT found six instances of compensation payments, set out in the table below. Given the lower degree of commonality between the circumstances of these six Infringements, this section describes certain features of the compensation payments, but not to the same level of detail as for cover pricing. Accordingly, these Infringements are described in detail in the relevant paragraphs of the Infringements section below.

135	27 January 2003	17/18 Dover Street, W1	Mansell Durkan
146	12 May 2003	Construction Of Four Storey Lift Tower Burton College, Burton on Trent	Herbert Baggaley Wildgoose

IV.148. The evidence confirms that in some cases, payments were made in exchange for the submission of a cover price i.e. the company providing the cover price also agreed to pay the company receiving cover an agreed sum of money if the former won the tender. In other cases, where either it is unclear from the evidence whether cover pricing was involved or the evidence shows clearly that no cover pricing was involved and each Party prepared its own bid, the companies agreed that the successful tenderer would pay the losing tenderer an agreed sum of money. Such payment was ostensibly made to compensate the loser for the costs of preparing its tender.

IV.149. The OFT considers that the Infringements in this Decision in which the participants offered (or requested) inducements (such as compensation payments) to (or from) the other cartel participants, are more serious than those Infringements where no such inducement was offered. In such cases, customers may face additional loss as a result of the collusive tendering, as tender bids are likely to be further inflated to include the sums paid by way of inducement, rather than the successful contractor absorbing those sums by way of a reduced profit margin. Indeed, in some instances, inflation of one or more of the tender bids to include the agreed level of payment was explicitly recognised by one or more of the participants.

How compensation payments were made

IV.150. Compensation payments were usually agreed at the same time as an agreement on cover pricing. Where no cover price was involved, compensation payments were mutually agreed between the relevant Parties, usually over the telephone. For example, in respect of a compensation payment made by Mansell to Durkan relating to 17/18 Dover Street, London, Durkan contacted Mansell in order to discuss a compensation payment. Clive Perceval of Mansell made the following statement: 'We went through the [tender] process and we were then told that they were going to proceed with two contractors...But we still wished to go ahead with the job...and then I was contacted by Durkans who were in a similar position and, they suggested to us that because of this, one or other party was going to incur costs that we couldn't recover because we weren't going to secure the job...they [Durkan] put forward the proposal that those costs were reimbursed through the other contractor...I spoke to Steve Waite [Divisional Managing Director at the time] about it, and subsequently we agreed that's what we'd do'.²³⁴⁰

IV.151. In all instances of compensation payments, false invoices were submitted to the undertaking that had agreed to make the payment. For example, in respect of the compensation payment made by Mansell to Durkan described above, Durkan submitted an invoice to Mansell for 'Fit Out Works' on a project at '83 to 87 Southwark Street, London SE1' for £60,000 plus VAT. Colin Gilbert of Mansell told the OFT that this project was another contract and that 'it had nothing to do with Durkan...I was asked to put the payment through on that project'. He confirmed that the payment of £60,000 plus VAT to Durkan had nothing to do with 83 to 87 Southwark Street and that Durkan did no work for Mansell on that project.²³⁴¹

IV.152. Similarly, Herbert Baggaley stated in its leniency application that it had *'uncovered payments made or received for which there was no accompanying paper trail or internal stock or service records. Upon further investigation, a Schedule of Payments and Invoices was extracted which could constitute payments made in respect of covers given or received...'*²³⁴²

IV.153. In respect of a compensation payment made by Wildgoose to Herbert Baggaley, Wildgoose stated that it 'received an invoice from Herbert Baggaley Limited ('Baggaleys')...which refers to "Davvers Building, Sheffield – Joinery Works"...In this case the Accounts Department would not have found any order from Wildgoose as in actual fact the invoice did not relate to joinery works as stated'.²³⁴³

The compensation payments influenced the tender bids that were submitted

IV.154. The OFT's investigation has confirmed that in most cases, compensation payments had an impact on the final tender bid submitted by the party making the compensation payment. In some cases, the relevant Parties expressly agreed that they would increase their tender prices by the amount of the agreed compensation payment. In other cases, the agreement to pay compensation influenced or at least potentially influenced the final tender price submitted.

IV.155. For example, in respect of a compensation payment made by Wildgoose to Herbert Baggaley relating to a contract for the construction of Four Storey Lift Tower, Burton College, Wildgoose agreed to pay Herbert Baggaley the sum of £7,000 in order to compensate it for its estimating costs. Herbert Baggaley accordingly raised a false invoice for 'Supply only of Joinery' for a total value of £6,912 plus VAT. Wildgoose confirmed that this was a false invoice. Wildgoose included in its tender bid the amount agreed between the Parties of £7,000. Bryan Bennett, Estimating Director at Wildgoose, stated the following to the OFT: '...I believe that initially both companies were to price the project and the loser would be paid £5,000 to cover the cost of the estimate...After the tender adjudication meeting, I rang Baggaleys...they asked if we had included the sum of money to cover their tender costs and I recall £7,000 was mentioned. I confirmed we had but that £7,000 was more than my recollection. They explained that the increase was due to the nature and size of the project. Therefore, I subsequently added £2,000 to the tender allowances. We subsequently won the project which was reduced in size. The £7,000 appears on the revised tender finance statement as "other payments". Subsequently, we received an invoice dated 23 October 2003 from Baggaleys in the sum of £6,912.00 plus VAT ostensibly for the supply of joinery'.²³⁴⁴

Navigation table

IV.156. The Navigation Table in Annex A, towards the end of this Decision, details the paragraphs in which the case against each Party may be found in the sections below. Each Party is found by the OFT to be a party to a number of Infringements, in most cases three but in some cases one or two and in the case of leniency Parties often more than three. In the Navigation Table, the Parties are listed in alphabetical order and against each Party are listed the Infringements in which the OFT has found that Party engaged in bid rigging activities, together with references to the relevant paragraphs in section D describing that Infringement and the relevant paragraphs in section C describing the cover pricing activities of the leniency Party(ies) involved in that Infringement, where applicable.

IV.157. The Navigation Table also sets out in respect of each Infringement,

- b. for a leniency Party, whether: (i) it will receive either full 100 per cent immunity for that Infringement (because it is a But For Infringement for that Party); or (ii) alternatively its allocated leniency percentage deduction from the penalty for that Infringement (because it is a Not But For Infringement for that Party)²³⁴⁵; or (iii) it will receive no penalty for that Infringement (because the Infringement is not amongst the most recent three Not But For Infringements for the Party); and
- c. for a non-lenieny Party, whether it will receive a 25 per cent deduction from the penalty for that Infringement (because it accepted the OFT's Fast Track Offer in respect of that Infringement) or alternatively will not be entitled to any deduction from penalty for that Infringement (because it did not accept the OFT's Fast Track Offer in respect of that Infringement).

C. Leniency Parties' Approach to Cover Pricing and other Bid Rigging Activities

IV.158. In order to avoid extensive repetition, the OFT sets out in this section the way in which each of the leniency Parties engaged in cover pricing and other bid rigging activities, including a brief explanation of the documents from each such Party evidencing the provision or receipt of cover prices. As many of the leniency Parties were party to more than three Infringements, the OFT sets out in this section much of the information that is common to all of the Infringements in which these companies participated. The activities of the leniency Parties are described in alphabetical order.

Adam Eastwood

IV.159. As part of its leniency application, Adam Eastwood provided a brief explanation of its participation in cover pricing. Adam Eastwood explained that 'The only circumstances in which Eastwoods have been involved in practice of issuing or receiving "covers" involve cases where Eastwoods or a third party wished to remain on tender lists. Eastwoods general practice, when they do not wish to tender for a contract is to advise the employer or his agent that they do not wish to tender giving the particular reason. Notwithstanding this general practice, some "covers" have been issued or received'.²³⁴⁶ On those contracts for which Adam Eastwood decided to obtain a cover price, it explained that the practice of cover pricing '...has only been employed as a convenience to other ²³⁴⁵ Each leniency Party's individual penalty calculation (to be found in Section VI (Enforcement) below) also sets out the relevant Infringements for which penalties are being calculated.

construction firms, or Eastwoods, in circumstances where one or other wished to avoid the inconvenience or embarrassment of not putting in a tender.²³⁴⁷

IV.160. Adrian Tranter ('AT')²³⁴⁸, who joined Adam Eastwood in 1980 and at the time of his interview was Managing Director, explained that the estimating within the Major Works department was carried out by both himself and Christopher Stubbs ('CS')²³⁴⁹, Company Director and employee of Adam Eastwood since 1987. AT stated '... at one time it was mainly all me but that has turned since I became MD and Chris has become more involved. Chris does the day-to-day inputting of the rates and subcontractors and the like...I'm with him at his side and we're discussing how we do this, how we do that, how long's it going to take to do this. We're quite an integrated team. There's only two of us, so we don't sort of hide away from each other'.²³⁵⁰ AT confirmed that the decision whether to tender for a contract in the Major Works department was a joint decision between himself and CS but 'at the end of the day...he will respect my decision. If the job was too big then I would have to make the call at the end of the day. But as often as not we always agree'.²³⁵¹

IV.161. CS explained how he would find out who Adam Eastwood's competitors were from the Builders Conference, '...they would ring round, are you pricing this work [?] yes ...they would have details of who else was tendering and you would say, yes I am pricing this work and they would say you are up against x, y and z'.²³⁵² AT explained that Adam Eastwood would tend to get to know who its competition was through, 'maybe a supplier or subcontractor...or a specialist'.²³⁵³

IV.162. CS explained how the exchange of covers worked in practice, 'We would get a telephone call probably I don't know a week before the tender was due in, can you give us a cover [?] and if we were giving a cover out we would wait until the 11th hour so that all they had to do was fill in their slip and get it away and vice versa. If we were expecting a cover it more often than not came in on the morning of the tender. We just used to put the figure on the sheet, put it in the envelope and away we went'.²³⁵⁴ CS confirmed that the exchange of covers only ever took place over the telephone.²³⁵⁵ CS was asked how he would arrive at a cover figure to give another competitor, and replied '...I tried not to give it as an actual 5% or 6% we would look at the contract and you know we would give them a reasonable percentage above what ours was so that it didn't harm them in any way...you didn't use to put 50% on because that would then look a ridiculous figure'.²³⁵⁶ AT confirmed that a cover price would need to be sufficiently low to give the client an appearance of competition.²³⁵⁷

IV.163. Adam Eastwood stated in its leniency application, 'As far as Eastwoods are concerned they have given more "covers" than those received...they were given/received because the requesting party said they did not want the contract and asked for help. Covers were nearly always given on the last or penultimate day before the Tender Date'.²³⁵⁸ CS confirmed that only he and AT were involved in the giving and receiving of cover prices in the Major Works section of Adam Eastwood.²³⁵⁹

IV.164. In addition, there was also a Minor Works department at Adam Eastwood that dealt predominantly with modernisation works. Tender preparations and estimating in the Minor Works department were dealt with by Paul Dodds ('PD').²³⁶⁰ PD assisted with compiling the 'list of covers' included as part of Adam Eastwood's leniency application before he left Adam Eastwood's employment in late 2006.²³⁶¹

IV.165. Adam Eastwood's leniency application stated that, 'There is no system within Eastwoods for recording when "covers" are issued'.²³⁶² CS said 'other than scraps of paper that you [the OFT] have come across [during the search of Adam Eastwood's premises] the covers were never recorded'.²³⁶³

IV.166. As part of its leniency application, Admiral provided a handwritten list of cover pricing activity, both covers given and taken, since January 2000.²³⁶⁴ This list was prepared by Andrew Clarkson ('AC'), Estimating Director. The following Admiral employees were interviewed by the OFT: Keith Roebuck ('KR'), Chairman; Stephen Savage ('SS'), Managing Director; and AC.

Cover pricing – general

IV.167. Admiral staff confirmed in interview that it participated in both the giving and taking of cover prices. In its response to the Statement, Admiral noted that the 'procedures for taking and receiving cover prices [were] written into the company process manuals'.²³⁶⁵ AC confirmed that the primary responsibility for giving and taking cover prices fell to him, 'That was basically down to me, although Stephen [Savage] and Keith [Roebuck] obviously knew about it, because it was...because it went on, so it was part and parcel of, of running the company'.²³⁶⁶

IV.168. AC explained that on receipt of a tender, 'once the job gets into our system where I'm going to price it, it's given a number, the date it was received, the title of the job and the date it's due in'.²³⁶⁷ These details were entered in the tender register maintained by AC.²³⁶⁸ AC further explained that, 'the job is either processed through myself, who does all the estimating, or in certain instances, we've kept the documents and, taken a cover price, if necessary, if we've decided we weren't pricing it, for, for some reason, or we couldn't price it'.²³⁶⁹ The decision on whether a particular job was attractive was, according to KR, a 'three-fold decision' between him, SS and AC.²³⁷⁰ At the end of the process a tender settlement meeting was held to finalise the tender which was attended by AC, KR and SS.

Admiral taking cover prices

IV.169. AC explained how Admiral would find out who the competition was on a job, *'I'd ring subcontractors, or material suppliers up, and say, have you had an enquiry for such and such a job? If they say yes, I say, can you tell me who you're pricing it for...then I would ring them up and say, I need some help on this job, because I can't price it, for whatever reason. Can you help me out with a figure?'*²³⁷¹

IV.170. Admiral confirmed that two contacts would take place with a competitor, by telephone, in respect of taking a cover price. One, when Admiral asked for help and then, secondly, on the day of the tender submission or the day before the tender submission, there would be a further contact to obtain the cover price.²³⁷² AC confirmed in interview in respect of taking a cover, that Admiral would phone the competitor around two days before the tender deadline, to register the fact that Admiral needed a cover, and then closer to the tender deadline, Admiral would actually receive the cover price.²³⁷³

Admiral giving cover prices

IV.171. Admiral confirmed that two contacts would also take place, by telephone, with a competitor in respect of giving a cover price. First, the competitor would ask Admiral for help and then secondly, on the day of the tender submission or the day before the tender submission, there would be a further contact to give the cover price.²³⁷⁴ AC confirmed in respect of providing a cover price to a competitor, 'You could say, I'll give you a ring when I've got the figure, or if I don't ring you tomorrow, give me a ring up at close of plays and I'll see if I've got something'.²³⁷⁵

IV.172. In terms of arriving at a cover price to give to a competitor, AC said that, 'a lot depends on the value of the overall scheme... but normally you would just add... I don't know, probably 4%, or 5% on to...what I knew my figure was going to be'.²³⁷⁶

Contemporaneous documents – tender documentation

IV.173. The main contemporaneous document produced at Admiral was the tender register maintained by AC. Admiral did not produce an internal information summary sheet, or similar such document during its tender process. As part of its leniency application, Admiral produced documentation in relation to a number of tenders. This consisted of the relevant client 'Form of Tender' documentation and a few handwritten notes written by AC. This evidence is discussed by the OFT in relation to each relevant specific tender.

ARG

- IV.174. As part of its leniency application, ARG made available current employees and provided contact details for ex-employees to be interviewed. These were Allan Gregory ('AG'), Managing Director of ARG, Andrew Eato ('AE'), Contracts Director, and Darren Adkin ('DA'), an estimator surveyor employed by ARG from December 2002 to March 2004. During these voluntary interviews the individuals were asked to give an explanation of ARG's involvement in cover pricing.
- IV.175. AG explained during interview that on receipt of a tender an estimate schedule or chase control sheet was completed.²³⁷⁷ The tender was initially sent to AG and he passed it to the estimating office for the details to be entered on the estimate schedule.²³⁷⁸
- IV.176. AG and AE would make the decision regarding whether ARG was to tender for a contract.²³⁷⁹ AG and AE took a number of factors into account when deciding whether to tender for a particular contract, AG explained that they would have to consider, *'have we got a gang of men coming free in six weeks' time when this is due to start...also you can do the site survey and think...it's a nightmare of a job...there's no access...we've had feedback on this architect, we've had feedback on this client, and they're baddies. They don't pay...'*²³⁸⁰ On contracts AG and AE deemed unattractive they confirmed that ARG would obtain a cover price from a competitor.²³⁸¹

ARG taking cover prices

- IV.177. AG said that other than himself, and in his absence AE, the estimator involved in pricing the tender would be involved in the exchange of cover prices.²³⁸² ARG would find out who was pricing the tender from the architects, named contractors and suppliers and also *'the guild'*²³⁸³...*John Wooley, the secretary, used to phone around everyone on a weekly basis to gather intelligence. So if you needed assistance on a particular job, whether it was at the beginning...whether you'd got halfway through the tender...I've had to phone John Wooley, get a name, get a cover price, get on the bike, and get out and get the tender in'*²³⁸⁴ AG also went on to explain that there were organisations they could approach to find out who was on a tender list, 'there's also Glennagan's which is a national produced schedule. There's ABI, which is nationally available information. And there was another one called the Builders' Conference'.²³⁸⁵

IV.178. On tenders where ARG was taking a cover price, DA explained, 'I can remember taking covers on small works, spoke to Chris Stendle at Greenwoods...'.²³⁸⁶ However, DA stated that if a cover price was sought for a larger contract, 'I'd be given a price from Alan'.²³⁸⁷ AG explained that ARG would contact a competitor and say, 'We're not interested in this. Would you give us a cover price? It was the done thing'.²³⁸⁸ AG confirmed that if ARG required a cover price he would contact one of ARG's competitors by telephone.²³⁸⁹

IV.179. The OFT asked how the exchange of cover prices was recorded within ARG. AG replied 'Well as your colleagues saw from our schedule, there were certain items on the schedule that would say, 'Cover required'. That means a cover price required...mainly on the estimate schedule'.²³⁹⁰ AG continued to explain, 'Or in the right-hand column it might say, you know, 'Joe Bloggs, Sam Smith'.²³⁹¹ However AG confirmed that this information might have been entered post-tender.²³⁹² AE stated that contact between estimators regarding the exchange of cover prices might have been recorded on pieces of paper, 'Well they might make the odd notes on the scrap paper but there wasn't formally records kept of that sort of information...if you were taking a telephone call you sometimes make notes, different people seek information in different ways. It's not something that we insist on being written down so we have got proof – they might just write it straight on to the tender form'.²³⁹³

ARG giving cover prices

IV.180. DA explained that if anyone approached him for a cover price, 'I had to refer it to Alan and Alan would make that decision...I would never make a decision to give another company...No I couldn't do that'.²³⁹⁴ DA stated, 'If someone rang me, I'd take a contact and speak to Alan'.²³⁹⁵ DA confirmed that according to his recollection, if a cover price was to be given to a competitor AG would arrange to give the cover price, '...he's doing someone a favour, he wants to be doing the talking'.²³⁹⁶

IV.181. AE described in interview the process of arriving at a figure to give a competitor, *'...it depended on the size of the job and the value of it but you would just – there is no set formula no set percentages you just...go in and give them something slightly higher than your own figure...you don't want to make your colleagues look daft...it has got to be somewhere near because you would hope that they would do similar for you. massive gap in the tender prices then it's obvious that something's not [right] or they clearly...didn't want the job...and that's no good to you neither you know you got to look as if you are keen and interested even if on that occasion you weren't'.²³⁹⁷ AG also explained that he would have added, 'three, four, five, six, seven percent, just to make it – make it look as if he's done the work. And obviously, the unwritten law is that then, in the future, he would reciprocate for our situation'.²³⁹⁸

Arthur M Griffiths

IV.182. The following Arthur M Griffiths employees were interviewed as part of its leniency application: Maurice Walsh ('MW'), Managing Director and Gary Wildsmith ('GW'), Commercial Director.

IV.183. In its leniency application Arthur M Griffiths admitted to one tender on which it took a cover price from Thomas Vale, as a 'desperate act of temporary insanity' on the part of GW.²³⁹⁹ Since March 2000 the following Arthur M Griffiths employees were involved in estimating: Alan Griffiths ('AG'), company chairman (deceased January 2007), MW and GW. Bob Round who retired in 2004 was also involved in estimating, but only for very minor jobs.²⁴⁰⁰

Tendering procedure

IV.184. Prior to the leniency application by Arthur M Griffiths in June 2006, all tenders received went first to AG, who then would allocate it to either himself, MW or GW to prepare an estimate. MW and GW said that AG expected them to estimate all tenders properly and he never instructed them to seek cover prices.²⁴⁰¹ For the tenders for which MW or GW prepared estimates, a tender adjudication meeting would take place between AG and either MW or GW respectively. All the tender papers were then left with AG for final consideration. AG would then decide on the final tender figure, which he gave to either MW or GW, for them to fill in the official Form of Tender and arrange dispatch to the client.²⁴⁰²

IV.185. GW confirmed that AG would sometimes be interested in who else was bidding for a tender. He said 'Alan used to say, okay, who are we up against?'²⁴⁰³ MW explained that they would find out who the competition was on a tender by two methods. Firstly, through industry intelligence bodies, such as the ABI and secondly, by contacting sub contractors, who would be named on a job for works such as mechanical or electrical.²⁴⁰⁴ GW said 'I can think of [a] time where Alan has, as I said...could you check and see if so and so is on this particular tender list? And I'd ring a colleague under the firm and say...to find out...who was on the list. But that's as far as it went, so...you think though, maybe, you know, perhaps, you know, there was something going on there'.²⁴⁰⁵

Arthur M Griffiths taking cover prices

IV.186. GW confirmed that he asked for a cover price on one job (Tipton & Coseley Building Society, tender deadline 26 May 2006)²⁴⁰⁶, but that aside from this one instance he had no direct knowledge of cover pricing within Arthur M Griffiths.²⁴⁰⁷ He confirmed that he never discussed cover pricing with AG.²⁴⁰⁸ MW also said that, 'I never knew it went on here, Alan Griffiths dealt with the tenders when they came in, now whether he gave or took a cover, I can hand on heart honestly say, he never discussed it with me...he would have responsibility for everything basically, but he never, he wasn't the kind of man to discuss that kind of thing with me or anybody else'.²⁴⁰⁹

Arthur M Griffiths giving cover prices

IV.187. MW explained that if he received a request for help from a competitor he would say, *'speak to Alan Griffiths, I would transfer the call down to him'*²⁴¹⁰ and that 'I don't know whether he would give a cover...He might well have told them to get stuffed, I don't know, on the other hand he might not have done'.²⁴¹¹ GW said that '...we have received phone calls from various people over the years...it was quite strictly understood that if any of those requests came in they were just fielded and passed on to Alan...to decide on, obviously who was asking for help...he'd always say, put them through to me, and that's what happened'.²⁴¹² GW also said that he had 'no idea' what AG did with the requests for help he received.²⁴¹³

Contemporaneous documents – tender documentation

IV.188. No contemporaneous documentation indicating cover pricing was produced under the leniency application made by Arthur M Griffiths. Prior to June 2006 Arthur M Griffiths did not record incoming tenders on a register, list or any other similar document. MW said, 'Alan Griffiths would make a note in a diary of when the tender date was due in and then bring the tender up for us, for us to do basically'.²⁴¹⁴

Balfour Beatty

IV.189. As part of its leniency application, Balfour Beatty's legal representatives advised that 'Balfour Beatty entered the UK construction industry through BBCL [Balfour Beatty Construction Ltd or 'BBCL']...BBCL provides national building services, ²⁴⁰⁷ Interview transcript, OFT Document Reference 13292, pages 7 and 8. In response to the Statement, Arthur M Griffiths stated that prior to the departure of AG in mid 2006, 'the other three directors had very restricted access to information relating to the running of the company and tendering procedures', written representations, 19 May 2008. However, the OFT notes that the evidence outlined below in relation to Infringement 244 demonstrates clearly that GW was involved in at least this Infringement.

from a number of offices spread throughout the UK'.²⁴¹⁵ They stated that Balfour Beatty Refurbishment Ltd ('BBRL') 'is managed by Balfour Beatty Construction Scottish & Southern Ltd'.²⁴¹⁶

- IV.190. As part of its leniency application, Balfour Beatty made available current employees and contacted ex-employees to be interviewed. During these voluntary interviews the following individuals gave an explanation of BBCL's and BBRL's involvement in cover pricing: Peter Clist ('PC'), a Director and General Manager²⁴¹⁷ of BBCL, Martyn Etheridge ('ME'), a senior estimator at BBCL, Kenneth Winter ('KW'), who was a Managing Director of BBCL in the period from 1 August 2002²⁴¹⁸ until retiring at the end of 2005, Cliff Davey ('CD'), a Pre-Contract Manager at BBRL, and Hugh McElhill ('HM'), a senior estimator at BBRL.
- IV.191. In interview PC, when asked whether he would be involved in deciding whether a tender should be taken forward, stated 'that would depend on the size of the project...I look after anything from something, well, 200 million down to quite small projects. So the smaller projects it would be the responsibility of the technical services manager or the manager working for me'.²⁴¹⁹ In interview ME also stated 'mainly the, the directors and the senior management, would decide, how competitive they wanted to go in on it'.²⁴²⁰
- IV.192. It is apparent from documents provided by Balfour Beatty and those persons interviewed that Balfour Beatty would on occasions have sought to find out who else was competing for a tender. Balfour Beatty's legal representatives stated that in respect of finding out the identity of the competition on a tender, *'information may come from the client, suppliers or sub-contractors'*²⁴²¹ and also 'although BBCL is not a member of the Builders' Conference...sometimes staff at BBCL have had contact with the Builders' Conference e.g. BBCL is sometimes contacted by the Builders' Conference and asked which tenders BBCL is currently pricing. BBCL will usually provide this information and will receive in exchange the names of the other tenderers on the tender list'.²⁴²² Balfour Beatty's legal representatives stated that this would also apply to BBRL. In interview ME stated 'I mean, there's several ways. I mean, you usually do a site visit and the number of times I've done a site visit and you've actually seen the competitors there as well...sometimes the clients will tell you...who you're up against...' and '...you can ring up a sub-contractor and say, have you priced anybody else on it?'.²⁴²³ In terms of recording the information in respect of competition ME stated 'usually at the bottom of the tender summary sheet, we sometimes have in the bottom there, 'competition if known''.²⁴²⁴

²⁴¹⁷ Peter Clist has been in this post since January 2006, prior to this he has held various management posts within BBCL, having been with Balfour Beatty for 21 years.

²⁴¹⁸ Prior to this Kenneth Winter was a General Manager of BBCL from 1994 – 2002.

IV.193. Many of those persons interviewed explained that the purpose of cover pricing was so that clients did not remove them from future tender lists. ME stated *'...you don't want to upset the client, because next time they'll turn round and say, well, you didn't price that one, why should I give you any more work?'*²⁴²⁵

IV.194. Most of those persons interviewed in respect of Balfour Beatty advised that the exchange of cover prices was made via the telephone and not any other medium. PC stated 'Simply a phone call to a competitor if one was taking a cover'.²⁴²⁶

BBCL giving cover prices

IV.195. In respect of the process of giving a cover price to a competitor ME stated '...giving covers out, the people that approach me and say, can you give a cover and I would, I'd most probably say, yes, we most probably could help you out...and then I would discuss it with my, my directors. And they'll say, yeah fine'.²⁴²⁷ When asked who he would discuss this with, ME stated 'Well, it'd most probably be my line manager and my director, which would be Peter Clist and John Samuels...'.²⁴²⁸ In interview PC, when asked if he would be aware that another contractor had phoned for a cover price, stated 'Yes, Yes' and 'I would think so on larger jobs, may not on smaller jobs. I would have liked to have thought I was aware on all size jobs but I can't guarantee that'.²⁴²⁹ PC further stated he was likely to be aware of giving a cover price when the tender value was over a certain level '...I suppose over two and a half million if I was...it's difficult to say an exact level but larger projects'.²⁴³⁰ In respect of who made the decision to give or take a cover price, PC stated 'it would depend on size but...it probably would be the estimator'.²⁴³¹

IV.196. When asked how a cover price, to give to a competitor, would be calculated ME stated '...you're looking at, you know, a minimum of...4% or 5%' and 'you'd most probably just run it past your, your director saying, you know, I've got to get a cover out, I'm thinking of giving him 5% or...a 100K on this...it's no hard and fast rules at all'.²⁴³² ME confirmed that when he was giving a cover price he would calculate the price to give, stating 'I do all the numbers, yeah'.²⁴³³ In respect of his involvement in calculating the cover price to give to a competitor PC stated '...in some case[s] I would [be involved]...I think it would depend on the size of project'.²⁴³⁴

IV.197. When asked how the giving and taking of a cover price would be recorded, ME stated 'it would be, most probably on a scrap of paper and put in the file...'.²⁴³⁵ Further to this PC stated '...some of the guys would write the, the information down, some wouldn't, there was no agreed way to do it'.²⁴³⁶

IV.198. In interview KW, when asked if he had been aware of cover pricing taking place at BBCL, stated '...I can only recollect one or two occasions when someone said to me...we've given a cover to someone. It was mentioned at a meeting, we've given a cover, I think'.²⁴³⁷ In respect of whose decision it would have been to give or take a cover price, KW stated 'I think it always lies at the bottom rather than top'.²⁴³⁸

BBRL taking cover prices

IV.199. In interview CD stated that the decision whether to price a tender '... would lie ultimately...I guess, with the general manager, who's Gerry Pape in this instance...would have been Peter [Clist], who was previously [in that post]'.²⁴³⁹ HM stated '...I'd have a look at the documentation and report back to Cliff and say, yes, this is a nice job, no, it's not a very good job. Then, you know, we said right we're tendering the job' and 'I'd report back on my view but...I wouldn't have any part in the decision making process'.²⁴⁴⁰ When asked if the competition was recorded anywhere, CD stated 'It will be noted down in...some instances...if it's of interest. We used to have a sheet called a bid risk, register or a sheet, I think, where there was a box for the competition to be listed if that was...known'.²⁴⁴¹

IV.200. In respect of the process of taking a cover price from a competitor CD stated 'if I didn't know who was on the list initially, then I'd either ask the estimator that I'd assigned it to if it was one that we'd sort of started and couldn't finish. I'd make the phone call to...find out who the competition were, if we didn't know, look at the list and...select what I would think would be the most sensible person that's putting it together, and then contact them and ask them if they could help us. If they could, then we'd agree a time that I'd call or he'd call me when he'd got the figure ready and then he'd give me the figure and then we'd put...the bid in'. CD stated that 'generally you would ask for chief estimator...a traditional title...for someone like me'.²⁴⁴²

IV.201. When asked when in the tender period a request would be made for a cover price HM stated 'Normally within the last day or two prior to the tender going in' and 'I mean ... you're not advertising to the market place that you're taking a cover'.²⁴⁴³ In terms of who made the decision to take a cover price from a competitor HM stated '...it would be from Cliff's level and above'.²⁴⁴⁴ CD stated 'I'm not sure ... there would be an ultimate decision. If...I was approached, somebody needed help, I would sort it out but people were generally informed if that was the case. So superiors knew...'.²⁴⁴⁵ CD further explained that the tender adjudication meeting would not be held if a cover price had been taken.²⁴⁴⁶

- IV.202. When asked how the taking of a cover price would be recorded, CD stated 'They're not really recorded as such. It's...been seen as...an informal thing so you might find the casual bits of paper with things jotted down but it's not sort of something that's formally recorded'.²⁴⁴⁷ HM stated 'I never kept any details of it'.²⁴⁴⁸
- IV.203. In terms of the cover price provided by a competitor HM stated 'you'll find out the figure, report back what the figures that was given was and you might accept that figure or you might increase it [when submitting the tender to the client]'.²⁴⁴⁹

Bluestone

- IV.204. In its leniency application²⁴⁵⁰, Bluestone, through its legal representatives, explained that between 1994 and 1998, under its parent company Morgan Sindall, it acquired 100 per cent controlling interest of seven regional construction limited companies, namely Snape, Robert R Roberts, Wheatley, Sindall, Hinkins & Frewin, Barnes & Elliott and Stansell. Each subsidiary company was run as a separate entity with its own board of directors and, according to Bluestone, its own discrete geographical area. On 9 November 2001, Bluestone was created; subsuming the seven companies into a single trading entity and from 2002 Bluestone created a national business with a uniform set of policies, procedures and operating systems. In December 2004, Bluestone made a further acquisition of the assets of three offices formally owned by the Benson Group, specifically those in Reigate, Hatfield and Fareham.²⁴⁵¹
- IV.205. Bluestone conducted an internal enquiry following the OFT's inspections under section 28 at its offices in Milton Keynes, Leeds and Nottingham. Bluestone identified *'multiple instances...of cover pricing across all areas of the Bluestone business'*²⁴⁵², and provided tables of 'definite' and 'possible' instances of cover pricing. These tables were amended in a further letter to the OFT dated 18 July 2006.²⁴⁵³
- IV.206. Covers recorded within Table A were confirmed as 'definite' instances. Bluestone stated 'The information was provided by employees directly involved with, or with first hand knowledge of, the cover. Where possible, details regarding the third party involved have been included...and any documentary evidence received during the interview process has been referenced'.²⁴⁵⁴
- IV.207. Table A lists a schedule of [...] covers given or received, identifying the Bluestone area, details of the tender, personnel involved, the other party to bid rigging (where known), details of any supporting documentary evidence and comments.²⁴⁵⁵

IV.208. Covers recorded within Table B were identified as 'possible' instances of cover pricing for the following reasons:

- 'Documentary Evidence – a code such as (C) is included on the tender register and in the office concerned that code generally indicates that a cover has been taken;
- Ambiguous Code – i.e. in some offices "ZED" or "Z'ed" or "B Tender" is used interchangeably to denote tenders where a cover was sought and those tenders where a unilateral over-inflated price was submitted;
- Vagueness – i.e. vague recollection by staff of insufficient time to prepare tender/undesirable tender; or
- No tender build-up documentation – suggesting that a cover may have been sought'.²⁴⁵⁶

IV.209. Table B lists a schedule of [...] [C] *'possible instances of cover pricing'*²⁴⁵⁷ and identifies details of the Bluestone area, tender, personnel involved, supporting documentary evidence and comments.

IV.210. Bluestone personnel provided explanations of their involvement in cover pricing. In particular, the OFT conducted interviews with Geoff Hixon, who worked as a senior estimator at Bluestone's Reigate office; estimating staff and directors from Bluestone's Leeds office, namely Mike Hesp ('MH'), David Smith ('DS'), and David Williamson ('DW'); and Commercial Director Martin Pitt ('MP') who was based in Milton Keynes. In addition, several other Bluestone current and former employees were interviewed by the OFT from other regional offices, including Geoff Hixon ('GH'), who used to work as a senior estimator at Bluestone's Reigate office.

IV.211. As part of its leniency application, Bluestone provided a general explanation of its participation in cover pricing, from information obtained from face to face interviews and questionnaire responses with its own staff. Bluestone stated that *'cover pricing appears to have been endemic in the sector'*²⁴⁵⁸ and 'As a general rule, any exchange [of a cover price] would only be by telephone and not in writing. Extremely rarely where, as part of the bid process, further explanatory details have to be provided to the employer, there may have been some communication in writing'.²⁴⁵⁹

IV.212. Bluestone concluded that 'it is clear from the evidence...that Bluestone has...been involved in cover pricing. i.e. has submitted tender prices which it had not prepared, which were not supported by any calculation and which were supplied by or influenced by a third party also participating in the tender process. It is also clear that, albeit on a minority basis, Bluestone has given cover prices to others'.²⁴⁶⁰

IV.213. Based at Bluestone's Leeds office, MH worked as Chief Estimator until approximately 2004, before becoming Pre-Construction Director. In interview, MH explained that Bluestone at Leeds was formerly known under the names of Roberts and then Snape Roberts before assuming the Bluestone title in 2002. MH had direct responsibility for decisions on tenders until 2004 and was still involved in tender settlements after that date. MH said that whilst he was Chief Estimator, he would usually make the decision to take a cover price, referring decisions to the managing director Graham Ellis 'only on the bigger stuff...on the smaller stuff...he wasn't bothered'.²⁴⁶¹

IV.214. MH explained cover pricing as follows: 'It was a method of helping you out of a situation...and when...you were asked to give a cover to somebody else, well, that was to our advantage, but...all it did was knock one off a list of names, so [...]

[...] [C], were we colluding to win or manipulate work, no, not in the strictest sense of the word'.²⁴⁶²

IV.215. Commercial Director MP was also interviewed by the OFT about his knowledge of cover pricing at Bluestone and he described the practice in the past as being 'the norm' within the industry.²⁴⁶³ He said that there was little awareness of competition issues within Bluestone until he became aware of the OFT's investigation into the roofing industry. An email sent to him in April 2005 from the parent company Morgan Sindall about competition law, remained unread 'to my regret'.²⁴⁶⁴

IV.216. Pre-Construction Manager DW, based at Bluestone's Leeds office, was also interviewed about cover pricing and agreed that the practice was widespread within the construction industry.²⁴⁶⁵ DW said that it was normally conducted by telephone and 'usually there was no record'. DW confirmed that by writing something down there would have been evidence of collusion. DW confirmed that on occasions, he would have been directly involved in cover pricing, by contacting a competitor's Chief Estimator.²⁴⁶⁵

Bluestone taking cover prices

IV.217. With regard to taking a cover price, Bluestone explained the process as follows: 'Once the decision has been taken internally to 'take a cover', an initial phone call is made to a competitor to see if they would be prepared to assist...The driver in Bluestone's case has predominantly been to 'lose' the bid, but to be seen to be participating sufficiently to maintain an association with the Employer's forward workstream. Therefore, it seeks a competitor which is likely to be a serious bidder but not necessarily the winning bidder...Information regarding competitor involvement in the bid appears to have been freely gained through either the Builders' Conference organisation or from the engagement with the sub-contracting community...Occasionally personal contacts with past colleagues offer an insight into the level of interest in a particular project'.²⁴⁶⁶

- IV.218. Bluestone added 'Where an informal agreement to provide or receive a cover price has been reached, a follow-up telephone conversation just before the tender return deadline is the usual vehicle for communicating the cover price. In virtually all cases the competitor will merely provide the price to be used in the bid and not details of the price that it is intending to submit. On occasions, where the bid requires more than the mere submission of a price, certain supporting details (for example, specifications etc) are also exchanged. It is then a matter for Bluestone to decide whether to use the price provided or to modify it, inevitably by increasing it, prior to submission'.²⁴⁶⁷
- IV.219. MH described the process of taking a cover price as follows: '...you would ring up, speak to a competitor, and ask if they were tendering this job competitively, yes, they were, so you would ask for a cover price and he would ring you with a figure, suggesting that you went in on...if it was a trusted source...you may use that figure. If it was a particular job that you really really didn't want...you may actually add a little bit more to the figure you were given, just to be on the safe side, because what you wouldn't want is to come second, because sometimes you'd find that they'd interview the first two people, so you find yourself going to a meeting about a job you know bugger all about...but you didn't equally, given the choice, you didn't want to be number six on a list of six, because that would create the wrong impression as well, so it was difficult'.²⁴⁶⁸
- IV.220. MH had a 'little black book' of contacts which he used for the purpose of obtaining cover prices. This telephone book was taken during the OFT's search of the Leeds office.²⁴⁶⁹ MH said 'if I could, I would ring up quite early, because you didn't want to be left holding the baby at the end of it, in which case you've suddenly quickly got to price the job'. He added that the other company would give the cover price 'on the day the tenders went in...so it would be last minute'.²⁴⁷⁰
- IV.221. MH also explained some of the forms created at the Leeds office, which recorded tenders. A tender registration form was created by him, an example of which was provided as part of Bluestone's leniency application and referred to in interview.²⁴⁷¹ MH said that this form was 'the notification at the beginning of the tender process' and, referring to the letter 'Z' on the second page of the form, he said that it meant that Bluestone was 'not interested...that in itself does not necessarily mean that the job was not priced, it's a damn good indication, yes, but not necessarily, it just meant, we weren't going to go for it, it wasn't an attractive job'.²⁴⁷²
- IV.222. MH also maintained an electronic spreadsheet of tenders, an extract of which was found during the OFT's inspection under section 28.²⁴⁷³ Referring to the column marked 'WIN/LOSE'; MH explained the entry of the letters 'Z' as follows: 'Essentially, it was a classification to say that we were not interested in the job and I would guess, nine times out of ten, it was highly likely that that was a cover'.²⁴⁷⁴ An earlier version of the spreadsheet of tenders was provided under leniency by Bluestone.²⁴⁷⁵ MH confirmed that the letter 'B' was also used to indicate that a cover price was sought by Bluestone and that the spreadsheet was updated once a month by him. He said in respect of the codes on the form, 'I think...it really...just phraseology at different times, we knew that you didn't want to be writing the word cover'.²⁴⁷⁶

IV.223. In interview, DW agreed that the letter 'Z' or letters 'ZED', on internal documentation at Bluestone Leeds office, were used to indicate that a cover price had been taken from a competitor.²⁴⁷⁷ MP said that the letter 'Z' stood for 'zero interest'.²⁴⁷⁸

IV.224. Also based at Bluestone's Leeds office, senior estimator DS agreed that the letters 'Z' or 'B' were used to indicate a cover price and he confirmed that he had a contact list of construction companies, which was used in part to contact other companies for cover prices.²⁴⁷⁹ This contact list was found during the OFT's inspection at Bluestone's Leeds office.²⁴⁸⁰

IV.225. GH was a senior estimator employed at Bluestone's Reigate office from July 2005 to December 2006. In interview, he said that tenders were allocated to him by the estimating manager and decisions as to whether Bluestone would competitively tender were made at director level. If a decision was made to seek a cover, a competitor would be approached by telephone and a cover price obtained. He said the cover price 'was designed to be above their figure obviously, but not horrendously...so they could make it look as though we were competitive'.²⁴⁸¹ GH said that he sometimes recorded covers in his personal notebook.

Bluestone - giving cover prices

IV.226. In relation to giving a cover to a competitor, Bluestone explained that 'the process for Bluestone providing a cover price to a competitor, on approach, is the mirror image of that described...for receiving a cover price. There is no evidence whatsoever of Bluestone initiating the giving of a cover price to a competitor'.²⁴⁸²

IV.227. In interview, MH said 'If...someone rang us and asked for a cover, would we give one out, well yes we would, because it was sort of tit for tat. Did we know at that time it was increasing our odds of winning the job, well, yes, come on we're not daft, of course we did...all it did was knock one off a likely list of five or six tenderers, so your odds went from one in six to one in four or, one in five'.²⁴⁸³

IV.228. DS said that covers given might be recorded on Tender Finalisation Sheets, which were only created if Bluestone was genuinely tendering for the work. DS said that he recorded the name of the opposition on the right hand corner of this document with the letter 'C' by the company name if Bluestone had given a cover price. He added, 'certainly the way I would have done it was to list the names down. If any of those companies rang up asking for a cover, I would write a C against it, which indicated it was a prompt or reminder that...they had been in touch'.²⁴⁸⁴ He also said that he was less involved in the giving and receiving of covers after DW replaced MH as Pre-Construction Manager/Chief Estimator in 2004.²⁴⁸⁵

IV.229. As part of its leniency application, Bodill provided a general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. The following Bodill employees expanded upon this explanation during interview: Managing Director Richard Bodill ('RB'), estimators Juris Rozentals ('JR') and Andrew Bodill ('AB') and estimating support David Wraithe ('DW').

IV.230. A tender sheet was completed for each contract for which Bodill was invited to tender.²⁴⁸⁶ DW explained that, 'In 99% of the cases', he would prepare the tender sheet.²⁴⁸⁷ On the few occasions when DW did not prepare the tender sheet it would be completed by either JR or AB. When preparing the tender sheet DW would write on the tender sheet the date of the tender submission, a calendar countdown to indicate the number of days that Bodill had to price the job, the name of the job, architect and quantity surveyor. Each tender sheet was given an in house File Number and a Job Number which was obtained from the Nottingham Builders' Guild ('NBG') (see paragraphs IV.128 to IV.146 above). Each tender that Bodill wanted to win was then allocated to either JR or AB (or, occasionally to RB).

IV.231. Bodill stated that the tender sheet included a section headed 'Tenderers' which provided space to insert the names of other companies tendering for the contract.²⁴⁸⁸ Initially, DW would enter the names of any competitors he knew were going for the job in this section against the numbers 1 to 6. As the job progressed DW along with AB and JR would also fill in names of other tenderers when this information was forthcoming. DW said that 'a lot of it is my writing but, the other two would put on as well if they received information'.²⁴⁸⁹ These names were inserted when intelligence was obtained by staff in the estimating department, during the tender process. Bodill stated that this intelligence was obtained by telephone when asking sub-contractors and suppliers if they wished to price the tender, or when chasing quotations prior to completion of the estimate.²⁴⁹⁰ RB stated that Bodill may also have found out about other companies tendering for particular tenders through organisations such as the Builders Confederation and agencies such as Glennigans and

ABI.²⁴⁹¹ RB also stated that information on other companies invited to tender for particular tenders was obtained as a result of Bodill's membership of the NBG.²⁴⁹²

Bodill giving cover prices

IV.232. In statements provided to the OFT as part of its leniency application and confirmed in the subsequent interviews with the OFT, all of Bodill's employees involved in the preparation of tenders confirmed the procedures followed for all tenders. RB explained how the process would work for tenders that Bodill wanted to win, as follows:²⁴⁹³

'Real Tenders

- Enquiry arrives
- Tender sheet prepared. [...]
- Quantity Surveyor or any Consultants appointed as required
- Document read and marked up for procurement of materials and sub-contractors
- Enquiries set [sic] out for general materials
- Enquiries sent out for work packages
- Intelligence sought to identify other tenderers [...]
- Quotations checked and entered into tender estimate
- Tender estimate calculated
- Tender figure settled at Tender (Adjudication) Meeting
- Cover price given to other contractors who request it
- Tender submitted'

IV.233. In tenders where Bodill was giving a cover price, Bodill stated that the ringed letter 'C' against another company who was tendering and the words 'from us' indicated that Bodill was giving that company a cover price. The figure Bodill gave that company as a cover price was usually written on the tender sheet beside their name.²⁴⁹⁴ The numbers '1', '2' and '3' indicated the order in which Bodill was approached by the other companies for a cover price and the first to approach would get the lowest price and so on.²⁴⁹⁵ If a competitor wanted Bodill to provide a cover price the phone call would be directed to the estimator dealing with that job and AB explained that, 'so it's put through to me, I'd say, yes, Okay, we'll contact you nearer...nearer the date'.²⁴⁹⁶ JR explained that at the tender adjudication meeting, 'we settle the tender, and then we would fill in the tender sum analysis'²⁴⁹⁷, and that between the tender adjudication meeting and submission of tender, 'we would put in any figures that, we would give in as help'.²⁴⁹⁸ AB confirmed that at the tender adjudication meeting it was decided what price Bodill was going in at and he confirmed that the cover prices would be annotated on the tender sheet between the tender adjudication meeting and the actual submission of the tender.²⁴⁹⁹

IV.234. AB further explained that DW would normally have made the phone calls to a competitor to provide the cover price, 'purely because the estimator normally hand delivers the tender...so David would be in the office and we'd say, can you just ring this through to so and so'.²⁵⁰⁰ DW confirmed that the relevant estimator would tell him the cover price to give following the tender adjudication meeting and that generally the estimators would annotate the cover price on the tender sheet.²⁵⁰¹ DW further stated that there would almost always be two contacts with the competitor asking for the cover price. DW also stated that the first contact would be when the competitor asked for help, and then secondly on the day of the tender submission or the day before the tender submission there would be the contact to give the competitor the cover price.²⁵⁰²

Bodill taking cover prices

IV.235. On receipt of a tender RB would discuss with the relevant estimator if Bodill were going to price the job. The ultimate decision on whether to take a cover on a tender would be RB's. RB explained how the process would work for tenders that Bodill did not want to win.²⁵⁰³

'Token Tenders ("Cover Pricing")

- Enquiry arrives
- Tender sheet prepared. [...]
- Intelligence sought to identify other tenderers
- A Chosen tendered [sic tenderer] approached for help
- Cover price given to us just before tender submission due
- Tender submitted incorporating cover price'

IV.236. Where Bodill was taking a cover, a ringed letter 'C' was generally written on the original tender form, shortly after receipt of the tender, instead of allocating the job to an estimator and a '*' would be annotated against the company that was providing the cover.²⁵⁰⁴ DW explained that 'where it says "estimator" I put "C" because that means we decided to take help on it, so it was never given to an estimator to look at'.²⁵⁰⁵ DW said that he would then find out who was tendering for the job, make an initial contact to ask for help from them (i.e. a cover price) and then make a subsequent contact, probably on the morning of the tender submission to obtain the cover price.²⁵⁰⁶

Original and copy tender sheets

IV.237. After a tender was submitted the original tender sheets were then passed to RB who kept them in his office. AB explained that the tender sheet did not form part of the tender file and that once the tender was submitted the sheets were passed to RB. It was these original tender sheets that were provided to the OFT as part of Bodill's leniency application. JR and AB explained that they kept copies of the tender sheets but that the originals were kept by RB. AB always made copies of the original sheets for his tenders, while JR always made copies for both his and AB's tenders. The reason given for making the copies was that they were subsequently annotated with information following the tender submission, which was for market intelligence purposes. DW did not make any copies of any tender sheet.

- IV.238. The OFT clarified with Bodill staff in interview the status of these copy tender sheets. JR, who left Bodill on 13 December 2005, did not retain his copy tender sheets. AB confirmed that about nine or ten months after JR left Bodill, they had a clear out of his old files and these copy tender sheets were disposed of at this time.²⁵⁰⁷
- IV.239. Bodill has confirmed that all information in relation to cover pricing would be annotated on the tender sheet before the tender was submitted and that therefore this information will be identical on both AB's copy and RB's original copy (since this information was added before any copying of sheets took place). The originals of the tender sheets kept in RB's possession therefore contained only pre-tender information, other than where the OFT has indicated differently in relation to a specific tender. AB explained that he made photocopies of the tender sheets for his jobs which he priced up, so that both he and RB would have a copy. AB's own copies of tender sheets were made available to the OFT for inspection on 26 April 2007. Where market intelligence was obtained by AB after the tender submission this information would be annotated on AB's copy and also on RB's original copy (see below). Where such notes have been made following tender submission, this has been indicated by the OFT in relation to the specific tender.
- IV.240. JR confirmed that, 'until the tender goes in, then I photocopy it, so all the, all the sheets that you've received from Richard, those are all Richard's copies, so there would be, everything that was made pre tender, would be on those sheets'.²⁵⁰⁸ JR further confirmed, 'as a matter of course, every job, that was tendered, I would take a photocopy of it, give the original to Richard, leave it in a file, and then as information post tender comes through, then I would make notes on it for intelligence purposes...sometimes I would photocopy it again, and give it to Richard so he was aware of what was happening. Sometimes, it would just be by word of mouth and he might make an odd note on the tender sheet himself'.²⁵⁰⁹
- IV.241. AB explained that after the tender was submitted he would try to find out fairly quickly, sometimes the same afternoon as a 12:00 noon deadline, from the client if Bodill's tender was looking favourable. Occasionally, if such information was forthcoming this information would be written on the original tender sheet before it was passed to RB. Where such information was added to the original this has been indicated by the OFT in relation to the specific tender. Mostly, however, such market intelligence would be obtained a few days later and this information would then be added by AB both to his copy of the tender sheet and to RB's original copy.²⁵¹⁰ AB confirmed that he kept the original tender sheets in his office and that when AB obtained market intelligence information post-tender, as well as annotating his own copy AB would also annotate the original held in RB's office.²⁵¹¹ Again, where such information has been added to both documents this has been indicated by the OFT in relation to the specific tender.

IV.242. In response to the Statement, Bodill argued that it was JR that engaged in the cover pricing conduct and that '...Neither Richard Bodill nor any other Director was involved in the giving or taking of cover prices in relation to tenders which were always based on informal contacts between contractors at estimator level... [JR] did report to Richard Bodill as managing director but only periodically reporting on business levels not in relation to individual tenders or to advise on whether or not to take a cover price'.²⁵¹² However, RB's witness statement²⁵¹³ clearly demonstrates that he knew that cover pricing was occurring within Bodill. RB explained the process for giving and taking cover prices. Even if RB delegated the authority to give or take covers on individual tenders, the practice of cover pricing within Bodill was carried out with his general consent and therefore warrants an uplift for director involvement on all Infringements, as described in Section VI (Enforcement) and Annex C below.

Bramall

IV.243. As part of its leniency application, Bramall provided a general explanation of its participation in cover pricing.²⁵¹⁴ This was supplemented by interviews with the following witnesses: Neil Baxter ('NB'), Managing Director, Bramall Yorkshire, Paul Alderson ('PA'), Estimating Manager, Bramall Yorkshire, Dave Prescott ('DP'), Managing Director, Bramall North West, and John Pagett ('JP'), Bid Manager, Bramall North West.

IV.244. Bramall had two divisions, each with its respective area, client base and management and staff. These were Bramall Construction North West ('BC NW') and Bramall Construction Yorkshire ('BC Yorkshire'). Unless specifically indicated to the contrary, the comments below apply to both parts of the business.

IV.245. Bramall asserted in its leniency application that there was awareness of the Act from its implementation from March 2000 and that attempts were made to stop or reduce instances of seeking and giving cover prices from and to its competitors. DP said during interview, that most tenders arrived unannounced because Bramall was on an approved tender list with various clients.²⁵¹⁵

BC NW taking cover prices

IV.246. JP said 'Basically the tender comes in, it either goes to marketing or comes direct to us at estimating, in any event it always ends up in estimating, we allocate it a number, log it basically, who the client is, what type of tender it is, the return date, create a file for the job, acknowledge the tender and then it goes through its normal process of breaking down for enquiries. It's allocated to an estimator and the estimator follows it through for pricing at that point'.²⁵¹⁶

- IV.247. DP said that upon receipt of a tender, he and the other estimators would take a view on the attractiveness or otherwise of the tender. The decision to return the tender unquoted or to seek a cover price was made by the Managing Director.²⁵¹⁷
- IV.248. DP said, 'It would've come to me...Or the MD at the time'.²⁵¹⁸ He said '...a cover price gives you a reasonable chance of putting in a competitive figure without coming last, coming last consistently in a tender could arrive at you being struck off a tender list so, I think this is all about maintaining relations and maintaining your position on a tender list'.²⁵¹⁹
- IV.249. DP said that when Bramall was looking for a cover price he would '...discuss and agree with the bid manager, give him authority to take a cover and then the estimator would ring, well...he would ring the person, he'd endeavour to establish as we did who was...who were the bidding companies and then either based on relationships i.e. trust, someone who we could trust to ring, we knew, or looking at the list and thinking they'll be the most competitive of the people bidding, I think this is really down their street that type of work, you would try them'.²⁵²⁰
- IV.250. Intelligence on who else was submitting bids on a particular tender would be obtained over the telephone when speaking to suppliers and sometimes by clients sending emails distributing information or by attending bidders conferences²⁵²¹ or from the Building Bureau that actively circulated the names of tendering parties.²⁵²² The names of competitors were entered in the tender log book and on the tender adjudication front sheet.
- IV.251. DP continued, 'You'd ring them [the competitors] up and say, you know, we're struggling with this, can I have some help. So it'd be done over the phone...and normally the day...normally the morning of the tender submission you'd get the call from the giving company with a figure to go in at'.²⁵²³
- IV.252. DP was asked when Bramall would initiate the contact with a competitor for a cover price. He replied, 'I think it would've been 2 or 3 days before'.²⁵²⁴
- IV.253. When asked how a cover price would be recorded, DP said, 'The tender figure would be written in the book. You may sometimes come across a 'c' written against a number, I think there's also been asterisk and dots used over...years, different estimators have brought their tools of the trade I suppose their way of doing things that meant that it's varied'.²⁵²⁵

IV.254. DP was asked if he would have recorded if someone else had taken a cover price in the tender log book. He said, '...sometimes we picked up intelligence that someone was taking a cover from someone else as well and there might be some note cover from [the company providing the cover price] against a bidder's name so we might have recorded the intelligence that, despite the fact that we were taking one, we knew someone else were taking one.'²⁵²⁶

IV.255. When asked when there would be contact with a competitor JP said, 'The only time would be if you were gonna take a cover, basically.'²⁵²⁷

IV.256. DP was asked who knew that cover pricing went on. He replied, 'The estimating department, the board...and I would say, on ad hoc occasions the surveyor, senior surveyor would tender the odd scheme so they would be aware of it so we're limited to probably 2 or 3 people, 2 or 3 senior surveyors, the estimating department, board.'²⁵²⁸

BC NW giving cover prices

IV.257. DP said he would not be approached directly to give a cover price; that approach would be made to the Estimating Department. JP confirmed that the giving of a cover price would have to be agreed by the Managing Director or the Commercial Director.²⁵²⁹

IV.258. DP was asked how BC NW recorded the giving of a cover price to a competitor. He said, '...I think sometimes a 'c' has appeared on a tender adjudication front sheet with their figure written in but...it weren't sort of a sacrosanct process because...I think...there were a genuine desire...to record as little as possible...'²⁵³⁰

IV.259. In its response to the Statement, Bramall asserted in respect of DP's answer to the above question (see IV.258) '[t]his Quote should not be relied upon by the OFT because it is factually incorrect and is refuted by further testimony from both John Pagett ("Pagett") and later in [Dave] Prescott's own testimony.'²⁵³¹

IV.260. The OFT does not accept Bramall's assertions. The quote in paragraph IV.258 is accurate and complete and is not contradicted by anything in the witness evidence of DP or JP. The OFT accepts that DP and other Bramall witnesses do describe ways in which cover pricing was recorded, but this does not undermine DP's perception of the desire to record as little as possible.

IV.261. DP was asked how he calculated a cover price to give to a competitor; he replied, 'Yea, well I think that...it's industry custom and practice...people would use the words give me a tight cover which means, in my opinion, it's between 3 and 5%...as opposed to...give me a cover that's...doesn't involve me in having extensive dialogue with the client which could be up to 10%. So I would say the price range is 3 to 10%.'²⁵³²

BC Yorkshire taking cover prices

- IV.262. Incoming tenders were logged in a Tender Log Book and referred for level of interest to the Managing Director or in his absence one of the other directors.²⁵³³ PA said, '...generally the enquiry would come in everything gets logged it's given its own reference number and then...you go through a process of...sending out enquiries, getting your quotations in...then...resourcing it up comparing the quotations that come back in coming to a sort of final point...and then sitting down with the board and adjudicating that and then the submission'.²⁵³⁴
- IV.263. NB explained what he understood by cover pricing: '...where estimators used to basically help each other out because it was impossible to price every scheme that sometimes you may get five tenders in, all in one day, all going back in the same day and when we have gone through periods where we try to price all the schemes what happens is that we do five bad tenders and what we have learnt is that if we didn't focus on putting in the right tender we could have - if we put five tenders in it could have two effects one could be that we made a right mess of it and that we had landed schemes which were going to be worse and non-profitable who were going to be significant loss makers so we tended to focus our energies on ones which were schemes that we felt were attractive that we could do a good job on'. When asked why companies engaged in cover pricing NB replied, '...to protect the business from winning loss making work...'.²⁵³⁵
- IV.264. PA explained why Bramall sought cover prices. 'Our reason was, we just physically couldn't have priced all the work that came through the door, so most of the time there was only me and David [Smallman, estimator] and we would essentially, in a year we could have like 100 enquiries which would mean you'd be looking at doing a job a week if you had still...a job in itself roughly that could take you a month so basically you just physically couldn't do it'.²⁵³⁶
- IV.265. NB was asked who would decide if a job was attractive or otherwise and he replied, 'invariably it would be me. If I wasn't around it could have been one of the other directors...the contracts director, surveying director they would be the two that will more likely be involved'.²⁵³⁷
- IV.266. PA was asked what would happen once a job was deemed not to be attractive. He replied that 'We would have looked for assistance in the same way'.²⁵³⁸ He clarified the term 'assistance' as meaning a cover price.
- IV.267. PA was asked how he would get a cover price from a competitor. He said, '...once we'd established who was on the list, it would just be a quick phone call to a competitor and say are you on this scheme, and if it's like "yeah" then it's like, "can you help us out?", "alright", "we'll give you call" and that's it'.²⁵³⁹

- IV.268. NB also explained how the exchange of covers operated: *'...one estimator would ring another estimator and at some point during the tendering process and asked for along the lines of can you give us some help on this tender and close to the date the other contractor would ring up and give us it may be a figure or it might have been in the region of...'*²⁵⁴⁰
- IV.269. When asked if the contact with competitors was exclusively by phone rather than fax or email NB replied, 'To the best of my knowledge neither of those [fax or email] are used or were used'.²⁵⁴¹
- IV.270. PA was also asked if fax or email was ever used to obtain a cover price and he said, 'No...email didn't really exist at that time'.²⁵⁴² He added that contact would always be from estimator to estimator and said '...we had a contact database of companies and knew who their contacts were, or you just asked for somebody within the estimating department at a senior level'.²⁵⁴³
- IV.271. PA was asked how the taking of a cover price was recorded. He replied, '...the estimating management system [EMS, a computer recording system], and we have a tender log book as well...we've had various means of recording it, [as well as a period of] not really recording it. It has varied'.²⁵⁴⁴

BC Yorkshire giving cover prices

- IV.272. NB was asked when there would be contact with competitors. He said, 'If it was one where...they were looking for a cover then that would be where there would be contact'.²⁵⁴⁵
- IV.273. PA was asked if the same notation for recording the taking of a cover price by Bramall Yorkshire applied to the undertaking giving a cover price to a competitor. He replied, 'We've adopted a policy from the 2000 which we haven't, have been strict with but we weren't providing covers to other companies anyway'.²⁵⁴⁶

Clegg

- IV.274. As part of its leniency application, Clegg made available current employees to be interviewed. During these voluntary interviews the individuals were asked to give an explanation of Clegg's involvement in cover pricing.
- IV.275. Leslie Hunt ('LH') started working for Clegg in around 1997 as Senior Estimator when it was previously based in Ilkeston. At that time LH was the only senior estimator at Clegg so had knowledge of most tenders entering the office. David Clarke ('DC') joined Clegg in 2002 and was subsequently appointed as Estimating Manager, and LH then took on more of a marketing role once tenders had been passed to him. LH explained during interview that post 2000 the tender process was that on receipt of a tender some would go to Peter

Warren ('PW') the Business Development Manager, and said that 'the enquiring documents sometimes come in to him. Occasionally we will receive tender documents through quantity surveying or cost consultants...and they make contact by phone and say documents are ready for collection'.²⁵⁴⁷ In cases such as this if the client was based locally they would go to them to collect the invitation to tender documents. More recently any tender received in the office would be sent to PW and a tender notification form created whereby 'it's booked in and basic description of the job. It will then be passed on to Simon [Simon Blackburn ('SB')] for him to decide whether we price it or not and the decision is now price it or send it back'.²⁵⁴⁸ The form was a basic summary of the tender details and LH commented *'the particular estimator who's dealing with it would fill it in'*²⁵⁴⁹ but sometimes it would even be completed by administration staff. The decisions on whether to price a tender were made at management level, however LH commented that prior to DC joining Clegg the tender documents would have been passed down to him.²⁵⁵⁰

IV.276. DC joined Clegg as a senior estimator in 2002 and then went on to take over the administration side of the business and discussing workloads with management in the position of Estimating Manager. DC also said that new tenders would normally go to PW and commented 'From the tender coming in, and we would produce a tender notification, and that tender notification would state the basic principles of...the description of the work, the contract, the start and finish times of it anticipated in the tender document, and distribute that to the directors and the construction manager who would be looking at the project ultimately'.²⁵⁵¹ When asked who would actually complete this information DC said 'Either Les or myself...Whoever the estimator is'.²⁵⁵² In regard to who decided whether to price a tender DC said 'it will be discussed by the directors, with regard to our current workload and if we were able to tender'.²⁵⁵³

IV.277. SB joined Clegg in 2002 as Construction Director and became Managing Director from January 2004. SB described the standard form to be filled in when a tender was initially received and confirmed this was typically done by PW with the 'very briefest details of the project'.²⁵⁵⁴ SB said that at that stage 'It comes to my desk, and at that point, I either decide we are pricing it, decide we are going to discuss it, or decide we are going to send it back'. This form would be signed by him, then passed on to the estimators. SB commented that 'the estimators fill the form in and complete it and say what we are doing'.²⁵⁵⁵ SB went on to say 'We will have settlement meetings; we will have various other processes in that. They tend to not be recorded so much because the estimators then have a process where they have a front sheet for every project'. SB outlined how this document would give a more detailed description of the tender which would be passed to the board and any contracts manager allocated to the tender. The form, titled 'Tender Details & Summary', completed by the estimator dealing with the tender, would contain details of the project, client, key dates and 'Other Tenderers' as well as reference to which Clegg employees had attended a tender meeting to discuss it.²⁵⁵⁶ As part of its leniency application Clegg provided a number of examples of completed versions of this form.²⁵⁵⁷

Clegg taking cover prices

IV.278. Clegg provided to the OFT a report into its activities concerning the giving and receiving of cover prices. This report listed the reasons for Clegg taking cover prices as:²⁵⁵⁸

- desire not to offend or lose goodwill with clients or consultants sending enquiries;
- limited estimating resource usually influenced by untimely/unsolicited enquiries;
- insufficient technical capacity to deliver a project if a bid was to be successful; and
- time/cost to prepare tenders.

IV.279. LH as an estimator would be informed by a director if Clegg wished to take a cover price on a tender, and would be instructed to obtain that cover price. He commented on the various reasons why Clegg would seek a cover price for a tender. He said 'I would think the majority of occasions, it's a time and labour availability issue, it just isn't convenient'.²⁵⁵⁹ LH went on to explain how the time issue could arise from slippages in tender documents being issued by the client, incorrect details being given to Clegg about a tender before the final details were released, or general issues of Clegg already having a full workload. Explaining why Clegg did not just send back tenders that it was unable to or did not wish to bid for, LH said that 'in days gone by, it wasn't such a problem to send documents back, as far as I know, because it didn't really upset clients as much as it would these days'. LH referred to the type of construction work undertaken and went on to say that 'There's been a big swing over the period of years to design and build...now that is a major change in the way you tender. The costs involved are much larger, the timescales are much longer...and the commitment from a contractor to tender is much more crucial because of the costs involved and associated with it'. LH said, 'it's more difficult to send those back because a client and his representative may only come out to 3 maybe 4 contractors on the D&B tender'.²⁵⁶⁰

IV.280. LH said that the decision to seek a cover price would be taken during meetings of the directors who would then communicate that decision to him, usually by telephone call. Currently this would come from SB and historically would have also come from PW and other directors such as John King ('JK'), the Production Director.²⁵⁶¹ Asked how Clegg would know who to approach for a cover price, LH said that it would find out which of its competitors were bidding for a tender by talking to any sub-contractors or suppliers named on the tender. He said that Clegg could 'ring these people up with the, in effect, the pretence of pricing the job and saying ... would you provide us with a copy quotation...would save you the hassle of sending the full enquiry or you could say just fax them a request *for a quotation...oh by the way have you had this enquiry from anyone else’.*²⁵⁶²

LH also kept a list of his equivalent level contacts at Clegg’s competitors and would use this to contact a competitor for a cover price.

IV.281. DC said that information might also be obtained from the Builders’ Conference or Glennigans.²⁵⁶³

IV.282. DC described the reasons for Clegg taking a cover price as follows: *‘a price that we submit to the client at the 11th hour, because we somehow failed to be able to complete a tender properly...that it’s too late to return, or...rather than offend a client, which we’ve had the problem with, if, if you do return documents...if [it] doesn’t fall in with resources, we’ve had the problem of how do we tell them? And not be excluded from anything else they ever do again?’.*²⁵⁶⁴

IV.283. DC confirmed that he was made aware of the desire to obtain a cover price in the same manner described by LH, saying *‘the directors will say, we need a cover for this one’.*²⁵⁶⁵ DC agreed that the cover prices submitted to the client were meant to be low enough to ensure that Clegg appeared to be competitive, but not sufficiently low to win the contract. If Clegg took a cover price on a tender it was not always recorded; however, DC was asked what the letter ‘C’ on documents next to references to ‘opposition’ meant and replied *‘Most of the time it would indicate C for cover’.*²⁵⁶⁶ LH confirmed in interview that on occasions a ‘C’ would also be written when Clegg found out that a company was taking a cover price from someone else.²⁵⁶⁷

IV.284. On tenders where Clegg was taking a cover price, SB said this was ‘a defensive mechanism for maintaining relationships with clients’. If Clegg did not have the resources available to price a tender or carry out the actual work tendered for at that time then SB said Clegg *‘would take a decision if it’s a client we probably want to work for in the future, if we say not to him now then there would be an issue’.*²⁵⁶⁸ SB went on to say *‘if you don’t bid a scheme, then the chances are you won’t get another opportunity with that client’.*²⁵⁶⁹

IV.285. SB added *‘[Cover pricing] is something we have always done...we have often signed anti-collusion notice with tenders. It does say on our tender forms that we haven’t exchanged the information with other people, and clearly we have, so it’s not right, is it?...[Cover pricing] is just something that is done in the industry and we continue to do it. It’s as simple as that’.*²⁵⁷⁰

IV.286. SB said that once he made the decision to take a cover price on a tender he would communicate this verbally in person to the estimator or telephone them and ask them to arrange it.²⁵⁷¹ SB also confirmed how cover prices were recorded by saying that ‘the most common one would be a C in brackets at the side of the name of whoever we had got it from. We put asterisk at the side of some, and some you just write cover at the side of it'.²⁵⁷²

Clegg giving cover prices

- IV.287. On tenders where Clegg was giving a cover price, LH explained 'in the times when I was on my own they [the competitors] would generally ring me, because you're talking about my level of seniority and again, essentially the opposition competition would ask their senior estimator or estimator who is dealing with the job, organise a cover, try to find out who's on the tender list and they will ring whoever they choose to approach'.²⁵⁷³ LH went on to say that 'I would receive a phone call from [competitors]...can you help us out on this tender, I would say yeah fine, and they'd say, when will you be able to help us out with the actual figures...saying the tender's due on the first of the month so that they don't get left in limbo'.²⁵⁷⁴
- IV.288. LH described how this approach for a cover price would be recorded, saying that 'Occasionally I'd make a scribbled note on a letter or something like that...not always, maybe just log it in to memory and pass that information on. Certainly pass the information on, I would never, it never was something I would keep to myself, you would tell the directors that you'd been approached by such and such a company'.²⁵⁷⁵ LH explained that the giving and receiving of cover prices was such a common practice that he didn't give it a second thought, and when questioned as to whether at any point he thought that perhaps Clegg should not be doing this, LH replied 'I knew at some point that this was an illegal practice as such but it was so prevalent'.²⁵⁷⁶
- IV.289. DC described the giving of cover prices in similar terms. He said that, *'If they [a competitor] requested a cover price, they would ring up and say, are you pricing this tender? Because we would like some assistance, which generally means we would like a cover price because they've got a similar situation that we would have if we were in that same boat. So if they're contacting us, they just ring up and say, are you pricing it? Can you give us some help? From the point of view of a cover price...'*²⁵⁷⁷ With regard to recording of cover prices given, DC said 'If it was a cover to, you, you would sometimes, not always, but generally have it on, if you got the list of competition, and you would put at the side of it that it, it was a cover. Or you may have found out that someone else has given a cover to someone else, within that list of tenders'.²⁵⁷⁸
- IV.290. SB described the approach from a competitor for a cover price as being the same as if Clegg was seeking a cover price from a competitor. He said, 'Their estimator would ring our estimator. It's a very small industry, and most, you know, Les [LH] has worked for a number of companies in the past, as have Dave [DC], so they all know each other. They have usually worked together, so you will find that whichever one of the estimators knows either Les or Dave, they will give them a bell and ask them'. SB said that he would very rarely be

IV.291. As part of its leniency application, Clegg also provided to the OFT three schedules of information relating to tenders involving cover pricing:

- 'Schedule A²⁵⁸⁰ Definites – projects where cover pricing has taken place and evidence is available together with estimator's corroboration of evidence.
- Schedule B²⁵⁸¹ Possibles – projects where some vague evidence exists that covers have taken place but no corroborative evidence from Estimators. These could be post tender market intelligence where cover pricing by others may have been discovered or projects with no evidence but estimator recalls possibility of cover pricing activity.
- Schedule C²⁵⁸² Others – projects with no evidence or estimator recollection but lack of archive records indicate could be cover price activity'.²⁵⁸³

List of companies with whom Clegg exchanged information

Davlyn

IV.293. As part of its leniency application, Davlyn made available current employees to be interviewed. During these voluntary interviews the individuals were asked to give an explanation of Davlyn's involvement in cover pricing.

IV.294. David Gaskin ('DG1') started working for Davlyn initially as a quantity surveyor before progressing to Director and Co-Owner. DG1 explained during interview that the tender process post 2000 was that on receipt of a tender '...It'll get logged in, given an, an E number, and then...our estimator...Dave Goodhead...He'll price the job. We then have a, a little tender meeting, normally with Dave Goodhead, myself and Marilyn Charles, just to agree...what price we're going to put in when the tender's put together'.²⁵⁸⁵ DG1 also stated that prior to his retirement, Dave Charles would also have been involved in the decision concerning whether to tender for a contract.²⁵⁸⁶ DG1 explained that he and Marilyn Charles ('MC'), Co-Owner, made a decision to stop engaging in the practice of cover pricing '...a year or so before...you [the OFT] came here, we made a conscious decision to stop giving...taking covers or giving cover prices out'.²⁵⁸⁷ DG1 and MC made that decision based on, '...we heard that the OFT were...well,...were frowning on the practice...so I suppose the rumours going round, and before then,...we didn't really see it as a...it had just, in the industry, had become a common practice'.²⁵⁸⁸

IV.295. David Goodhead ('DG2'), an estimator at Davlyn employed since 1994, explained that on contracts Davlyn had decided not to tender Davlyn would, on occasions, obtain a cover price. DG2 stated 'I suppose ultimately we ended up in a situation where...what are we going to do with this and I, I suppose we would bump into the issue of trying to seek a cover on the project'.²⁵⁸⁹

IV.296. DG2 said he would find out who was pricing the tender, '...sometimes in passing...via suppliers or subcontractors, people would say, oh yeah, we've heard that from such and such, and I'd just probably write it down out of...it's just market information'.²⁵⁹⁰ DG2 also went on to explain that he would not actively try and find out who Davlyn's competition were, '...I wouldn't go around...if it came out in conversation via a subcontractor or supplier...I'd just note it down. Generally speaking, you just put it on the, on the prelim sheet and what have you so that...if...people did want to know, we'll say, well, yeah, we X, Y and Z are, We're up against X, Y and Z'.²⁵⁹¹

IV.297. On tenders where Davlyn was taking a cover price DG1 explained '...if we couldn't get a price in, or didn't want to put a bid in, or wanted to put a bid in, but weren't bothered about winning the job, and just wanted to, put a price in, [DG2 would] ring another contractor who you suspect might be pricing it. Maybe you could find that out through one of the sub contractors, and ring them up and say, are you pricing this...we haven't got time to do it all up, can you help us out with it?...and they'd give you a figure that...would make sure you wouldn't win it. And actually not look too bad, because you don't want to lose it, but look stupid, but you don't want to win the job'.²⁵⁹² DG2 explained that the exchange of cover prices was mainly carried out by telephone.²⁵⁹³ DG2 stated that the exchange of cover prices, 'would obviously have to be within probably a day or two of when the tender was due. I'd normally wait until possibly they were in a position to give me a figure. Possibly the only time I would probably get in contact with them again was if, really we were getting somewhat close to the tender day and/or time'.²⁵⁹⁴

IV.298. DG1 explained how covers taken were recorded, 'I suppose in the file that we would have had, Dave would have recorded...that we'd...covered it, put it in at this price. And we'd probably have...a copy of our tender form as well, with any notes on it. So we would have recorded it yeah'.²⁵⁹⁵ DG1 confirmed that if a cover was taken on a particular tender the information in the tender file would be disposed of shortly after the tender return date, 'probably just ditched the file, because of it's of no use for us to archive'.²⁵⁹⁶

IV.299. DG2 explained that everyone within Davlyn knew cover pricing was in existence, '...by virtue of the fact there's only ten or eleven of us up there, really...everybody knew that...that we'd had to cover that particular job'.²⁵⁹⁷

Davlyn giving cover prices

IV.300. On tenders where Davlyn was giving a cover price DG2 explained how he would arrive at a figure to give to a competitor as follows, '...I always ended up trying to think in terms of putting, say...something in the region of, four, five percent...away from where we were...not to put them miles away...which to me...slightly embarrasses them...I suppose it's a case of do unto others as...you would expect'.²⁵⁹⁸

IV.301. DG2 explained how he would record giving a cover price. 'I suppose in days gone by...within the contract file...it was sometimes scribbled in the, in the actual contract or the tender file. It might just be a scrap of paper or something...like that'.²⁵⁹⁹ The giving of a cover price was not formally recorded.²⁶⁰⁰

IV.302. In its response to the Statement, Davlyn confirmed that '[p]rior to the investigation by the OFT we were not aware within Davlyn that general cover pricing was an infringement of the Competition Act. When we became aware of the investigation in 2005 we made a decision to not engage in obtaining or giving cover prices. Such activity had therefore stopped before the visit to our offices in January 2005. We have not engaged in cover pricing since this time and we have a firm policy not to engage in this practice in the future'.²⁶⁰¹

Derwent Valley

- IV.303. As part of its leniency application, Derwent Valley made available current directors to be interviewed and provided contact details for an ex-employee. During these voluntary interviews the individuals were asked to give an explanation of Derwent Valley's involvement in cover pricing.
- IV.304. David Stone ('DS'), former Managing Director of Derwent Valley from circa 2000 and then Director oversaw a lot of the work carried out. DS described how the tender process began, explaining how Derwent Valley received invitations to tender for jobs. He said 'sometimes you'd get a phone call asking, would you like to tender, and we'd say yay or nay, other times, they'd just arrive on your desk and the process then was...they'd give you a date of return, probably three, two, three, four weeks, depending on the size of the job, and you had to get it returned...it's giving time for your subcontractors to price and...you'd, could be, days putting them together, if it's a decent sized one, and, you'd got a date to return these and you have to...get them in on that date'.²⁶⁰²
- IV.305. DS said that tenders posted to Derwent Valley would either be addressed to Derwent Valley, to him or to Pat Tunncliffe ('PT'), Derwent Valley's former senior estimator. He described the decision making process on whether to bid for a tender, saying that 'Pat would...dish them out, and I'd help, where, where I could, on the tendering side'. When asked who would actually make the decision DS replied, 'Pat would certainly, he, he was the senior estimator at that time, and if he...was fully committed to, other works, he, he'd make the decision to say, return it...He'd probably say to me, can we manage this or can't we manage it, and I'd say, well I certainly can't manage it, can you manage it, and, well, the decision would be left with him to see if he wanted to...tender'.²⁶⁰³
- IV.306. In relation to what documents were generated as part of the tendering process DS described how a document would be generated to show the pricing and he would write out the enquiries and give them to a secretary to type out. DS referred to what happened with such documents, saying that 'it was all put away in a file, once that tender's been submitted, if we don't hear anything on that tender, you can guarantee within two or three months, it's binned'. DS also said the details were recorded in a tender register book²⁶⁰⁴, and when asked who maintained this he replied 'Well this was run by Pat Tunncliffe...He ran that on his own, he kept the record of tenders'.²⁶⁰⁵ Beyond the tender register Derwent Valley did not keep any significant volume of documents relating to the tendering process. When queried as to the lack of documentary material, DS commented 'Well you know, as soon as you've submitted your tender, you know within a week whether you've won the job or not, so, if I probably tendered one job a week, it isn't, the record is really in your mind'.²⁶⁰⁶

IV.307. Andrew Stone ('AS'), Managing Director of Derwent Valley, said that previously he 'wasn't really involved in the estimating at all, it was either David or Pat so tenders that did come in, the ones that I saw were the ones that I was to price which would only be small jobs, price it on your own, if you get it wrong you get it wrong, it's not the end of the world. So I was given the smaller ones as a trial thing'.²⁶⁰⁷ AS said that contracts he was made aware of would come to him from DS and as far as making decisions on whether or not to bid for a tender AS said 'The ones that I was passed on would have been ones for me to give a go at and try and, and try and win'.²⁶⁰⁸

IV.308. PT joined Derwent Valley in 1998 as a contractor and moved on to perform the role of quantity surveyor and eventually estimator. He left Derwent Valley in 2003. PT said of his time at Derwent Valley that DS, a surveyor called Harold Grindy ('HG'), and he dealt with tenders. DS dealt with hospital related work, typically from the Derbyshire Health Authorities, HG with Nottingham University related work and PT said he dealt with 'any other job that came in tended to come my way'. Describing how Derwent Valley would first be approached to bid on a tender, PT said 'it would start with a phone call from the client or the QS or the architect, you know, we've got this job going out to tender would you like to have a go at it?'.²⁶⁰⁹ PT said they would telephone either DS or him and the tender documents would then be either posted or collected from the client. When a tender first came in PT said he would sit down with DS or a previous Managing Director by the name of Phillip Taylor and say 'are we going to tender for this job or are we not?'. PT said sometimes Derwent Valley would not want to tender so would send it back, however PT commented 'it was difficult to send it back when you'd already accepted over the phone that you would have a go at it but they didn't always tell you everything about the job and sometimes there was stuff on it that you didn't like the look of and you thought, well, it'd be better if I'd said no'.²⁶¹⁰

IV.309. PT was asked about the decision making process and whether he would have a final say on whether or not Derwent Valley would bid for a tender. PT responded, 'I possibly had some influence on it, you know, I would say, I don't think this is worth going for, and whether they listened to me that was up to them'.²⁶¹¹ PT was asked what documents were generated as part of this process, such as meeting notes, forms of tender reports and so on. PT said 'Derwent Valley wasn't like that'. PT explained that he kept a tender record book and how he used it. He said that 'if you were tendering against contractors that you bid against before and it was a particular area or a particular type of work, you can look back and think, well, I got hammered last time, there's virtually no point me going for it. If they're going to go for it again there's no point in me going for it'.²⁶¹²

IV.310. Derwent Valley provided to the OFT a report into its activities concerning the giving and receiving of cover prices. This report contains background information on Derwent Valley's involvement with such practices and corroborates the reasons for taking a cover price on a tender as explained during the interviews. In regard to cover pricing, the report states that, 'Cover pricing was entered to fulfill the expectations/pressures of the tendering process i.e. unless a tender was submitted the company would risk not being asked to tender for future work. The pricing process is a lengthy one and the company entered these arrangements when the estimator was absent on holiday or due to illness, or where the company was unable to cope with the number of tenders required to be priced within a given time'.²⁶¹³

IV.311. DS gave the reasons for taking a cover price on a tender as being 'Timing, either busy, holidays, there could be a number of reasons, there could be the time for when they wanted them returned'.²⁶¹⁴ When asked who would actually decide to contact a competitor to obtain a cover price DS said 'Pat would be the major person at that time, because he was, he was senior estimator in that sense of it'.²⁶¹⁵ DS went on to say he would not always be told if a cover price had been taken, he said 'some he [PT] would do, but not all of them, because he knew how busy, if the company was busy, we don't want them'.²⁶¹⁶ For those tenders which PT discussed with DS, DS said 'Pat would come and say, what do we do with this, do we take a cover or return it'.²⁶¹⁷ DS was also asked how Derwent Valley would record that it had taken a cover price on a tender and referred to the entries of the letter 'C' by competitors' names in the tender record book.²⁶¹⁸

IV.312. AS gave the reasons for Derwent Valley seeking a cover price, saying 'on the very few occasions we've actually asked for a cover, it's normally been down to either workload at the time, estimators on holiday. When you've only got either one or two estimators and if all of your clients decide to send you, you're just, the workloads just far too, far too great'.²⁶¹⁹ AS said he would make the decision to take a cover price if it was a tender he personally had been dealing with, but there was no formal system in place to communicate to others in Derwent Valley that a cover price had been taken on a tender.²⁶²⁰

IV.313. PT described possible reasons for wanting to take a cover price: 'It could be that another job had come in that was more interesting'.²⁶²¹ 'It may be you'd said yes to two jobs, they both came in at the same time, you looked at them and thought well I'd rather have this than that, I'll take a cover on the other one. It may be that, you'd said yes, you were interested in it but then a job that you'd been waiting for actually got started and then you didn't have the staff to do the next one'.²⁶²² PT said that Derwent Valley sought a cover price for a tender rather than just sending it back to the client as 'if you sent it back you tended to upset the client and then they think well, you've not priced it for me this time...I'll not give you another chance'.²⁶²³ PT said that 'The easy way out was to take a cover price off another contractor which put you out of the running'.²⁶²⁴

- IV.314. PT described the decision making process in respect of Derwent Valley deciding to take a cover price on a tender. He said 'I would discuss it with the directors and, but ultimately it would be their decision'.²⁶²⁵ He went on to say 'if it had been agreed that we would take a cover on a job I would try and find one of the other contractors ... and get a cover off him'.²⁶²⁶
- IV.315. PT was then asked how he would determine which companies to approach to obtain a cover price. He said 'in some cases it was very difficult to find who was tendering, you know, if you wanted to take a cover, you could pick up the phone, you could make one call and find someone who was tendering for it. In other cases you could have spent a morning on the phone and still find nobody that was tendering for it ... Sometimes the client would tell you, sometimes it was in the trade press, other times you just had to pick up the phone and hope. You would think, right, that is the client, that is the area of the work, there are two or three contractors in that area that work for that client, hopefully one of them's got the enquiry'.²⁶²⁷ PT also said that some clients would tell him who was bidding for a tender. When asked why a client would do this, PT responded 'some clients are more open than others'.²⁶²⁸
- IV.316. Milward suggested in its response to the Statement that PT's difficulty in obtaining names of other tenderers suggested that it was unlikely that the names of other tenderers in Derwent Valley's tender record book were recorded contemporaneously.²⁶²⁹ The OFT notes in response that PT did not say he was unable to obtain details of competitors; rather, he stated that sometimes he found it difficult to obtain these details, while at other times it was relatively easy.
- IV.317. PT was asked how Derwent Valley recorded where it had taken a cover price on a tender. PT said 'I would make a note in my diary that the tender was due in, where it was, what time and that we were tendering. And I would probably list the contractors that were tendering for it when I found them, the same as I would put in the book [the Derwent Valley Tender Record book], but it was really just a note of the day that the tender was due in'.²⁶³⁰ PT referred to the Tender Record book, confirmed that it was his book and contained his handwriting, and said that if he was taking a cover or knew that someone else at Derwent Valley was taking a cover 'I would put a little C in brackets against [a tender entry]'.²⁶³¹

Derwent Valley giving cover prices

- IV.318. On tenders where Derwent Valley was giving a cover price, DS was asked how a competitor would know that Derwent Valley was bidding for that tender. DS explained 'I suggest they'd find out with the enquiries that go out, when you're *doing a job, they'd probably speak to someone they know at a merchant and then they'd find out you're in for it...if we wanted...materials for a job, we'd send an enquiry in for the materials, and they'd probably find out that way'.*²⁶³²

When asked how Derwent Valley recorded the giving of a cover price, DS referred to the Tender Record book and said he assumed that this was indicated by use of the letter 'C' but that the book was run by PT and PT *'found these companies out at different times to find out who his opposition was as well'.*²⁶³³ DS confirmed that no other records were kept concerning the giving of cover prices and admitted he was also possibly involved in giving cover prices but could not specifically recall them.²⁶³⁴

IV.319. AS described the process of giving a cover price as being *'where somebody, another firm has asked for a cover from yourself that they aren't able to give a price for whatever reasons...and you'd give them a price, slightly higher than yourself so that they know they aren't going to be successful in getting the job'.*²⁶³⁵ AS said he would only have known about a cover price being given to a competitor if the tender was one that was handed to him to deal with. AS confirmed that there would have been occasions where he received a call or made a call to a competitor to communicate a figure for a cover price.²⁶³⁶

IV.320. PT was asked about Derwent Valley giving cover prices to competitors. He said 'Oh, if somebody phoned up and said, can I have a cover, I would say yes automatically. One less competitor'. PT went on to say he would not have spoken to management about the decision to give a cover price and would have communicated the cover price to a competitor via telephone. PT explained, *'The chances are a contractor would ring you up and say, are you tendering for this job? I'd say yes. Can you help us out? I'd say yes and then when I have my figure I would ring up and give him a figure. And obviously that would be higher than mine'.*²⁶³⁷ The cover price given by PT was recorded in the Tender Record book in the same manner as a cover being received, by means of entering a letter 'C' in brackets by the tender details.²⁶³⁸

IV.321. In its response to the Statement, Milward suggested that Derwent Valley's recording of cover prices was inconsistent. It noted that there had been one project, for Derby City Hospital, where Derwent Valley had recorded giving a cover price to Milward, but Milward had won the tender.²⁶³⁹ It further suggested that the recording of a letter 'C' in the Tender Record book could have meant 'main competitor' rather than *'cover price'.*²⁶⁴⁰ Milward suggested that this might be more likely because the word 'Cover' had been used elsewhere in the Tender Record book, suggesting to Milward that 'C' could not be used as an alternative.²⁶⁴¹ Milward noted that DS had only 'assumed' that 'C' denoted a cover price.²⁶⁴²

²⁶⁴² Written representations of Milward, 26 June 2008, paragraph 4.5.

IV.322. Milward's alternative suggestions are not supported by the evidence set out in this Decision. Although DS was not as definite as PT about the meaning of the letter 'C' in the Tender Record book, this is unsurprising given that by DS's own admission PT 'ran that on his own, he kept the record of tenders'.²⁶⁴³ It is also clearly incorrect to suggest that Derwent Valley might not have used more than one method of recording cover prices – in common with many other companies, it used not only the word 'Cover' but also the letter 'C' on different occasions. PT was very clear in his evidence about the meaning of the letter 'C' in the Tender Record book in relation to several different tenders, as demonstrated above and in the individual Infringements below. The OFT cannot comment on the Derby City Hospital tender since it is not proceeding in respect of that tender, but considers that the credibility of other entries on Derwent Valley's records is not undermined where, as in the Infringements in this Decision, those entries are supported by contemporaneous documents and/or witness evidence.

Cover pricing activity at Derwent Valley

IV.323. As part of its leniency application, Derwent Valley provided to the OFT two schedules of information relating to tenders involving cover pricing:

- DVC 1 List of Covers Given²⁶⁴⁴
- DVC 2 List of Covers Taken²⁶⁴⁵

Derwent Valley list of contractors exchanging cover prices

IV.324. Derwent Valley also provided to the OFT, a list of competitors with whom it had exchanged information in regard to the giving and taking of cover prices, along with the company addresses and contact individuals where known. This list includes the following company names:²⁶⁴⁶

- [...] [C] [List of x Participant Companies]

²⁶⁴⁵ List of covers taken, OFT Document Reference 3941.

²⁶⁴⁶ List of Contractors taking cover prices, OFT Document Reference 3942.

[...] [C]

IV.325. In its response to the Statement, Derwent Valley confirmed that it was '...not seeking to deny participation in cartel activity (namely bid rigging) or that its conduct infringed the prohibition in Section 2 of the Competition Act...'²⁶⁴⁷

Frank Haslam Milan

IV.326. Frank Haslam Milan was not visited by the OFT using its powers under the Act, although a sister company, Bramall was visited under section 28 on 23 February 2006. As part of its leniency application, Frank Haslam Milan provided three lists of cover pricing activity.²⁶⁴⁸ These lists were of (1) possible cover prices taken or given, (2) [...] [C] instances where Frank Haslam Milan definitely took cover, and (3) [...] [C] instances where Frank Haslam Milan definitely gave cover. These lists were prepared by Stephen Francis ('SF'), who was Procurement Manager at the time of the leniency application but has since left Frank Haslam Milan, and the former Managing Director, Mark Davis ('MD'), who left Frank Haslam Milan in April 2003. The following Frank Haslam Milan employees were interviewed by the OFT: David Mellor ('DM'), Managing Director, SF, David Ward, ex-Managing Director, Allen Hickling, Managing Director, Steve Maltby, estimator, Terry Bateman, Managing Director, Paul Donhue, estimator and Steve Wilkinson, estimator.

Cover pricing – general

IV.327. Frank Haslam Milan has only admitted that one of its three separate business units, Frank Haslam Milan's North East Division, definitely engaged in the taking and giving of cover prices. The two relevant interviewees who worked in the North East Division were DM and SF, while the other interviewees worked in other geographical areas of the company. In its leniency application it is explained that on the introduction of the Act, each of the three parts of the business, 'sought to ensure that [they did not engage] in any cartel activity and with respect to cover pricing that reliance on this practice ceases or at least reduces. However, pressure from clients to submit realistically priced bids, a need to remain on the approved tenderers list and limited resources meant that one business unit (FHM NE) did, on an ad hoc basis, revert back to some cover pricing'.²⁶⁴⁹

IV.328. The primary Frank Haslam Milan staff who were aware of the practice of cover pricing were SF, DM and MD.²⁶⁵⁰ Frank Haslam Milan staff confirmed in interview that it participated in both the giving and taking of cover prices. SF confirmed that he would not have given a cover of his own initiative and that he would have to discuss it with DM and previously MD.²⁶⁵¹ DM confirmed that SF would derive and communicate a cover figure to a competitor, but that he would do this after checking with him.²⁶⁵²

IV.329. SF explained that on receipt of a tender, *'all the details of the particular tender enquiry were logged [electronically], we had a business process monitor...there was also the...Competitive Tender Information...System...'*²⁶⁵³ and SF further explained that, 'generally myself as senior estimator or estimating manager, used to do a tender appraisal, again that was to basically get the feel for the job, point out any inherent risks in it, and also give us...a bid strategy basically to run through, whether we were classing as a key tender or if it was you know bit of an also ran'.²⁶⁵⁴ DM confirmed that *'my role would be, with the estimating department, to do a full tender appraisal of that scheme, we did that within two days'*²⁶⁵⁵ and '...from the tender appraisal we would then hold a couple of tender meetings to run through – one, which was producing our prelims to do the job, because obviously its built up of suppliers, sub contractors, and then another meeting to have the final bid that we put together'.²⁶⁵⁶

Frank Haslam Milan taking cover prices

IV.330. SF explained how Frank Haslam Milan would find out who the competition was on a job: 'during the tender adjudication I would, I would, obviously as you're sort of ringing round chasing your prices from sub-contractors and suppliers, I would always try and find out who was pricing the job'.²⁶⁵⁷

IV.331. SF confirmed that, 'if a cover price was ever requested, it was just done verbally over the telephone'.²⁶⁵⁸ DM said that, '... if we got a lot of estimates come in and we couldn't quite cope with resources or the job didn't suit ... the odd one we possibly might, take some assistance but very few and far between, to be honest'.²⁶⁵⁹

Frank Haslam Milan giving cover prices

IV.332. SF explained that, 'if a company on a tender list is looking for assistance when they neither have the capacity or willingness to submit what is gonna be a competitive bid 'cause they're, for one particular reason, don't want to win the job or...can't do the job if they won it, but maybe want to stay on that particular client's tender list...would just seek assistance'.²⁶⁶⁰

IV.333. In terms of arriving at a cover price to give to a competitor, SF said that, 'it was just whatever price we were putting in, you know, there would be a certain amount of money added on top of that...if people were wanting to take a cover price, they would want to come as close to the first position as they could possibly could without obviously winning it'.²⁶⁶¹

Contemporaneous documents – tender documentation

IV.334. Frank Haslam Milan provided documents for all the tenders on which it admitted taking and giving cover. These documents included tender summary sheets, client letters and estimators' notes. Where there are no contemporaneous documents for a specific tender, the evidence relies on the personal recollections of SF, DM and MD. The evidence provided is discussed by the OFT in relation to each relevant specific tender.

Frudd

IV.335. As part of its leniency application, Frudd provided a spreadsheet 'confirming...the giving and receiving of cover prices from and to the company' between 2000 and 2004.²⁶⁶² It was explained in a letter to the OFT from Frudd's legal representatives that the information on the spreadsheet had been compiled from 'information from records that have been completed by...personnel who have since left the company. It is therefore only fair to say that some of the assumptions we have made may not be totally accurate...That said, it is possible that Frudd did give and receive cover prices in the relevant period'.²⁶⁶³

IV.336. The spreadsheet²⁶⁶⁴ compiled by director Jenna Frudd and estimator Paul Platts, lists a total of [...] [C] tenders for which Frudd received a cover price and a further [...] [C] tenders for which Frudd gave cover. The information on the spreadsheet appears to have been almost exclusively compiled from documents found by the OFT during an inspection under section 28 in June 2005. This includes a tender register listing tenders received by Frudd during the period from 2000 to 2004.²⁶⁶⁵

IV.337. The following personnel gave an account of their knowledge and involvement in cover pricing at Frudd: Managing Director David Frudd ('DF'), Director Jenna Frudd ('JF'); and estimators Martin Ledingham ('ML'), Michael Robins ('MR') and Paul Platts ('PP').

Cover pricing – general

IV.338. Directors and staff agreed that Frudd had participated in cover pricing during the period from 2000 until at least November 2004, when a 'no cover policy' was enforced. DF stated in a letter to the OFT 'we regret that we have been involved in providing and receiving cover quotations, which seemed the easiest way to keep up with the pressure of providing quotations for our various clients even when sometimes we didn't really want the work'.²⁶⁶⁶ In this letter, DF explained the role of the Nottingham Builders' Guild (a trade association of which Frudd was a member, discussed in more detail at paragraphs IV.128 to IV.146 above) in connection with cover pricing. He stated that the Guild 'Provides bona fide Nottingham building contractors with a contact to register the tenders where they can request or register the need for help. Help would be the requirement to be able to ask whoever else is quoting for the works to give a cover figure which was always expected to be higher so the work would not be won'.²⁶⁶⁷

IV.339. In interview DF provided an explanation for the need for cover pricing as follows: 'If we don't particularly want a job, we haven't the resource to spend the time...If we didn't like the look of it, or we didn't want to do it, we would ask for a cover'.²⁶⁶⁸ He said that the practice was introduced to him by Chief Estimator MR who worked for Frudd until 2004. DF said that he didn't get involved personally in cover pricing but knew it took place until a decision was made in about November 2004 to stop the practice.

IV.340. DF explained 'I think all the local press and the local – you know, the building trade magazine...we suddenly thought...never thought it was illegal to do it, we just sort of thought it was...everybody was doing it, we just thought, "Well, we'd better stop it, then, if it's that bad"...I think it was a gradual process. We weren't altogether as we decided that. I can't remember whether it was – somebody stuck...an OFT thing on the wall. Somebody opened a magazine and copied it and sent it round the office. And then eventually we all sort of thought, "Well, just a minute, we shouldn't be doing this," you know...That's how it seemed to happen to me. I don't think we ever sort of focused exactly on that and had a meeting about it. It just sort of gradually came to us'.²⁶⁶⁹

IV.341. Fellow director JF was also well aware that cover pricing took place at Frudd and sometimes attended tender adjudication meetings where Frudd's need for a cover price was discussed.²⁶⁷⁰ JF confirmed that cover pricing stopped once Frudd started to be aware of OFT activity in the area.²⁶⁷¹

IV.342. Estimator PP said that contracts meetings were held every fortnight and it was a 'team decision' as to whether Frudd was interested in pricing an enquiry, but 'David [Frudd] has the final say'.²⁶⁷² PP said that the competition on a tender would be recorded on both the manual tender register and the 'Enquiries Received' spreadsheet. PP also confirmed that most covers ('nine times out of ten') were dealt with by MR.²⁶⁷³ PP confirmed that a company decision was made to discontinue the practice of cover pricing after articles started to appear in the press and building journals.²⁶⁷⁴ PP stated that this decision to cease cover prices coincided with MR's departure from Frudd.²⁶⁷⁵

IV.343. ML joined Frudd as an estimator in 2003, reporting to MR before becoming senior estimator/surveyor on MR's departure from Frudd in about November 2004. In interview, ML explained that tenders were recorded on a manual tender register. In addition, Frudd maintained a spreadsheet entitled 'Enquiries

Received', summarising current tenders, recorded on a shared computer drive. ML admitted that he was involved in cover pricing, especially after MR left the company until a decision was made by Frudd not to continue with the practice.²⁶⁷⁶ ML admitted that covers could be recorded by estimators at Frudd on the tender register or on the tender enquiry spreadsheets by use of the letter 'C'.²⁶⁷⁷

IV.344. Former Chief Estimator MR was also interviewed about his participation in cover pricing at Frudd until his departure in late 2004. MR explained the tender process as follows: 'enquiries would come into the office, usually by post...the tenders would then be...given a reference number and put into a folder and, then they would be listed...And that was then given to the directors and, a decision was made as to whether or not we would price those projects'.²⁶⁷⁸ He said the decision whether or not to price a project was made during joint discussions between him and directors DF, JF and Andrew Smith. He said 'I don't think any of us really wanted to give or take covers, it wasn't something that, I don't think anybody was proud of doing, it was really under the pressures of trying to, carry out the job basically'.²⁶⁷⁹

IV.345. MR admitted that that the letter 'C' was used on the tender register to indicate a cover given or received by Frudd. PP also explained that the annotation of the letter 'C' by the name of a company on the tender register would indicate either a cover was received by Frudd from that company or vice versa.

Frudd taking cover prices

IV.346. In interview, ML explained the process of taking a cover price as follows: 'you had a...company's name who were pricing it, say, and you just phoned them up. They'd give you a figure. You'd put the figure on the tender form'. ML explained that he knew who to contact for a cover price from the information provided from John Wholey of the Nottingham Builders' Guild.²⁶⁸⁰ John Wholey made weekly telephone calls to Frudd to discuss tender invitations and ML said 'he'd tell you who else was pricing them'.²⁶⁸¹ ML confirmed that the reporting system, operated by John Wholey, helped Frudd to obtain cover prices.²⁶⁸² The list of competitors described in paragraph IV.351 below, includes the following entry; 'When all else fails...John Wholley...[...][C]'.²⁶⁸³

IV.347. MR admitted that he gave and received cover prices but said that covers would only be sought if authorised or instructed by directors during regular tender meetings.²⁶⁸⁴ MR confirmed that he used the list entitled *'Mic's Likely Lads'*²⁶⁸⁵ as a means of contacting a competitor for a cover price and that covers were recorded by the use of the letter 'C' on Frudd's tender register.

IV.348. Estimator PP explained that the purpose of obtaining a cover price was as follows: 'You want to look competitive, although we've not priced the job'.²⁶⁸⁶ PP said a cover price was recorded as follows: 'we'd write it in the book...there'd be a 'C' at the side of the book...to say that it had been a cover...on the 'Enquiries Received' sheet, we'd put a 'C' as well, if that was the decision'.²⁶⁸⁷

Frudd giving cover prices

IV.349. In interview, ML said that when giving cover prices to competitors, 'you generally put a percentage on your figure ... Just enough that it'd keep them far enough away, out of the picture'.²⁶⁸⁸ MR and PP both admitted that the letter 'C' on the tender register could indicate a cover price given to a competitor.

IV.350. PP said he referred requests for cover prices to MR or, in his absence, senior estimator Andrew Holland. PP said 'We'd get a phone call in, I'd take the phone call...And then I'd go and say to Mic, 'So-and-so wants a cover on this price...he would then organise it. And he would put...a percentage mark-up on our tender...And give it to them...Give the appearance of a competitive price, yeah'.²⁶⁸⁹ PP said that by giving cover prices 'I suppose it makes your chances of getting the job a bit better'.²⁶⁹⁰

List of competitors

IV.351. As part of its leniency application, Frudd also provided a document entitled 'THE COMPETITION MIC'S LIKELY LADS', which is a list of building contractors with contact names and telephone numbers.²⁶⁹¹ Frudd explained that this document belonged to MR. Harlow & Milner

- IV.352. As part of its leniency application, Harlow & Milner provided a general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. Statements were provided to the OFT by Richard Milner ('RM'), Managing Director of Harlow & Milner, Chris Smithson ('CS'), Chief Estimator and Graham Pearce ('GP'), former Chief Estimator.
- IV.353. On receipt of a request to tender from a client, a member of the estimating staff would fill out an Enquiry Record, entering the details of the client, a brief description of the job and various other pieces of information. In a final box at the bottom of the front page, 'Estimators Comments', Harlow & Milner would on occasions insert the names of competitors.

Harlow & Milner taking cover prices

- IV.354. RM would have the final say as to whether or not a tender was to be properly priced or a cover price was to be sought. He stated in answer to whether or not he took part in preparing a tender, 'Not in the actual preparation of the tender no. My involvement came at the back end when it was the management decision as to how competitively we went in on the tender depending on the workload etc as we talked about, the desirability of the projects'.²⁶⁹² He added that if the work was deemed unattractive, '...we would either...if we had the capacity to price it, we would price it and then we would deal with it at the management decision at the end, we would put a higher price in. On occasions we have rung, we've investigated who else has been pricing that project and, so as not to affect our commercial position with customers...If you send the tender back then you're actually striking yourself off, or potentially striking yourself off for future works so we take a view well do we price it and price it high or do we take a cover, in that we would find out who was pricing it and we'd ring one of those contractors up instead. The terminology that was often used was "can you help us out"...'.²⁶⁹³
- IV.355. RM explained his understanding of cover pricing as follows: 'It's when they don't, somebody doesn't want the work but doesn't want to send the tender back, they obtain a price from another organisation which is above a level

IV.356. When taking a cover price, RM stated, '... we would get a price which was not too high so that it looked as though we hadn't tried but high enough so that we didn't actually win the work'.²⁶⁹⁵ RM, CS and GP said that when taking a cover price intelligence was often obtained on the companies competing for the tender by telephone when asking sub-contractors and suppliers if they wished to price the tender, or when chasing quotations prior to completion of the estimate. Harlow & Milner kept a list of 'Useful Building Contacts and Competitor Details'.²⁶⁹⁶

IV.357. RM continued, 'either Graham or Chris who are the estimators who would know their opposite number, estimators at other organisations, as I understand it they would ring, ask...can you help us out with this one...'.²⁶⁹⁷ GP was asked in interview if faxes or emails were ever used in exchanging cover prices with competitors. He replied, 'Well we never did...emails is something which – I am probably a little bit of a dinosaur...I did use them but not a massive amount. Faxes is very slow you see the trouble is you might struggle to find out who's pricing so ringing is quick so you ring up and usually as I say because of tenders like 12 o'clock and it has got to be then you haven't time to worry so you ring up'.²⁶⁹⁸

IV.358. RM was asked if a cover price would be arranged some days in advance of the tender closing date. He replied, 'It might be left to the wire. It might be one of those where you haven't found anybody to get a cover price from and you might, you know, have a final ring round the day before...because you'd rather put a cover price in than send the tender documents back so...if you haven't found anybody and it got to the 11th hour...it might be...at that point...if you've sort of made the decision the week before, or you may know who's pricing it, in that case it might be, 'can you help us out' and it'll be...“yea we'll let you know on the day”, we'd very rarely get a price days before, if we were taking a cover from somebody else it would always be on the day that the tender went in, you'd never have a load of notice because generally speaking, estimators being of the type that they are, you know, the nature of the beast if you like, it always takes to the wire'.²⁶⁹⁹

IV.359. GP stated that many details were recorded on scraps of paper which were subsequently discarded or lost if a cover price was used as a tender.²⁷⁰⁰ CS said, 'It's generally just written down on a piece of scrap paper, who the contractor is and the name of the estimator or the guy that we're getting the price from and usually the price you'd write on a scrap of paper as well'. He added, 'I would think its usually just put in the file for reference'.²⁷⁰¹

Harlow & Milner giving cover prices

- IV.360. CS said in interview that when providing a cover price to a competitor 'We have a prelim sheet [Enquiry Record], which we'll write on the front any contractors who we know are pricing it. But mainly we'd...written it on a piece of scrap paper'.²⁷⁰²
- IV.361. RM and CS stated that a telephone number or a '©' next to an undertaking's name in the Estimators Comments Box on the Tender Enquiry, indicated that a cover was given to that undertaking.²⁷⁰³ GP said that, for him, there was no fixed method used for recording the giving of cover prices, and that as well as a telephone number and/or '©' next to an undertaking, the word 'cover' or the cover price itself was sometimes used.²⁷⁰⁴
- IV.362. When asked how Harlow & Milner arrived at a cover price CS said, 'Effectively, it's the price that we've decided that our price will be plus a percentage. Somewhere between 5 and 15% you'd add on and then round it possibly round it to, up or down'.²⁷⁰⁵

Henry Boot

- IV.363. As part of its leniency application, Henry Boot made available current employees and contacted ex-employees to be interviewed. During these voluntary interviews the following individuals provided explanations of Henry Boot's involvement in cover pricing: John Dawson ('JD'), who was a Chief Estimator at Henry Boot in the period from March 2000 until retiring at the end of 2002, Ian Bayston ('IB'), a Chief Estimator²⁷⁰⁶ at Henry Boot, Malcolm Welsby ('MW'), an estimator at Henry Boot, Duncan Abrahams ('DA'), an estimator at Henry Boot, and Michael Mosley ('MM'), Managing Director²⁷⁰⁷ of Henry Boot.
- IV.364. In interview JD stated the decision on whether a job was attractive was made by 'the regional manager, we would...provide him the facts, he looks at those facts, and he would decide'.²⁷⁰⁸ In interview IB also stated the attractiveness of a tender would be '...probably discussed with the regional manager, [and] the chief estimator'.²⁷⁰⁹
- IV.365. It is apparent from Henry Boot's tender adjudication sheets ('Sheet 28s') that Henry Boot would on occasions have sought to find out who else was competing for a tender. Henry Boot's legal representatives stated that in order to find this out, 'There were various methods by which such information would be obtained: through the Builders' Conference or ABI Building Data, sub-contractors and sometimes from the client themselves'.²⁷¹⁰ In interview MW also stated 'You sometimes get the competition without even trying. Sub-contractors, suppliers will ring up and say, "I'm preparing a quotation for roofing, I know that you're tendering, can I send you my quotation" and you say, "Yeah fine, by the way who else are you quoting?", it comes out very easy ... Even some local authorities. I had one only recently where they told you who you were up against'.²⁷¹¹ In terms of recording this information in respect of competition JD stated 'at the [tender] submission meeting, we [would] record the minutes on ... a sheet 28 and at the top of the first sheet 28 we would record the competition on there'.²⁷¹²

IV.366. In its response to the Statement, Henry Boot stated that 'information regarding who the competition was on a potential contract was not sought or obtained for the purposes of cover pricing'.²⁷¹³ However, as detailed in paragraph IV.369 below, where this information was not sought for the purpose of cover pricing it was still on occasions used for that purpose, by Henry Boot's own admission. Furthermore, as also detailed in paragraph IV.369, IB stated that where the information had not already been obtained Henry Boot would indeed contact a supplier specifically for the purpose of obtaining the name of a competitor in order to obtain a cover price.

IV.367. Many of those persons interviewed explained that the purpose of cover pricing was so that clients did not remove them from future tender lists. JD stated 'if you return tender documents then what you tend to find is that the client or the client's representatives...take a rather dim view of it and you probably don't get on a tender list again, certainly for a long long time, and that basically is the reason for...taking a cover'.²⁷¹⁴

IV.368. Most of those persons interviewed in respect of Henry Boot advised that the exchange of cover prices was carried out via the telephone and not any other medium. As part of its leniency application, Henry Boot's legal representatives stated that 'Exchanges pertaining to cover pricing were almost invariably done by way of a quick telephone call'.²⁷¹⁵

Henry Boot taking cover prices

IV.369. In respect of the process of taking a cover price from a competitor, JD confirmed that the regional manager would have had the ultimate decision as to whether to take a cover.²⁷¹⁶ IB stated 'generally the only way round it if we hadn't got the resources available would be to take a cover. You generally found out who your opposition were beforehand anyway or during [the tender preparation period]. If not, you could make a phone call to perhaps a named supplier in the document, the client's document, and you'd find the list who he's priced and then you would approach another, another contractor and ask if they could help you out, I mean everybody knew if you said "Can you ... help us, give us some assistance." They knew what it meant...'.²⁷¹⁷ IB also stated '...we used to have a book...with all names, names all contractors' names and telephone numbers...'.²⁷¹⁸

IV.370. When asked when contact would take place in respect of taking a cover price, IB stated 'Well it could be anytime during the tender period. Just to ask them if...they were pricing it, if they could help us out and they'll say, they used to say "Yeah, we'll give you a ring", generally...the day before. Sometimes it would be the 11th hour because depending on when they got the tender finished'.²⁷¹⁹

IV.371. When asked how taking a cover price would have been recorded, IB stated 'at that time it used to, the chief estimator used to put the figure in...our tender register'.²⁷²⁰ JD stated '...if we were taking a cover then [in] that situation you don't have a submission meeting so there's no minutes of it so all [of] it would be in the tender register itself...'.²⁷²¹ JD explained how he would record the taking of a cover price in the tender register, however as this method of recording is not relevant to the Infringements detailed below the OFT does not intend to describe this process further.

IV.372. In respect of the process of giving a cover price to a competitor MW stated *'it just simply worked by, you'd get a phone call, "Can you help me out?" and if the people you were working for said "Yes, do it", then you simply told them, "Yeah we'll fix you up", and you just simply...need to get your price correct first. Once you've decided on your bottom line price then you would, with agreement, put a percentage on it to make sure that the price you were offering to somebody else would safeguard their interests and that the last thing you want to do is arrive at a figure, give them a price and then find out that we've then had another look at it and thought, not really interested in this, our price goes up and they finish up being the lowest...'.²⁷²² In terms of who made the decision at Henry Boot to give a cover price to a competitor JD stated *'the call [from a competitor] would invariably come to myself...and it would be my decision as to whether I said "Yes we're able to help you" or whether we're not'. When asked if he would discuss this with anyone else, JD stated '...I would certainly inform the regional manager...'.²⁷²³

IV.373. In interview, MM stated that he had been aware of cover pricing taking place at Henry Boot and stated *'I've been involved in [coming to] the price we would give to someone who'd asked for help'.²⁷²⁴ When asked how a cover price, to give to a competitor, would be calculated MW stated *'The basic calculation is simply how much do you want to add to your price, to put them away from it, but not make 'em look silly really'.²⁷²⁵ JD stated '...it was above Henry Boot's figure and maybe globally shall we say, 5% plus or minus'.²⁷²⁶

IV.374. In interview DA, when asked how the giving of a cover price would be recorded, stated 'If you're giving one [a cover price]...we used to write it down on the sheet 28 which is the tender adjudication sheet'.²⁷²⁷ JD stated 'If it was on the sheet 28 and I was the one that was recording the minutes of the...[tender] submission meeting...I would probably put a "k" in a circle at the side of the list of competition if I knew that somebody was taking a cover...'.²⁷²⁸ MW stated 'I would [record] who I've given a cover to with the price, so that I know what I've actually done' and that this would be put 'in the tender file'.²⁷²⁹

Herbert Baggaley

IV.375. As part of its leniency application, Herbert Baggaley through its legal representatives, Actons, provided a typed schedule of all tenders received by Herbert Baggaley between 1 January 2000 and 27 June 2005.²⁷³⁰ During the section 28 visit to Herbert Baggaley's premises on 14 June 2005, the OFT obtained similar typed versions of this schedule for the years 2003²⁷³¹ and 2004.²⁷³² The OFT also obtained during the section 28 visits a number of handwritten Tendering Schedules some of which had been marked with the words *'Cover Price'*²⁷³³ and 'CP'.²⁷³⁴ Also provided as part of its leniency application was a list of contractors with contact details, with whom Herbert Baggaley had been involved in the practice of taking and giving cover prices.²⁷³⁵

IV.376. The following Herbert Baggaley employees were interviewed by the OFT: Howard Baggaley ('HB'), Executive Chairman, Richard Baggaley ('RB'), Managing Director, Roger Hayes ('RH') Chief Estimator until October 2002 when he left Herbert Baggaley, and Anton Newell ('AN') who became Chief Estimator in October 2002 and prior to that worked as an estimator.

Compensation payments

IV.377. As part of its leniency application, Herbert Baggaley's legal representatives informed the OFT that Herbert Baggaley had been involved in arrangements where the winning contractor, on a particular tender, would reimburse the unsuccessful contractor a certain sum of money. The details of these arrangements are set out in the relevant Infringement sections – see table following paragraph IV.147 above.

Cover pricing – general

- IV.378. Herbert Baggaley staff confirmed in interview that it participated in both the giving and taking of cover prices. HB said that when Herbert Baggaley received a tender, it arranged, '...an interest meeting. So every inquiry that is received by the company is considered by that – meeting, something I established, I think in the late 90s, when it – it really had evolved that the chief estimator appeared to be taking the decision as to which jobs suited us and those that didn't'.²⁷³⁶
- IV.379. In respect of the typed schedule of all tenders received by Herbert Baggaley between 1 January 2000 and 27 June 2005, Herbert Baggaley explained what the categorisation 'A', 'B', 'C' and 'R' stood for. 'Those tenders which were classed as "A" were the very real focus of HBC [Herbert Baggaley]. They were the work which HBC wanted and needed to obtain and maintain. Those marked "B" were useful jobs which would be gladly received but pursuing them was not to be undertaken at the expense of the very high interest. This left Tenders which were of little or no interest to HBC. They were labelled "C". It is a coincidence that "C" stood for these low interest Tenders when in fact many of them were involved in cover pricing. The OFT will note though that being labelled under "C" does not automatically mean that every one of these low interest jobs involved covers. Therefore the number of "C" tenders listed under Document 1 [3901] may not tally precisely with the number of covers received or provided by HBC'.²⁷³⁷ In respect of whether category 'C' tenders coincided with covers, AN in interview said 'Not 100% but on the whole it probably did, yes'.²⁷³⁸ 'R' was entered when the tender documents were returned to the client.

Herbert Baggaley taking cover prices

- IV.380. HB explained that the 'definitive' decision on whether to take or give a cover would be made at the 'interest meetings' and in practice that the Chief Estimator might make a preliminary decision, '...having reviewed the inquiry against the – the estimating workload and, indeed, the current won-work status, as to whether the inquiry was of high or low interest'.²⁷³⁹ HB confirmed that he was fully aware that cover pricing was going on.²⁷⁴⁰
- IV.381. Both RH and AN who were employed as Chief Estimators at Herbert Baggaley for the period under investigation confirmed that the tender procedure was as described in paragraph IV.379 above. RH said 'On receipt of a tender...it would be my job to analyse [the] content of the job, the risks, benefits, and then initially report back to the directors as to whether it was a project that fitted in with our business plan and the resources that we had available'.²⁷⁴¹ RH said that the primary reason why cover pricing took place was 'We were always concerned about upsetting a client by returning his invitation'.²⁷⁴²

- IV.382. AN confirmed that the decision to take a cover, 'would be discussed at the interest meeting, and that decision taken at that meeting then'.²⁷⁴³ AN also confirmed that once a decision had been made to take a cover, the estimator would make the necessary arrangements.²⁷⁴⁴
- IV.383. RH explained how Herbert Baggaley would find out who the competition was on a job: 'There are agencies and, I'm trying to think of their names now, they've gone, ABI, people like that, Glennigans...And a client would normally in a project have specified sub-contractors and suppliers who would give you information with regards to who they've received enquiries from'.²⁷⁴⁵
- IV.384. Herbert Baggaley explained that 'The purpose of the cover priced bid was to show realism. Therefore, the covers had to be realistic. The most expedient way of ensuring this was, given the fact that a receiving party had not been privy to the detail behind any figure, was to use another Estimator with a sound reputation for estimating. Therefore over time, certain contacts would be approached by HBC's Chief Estimator more often than others'.²⁷⁴⁶ AN confirmed this approach, 'we would chose the one who we either knew best from previous dealings, or the one we maybe thought was going to give us the most competitive cover, because the objective was to look as competitive as possible, and that was part of the reason for taking the cover'.²⁷⁴⁷
- IV.385. AN confirmed that two contacts would take place, by telephone, with a competitor in respect of taking a cover price: '...if we decided two weeks into the job let's take a cover on this one, within the next week we would probably make a phone call and then [the] arrangement would be ring back the day before it's due it when their price is completed'.²⁷⁴⁸

Herbert Baggaley giving cover prices

- IV.386. Herbert Baggaley explained the process when a company contacted it for a cover price. 'That company might then contact HBC, invariably by telephone, and ask if they can "take help" on this particular tender. On being contacted by another contractor, an HBC Estimator would agree and arrange for the other contractor, to call HBC again some twelve to twenty four hours before the tender was due to be lodged, by which time HBC would have completed its tender review. When the follow up call was received the estimator would give a figure to the other contractor which would be above HBC's figure'.²⁷⁴⁹
- IV.387. AN confirmed that if a company requested that Herbert Baggaley provide it with a cover price, the other company would have the expectation that it would receive a price from Herbert Baggaley that appeared competitive but was designed not to win the contract.²⁷⁵⁰
- IV.388. In terms of arriving at a cover price to give to a competitor, AN said 'It would have been, depending, two, three, four percent, depending on the type of scheme, straightforward jobs you could have, bill of quantities you would probably be a little bit tighter because there was less problem available in terms of when you had your bill requested assuming that there was no problems, they would accept it. Design and Build projects where interpretation comes into it more, you'll probably be a little bit on the higher side towards four percent so that they are a little bit further away but still not silly'.²⁷⁵¹

Contemporaneous documents

- IV.389. Herbert Baggaley's leniency application provided additional contemporaneous documents to those obtained by the OFT on the section 28 visit. The main document was the complete list of all tenders received between 1 January 2000 and 27 June 2005. Further additional contemporaneous documents, client tender letters and internal estimate sheets were provided on 20 April 2007.²⁷⁵² All documentary evidence is discussed by the OFT in relation to each relevant specific tender.
- IV.390. AN explained in respect of the handwritten Tendering Schedule referred to in paragraph IV.375 above that, *'Predominantly, it's Roger's [handwriting] but there are some of mine in there...'*²⁷⁵³ and that if there was 'cover price' written in the final column, then there was almost certainly cover pricing taking place in respect of that tender.²⁷⁵⁴

Hobson & Porter

- IV.391. As part of its leniency application, Hobson & Porter provided a general explanation of its participation in cover pricing.²⁷⁵⁵ The following Hobson & Porter employees expanded upon this explanation during interview: David Watson ('DW'), Managing Director, Russell Horner ('RH'), Major Works Estimating Director, Ian Gibbins ('IG'), Minor Works Director and Michael Haywood ('MH') an estimator in Major Works. The distinction between Major and Minor works was that Major Works dealt with contracts from approximately [...] upwards²⁷⁵⁶ while Minor Works dealt with contracts from [...] up to maximum of approximately [...].²⁷⁵⁷
- IV.392. In its leniency application Hobson & Porter provided lists of cover pricing activity for both Major²⁷⁵⁸ and Minor Works.²⁷⁵⁹ DW explained how these lists were compiled, 'we scanned through our documentation that we had and we tested the knowledge of our people and estimators used their memory and came up with the list'.²⁷⁶⁰

- IV.393. Hobson & Porter confirmed that it participated in both the giving and taking of cover prices for both Major and Minor Works.²⁷⁶¹ In Major Works, shortly after the receipt of a tender DW and RH would discuss in a meeting whether to tender for the work. DW said that it would be his ultimate responsibility as Managing Director to decide if Hobson & Porter wanted to win the work.²⁷⁶² DW explained that, 'it solves a problem for us by way of not wanting to upset the clients and still being retained on their tender lists'.²⁷⁶³ For Minor Works it would be IG's decision as to whether Hobson & Porter wanted to win the work or to return the tender with a cover price.²⁷⁶⁴
- IV.394. For both Major and Minor Works tenders, Hobson & Porter confirmed that two contacts would take place with a competitor in respect of giving and taking a cover price. Firstly, when the competitor or Hobson & Porter asked for help, and then secondly, on the day of the tender submission or the day before the tender submission, there would be a further contact to either give or obtain the cover price.²⁷⁶⁵ DW confirmed that it would generally be the estimators who would make such contact.²⁷⁶⁶
- IV.395. DW also explained how Hobson & Porter would find out who the competition was on a job: 'Generally that would be via the supplier chain by the sub-contractors and suppliers there might be a little bit of specialist deal on the job that you know there is only going to be supplied by one or two types of people you know suppliers for instance - may be approach those and say have you had any enquiries for this sort of deal on this job and if so who from generally it is the supplier chain'.²⁷⁶⁷

- IV.396. For Major Works a 'Tender Information' sheet was produced once Hobson & Porter had decided to price the job.²⁷⁶⁸ On these sheets is a section where the known competition for the tender was inserted and where annotations were made in relation to cover pricing. These individual sheets are discussed by the OFT in relation to each relevant specific tender.
- IV.397. For Minor Works a 'Minor Works Tender Summary' Sheet was produced which also contained a section where the known competition for the tender was inserted and where annotations were made in relation to cover pricing. These individual sheets are also discussed by the OFT in relation to each relevant specific tender.
- IV.398. IG explained that his department operated this document recording system in accordance with British Standard 5750, which meant that details of tenders received were required to be completed on the Minor Works summary sheets.²⁷⁶⁹ However the operation of this recording system was irregular. IG explained that he tended not to fill in the forms on receipt of a tender, though his colleagues did and that the recording system was phased out in 2005.

Hobson & Porter – Major Works giving cover prices

IV.399. RH explained that, 'The only reason we would really contact a competitor close to the return date would be if they have already contacted us to ask us for a cover we may ring then you know if we agreed to give them a cover we would call them back with a figure that they could use in place of pricing the job'.²⁷⁷⁰

IV.400. Hobson & Porter confirmed that if a cover price was provided then this would be recorded on the tender sheet as well. RH said that 'you write C in the column'.²⁷⁷¹ The 'C', which could be either handwritten or typed, would be written on the tender sheet next to the company that was receiving the cover price. DW further confirmed, 'Normally the C would denote that we gave or took a cover ourselves'.²⁷⁷² MH said that the 'C' might indicate that Hobson & Porter had given a cover, but that it might alternatively indicate that he 'may have been party to knowing that another competitor was taking a cover from somewhere else'.²⁷⁷³

Hobson & Porter – Major Works taking cover prices

IV.401. RH explained that if Hobson & Porter was taking a cover price there would not be the same documentation as when giving cover, but RH would put documentation for tenders where cover was taken in a separate file.²⁷⁷⁴

IV.402. If Hobson & Porter was taking a cover price RH explained how it would find out who to get the cover price from, 'If it's somebody that we were taking covers from before obviously we knew the people if it was a new if we had to approach somebody that we didn't know we would ring them up and I would just ask for the estimator'.²⁷⁷⁵

Hobson & Porter – Minor Works giving cover prices

IV.403. IG explained that that there would be contact with competitors close to the tender return date for two reasons – to give or take a cover. In the case of giving a cover if a competitor had contacted Hobson & Porter and asked for a cover, IG explained that this would be, 'usually 3,4,5% above you so that they could provide the client with a tender that didn't look silly'.²⁷⁷⁶

IV.404. In contrast to Major Works, the Minor Works Tender Summary Sheet did not have such a universal use of 'C', to indicate a cover price. Sometimes a 'C' would be written, or 'cover', sometimes not at all and mention of cover would be found on another document, such as a handwritten note on a client letter. The OFT discusses these records in relation to each relevant specific tender.

Hobson & Porter – Minor Works taking cover prices

- IV.405. IG confirmed that another reason to contact a competitor close to the tender return date would be if Hobson & Porter required a cover price. If Hobson & Porter was taking a cover IG explained how he would know who to contact. 'You would over the years obviously you would know who the estimators are if you don't if it is a cold call that you are told that they are tendering you would then ring and ask for the estimator and ask the question are you tendering for this job'.²⁷⁷⁷
- IV.406. IG said that generally he would not record details of cover pricing on the tender summary sheets, but may instead have made a note on another document. IG explained that sometimes 'verbally declined', would be written on a tender summary sheet. This was a way to get around the BS 5750 requirement where there were no tender details available to complete on the sheets, and means that Hobson & Porter took a cover.²⁷⁷⁸
- IV.407. In its response to the Statement, Hobson & Porter stated '[i]t is not disputed that Hobson & Porter participated in cover pricing during the relevant period set out in the Statement'.²⁷⁷⁹

Irwins

- IV.408. As part of its leniency application, Irwins provided a general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. Irwins explained that 'it receives far more enquiries than can be priced...[and as a result] It has in the past been regarded as necessary (and as a last resort) to take cover prices on particular contracts'.²⁷⁸⁰ Irwins stated that 'the reason in taking cover prices is to avoid offending clients/potential clients/consultants and to protect the company being removed from future tender lists'.²⁷⁸¹
- IV.409. Ivan Peter Nelson ('IPN'), an Estimating Director at Irwins for the 11 years prior to interview by the OFT, explained that he was responsible for deciding whether a job was attractive, 'And so you're then into a position where you either price it, send it back or, up to whenever you lot [the OFT] came along, took a cover'.²⁷⁸² IPN made his decisions based on 'Well, the location initially, if it was...where we could do it, the size of the job, the client and the type of work, really...if it just looked attractive, if it fit within sort of jobs that I knew we could...we'd probably be more competitive on'.²⁷⁸³ On those contracts IPN deemed unattractive he explained 'if...it wasn't somebody that would get really upset if you sent it back up, I would return it...Where I've said, yes, we'll have it, I would think that I would have a go at pricing. If...the enquiry came in and I'd be working along on it and I decided...we're not going to be competitive on here...some time during the two to three week tender period I'd wack it in as a bad job and say well...forget it'.²⁷⁸⁴ IPN confirmed that in these situations he may have decided to seek a cover price.²⁷⁸⁵

IV.410. IPN maintained an internal Tender Register in which were recorded details of all tenders received by Irwins.²⁷⁸⁶ IPN explained that he would complete the Tender Register on receipt of a tender invitation, and would keep it updated as the tender process progressed. Each tender was allocated an internal number and all the details of the tender were recorded including date received, awarding body, tender deadline, type of contract, amount tendered and other relevant information including the names of competitors on the tender where known.²⁷⁸⁷

IV.411. IPN explained how he would find out who else was pricing the tender, 'The sub-contractors know and the material suppliers and you tend to get to know, without even asking. If...I'm desperately wanting to know like the day before, then I would ring, ring a sub-contractor and ask them'.²⁷⁸⁸ IPN would note in the final column of the Tender Register the identities of the competitors as and when they were discovered.²⁷⁸⁹

IV.412. IPN said during interview 'I've very rarely given any cover pricing because I'm always, because of the fact that I'm just a one-man estimating team... I would think 90 % of the time it's just me that's been needing the help'.²⁷⁹⁰

IV.413. In addition to its leniency application, Irwins provided to the OFT two schedules, one each for 'Covers Taken' and 'Cover Given', which detail projects/contracts identified by the company during the course of an internal investigation conducted by IPN into potential cover prices. Irwins stated that 'the schedule is as accurate and complete as company and other records individual recollections permit...whilst it is confident that the information provided is comprehensive, it remains possible that there may be inadvertent errors or omissions due to the absence of detailed records during the review period'.²⁷⁹¹ Irwins further clarified that the '...schedule is compiled from the limited information found on tender summaries, notes on margins and old papers together with individuals' memories (not always reliable)'.²⁷⁹²

IV.414. Irwins also provided the OFT with copies of a number of contemporaneous tender returns/forms of tender relating to individual tenders.

Irwins taking cover prices

IV.415. On tenders where Irwins was seeking a cover IPN explained 'You'd probably get to about two or three days before and realise that you were just not going to get a figure together and then probably on the night before or sometimes on the day, sometimes even after they're due to go in, I'd ring around and get a figure that I knew was going to be, reasonably all right over the top...It worked well because it meant that I could always have another second look at each enquiry and be more choosy...and it was a way, really, of, dealing with a, a tender, at the last minute and not upsetting, the clients and the architects and quantity surveyors'.²⁷⁹³ IPN was asked who else within Irwins was actively involved in cover pricing to which he replied 'I think everybody in the industry knows it's going on but with, they wouldn't know which, I was taking covers on which I weren't cos we didn't particularly talk about it...But generally it's all, it was left for me, Im [sic] the culprit'.²⁷⁹⁴

IV.416. In either the fourth or fifth column of the Tender Register, the percentage mark-up was recorded. These columns were also commonly used by IPN to record a 'C'.²⁷⁹⁵ IPN confirmed that the presence of a 'C' in the percentage mark-up column on the Tender Register would indicate that Irwins obtained a cover price in relation to that tender.²⁷⁹⁶ IPN would also record the figure Irwins submitted on the Tender Register in the sixth column. However, this was not necessarily the figure supplied by a competitor for a cover price, 'perhaps I'd add a little bit more or...you wouldn't knock any off but you'd add a bit more on perhaps'.²⁷⁹⁷

IV.417. The final column on the Tender Register would record '...notes really...if I find out various people that happen to be in for the tender...'.²⁷⁹⁸ Occasionally Irwins would record the taking of a cover price by means of an '*' or the word 'Cover' in the final column of the Tender Register.²⁷⁹⁹ On other occasions Irwins would record the telephone number of the provider of a cover price in the final column of the Tender Register.²⁸⁰⁰ The OFT discusses instances of these records in relation to the relevant specific tenders in the next section.

IV.418. Irwins also provided to the OFT two lists of contracts where cover prices were given and taken.²⁸⁰¹ These lists included the following companies:

J H Hallam

IV.420. As part of its leniency application, J H Hallam made available current employees to be interviewed. These were Spencer Robinson ('SR'), senior estimator, Richard Blount ('RB'), Chief Surveyor, William Packer ('WP'), Chief Estimator and Steve Gill ('SG'), estimator at J H Hallam. During these voluntary interviews the individuals were asked to give an explanation of J H Hallam's involvement in cover pricing.

J H Hallam taking cover prices

IV.421. During interview, WP explained the criteria J H Hallam used to decide whether to tender for a contract. WP stated '...the fact is if we have already accepted a tender and then for some reason at that stage...we couldn't deal with it either because somebody was ill or...the workload suddenly increased then it was possible that we would go and get a cover price'.²⁸⁰⁴ RB stated the decision whether to tender for a contract was made by 'It's me generally speaking if I am hovering like that and I am not quite sure whether its something we want to go for or not I normally chew it over with John... [John Hallam, Managing Director]'.²⁸⁰⁵ RB explained 'we try to tender for everything that came through the door but there were occasions when we were caught out when you know for lots of reasons...it's not unusual for us to be ringing round the day before the tender's due in chasing sub-contract tenders so we can finish our tender and frequently like the morning the tender is going in and we haven't got a mechanical price or an electrical price you know fundamental to our bid and in those circumstances you are almost left with no alternative...but to perhaps take some help from another contractor in other words cover. It's normally desperation because we can't finish our tender...'.²⁸⁰⁶

IV.422. RB explained who was aware of cover pricing within J H Hallam, 'Well it's certainly from the board down because I gave a monthly board report...if we had taken a cover it would be noted on the tender report and what I tended to do was if we had taken a cover I would just put a small c in the results column'.²⁸⁰⁷ RB stated that 'There are five members of the board who are Richard Hallam [Chairman], John Hallam [Managing Director], Chris Hallam [Personnel Director], Rob Hefford [Financial Director] and myself [Commercial Director]'.²⁸⁰⁸ These 'monthly board reports' are titled 'R & B board Meetings' and list the name of the contract, and record a small 'c' if cover had been taken for that contract. However RB stated that he did not usually record the identity of companies from whom J H Hallam had taken a cover price.²⁸⁰⁹

IV.423. SR explained how he would find out the identity of J H Hallam's competitors for a contract. SR stated 'subcontractors, Builders Conference. The majority of time, I mean if you're sending enquiries out, to subcontractors...they'd often phone you up and say..."I've had it in from a couple of other contractors, do you want to know the names", and they'll just give you the names'.²⁸¹⁰ J H Hallam's leniency application also stated that 'The company has also been contacted by Barbow ABI and Builders Conference for information regarding tenders received and being priced. They often send out complimentary information identifying who is pricing which job'.²⁸¹¹

IV.424. SR explained how the receiving of a cover price worked in practice. SR stated '...you could do it the day you got the tender in...but reality is you were either too busy or you just put it to one side...you've just got something on your calendar just to flag it up a few days before. I mean we've got like a list of all the tenders what are going in and it's got the dates highlighted...you look on there and think, right, tender goes in a week today, I'd better start...I'd better phone around...in a couple of days time and try and sort the price out'.²⁸¹² SG stated 'we rarely get a figure before the morning of the estimate'.²⁸¹³

J H Hallam giving cover prices

IV.425. RB explained how the giving of a cover worked in practice, 'generally speaking it was the same as us when we were looking for a cover one of desperation towards the latter stages of the tender process in other words they have ran out of time and can't finish it off. That was the norm occasionally we would get a phone call early on in the process when the grid on the desk don't really want to send it back and therefore want some comfort that they can get some support from us but that was less common it was more the desperate phone call the day before the tender is due in'. RB continued '...so normally we would end up giving a cover either the day before or more commonly on the morning that the tender is going in'.²⁸¹⁴

IV.426. RB was asked whether he recorded the giving of a cover price to a competitor. RB stated 'There wasn't and I have to say I would of and I have frowned on the fact that there was any notes at all I would have just preferred to have just kept it a verbal thing and as I say personally I have given covers out I have never been specific I have never told them what our figure was going to be I have always said that you need to pitch your bid over this, left it fairly loose'.²⁸¹⁵

IV.427. SR however did occasionally record contact with a competitor, '...I'd probably just scribble it on the front of the tender document or whatever I was working [on] I'd probably just scribble it on that, unless they said, "can you give me a call?" and then I'd take his name and number. But nine times out of ten if someone was taking a cover of you they'd phone you back because it's their sort of responsibility to get the tender back'.²⁸¹⁶ WP stated 'We record it on forms... We put the company's names down that we had given the covers to'.²⁸¹⁷

IV.428. RB confirmed that he would generally have been aware if one of the estimators within J H Hallam was giving a cover price to a competitor but would leave the calculation of the cover price to them, 'I'd normally leave it to the estimator'.²⁸¹⁸ SR stated 'we'd finalise the tender so we'd know...what figure we're going in at before we can help another contactor out...because in honesty you didn't want to make their price look stupid, so it'd only be a percent...you'd probably put, lets shove four percent on or two percent or three percent...because obviously you didn't want to make their price look ridiculous because the client'll think, "Oh his price is miles out, we're never going to ask him again." Because obviously if we needed the same help hopefully...they'd do the same with us, you know...so you didn't make their price look silly. You'd only put a few percent on'.²⁸¹⁹

IV.429. J H Hallam also provided to the OFT in its leniency application a list of companies with whom J H Hallam had 'exchanged pricing information' during the period from March 2000 to July 2005. The list contained the following entries:²⁸²⁰

- [...] [C] [List of x Participant Companies]

IV.430. J H Hallam stated in its oral response to the Statement '...we acknowledge that we've done wrong, that we're prepared to pay a fine'.²⁸²¹

Jack Lunn

IV.431. As part of its leniency application, Jack Lunn provided a general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. Jack Lunn explained that 'it receives far more enquiries than can be priced...' and as a result 'it has in the past been regarded as necessary (and as a last resort) to take cover-prices on particular contracts'.²⁸²² Jack Lunn stated that 'The primary reason in doing so is not to offend clients and consultants and to protect the company from being removed from future tender lists'.²⁸²³

- IV.432. Stephen Bradbury ('SB'), Managing Director of Jack Lunn since 2004²⁸²⁴, explained that the ultimate decision on deciding whether a job was attractive rested with him, 'It may well be that I make a decision very early on. On the other hand, in the majority of tenders, I don't get to see them when they come through the door, they go straight to the estimating. The ultimate decision since I joined the company would be myself'.²⁸²⁵ Jack Lunn's leniency application corroborated this, stating 'the estimator(s) inform the Managing/Estimating Director who may decide at this time, based on both the information provided by the estimator and any further relevant factors of which he is aware, to cover the tender'.²⁸²⁶
- IV.433. SB made his decisions based on various factors: *'...it may well be that our estimating department is just overloaded...It may well be that despite being led to believe it's a simple job, when we get the documents it's an extremely difficult job...it may well be that we feel that it's not a fair tender...another reason may be that the client is using the tender process as simply a feasibility study...'*²⁸²⁷ On those contracts SB deemed unattractive he explained *'There would be a variety of things we would do. We would look at the client. If it's a client we did a lot of work for we would be very loathe to send that tender back for risk of upsetting them for future work ... or, we may well choose to talk to one or two other contractors and see if they're keen for the job and more so would they be prepared to tell us, or give us a cover...'*²⁸²⁸ Jack Lunn's leniency application states 'If a decision to cover the tender is taken at this stage, the estimator will generally not carry out any further work on the tender other than to find out which other contractors are pricing/tendering the scheme. When this happens no paperwork or computer records is/are produced, as no further work is undertaken'.²⁸²⁹
- IV.434. SB was asked who else within Jack Lunn was actively involved in cover pricing or knew that cover pricing was going on, to which he replied *'I would say three people, myself and the two estimators...Keith Poskitt and Tony Metcalf. But I'd qualify that slightly in that...everybody in the industry knows that covers are taken and it would be naïve to think that the directors, all the directors in Jack Lunn didn't know...'*²⁸³⁰

Jack Lunn taking cover prices

- IV.435. SB explained how he would find out who Jack Lunn's competitors were, 'clients are quite happy to tell you and we use industry journals, we use what we call ABI, we also use builders conference'.²⁸³¹ SB also confirmed that subcontractors would pass on competitor information, '...and we might ask a subcontractor, are you pricing it for anyone else? And they'll say yes, we're pricing it for two or three, we're pricing it for so and so'.²⁸³² SB was asked if he would record who the competition was, and replied *'not particularly. I don't... review stage'.²⁸³³ Antony Metcalf ('AM'), estimator at Jack Lunn since 2000²⁸³⁴, was also asked if he would record who the competition was, and replied 'In some cases it's recorded on our tender submission, we have a note on there, competition, so we'd make a note for management'.²⁸³⁵

IV.436. SB confirmed that the exchange of covers 'usually operates at estimator level and it's, I'm not aware of it happening in any other way than by telephone'.²⁸³⁶

SB also confirmed that the exchange of cover prices would need his authority, 'it would certainly need me, they would certainly make me aware of it'.²⁸³⁷

IV.437. Jack Lunn stated in its leniency application, 'when a decision to take a cover is taken, the tender summary sheet is not produced (there being no need) and the hard copy "form of tender" is completed using the figure provided by another contractor. For the reasons explained earlier this paperwork is then disposed of due to it not being of any practical use and in order to avoid practical storage difficulties'.²⁸³⁸

Jack Lunn giving cover prices

IV.438. Jack Lunn stated in its leniency application, 'In practice where a cover is given, one contractor, usually through the estimating department/estimators, will contact another by telephone and enquire if he is prepared to offer a cover price. In most cases at JLC, the final agreement is through a Director even though the actual discussion may be between estimators or Directors(s). This contact is invariably by telephone'.²⁸³⁹ SB was asked whether there was any particular formula used when giving cover prices to a competitor. SB replied 'There's no hard and fast formula for our company ...'.²⁸⁴⁰

IV.439. Both AM and Keith Poskitt, (an estimator for Jack Lunn Construction since 1988)²⁸⁴¹ explained that the giving of covers was not formally recorded on any of Jack Lunn's internal documents. AM said 'Not formally; again, it would be recorded on a piece of paper, it would be in the file somewhere'.²⁸⁴²

IV.440. Jack Lunn stated in its response to the Statement that '[i]t is not disputed that...Jack Lunn participated in cover pricing during the relevant period...'.²⁸⁴³ It further stated, '...Jack Lunn do not submit that cover pricing did not infringe the Act'.²⁸⁴⁴

John Cawley

- IV.441. As part of its leniency application, John Cawley stated that it had participated in cover pricing for many years but kept no documentary evidence of covers given and received. John Cawley estimated that during the period 2000 to 2004, a 'maximum of [...] [C] covers have been given/received. This out of a total of [...] [C] prices given out'.²⁸⁴⁵
- IV.442. John Cawley could only recall [...] [C] projects in 2004 where covers had been taken but the other party to bid rigging for these tenders was not identified. No contemporaneous documents were provided to substantiate this statement.
- IV.443. Director Nicholas Greene ('NG') and his father and co-director Richard Greene ('RG') were interviewed by the OFT.

- IV.444. In interview NG said that, as a family business, tenders were prepared by himself and RG only. Once a tender was received, a decision would be made to price it or 'you'd get a cover'.²⁸⁴⁶ NG explained that cover pricing is where 'someone's priced the job themselves and they gave you something higher than theirs. You physically know you're not going to get the job...and you've submitted a reasonable tender to the client'.²⁸⁴⁷ NG added that cover pricing was something 'you dipped your toe in it now and again'.²⁸⁴⁸
- IV.445. NG explained that the exchange of cover prices would take place by telephone between estimators and that only he and his father were involved in the practice at John Cawley.²⁸⁴⁹ A tender register was retained but no record was made of covers received or given.²⁸⁵⁰ RG said in interview that he would have noted covers taken and received by scribbling the details on a piece of paper, which would soon be thrown away.²⁸⁵¹
- IV.446. RG confirmed that he had been involved in cover pricing for a long time and explained that when a tender arrived at John Cawley, the options were as follows: 'I could either send it back and upset them, or stab a price at it, or in those days you got a cover'.²⁸⁵² On occasions, he also provided cover prices to competitors.

John Cawley taking cover prices

- IV.447. In a prepared statement to the OFT, RG stated that cover prices were taken by John Cawley for various reasons, including pressure of work, a failure of sub-contractors to submit a price in time, other orders that 'filled our work capacity' and the enquiry being of 'little interest'.²⁸⁵³

IV.448. NG also confirmed that it was easy to find out who else had been invited to tender, through information gleaned from sub-contractors or through membership of the Nottingham Builder's Guild, which exchanged information about current tenders. Once a competitor had been identified, NG explained that contact would be made by telephone to an estimator "Have you got this job?" ... "I've been looking for cover". That's it. Arrange to phone again or closer to the time, and that's it'.²⁸⁵⁴

IV.449. NG confirmed that apart from entering the cover price on the tender sheet, no other record would be kept and 'then within – couple of weeks we'd chuck the documents away or something, and that was it'.²⁸⁵⁵ NG also explained that when a competitor provided a cover price 'what you want to do as well, you don't want to make it too close that you're asked to do a bill of quantities...because then you're making it more work...what you want to do, you want to come fourth'.²⁸⁵⁶

John Cawley giving cover prices

IV.450. If a competitor had contacted John Cawley for a cover price, NG explained the way a figure would be arrived at was as follows: 'say you were going in at £53,000, you'd go in at 57. You make it five, six, seven per cent more...You'd just make up a figure'.²⁸⁵⁷ Again, no records would be kept by him of covers given out. NG said that John Cawley took more covers than it gave out 'because it's not our market any more...and being a small firm we couldn't cope with a lot of these big jobs'.²⁸⁵⁸

Contemporaneous documents

IV.451. Apart from a tender register, John Cawley stated that no contemporaneous documents were kept by John Cawley. Records of covers taken and given were not retained.

Loach

- IV.453. As part of its leniency application, Loach's legal representatives, Richard Nelson Solicitors (Nelsons), provided a general explanation of its participation in cover pricing.²⁸⁶⁰ The following Loach employees present and past, expanded upon this explanation during interview: Richard Franczak ('RF'), Managing Director and part owner, Andrew Arbon-Davis ('AA'), Chief Estimator and Director, John Rowe ('JR'), Small Works Estimator, and Ken Tyler ('KT'), ex- Marketing Director and part owner until his retirement in 2003.
- IV.454. In its leniency application Loach confirmed that it participated in the giving and receiving of cover prices for tenders dealt with by both its Major Works division and its Small Works division.
- IV.455. Initially the ultimate decision to give or take cover was KT's, and more latterly AA. JR did not have the authority to give or take covers without referral to the appropriate director. When asked to confirm if his was the final decision, KT said, 'Generally, in conjunction with the estimators, and sometimes fellow directors'. When asked if that was by way of a formal meeting he said, 'Impromptu discussion as well'.²⁸⁶¹
- IV.456. AA confirmed that 'The decision to take a cover would have been...the marketing director at the time...up to 2003...After 2003 it would have been my decision as a director'.²⁸⁶²
- IV.457. In order to monitor the performance of the company, records were kept of all the contracts for which Loach tendered. AA explained that the records relating to Major Works were initially maintained by KT, but were discontinued by his successor and not reinstated until 2004/2005. The record of Small Works was maintained throughout by JR, initially under the supervision of KT and more recently by AA.
- IV.458. Loach produced a *'List of Contracts'*²⁸⁶³ in which those tenders involving cover prices were highlighted in pink and in some instances where appropriate, highlighted in blue, a reference to the contractor believed by Loach to be either giving or taking a cover. The list includes both Major and Small Works tenders.

Loach taking cover prices

- IV.459. In order to find out details of who else was competing for a tender, AA said that 'Quite often what would happen is you would get a phone call from subcontractors saying "We're pricing this job for another contractor, can we send you a copy of our quote?" And we'd say, "Yeah, okay, who are you pricing it for?" and they'd tell you who it is and that's how you'd acquire the names that were on the list...'.²⁸⁶⁴ AA added that they would also occasionally obtain names of competitors from ABI and Glennigans, and 'Builders Conference is another one. You'd get a phone call from, say, the Builders Conference, and they would say, "Have you got such and such a job in to tender?" "Yes/No" If it was a yes, "Oh we've also had it in from X, Y and Z".

So that was another way'.²⁸⁶⁵ JR also confirmed that names of competitors would generally be obtained through subcontractors.²⁸⁶⁶

IV.460. KT said 'I would phone a contractor that we knew to be on the list and ask him if he was pricing the job, and if so, could he give us a cover?'.²⁸⁶⁷ AA confirmed that contact was 'purely telephone. If we were taking a cover we would ring up one of the builders that we would have found out were on the list and would have asked them for help'.²⁸⁶⁸

IV.461. Loach stated that its record of all contracts for which it tendered 'included [details of] contracts where a cover price had been provided [by a competitor] or submitted [by Loach]'.²⁸⁶⁹ Loach explained, 'Contracts where a cover is involved sometimes have the word "cover" written against the contract details in the column headed "Note" which tends to record the outcome of the tender. It appears that where the word "cover" appears in the note column, this is an indication that the company has taken, and probably submitted, a cover price [from a competitor]. This is supported by the fact that, generally speaking, there is no budget or margin figure inserted'.²⁸⁷⁰

IV.462. The 'List of Contracts', which was made up of loose pages covering anything from a period of several months to a maximum of a year, was found to contain duplicate entries, which had been altered in certain particulars. An example of this can be seen in the two documents containing the tender for the New Assembly Hall, Seely Church Primary School – 13 June 2001.²⁸⁷¹ The first spreadsheet²⁸⁷² has an entry for the tender with no figures shown under the headings 'Margin' or '%' and with the word 'cover' under the heading 'Note'. The second spreadsheet²⁸⁷³ for the school tender contains 'margin' and '%' figures, but no entry under the heading 'Note'.

IV.463. AA was asked to explain why there were two separate tender spreadsheets containing the different information, one recording a cover price and one with no reference to cover pricing. AA explained that when, prior to the OFT's visit, he had seen the reports that JR had been compiling with the entries 'cover' and '©' recorded, personally he did not think it was the right thing to do, and he instructed JR to remove the references. He said, 'I just didn't think we should be putting "cover" on a list. And then, as obviously the sort of panic set in when we heard about raids elsewhere I asked John to remove any "Cs" that he'd put on the forms. So that's what he did ... the first instruction was to remove the covers purely because I didn't think we should be putting covers on there. The second instruction was to remove the reference to "Cs" down the side as a sort of, if you like, a panic reaction to the investigation that we heard was going on'.²⁸⁷⁴

- IV.464. JR confirmed that he was asked by AA to stop recording references to covers, 'C's etc because 'he told us you [the OFT] were due to visit us and that it would really be inappropriate if, you know, it became known that we did that practice'.²⁸⁷⁵ JR confirmed that, acting on AA's instructions, he removed any references to cover pricing and produced a selection of new tender spreadsheets.
- IV.465. AA was asked if there was any available documentation in respect of particular tenders where Loach had taken a cover and he said. 'No ... there's no reason to keep it'.²⁸⁷⁶ Loach confirmed in its leniency application that 'The obtaining or provision of a cover price did not usually result in the creation of any documentation. The essence of the scheme was to save the time otherwise spent on the creation of documentation'.²⁸⁷⁷ It continued, 'Contracts where a cover is involved sometimes have the word "cover" written against the contract details in the column headed "Note" which tends to record the outcome of the tender. It appears that where the word "cover" appears in the note column, this is an indication that the company has taken, and probably submitted, a cover price. This is supported by the fact that, generally speaking, there is no budget or margin figure inserted'.²⁸⁷⁸
- IV.466. It was further explained that 'In the column headed "Opposition", the entry of a "(c)" against the name of a competitor indicates that a cover was taken from or received by that particular company. It indicates that [Loach] believes, or discovers subsequently, that the competitor has taken a cover price. It cannot, however, be inferred [from] the fact the word "cover" appears in the note column and that a "(c)" appears against the name of a competitor that Loach took the cover from that competitor. It may well be that the source of the cover was not recorded and that, subsequently, it was discovered that a competitor had taken a cover price also'.²⁸⁷⁹

Loach giving cover prices

- IV.467. AA stated with regard to the giving of cover prices, 'if somebody phoned up to us they would usually phone up the individual estimator that was pricing it and that individual estimator would say, "Yes, okay, we'll help you out"...it was sort of, if you like, a common place occurrence, and...if you did get the call from somebody asking for assistance, which is usually the way they'd put it, then yes the individual would say "Yes, okay we'll help you out with that"'.²⁸⁸⁰
- IV.468. AA confirmed that contact was 'purely telephone...if they wanted a cover from us, they would ring us up and ask if we were pricing it and if we could help them out. So it was done by the phone'.²⁸⁸¹ As noted above in paragraph IV.466, the giving of a cover price was generally recorded in the tender register: 'In the column headed "Opposition", the entry of a "(c)" against the name of a competitor indicates that a cover was taken from or received by that

IV.469. Loach also provided to the OFT a list of companies which it believed had been involved in cover pricing activity on tenders in respect of which Loach submitted a tender.²⁸⁸³ This list included the following companies:

- [...] [C] [List of x Participant Companies]

Mansell

IV.470. As part of its leniency application, Mansell’s legal representatives advised that Mansell has 14 regional business units in England.²⁸⁸⁴ They stated that *‘The extent to which a cover price was recorded appears to have varied considerably between the regional business units’.*²⁸⁸⁵ However, there are certain common factors between all of the business units, which the OFT discusses first in this section. The OFT then discusses in more detail the practice of giving and taking of cover prices for each relevant regional business unit in separate sections below.

IV.471. Mansell’s legal representatives provided a general explanation of its part in the process of cover pricing.²⁸⁸⁶ They stated that *‘The contact with the other party would normally be effected by an estimator...although the decision to take a cover would normally be made by either the Business Unit Managing Director or the Chief Estimator’.*²⁸⁸⁷ They also stated that *‘Where it is decided to seek a cover price, the MCSL [Mansell] estimator may discover the identity of competing bidders through contact with sub-contractors or may check...sources such as the Builders Conference...to ascertain the identity of other bidders from whom a cover may be taken. If an identified competitor is already known to the estimator and would be considered likely to provide a credible cover price, then this may dictate the choice of provider’.*²⁸⁸⁸

IV.472. Many of those persons interviewed explained that the purpose of cover pricing was so that clients did not remove them from future tender lists. For example Barry Russ ('BR'), a managing estimator, stated that 'at times, rather than upset them [the client] by not putting a bid in...we on occasions would have...taken a cover, rather than send it back'.²⁸⁸⁹

IV.473. Many of those persons interviewed in respect of Mansell advised that the exchange of cover prices was carried out via the telephone and not any other medium. For example BR stated 'it was always done by phone, basically, the actual process...was always a phone call'.²⁸⁹⁰

IV.474. Mansell's legal representatives also stated that *'Typically, the simple existence of a cover received has been recorded on a database for all tenders'*²⁸⁹¹ and that 'In the databases with variation between regional offices, it is possible to ascertain a likely cover price situation from, amongst other things:

- the use of a simple "C" in the records or from a price marked next to a competitor's name; or
- from the fact that the tender price recorded does not correspond to the usual format of a quoted price; or
- the use of Code 3 (North East and North West); or
- the use of a precise tender figure (Western); or
- historically the use of Code 13 from the AS400 Database; or
- a grade "C" in the Database for the North East'

For covers given, this may be apparent from a separate Tender Record Document, which may record a "C" against the name of the company receiving the cover'.²⁸⁹²

IV.475. Mansell's legal representatives also provided to the OFT a list of all competitors whom Mansell knows or believes have provided it with cover prices²⁸⁹³, which includes:

IV.476. Mansell's legal representatives stated that 'The Executive Board members mistakenly believed that cover pricing had ceased within MCSL. At levels below (starting with Business Unit Managing Director) there appears to have been extensive awareness of the practice'.²⁸⁹⁴ In interview Robert Walker ('RW'), Group Commercial Director of Mansell and member of the Executive Board²⁸⁹⁵, stated, when asked about Mansell's involvement in cover pricing around the time of the coming into force of the Competition Act, that '...it would have been amazing if the business hadn't have been...' and he further stated in relation to cover pricing after that time that '...there are odd occasions during the process where it became obvious that there were still the odd things going through...'.²⁸⁹⁶

IV.477. As part of its leniency application, Mansell's legal representatives informed the OFT that Mansell had been involved in arrangements where the winning contractor, on a particular tender, would reimburse the unsuccessful contractor a certain sum of money. The details of these arrangements are set out in the relevant Infringement sections – see table following paragraph IV.147 above.

North East Region ('NER')

- IV.478. The NER consisted of two offices in Gateshead. In interview Omer Asir ('OA'), a managing estimator²⁸⁹⁷ in the NER, stated *'the decision would be made by Bill... [Aitchison, the Managing Director in the NER]'*²⁸⁹⁸ as to whether a tender was attractive and that Mansell would price it. When asked how he would find details of the competition OA stated 'you would have a number of named suppliers and sub contractors and you'd generally get that information from them' and *'you also used to get some information from the Builders' Conference...'*²⁸⁹⁹
- IV.479. In respect of the process of the exchange of cover prices, Mansell's legal representatives advised that *'Typically covers have been taken or given by Mr Asir. Approval for a cover price had to be obtained from Mr Aitchison...'*²⁹⁰⁰ In interview OA, when asked whether it was Bill Aitchison who had the final decision to give or take a cover price, stated *'Yes...Obviously his decision was influenced by...the pressure on the department which he would seek advice [on] from me.'*²⁹⁰¹ OA stated *'if you were told that you needed to take assistance on a project, the names were sourced through, named subcontractors, named suppliers, and then a phone call would be made and generally you would find that was fairly late on in the tender process, i.e. within...maybe's a week to a few days before the tender was due in.'*²⁹⁰²
- IV.480. As part of its leniency application, Mansell's legal representatives provided the North East tender log²⁹⁰³ and advised *'where a cover was taken by the business unit, this is shown by the letter 'c' next to the tender details in a list of all tenders kept by Omer Asir.'*²⁹⁰⁴ OA, when asked what the 'C's on the tender log indicated, stated *'they indicate covers that were taken.'*²⁹⁰⁵

Thames Valley Region ('TVR')

- IV.481. The TVR consisted of one office in Slough. In interview BR, a managing estimator in the TVR, stated that *'...it would tend to be the business unit managers and also the MD...'*²⁹⁰⁶ who decided whether a tender was attractive and that Mansell would price it. BR explained that details of the competition were available from Builders' Conference and also from the type of work, *'certain types of work tend to have certain types of contractor specialists.'*²⁹⁰⁷ BR further stated that *'in other cases, it can be through the grapevine, effectively word of mouth. "Oh, did you know that so and so is tendering for that one?". Sometimes you can find out that way.'*²⁹⁰⁸

²⁸⁹⁷ Omer Asir was a Senior Estimator in the NER from 2000 – 2006 and then became managing estimator. Interview transcript, OFT Document Reference 11509, page 2.

TVR taking cover prices

- IV.482. In respect of the process of the exchange of cover prices BR stated the decision to take a cover price was made by *'...either the MD or...the business...manager...'*²⁹⁰⁹ and was made *'...within a few days of...the tender receipt...'*²⁹¹⁰ BR explained *'it would mainly come from a call, either from myself, or if I was busy I'd get...someone else to ring up and see who they could find. And then I would speak to them and...arrange the process.'*²⁹¹¹ If a cover price was being taken BR advised that he was always aware of this.²⁹¹²
- IV.483. There would then generally be a second contact just before the deadline for tender return. BR stated *'...once you'd made an approach and...contractor X said, "yes I'll...give you a cover, I'll give you a ring at such and such a time, the day before or on the day"...'.*²⁹¹³
- IV.484. As part of its leniency application, Mansell's legal representatives provided BR's workload reports for major projects²⁹¹⁴ and special projects headed 'Tender Results Analysis'²⁹¹⁵, also referred to by Mansell as the annual workload sheets. In interview BR stated *'I tended to keep...the annual workload sheets...'*²⁹¹⁶ and that '...where we actually tendered a job, I would record in the bid column our bid...' and *'in most cases where we took a cover, I would tend to put it in the net column, so that it was written short, effectively...'*²⁹¹⁷ BR explained that *'there's a remarks column, which basically gives such information as whether a contract was awarded, whether it was lost and if, if we'd taken a cover at that point...who we'd taken the cover from...'*²⁹¹⁸ BR stated *'we used to record who we had, [taken cover from] partly for my own purpose, so I could keep a record of what, who I had got...one from and I would put that down on the results sheet...'*²⁹¹⁹
- IV.485. BR used brackets to show a cover price had been taken and stated that *'my way of parentheses was of saying that was the company that helped us out, effectively.'*²⁹²⁰ When asked when he would complete the workload reports BR stated 'probably after the...tender had gone in' and BR went on to explain *'if I knew in advance, and it was a week or two earlier that we were going to be getting some help from such and such, I may well have put their name in, just to say...this is the company that say they're going to help us.'*²⁹²¹ In terms of completing the workload reports BR explained how he would complete the columns headed 'Our Bid': *'I tended to not put it in the first bid column, because...although it effectively was a bid it was a cover bid...so I didn't tend to put it in there.'*²⁹²² When asked whether gaps in the margin and percentage

IV.486. In respect of the process of giving a cover price to a competitor BR stated '...I'd just take the name of who, who we need to contact, and their phone number...and then just write that down somewhere and ring them back nearer the time. It would probably be the day before the tender went in, but quite often it would be the morning that the bid was in at 12'.²⁹²⁴ BR, when asked when management would be made aware of the request for a cover price, advised that they might not be aware until the tender adjudication. BR stated 'during the week you might bump into them [the management] and say, oh, by the way, so and so has just rung...for a cover and they'd say oh, alright, okay, fine. But other than that...we'd just say...such and such has approached us for a, a bid and...we've agreed and...leave it at that, really'.²⁹²⁵

IV.487. In terms of arriving at a figure to give to a competitor BR stated 'it would tend to be left to myself...I'd sit with the estimators and we'd just have a quick look at the bid... It depends on the build-up of the bid...but in most cases we...would put a certain percentage on top and just make sure that they were sitting away from us'.²⁹²⁶

IV.488. BR, when asked how he would record giving a cover price to a competitor, stated ' [I] Didn't tend to put the figure down on the workload sheets...in most cases I would have just written the bid figure on the tender summary sheet, because that's effectively what I would have in front of me when they rang up'. BR continued 'Or when I rang them, to say...I think you better go in no lower than, which is what we tended to do, no lower than such and such. And then they could add on whatever they wanted to'.²⁹²⁷

Eastern Region

IV.489. The Eastern Region consisted of three offices in Nottingham, Derby and Leeds. In interview Kenneth Lockwood ('KL'), who was a Chief Estimator²⁹²⁸ in the Nottingham office, stated that the decision whether to price a tender 'was decided on the Monday morning meeting'.²⁹²⁹ KL went on to explain '...myself and the marketing...manager, we basically ran the Monday morning meeting. And...if the MD was on holiday...that would maybe be where [the] commercial manager or director above our MD would come in...'.²⁹³⁰ would find it out from sub contractors'.²⁹³² When asked if the competition was recorded anywhere else PW stated 'we'd got it on the Lotus Notes database, there's...[a] section for competition, and...if you found out that company A was pricing and just put it in the records'.²⁹³³

IV.491. In respect of the process of taking a cover price from a competitor KL stated '...I could pick the phone up...certainly in Nottingham and speak to opposite numbers there and say we're not going to process this job, we're going to go for a cover on it. I would certainly look at who I was taking a cover from because...I always wanted to be in the lowest three, because clients, if you weren't in the lowest three the next job that came out the client wouldn't invite you'.²⁹³⁴ KL explained he would decide which competitor to take a cover price from and stated '...I wouldn't expect my senior to do that either, so I would make the phone call and I would receive it. Maybe if I wasn't going to be in I would say, well, when you ring the figure through can you ask for such and such a person...we cleared it through the MD and then I would sign it as chief estimator'.²⁹³⁵ In terms of his involvement in taking cover prices PW explained '...I'm not at that level who would make the contact'²⁹³⁶ but that there may have been circumstances where the Chief Estimator would ask him to deal with it.²⁹³⁷

IV.492. When asked when in the tender period a request would be made for a cover price KL stated 'I wouldn't approach right at the beginning, I'd wait till Builder's Conference came back with the list of who was tendering...it's not something you'd just band around and say I'd like a cover price please...I thought it was something that was to be kept, obviously kept a low profile'.²⁹³⁸ He added 'I've never ever said to someone...in the open space...we're taking covers. I just find that hard to believe people do that...you could probably say well I should I have done that but I didn't ... it's something I didn't ever refer to...'.²⁹³⁹ In terms of who made the decision in the Nottingham office to take a cover price from a competitor KL stated 'it was the MDs decision...we'd decide it on a Monday morning not to go for something'.²⁹⁴⁰

IV.493. In interview KL, when asked how the taking of a cover price would be recorded, stated '...if we'd taken a cover I mean it was marked on, on my list of who were not pricing something, and that would be recorded...that job would keep...appear[ing] ...on that Monday morning list, but it would appear as a point two' and KL confirmed that point two would signify a cover.²⁹⁴¹

IV.494. In terms of the cover price provided by a competitor KL stated 'If we were given a cover figure to go in at then we, we use that figure, we didn't change it...'.²⁹⁴²

Eastern Region giving cover prices

- IV.495. In respect of Mansell's process if a competitor requested a cover price PW stated 'Then you just...put them through to the chief estimator' and 'They'd make a decision on how to deal with it'.²⁹⁴³ KL confirmed that it would be his decision as to whether to give a cover price, stating 'Yeah, again it would be reported...on the Monday morning meeting I would show how many were tendering for it so there's a column that we had which [would] show how many people are really tendering for it. I mean if we ended up with five people asking us for a cover and there were six tendering, then that would be, you know, your best of both worlds wouldn't it'.²⁹⁴⁴
- IV.496. In terms of arriving at a figure to give to a competitor PW explained that it would be the decision of the Chief Estimator, stating 'he'd be involved in the adjudication anyway, so he'd...have an understanding as to how competitive you...were being'.²⁹⁴⁵ PW explained that he might contact a competitor with the cover price, stating 'well, yes, if you'd been asked to, yes'.²⁹⁴⁶ KL stated '...I would expect to give a cover out that was realistic to the value of the job, I suppose really it depends on who it is...I'd probably put them...anywhere between, you know, three and five percent away from you, sometimes you might want to have somebody very close to you, sometimes you might want them further away because...there was a lot of scope in the document, if you'd got an idle quantity surveyor who'd done very little on it then you'd have opportunity to capitalise on the document. So you wouldn't want somebody too close to you because your price would move up a little bit in negotiation'.²⁹⁴⁷

London Region

- IV.497. The London region operated from Mansell's City Road office. Mansell's legal advisers stated that this 'is the base for 3 separate and autonomous business units: (i) Major Works... (ii) Specialised Works...and (iii) Special Projects'.²⁹⁴⁸ In interview Peter Goodbun ('PG'), who was the Estimating Manager of the City Road office²⁹⁴⁹, stated that when deciding whether to price a tender 'I work through the documentation, to make sure it fits the...criteria of work that we're looking for...Then I will talk to the...managing director...and then we will make the decision from there as to whether we proceed or not'.²⁹⁵⁰

London Region taking cover prices

- IV.498. In interview PG, when asked how he would find details of the competition, stated 'all the jobs are reported to Builders' Conference' and confirmed that Mansell would report to the Builders' Conference that it was tendering and would check to see which other contractors had reported they were tendering.²⁹⁵¹

- IV.499. In respect of the process of taking a cover price from a competitor Mansell's legal representatives stated 'The estimating team would either telephone around other contractors if they were known to be bidding for the same tender or would refer to the information held by the Builders' Conference. Choice of whom would be approached would largely depend on personal contacts or knowledge of the company in question'.²⁹⁵² PG stated 'we would ring up one of our competitors, to enquire as to whether they are pricing the job...we [would] then inform them that we were unable to [price the job] and would they give us a figure that we could go in on, which would obviously be in excess of theirs'.²⁹⁵³
- IV.500. When asked when in the tender period a request would be made for a cover price PG stated it would be 'very, very close to the submission [date]' and explained 'we would invariably be seen to be active. We'd do a site visit and probably raise a few queries, so as to give the appearance that we were active when we weren't necessarily active. And invariably ring up...probably in the last 48 hours of the tender period...or even later, to whoever we've decided to, receive that figure [from]'.²⁹⁵⁴ Mansell's legal representatives stated 'The decision to take a cover may be made at the outset...or later in the process if it is found that the contract is not as attractive as first thought or there are capacity constraints or other issues'.²⁹⁵⁵
- IV.501. In terms of who made the decision in the City Road office to take a cover price from a competitor, Mansell's legal representatives stated 'Whilst responsibility for making contact with competitors to obtain a cover price is given to the estimating team, the decision whether or not to seek a cover price would usually involve Peter Goodbun, the estimating manager, as well as the relevant managing director'.²⁹⁵⁶ In interview PG stated 'I may recommend it [that a cover price be taken] ...but the decision of whether to proceed or not proceed ultimately...relied on the bidding director'.²⁹⁵⁷
- IV.502. In interview PG, when asked if the taking of a cover price would be recorded, stated 'No'.²⁹⁵⁸ In terms of the actual cover price provided by a competitor PG stated 'I mean invariably that wasn't even recorded on the computer either'.²⁹⁵⁹

- IV.503. As part of its leniency application, Carillion's legal representatives provided summaries of the process of cover pricing, on a regional basis, in the form of statements made by current employees. Also as part of its leniency application, Carillion made available current employees and contacted ex-employees to be interviewed. During these voluntary interviews the individuals were asked to give an explanation of Mowlem's involvement in cover pricing.

- IV.504. The OFT discusses the practice of giving and taking of cover prices for each related region in separate sections below.
- IV.505. Many of those persons interviewed explained that the purpose of cover pricing was so that clients did not remove them from future tender lists. Many of those persons interviewed in respect of Mowlem also advised that the exchange of cover prices was carried out via the telephone and not by any other medium.

East Region – Gateshead office

- IV.506. The East Region consisted of three offices in Nottingham, Leeds and Gateshead. In interview, Ian Parsons ('IP'), a senior estimator at Carillion in the Gateshead office, when asked whose decision it would be as to whether the Gateshead office priced a tender, stated 'the final say would come down to, Martin [Nunn], the...[divisional] director'.²⁹⁶¹ When asked how he would find details of the competition IP stated 'a lot of the times the subcontractors let us know...who's on the list'.²⁹⁶² In terms of recording the information in respect of competition IP stated *'if we find out who's tendering, we'll put the competition names in there [the tender register]'*²⁹⁶³ and when asked if the competition was recorded anywhere else IP stated 'Yeah, the front sheet of the...prelim book. It's actually the second sheet, the front sheet states the tender details. We would fill that in day one when it comes through the door...The second form is a tender settlement form which we take in at the end of the tender process...and we have a column in, in the left hand side of that form which says 'Competition'...And if we if we find out, we list them, if we don't, we don't bother'.²⁹⁶⁴
- IV.507. When asked about the reasons for cover pricing IP stated 'the reasons for cover pricing is time, if...you're running out of time and you just physically can't get a tender in...and you don't want to upset the client'.²⁹⁶⁵ As part of its leniency application, Emmanuel Marion Nunn²⁹⁶⁶, Divisional Director for the East Region, stated 'There would frequently be occasions when a supplier [contractor] would know it would not be in a position to execute a contract if it won the tender because of other commitments. Alternatively, its estimating team might simply not have time to prepare the tender because of other work. The supplier would be conscious...that not putting in a tender might alienate a regular customer and lead to the supplier being dropped off future tender lists. It was as a result of these factors that suppliers regularly asked for a so-called "cover price"'.²⁹⁶⁷
- IV.508. In respect of the process of giving a cover price to a competitor IP stated 'you would receive a telephone call from a...company that possibly wanted a cover and they would ask to speak to the estimator dealing with the tender...more often enough we'd check with the...senior managing estimator or whoever just to make sure things were okay and...you would arrange to ring him [the other contractor] back when you had a price'.²⁹⁶⁸ When asked when in the tender period a request would be made for a cover price IP stated '...it tended to be...towards the end. I mean, some people left it until the night before'.²⁹⁶⁹ In terms of who made the decision in the Gateshead office to give a cover price to a competitor IP stated 'I would check everything with Alan [Morton]²⁹⁷⁰ to make sure because he's the manager of the department'.²⁹⁷¹

IV.509. When asked how a cover price, to give to a competitor, would be calculated IP stated 'we'll just add a percentage on...we wouldn't round it up...we'd just probably add 5% and take a few, you know, hundredths of a percent off...'.²⁹⁷²

IV.510. When asked how the giving of a cover price would be recorded, IP stated '...we would just put a little 'C' against the person that was [taking a cover price]...so we would have the list of the competition, if we had the list, we would just put a 'C' on that form...'.²⁹⁷³ The form IP was referring to is the second page of a document provided as part of Carillion's leniency application, headed 'Tender details and summary'.²⁹⁷⁴

East Region – Nottingham office

IV.511. In interview, Karl Chatburn ('KC'), an Estimating Manager²⁹⁷⁵ at Mowlem in the Nottingham office, when asked whose decision it would be as to whether the Nottingham office priced a tender, stated 'It would be a decision, really, between all these senior managers, so, it would be myself, the commercial manager, probably a contracts manager, and the divisional director'.²⁹⁷⁶ When asked how he would find details of the competition KC stated 'Basically that's through, when you send out sub contract enquiries, material enquiries. A lot of the...main contractors will go to...the same sub contractors, and you get relationships with these sub contractors, and you...can just talk to them'.²⁹⁷⁷ When asked if the information in respect of competition was recorded, KC stated '...I would probably record that in my sort of notes book that you'd...keep'.²⁹⁷⁸

IV.512. In respect of the process of the exchange of cover prices KC stated the decision to take a cover price was made by 'The regional director ... They ... would come to me and basically say...I don't want to take this tender any further'.²⁹⁷⁹ When asked about the process of taking a cover price, KC stated 'You...would basically phone up the company that you would think to be the most, who would be the most competitive, if you wanted to come close. Speak to their estimating department, and ask...them for help'. In terms of the timing of a request for a cover price, KC stated 'it all depends when you take the decision to take a cover...if you take it right at the start of the tender period...then you might...make it earlier on in the...tender process. But there might be circumstances where you...do originally intend to price the job, and then get towards the end of the tender period, and...there's a realisation within the senior management that actually we don't need that job, so it...might be a late decision'.²⁹⁸⁰ KC explained that there was not a standard way of recording when a cover price had been taken.²⁹⁸¹

South East Region – West Malling office

IV.513. In interview, Trevor Puttick ('TP'), a Chief Estimator²⁹⁸² at Mowlem in the West Malling office, when asked whose decision it would be as to whether the West Malling office priced a tender, stated *'every week there was a meeting called...the contracts managers meeting, and [at] that we would go through the tender list, and, myself, the director and sometimes the contracts manager would decide which jobs would be the ones we would sooner go for'.²⁹⁸³ When asked how he would find details of the competition TP stated *'...there's organisations, the Builder's Conference for example, were constantly on the phone to you saying oh, are you in for such and such a job?...We were a member of the Builder's Conference as Mowlem's...I would regularly get through in the post lists of jobs with the contractors on them and then the chief estimator's name and contact numbers'.²⁹⁸⁴ In interview, Stephen Diamond ('SD'), a senior estimator²⁹⁸⁵ at Mowlem in the West Malling office, stated *'...the simplest way was the client used to tell you who you are up against...then when you were doing the price, you'd find out from, people that you were going to for prices, maybe named suppliers or subcontractors, would just tell you who else they're...quoting'.²⁹⁸⁶ When asked if the information in respect of competition was recorded, TP stated '...when we did the tender review pack...it had a little slot there competition if known, I think it said. So you would write it down when you did your tender review pack'.²⁹⁸⁷

IV.514. When asked about the process of giving a cover price, SD stated *'...the day before it goes in, you get a call its one of your competitors...[and] for a variety of reasons from estimators gone sick to they can't finish the job for whatever reason...They want...you to help them out, and generally you say yeah, okay, and then you just, gave them a figure that was a bit more than your figure'.²⁹⁸⁸ TP explained that he would usually receive such calls and stated *'Sometimes it went to the director, sometimes it would have gone to Steve or somebody else, but as my name was the contact on the Builder's Conference, largely it came to me'.²⁹⁸⁹ When asked when in the tender period a request would be made for a cover price, SD stated *'...they would ring you up the day before it's due in. It would be very late in the process'.²⁹⁹⁰ In terms of who made the decision in the West Malling office to give a cover price to a competitor, TP stated 'I principle

IV.515. When asked how a cover price to give to a competitor would be calculated, TP stated 'we'd have the tender review meeting of our own, tender sum, and then at the end of that there would be a discussion around the table with the relevant director...the estimator, myself and...the contracts manager, if he was there, of what level of a figure to give, and that was often noted on the tender review form as well'.²⁹⁹² SD stated 'when we had our firm price, then we'd ring them and say, I'd add a bit on and then say if you went over this price, you'd be, it would be okay, it would be enough, [you] wouldn't be in the frame for the job'.²⁹⁹³ When asked whether the giving of a cover price would be recorded, SD stated 'I wouldn't, no'.²⁹⁹⁴

IV.516. In its response to the Statement, Carillion stated that 'Mowlem does not contest that certain employees (and/or former employees) participated in each of the three Relevant ... Infringements nor does it contest its liability under the Chapter 1 prohibition...'.²⁹⁹⁵

P Waller

IV.517. As part of its leniency application, P Waller provided a general explanation of its participation in cover pricing.²⁹⁹⁶ Two of the directors of P Waller expanded upon this explanation during interview: Philip Waller ('PW'), Managing Director, and Hilary Jane Waller ('JW'), Director and Company Secretary. P Waller specialised in general contracting for commercially based clients, health authorities, local authorities, universities and architects, and has completed projects to the value of [...]C], whilst being capable of taking contracts up to [...]C]. P Waller was rarely involved in domestic work.

IV.518. In its leniency application P Waller confirmed that it participated in both the giving and taking of cover prices: 'We have no defence that we were involved in giving and accepting cover prices on some tenders. This never advanced beyond giving/accepting assistance on projects that were not required for various reasons, or because deadlines could not be achieved'.²⁹⁹⁷ PW said that as Managing Director it was his ultimate responsibility to decide if P Waller wanted to win the work or not, unless there were any unusual circumstances when the decision would be discussed. 'Mostly it's myself, but yes if there are doubtful areas then the surveyors and the contracts manager are brought into the discussion'.²⁹⁹⁸ PW added that he made the decision on whether to give or take a cover price.²⁹⁹⁹

IV.519. P Waller provided with its leniency application lists of tenders in which it had been actively involved in cover pricing.³⁰⁰⁰ This information was based upon the recollections of PW and JW. P Waller subsequently produced an additional list of tenders in which it had taken cover prices.³⁰⁰¹

IV.520. PW confirmed that he carried out all the estimating duties for P Waller, but if the decision was that P Waller did not want or could not accommodate a tender then a cover would be sought. The tracing of other contractors on the tender list would be dealt with by JW. 'Yes, if I've decided that we're going to take a cover I would leave the admin of it to Jane'.³⁰⁰² JW confirmed that 'He [PW] would ask me to get a cover, yes'.³⁰⁰³ PW said that they would ask 'various merchants' who else was quoting.³⁰⁰⁴

IV.521. JW would make telephone contact with companies likely to be on the tender list until she discovered a company which confirmed that it was submitting a tender price and which was willing to give P Waller a cover. PW said 'she would ring them up, get the contact for the price'.³⁰⁰⁵

IV.522. There are few documentary records kept of those tenders involving the receipt of a cover or of those tenders P Waller genuinely priced, but lost. PW said that 'if we took a cover we had no interest in the contract it would be kept for a month maybe, but then we would literally destroy the documents'.³⁰⁰⁶ The OFT is therefore reliant upon the contents of desk diaries maintained by PW and JW and a small number of *'Tender Book Note Sheets'*³⁰⁰⁷ kept by JW.

IV.523. JW's diaries contain regular references in note form to the fact that P Waller was seeking a cover for a specific tender. The entry would refer to the name of the tender, the company supplying the cover, and in some cases a contact name and telephone number e.g. 'Ring Jeff at Hill Bros re cover for Robert Mellor School 10 am [...] [C]'.³⁰⁰⁸ The entry was shown either on the day the tender was due to be submitted or the day preceding it.

IV.524. JW confirmed that it was her habit to place a tick alongside any entry in her diaries when the appropriate action had been taken or it had been completed/accomplished.³⁰⁰⁹

IV.525. The *'Tender Book Note Sheets'*³⁰¹⁰ were used by JW when securing a cover price. They consist of loose A4 sheets of paper ruled into columns with the names of contractors and telephone numbers listed down the left hand side of the page. The rest of the page is divided into five columns each headed with a tender name. As each contractor was contacted by JW, a cross would be

In addition to the list of covers received referred to in paragraph IV.519 above, P Waller provided a list of covers that it had provided to other contractors³⁰¹¹, naming the tender, tender date, contact and company and an indication as to whether P Waller won or lost the tender. This list included the following companies:

Phoenix

IV.527. As part of its leniency application, Phoenix provided a general explanation of its participation in cover pricing.³⁰¹² The following Phoenix employees expanded upon this explanation during interview: Michael Williamson ('MW'), Managing Director of Phoenix, and Matthew Pickering ('MP'), senior estimator since January 2005. Roger Grace ('RG') was the previous senior estimator up to January 2005 and for another year or so worked on a part time basis at Phoenix. Due to ill health RG was unable to attend an interview. However, MW had close involvement in the tendering process at Phoenix, and was able to explain the process and the significance of the contemporaneous documentary evidence.

IV.528. In its leniency application Phoenix provided a list of cover pricing activity.³⁰¹³ MW said that, 'we got that information just by going through all the tenders and if there was anything written on any of the tenders we got it off that'.³⁰¹⁴ The list only covered the period May 2004 to August 2005 as Phoenix explained that it did not keep tender paperwork longer than about two years.

IV.529. Phoenix stated in its response to the Statement that '...Phoenix has accepted that it engaged in cover pricing in breach of the Chapter 1 prohibition'.³⁰¹⁵

Cover pricing – general

IV.530. In its leniency application Phoenix confirmed that it participated in both the providing and receiving of cover prices, mainly for the reason of wanting to be retained on client lists.³⁰¹⁶ MW explained that on receipt of a tender the estimator would formulate the estimate which would be discussed at a tender adjudication meeting shortly before the tender was submitted. MW explained that, 'at the end of the day the margins were sort of agreed by me you know I would have the final say'.³⁰¹⁷

IV.531. MW explained that the only contact with a competitor close to the tender deadline would be for the purposes of cover pricing. MW confirmed that two contacts would take place with a competitor in respect of providing and taking a cover price. One, when the competitor or Phoenix asked for help and then, secondly, on the day of the tender submission or the day before the tender submission, there would be a further contact to either give or obtain the cover price. MW explained that, 'they would ring us ...right towards the 11th hour and give us a price'.³⁰¹⁸ MW also confirmed that it would generally be the estimators who would make such contact and that the contact would be by telephone.

Phoenix taking cover prices

IV.532. MW said if Phoenix had decided to take a cover that in order to find out where to obtain a cover price, 'We would probably try and ring one of the suppliers who was named to see if they'd had enquiries from anybody else...'.³⁰¹⁹

IV.533. MP confirmed if he wanted a cover price, 'you would probably try and ring up a few days before the tender date just to make sure that they can give you a cover price...if they'd say, yes they can help you, you would wait for a phone call, probably ring them a day before the tender's due back'.³⁰²⁰

Phoenix giving cover prices

IV.534. For providing a cover MP said, 'they're ringing me up a few days before the tender's due in and they'll see if I'm prepared to give them a cover price and then either I'll ring them with the information or they'll ring me last minute'.³⁰²¹

IV.535. MW explained that when Phoenix was giving a cover price he would work out the value of the cover price by adding, 'a small percentage, you just put a figure, what you feel is comfortable...'. MW agreed that it would be worked out on a job by job basis.³⁰²²

IV.536. Phoenix explained that where there had been contact with other companies in respect of cover pricing these contacts would be handwritten on the relevant tender documentation. Documents provided with the leniency application gave examples of such annotations. For receiving a cover, annotations would indicate the name, phone number and company of the person who was providing the cover together with the cover price.³⁰²³ For providing a cover handwritten annotations again would give the name, company and telephone number of who was receiving the cover price.³⁰²⁴ In addition where MW had priced a job, a

Propensity

IV.537. The Propensity leniency application was made on behalf of its subsidiaries Totty, Totty Building, Jackson which until December 2005 was the parent company of Jackson BS, and Dean & Bowes

IV.538. The following individuals from Propensity were interviewed:

Totty

Jonathan Kirby ('JK') Commercial Director;
Martin Miller ('MM'), Bid Manager, Commercial Division;
John Gittins ('JG'), Managing Director Public Division; and Steve Rhodes ('SR'), Bid Manager Public Division.

Totty Building

Philip Ryder ('PR'), Managing Director; and Alan Loveday ('AL'), Commercial Manager.

Jackson

Bernard Clarke ('BC'), Managing Director;
John Rhodes ('JR'), Pre Contracts Manager;
Stuart Talbot ('ST'), Pre Contracts Manager;
Colin Jackson ('CJ'), Senior Estimator;
Philip Cooper ('PC'), Senior Estimator; and John Harvey ('JH'), Senior Estimator.

IV.539. Propensity confirmed in its leniency application that it had taken a decision at a Board of Directors' meeting held on 25 April 2006, not to continue to partake in cover pricing.³⁰²⁶ Furthermore it stated that a compliance policy was being drafted and that all appropriate staff had been advised that it was contrary to company policy to either give or take cover prices.

IV.540. In its response to the Statement, Propensity confirmed that it accepted '...liability for giving or receiving cover prices in relation to all [its Infringements outlined in the Statement]'.³⁰²⁷

Totty

IV.541. Totty underwent a structural reorganisation in April 2005. Prior to the reorganisation tenders for both the public and private sector would be processed within the one Estimating section for Totty. After the reorganisation Totty was split into two Estimating sections, one which dealt with the contracts for the public sector and the other which dealt with the private sector or commercial sector. The tenders subject of this investigation occurred both before and after the reorganisation. The organisational set up at the time of each tender is explained in paragraphs II.1051 to II.1095 of the Parties section above.

³⁰²⁵ Tender return, OFT Document Reference 4134.

³⁰²⁷ Written representations of Propensity, 27 June 2008, paragraph 1.4.

IV.542. The reorganisation within Totty made no change in terms of the internal documents that were created when pricing up a tender.³⁰²⁸ On receipt of a tender, a tender appraisal form was completed which recorded details such as the return date, client name and description of works. The main contemporaneous document completed within Totty during the tender process was the Tender Final Summary sheet. MM explained that if a tender was the subject of cover pricing, this would be written on the Tender Final Summary sheet.³⁰²⁹ JK explained that the Tender Final Summary sheet was completed by the relevant estimator and brought to the tender settlement meeting. The tender settlement meeting took place prior to the submission of the tender and any information added to this form in relation to cover pricing would be added before the tender deadline.³⁰³⁰

IV.543. The staff involved in the preparation of a tender submission would have been a Bid Manager, who was responsible for a team which included the estimator working on that tender. The Bid Manager system had been in place since approximately 2003 and prior to this there was a more traditional estimator led role of preparing the tender.

IV.544. Knowledge within Totty of cover pricing was widespread. SR confirmed 'any estimator who processed the job really and obviously, everybody above him, director wise, would be aware of it at some stage up until the bid day...from board level down'.³⁰³¹ JK also confirmed that, 'then logically the divisional MD [Managing Director], well, probably everybody who attended a tender settlement [meeting]...you've got your divisional MD, commercial director, construction director, estimator, planner, design and build. And probably the senior the QS [Quantity Surveyor], who's going to be looking after the job. So in terms of who has knowledge of cover pricing was going on I would say it wasn't a secret, if you like. You didn't advertise it, you didn't need to. But it wasn't sort of kept under cover or under wraps, so pretty well everybody'.³⁰³²

IV.545. JK explained how Totty would find who the competition was on a job, 'There were two routes, one quite often, you know, during the tender process subcontractors would just actually tell you...And then there was also an outfit who actually found out. I don't know what they did but you could ring this [Glennigans] outfit and they told you who was on the tender lists'.³⁰³³ In addition SR said that, 'occasionally when you go to an interview to go on a tender list, you'll see other bidders there...After that it's when you start talking to any of the key subcontractors...So when you're, when you're chasing your quotations or even when you're having a dialogue about whether they'd like to price the job... it's a general question "Who else have you had enquiries from?'".³⁰³⁴

IV.546. SR said that when seeking a cover, 'you'd make the first phone call to make sure somebody would help you out...And then...the day before you'd ring them or they'd ring you with that price they wanted you to put on your form of tender'.³⁰³⁵

Totty giving cover prices

IV.547. For providing a cover SR explained that there was *'a phone call halfway through the process, can you help us out. Typically I'd say yes without asking anybody...And then obviously we'd ring somebody up and dictate to them what figure they should put...'*³⁰³⁶

IV.548. JK explained if Totty had been asked to provide a cover that, 'There would be three of us that would discuss it. There would be the estimator because he's got to give it. There would be myself because I'm the sort of line manager and there would be our divisional managing director. So the three of us would agree at sort of, we'd sort of – you've obviously got to have certainty of what your price is because you haven't got your price together and you go and give a price you then find out that the cover you've given is less than yours, well you just drop somebody else in it. So the decision was sort of collective in a way but we'd say, yes, make it about...so it must have been a joint decision'.³⁰³⁷

IV.549. JK further explained how the cover figure was calculated, 'it was arrived at literally by leaving it as late as you could because you'd got to get your own price and then you'd add 10% or something onto it. You didn't tell them what your price was but if you knew your price was £5 million you'd say, well, tell them to go in at somewhere around £5.5 million'.³⁰³⁸ MM said that the figure, 'It tended to be somewhere between 5 and 7½% higher than our figure'.³⁰³⁹

IV.550. Totty Building generally dealt with smaller tenders up to a value of [.....][C] while the holding company, Totty, dealt with tenders starting from [.....][C] upwards.

IV.551. Totty Building, independently of the rest of Propensity, stopped cover pricing in November 2005. AL said that, 'we have done for the last 18 months, and we'd already instigated this before the OFT visited us' and 'It was made on my recommendation to Phillip Ryder and his co-director Gareth More, to say, look, it's wrong that we suck in more enquiries that we can actually price. In the longer term if we don't bid competitively we'll ultimately start to receive less enquiries because, you know, you're seen to be not as successful, not as competitive as you would be if you were able to reduce the number of enquiries that's coming in but give them 100% attention. And they supported me in that'.³⁰⁴⁰ This was confirmed by PR who said that, '...I don't think this is really in the best interests of the client, the industry, ourselves...not only that, it's actually illegal'.³⁰⁴¹

IV.552. On receipt of a tender, as explained in respect of Totty, a tender appraisal form was completed which recorded details such as the return date, client name and description of works. Also as with Totty, the main contemporaneous document completed during the tender process was the Tender Final Summary Sheet. As an example, in respect of one particular tender³⁰⁴², AL confirmed that he as the estimator would enter 'C's against competitors in the Competition section of the Tender Final Summary Sheet.³⁰⁴³

Totty Building taking cover prices

IV.553. Both AL and PR confirmed the actual exchange of cover prices took place at estimator level and that this would be with the knowledge of PR, 'he'd [AL] come to me and say "I'm not going to be able to submit a bid. I think in this instance I'm going to ask...obtain a cover"'.³⁰⁴⁴ AL explained how Totty Building would find who the competition was, 'You get it from the supply chain, sub-contractors, named suppliers in the tender documents. There's an organisation called Builder's Conference that we get the information from'.³⁰⁴⁵

Totty Building giving cover prices

IV.554. AL explained how the exchange of cover prices took place, 'by personal contact on telephone between one estimator and another. Just to say look, are you pricing this job? Yes, we are. Well, we can't finish our tender, can you help us?'.³⁰⁴⁶ AL further explained how the cover figure was calculated, 'Generally I would say somewhere between 0% and 5%, but generally round about 5% above ours'.³⁰⁴⁷

Jackson

IV.555. In December 2005 Jackson underwent a reorganisation and estimating was split into two companies. However, all the Infringements relating to Jackson pre-date this reorganisation, and the process discussed below relates only to the period prior to December 2005.

IV.556. JR explained that he managed a team of estimators and when an estimator was allocated a tender, JR would write the estimator's initials in the tender register. JR confirmed that it would normally be himself, rather than the relevant estimator assigned to a tender, who would make the telephone call to a competitor to either take or provide a cover.

IV.557. In addition, on receipt of a tender, a tender summary sheet was prepared. The basic details of the job, i.e. value, submission date etc, would be completed on the sheet by JR and the job allocated to an estimator.

IV.558. JR confirmed that most of the senior staff and estimators at Jackson were aware of cover pricing. BC confirmed that he was aware that JR was engaged in giving and taking covers and recording the information in the tender book.³⁰⁴⁸

Jackson taking cover prices

IV.559. The main contemporaneous document completed within Jackson, provided under leniency, was a handwritten tender book maintained by JR, the pre contracts manager for Jackson until he left the company on 13 April 2006. The tender book covers all of Jackson's business until December 2005 prior to the reorganisation. The tender book records details of where a cover price was taken.³⁰⁴⁹

IV.560. JR explained how he recorded details in his tender book. 'As I say probably shortly after the bids were returned. It may have been the next day, it may have been the next week or it may have been when I had to fill in one of these other [board] reports'³⁰⁵⁰ and 'I'd complete the...initial details, for example, the estimate number...the date the tender was received, that information had been recorded early on in the tender process but the details of the actual price that was submitted...if it was a cover, who it was received from, that would have been...written in at some point after the bid was actually submitted'.³⁰⁵¹

IV.561. JR explained the annotations in relation to cover pricing made in the tender book, 'the cover price would probably have been written in...when I produced a report. I'd produce reports for the board either weekly or monthly or whenever and when I was bringing the information up to date that was probably the most likely time I would have recorded the information'.³⁰⁵²

IV.562. JR explained how Jackson would find out who the competition was: 'there's a practice known as the Builders Conference and, we would talk to them on a regular basis about projects that come in and they would circulate details and a few weeks later some details about who else was on the tender list would come back' and 'If we were particularly keen to know the only other way would be to ring other contractors and ask them if there was, they were tendering for that particular project'.³⁰⁵³

IV.563. JR confirmed that the communication of the cover price was by telephone, 'I would make contact with them and speak to someone in authority, ask them if they would provide a price on a particular project involved...they may respond immediately or they may come back to me and then the next contact would be when the price was given'.³⁰⁵⁴

Jackson giving cover prices

IV.564. Where Jackson gave a cover price, this was not recorded in the tender book maintained by JR.³⁰⁵⁵

IV.565. In respect of Jackson providing a cover JR confirmed that 'If, another company had asked Jackson's for a price, that would have been discussed at, *adjudication and that information would have been known to the director sitting in on the adjudication meeting’.*³⁰⁵⁶

IV.566. JR further explained how the cover figure was calculated, *‘it would normally [be] about 5% above the price that we were putting in ourselves unless, directed to the contrary’.*³⁰⁵⁷

Simons/Wrights

IV.567. As part of its leniency application, Simons’ legal representatives stated that *‘...the evidence of infringement of Chapter I of the Competition Act has been uncovered in relation to the minor building works part of the construction business, in Wrights and in the local offices of SCL [Simons]’*³⁰⁵⁸ However, they stated *‘the business culture of Wrights, which was acquired by SCL in 1998, differed from that of the Group as a whole’.*³⁰⁵⁹ The OFT discusses in more detail the practice of giving and taking of cover prices for both Wrights and local offices of Simons in separate sections below.

IV.568. The legal representatives provided a general overview of Wrights’ part in the process of cover pricing. They stated that *‘Wrights was engaged over a sustained period (beginning prior to the entry into force on 1 March 2000 of the Chapter I prohibition and continuing until, we believe, around April 2003, when the estimating director Arthur Fox left the business) in the seeking and giving of cover prices on various contracts’.*³⁰⁶⁰ They also stated, *‘So far as Simons Group has been able to ascertain, this practice was not actively encouraged by those responsible for the operational management of Wrights. Nonetheless, it is clear that it went on in the knowledge of senior personnel, including Colin Sargeant [‘CS’] who was, for a time, Managing Director of Wrights’.*³⁰⁶¹

IV.569. In relation to minor building works at Simons, the legal representatives stated, *‘The practice of seeking and giving cover prices also went on in relation to minor building works within a number of the Local Works operations. In particular, it appears that such activity was being undertaken in Lincoln, Nottingham and York. It seems likely that this activity also continued until around mid-2003’.*³⁰⁶² They continued, *‘This practice appears to have been condoned (in the period up to March 2000 at least) by those responsible for operational management of Local Works, including Roger Hall who was then Director of the Local Works operations’.*³⁰⁶³

IV.570. The legal representatives stated, ‘The practice of cover pricing appears historically to have been prevalent within the industry and, according to Roger Hall, helping out a competitor by providing a cover price where that competitor did not have a desire (or the capacity) to undertake a project seems to have been accepted commercial custom and practice, at least for certain types of work and client'.³⁰⁶⁴

IV.571. They further explained, 'Putting in tenders based on a cover price, on projects which a contractor did not wish to win, enabled a rapport to be maintained with the client, whereas "returning" tenders (i.e. sending them back to the clients without pricing them) ran the risk that the company would be dropped from the list of contractors invited to bid in future'.³⁰⁶⁵

IV.572. Simons has not generally provided contemporaneous documentary evidence of covers having been sought. The legal representatives stated, 'This is due principally to the fact that, under the tendering procedures policy within SCL's quality manual, tenders which have been submitted but where SCL has not succeeded in winning the contract are to be kept for a period of 12 months only, and then destroyed. Where covers were taken then the tender would have been lost in the normal course of events and, therefore, the file destroyed in line with the document retention policy'.³⁰⁶⁶

Wrights

IV.573. In respect of the process of cover pricing at Wrights, the legal representatives stated, '...whilst Arthur Fox was Estimating Director...[employed by Wrights from 1996 to April 2003] the practice of taking cover prices was prevalent, allowing Fox to manage the number of tenders that were being processed'.³⁰⁶⁷ In addition they stated 'The firms from whom covers would typically be sought or to whom they would have been given include Lindums Construction Company Limited...and RG Carters Limited'.³⁰⁶⁸

IV.574. During a voluntary interview on 26 April 2007, Arthur Fox ('AF') described the tender process at Wrights. AF explained that tenders arriving at the office, '...used to go to the managing director, in the first place, who would then probably bring them into me...and we would have a tender meeting at least once a week. Normally on a Monday morning...so we would decide which jobs we were pricing and which jobs we were not pricing'³⁰⁶⁹, based on '...the type of job, the value of the job, bearing in mind our current workload, future workload...there was...lots of variables in there'.³⁰⁷⁰ AF confirmed to the legal representatives, 'that taking covers was normal to allow him to manage the very high numbers of tenders that were being processed. All estimators within local competitor firms were well known to each other and a contractor would normally expect to receive assistance from a competitor if it was asked for'.³⁰⁷¹

IV.575. On receipt of a tender AF would enter the contract details on a 'management estimating report'. AF explained that the purpose of these reports was 'just a report to the rest of the board on, on what was going on in the...estimating department. Enquiries received in the period, not only on major contracts, but smaller work stuff as well'.³⁰⁷² AF explained that the contracts would be categorised into levels of interest.³⁰⁷³ AF stated category '...one would certainly be...tenders which were of our particular interest'.³⁰⁷⁴ CS stated category two was used for jobs that Wrights was 'kind of interested in'.³⁰⁷⁵ Finally Category 3 or 'others' was used when the tender was to be returned to the client, a square foot price submitted or a cover price taken.³⁰⁷⁶

IV.576. CS confirmed that originally Category 3 contracts were referred to as covers, '...I can remember challenging Andy Rowe, that, you know, covers wasn't a word that we wanted to see written on a piece of paper'.³⁰⁷⁷ He also stated 'you've seen the documentation where the piece of paper said covers on it...we did get to the stage where I said, we just can't have that on a piece of paper...we can't openly record the fact that the way we're going to deal with these tenders we don't want...is to get involved in this practice. Now, that certainly is a conversation I recall having with Arthur...you can't record something, in that way'. CS was asked whether it was a case of not recording cover prices, or of changing company practice. CS sighed and replied, 'Well I can't...it, it's more not recording it than changing practice'.³⁰⁷⁸

IV.577. AF explained that he would not actively try and find out who his competitors were on a particular contract, '...we'd just find out as a matter of course. Suppliers will tell us, or subcontractors will...That's just part of a normal conversation with subcontractors and suppliers, and it, it happens all the time'.³⁰⁷⁹ AF continued, '...and we'd also get it from marketing companies...like the ABI...''.³⁰⁸⁰

IV.578. During interview, CS explained that once a decision had been taken not to price a tender 'Arthur would get on to the phones to arrange some kind of cover activity'.³⁰⁸¹

IV.579. Brian Ockert ('BO'), Technical Support Manager for SCL and previously an estimator at Wrights, confirmed that 'Wright's were involved in giving cover prices as well as seeking them. He recalls he received occasional calls from competitors requesting "help" with a price. He understood help in this context to mean a cover price. He would usually speak to Arthur Fox who would then contact the competitor, although on a couple of occasions he contacted the competitor himself with a price that had already been calculated by Fox'.³⁰⁸²

IV.580. AF confirmed that if he had been approached by a competitor for a cover price he would bring it to the attention of either CS, Managing Director from September 1998 to April 2002, or Andy Rowe ('AR'), Managing Director from April 2002 to April 2003, at the tender adjudication meeting.³⁰⁸³ AF confirmed that the giving of a cover price to a competitor could have been carried out by AF, CS or AR, 'I suppose any of us might have done that, you know, it depends who was available'.³⁰⁸⁴

Simons – Minor Building Works

IV.581. In respect of the process of cover pricing at Simons, the legal representatives stated, *'The Local Works operations were under the responsibility of Roger Hall who was on the board of SCL at that time. Hall has admitted that he knew cover pricing was going on in Wrights and in the Local Works operations of SCL in Lincoln, Nottingham and York and that on occasions he would instruct estimators to take covers...'*³⁰⁸⁵ Roger Hall ('RH') started working for Simon's in 1968 as a surveyor and eventually worked his way through the business to become Chief Operating Officer in 2005.

IV.582. During an interview on 15 March 2007 RH was asked if he was involved in the decision to price a tender. RH replied *'...certainly in the Lincoln patch I would have quite an influence...'*³⁰⁸⁶ RH confirmed that in relation to the other Simons offices the decision to tender for a contract would be made locally, however, 'The bigger it got the more likely it was to get to me or to the division surveyor'.³⁰⁸⁷

Lincoln

IV.583. In respect of the process of the exchange of cover prices in Lincoln, 'Roger Hall recalled using Bill Dickinson as a sub-contracted estimator between 2000-2001 when the Lincoln and Boston offices were too busy'.³⁰⁸⁸ The legal representatives stated 'Around once or twice a year, Hall recalls that he would receive a call from Bill Dickinson saying that he was too busy to price the tenders. Hall recalls that he would try to persuade him to do the work or if all else failed to "get some help". By this he meant that he should take a cover price'.³⁰⁸⁹

IV.584. The legal representatives stated, 'Hall's evidence has been confirmed by a number of other employees at the Lincoln office at that time'.³⁰⁹⁰ In addition they stated, '...within Lincoln, other key competitors from whom covers would have been sought/to whom covers would have been given include...Lindums...'.³⁰⁹¹

IV.585. Barry Molsom ('BM'), Contract Manager, recalled that '...calls were received from competitors requesting cover prices in relation to tenders for minor building works which the Local Works operations had properly priced, and covers were given. Molsom explained that, although he may have taken calls, he did not provide prices himself but would seek guidance from the Divisional Directors and Surveyor. He would contact Roger Hall or Steve Foster. Not all calls from competitors came through to him as most would ask to speak to an

Estimator rather than a Contract Manager'.³⁰⁹² BM stated that he had 'no recollection of ringing competitors to request a cover price but believes that Bill Dickinson may have been given instructions to do so by the management who at the time would have been Roger Hall and Steve Foster where he was too busy to properly price the work'.³⁰⁹³

Nottingham

IV.586. In respect of the tender preparation process in the Nottingham office, Martin Ledingham ('ML'), an estimator for Simons from 1999 until June 2003, explained that the decision as to whether to tender for a contract was made by, 'usually a joint decision between manager and myself'.³⁰⁹⁴ ML confirmed that if a decision was made not to tender for a contract the tender would either be sent back or Simons would take a cover price.³⁰⁹⁵

IV.587. The legal representatives stated 'There were essentially three ways of identifying the contractors to contact for a cover price: Discussion with sub-contractors; speaking to John Woolley [sic], who was involved in the Builders Guild; and through information received from the Builders Conference'.³⁰⁹⁶

IV.588. They also stated 'Ledingham identified a number of companies and individuals to whom he would turn for cover prices and explained the process he would go through. The same companies asked for covers from SCL. These were as follow: Mike Robbins of Frudd Construction (Nottingham); Tom Scothen [sic] of Woodsends (Nottingham); Richard Bodill of Bodill's (Nottingham); Tomlinsons (Derby); Fish Construction (Nottingham). Ledingham explained that he would ask for a specific person or the estimator and the person at the other company would simply provide a figure. This figure would already have been inflated by the company providing it (i.e. it was the figure that SCL could include in a tender as a cover price)'.³⁰⁹⁷

IV.589. ML explained how the exchange of covers worked in practice: 'You'd phone a particular company up and say, you know, we don't want to price this job can you give us some help?'.³⁰⁹⁸ ML explained that he would know who to contact, 'via the list of names you'd get from John Woolly [sic]. Or from subcontractors or whoever...If you got a job you'd perhaps leave it for a day, a week, whatever, you'd make a decision and then you'd seek help'.³⁰⁹⁹

York

IV.590. The legal representatives spoke to four individuals who were at that time employed in the Local Works operation in York, in addition to Roger Hall. They reported 'These individuals confirm that where the York Local Works operation was invited to tender for work which it ultimately did not want... "assistance" would be sought on occasions from competitors in the form of cover prices'.³¹⁰⁰

During interview Phil Bowers ('PB') Regional Manager of the York Office explained that '...it would depend on the client again. But, if it was a client we were working with and we wanted to stay involved with...we'd probably take a cover price'.³¹⁰¹

IV.591. The legal representatives explained, 'Assistance would normally be sought from one of six "preferred" firms. These were identified by Stephen Kenneally [Contracts Manager] as follows: ...Hobson and Porter'.³¹⁰² They also stated 'The decision to seek a cover price was normally a joint decision involving Kenneally, Bowers and possibly (depending on project value or risk) Hall'.³¹⁰³

IV.592. They also stated, 'In relation to [.....] [C] jobs, Bowers explained that his recollection is that 90% of calls from competitors for covers would have come to him. Other calls would have gone to Ray Holgate, Steve Duncan or Stephen Watson and other general surveyors employed at the time'.³¹⁰⁴ Eversheds added, 'The "preferred" firms would contact the York Local Works office from time to time for a cover price. Covers were given to these firms with similar frequency to that with which they were taken'.³¹⁰⁵ PB confirmed that the exchange of cover prices was always carried out by telephone.³¹⁰⁶

Sol

IV.593. As part of its leniency application, Sol provided a general explanation of its participation in cover pricing.³¹⁰⁷ This was supplemented by interviews with the following employees: Adrian Whiteside ('AW'), Managing Director, Andrew Turner ('AT'), Senior Estimator, and John Cummings ('JC'), Chief Estimator.

IV.594. Sol was a relatively small company, run by a board of three directors. Sol employed estimators who were responsible for preparing tenders in relation to invitations to tender received by Sol. Once a tender had been prepared by an estimator all tenders were reviewed by either the managing director, another director or a divisional director before submission to the client. As a result of this practice, the Board of Directors and senior management was able to keep up to date with all tenders with which the company was involved.

IV.595. Sol asserted that the process of procuring tenders was usually very protracted and frequently involved detailed contact with the client's professional advisers and the client over an extended period of time. This made planning the estimating workload and construction workload on site very difficult and frequently impossible. Additionally tender enquiries could be received without prior knowledge.³¹⁰⁸

IV.596. In his interview with the OFT, AT described the process of handling an invitation to tender received from the client, that Sol wanted to win:³¹⁰⁹

- A tender came into the office;
- The estimator checked that all the documentation was there;
- He reported to the construction or the tendering team with the basic information about the work;
- Then he proceeded to work out the cost for the construction;
- The contracts manager provided a preliminary cost to add on;
- Then at a tender settlement meeting the estimating team discussed the job and decided on a profit;
- That provided a tender figure that Sol submitted to the client and;
- Details of competition were obtained on the telephone while talking to suppliers and sub-contractors.

IV.597. Sol employees expanded upon this explanation during interview, as follows.

IV.598. JC told the OFT that he was responsible for all tendering procedures, with AT only having any direct responsibility during JC's absences for holidays or sickness.³¹¹⁰

IV.599. JC continued, 'we have a marketing team who try and keep me informed of what job's on the horizon. When the jobs actually arrive in the office, I will peruse all the documents, get a feel for the job depending on size, we'll have what we call a launch meeting where we...sort of launch the job to other people that's involved with it – contracts managers, other, other management, then set about the nitty-gritty of the tender, sending out the sub contracting enquiries, sending out material enquiries, waiting for them to come back and then start putting the tender together; pricing sections that we do, what we call builders' work, you know, that Sol do, that Sol rather than subcontract, get that up and running, then get the subcontractors' quotes in, analyse all those, include those in the bid as appropriate. Then put it all together, get all the figures together, ready for a tender meeting. We would go through the job and sort of adjudicate it and put little bits of profit margins on and stuff like that'.³¹¹¹

IV.600. JC said that AW would have the final say in consultation with himself and the other managers as to whether or not the tender was attractive.³¹¹² He added that once a month he (JC) would prepare an Estimating Board Report for the benefit of the three managing directors. This was to keep them up to date for the monthly board meeting. It would include 'C' markings for cover prices where appropriate. When asked if the Board were all aware of the practice of cover pricing, JC replied, 'Oh, absolutely, yeah'.³¹¹³

Sol taking cover prices

IV.601. Sol said that when the estimating workload was fully taken up, the receipt of an unexpected tender enquiry or an expected one that arrived late, could leave the undertaking in a position where it did not have the capacity or time to dedicate to a tender, even one from a sought after or existing client. Other factors were staff holidays and sickness and the late arrival of sub-contractors' quotations.³¹¹⁴

IV.602. Stated options for the company in the event of a shortage of capacity or time were:

- to return the tender and risk alienating the client and being removed from tender lists;
- to submit a tender based on a previous, similar tender with the added risk that entailed, appearing uncompetitive with a loss of company credibility as a result; or
- to obtain a cover price.³¹¹⁵

IV.603. The advantage of the cover price was that it allowed the company to submit a competitive tender without upsetting a client. It was regarded as an industry 'norm' and until 2004 Sol was unaware that it was anti-competitive and illegal.³¹¹⁶

IV.604. Management at Sol, AW, would make the final decision as to whether or not a tender was attractive to Sol. If it was not, for whatever reason, a cover price would be sought from one of Sol's competitors. AW said in interview with the OFT, '...and it would be my final decision whether we proceeded or not actually'.³¹¹⁷ When asked what factors were taken into account when seeking a cover price from a competitor, AW said, 'Well really the level of work on the site actually. Obviously whether we've got – whether we've just won jobs, whether we're starting a number of jobs together, whether we've got site staff available to run them, whether we've got staff in the office to manage them...there's a whole team that's required to run and manage that project. And if they're very busy doing other things then the job is going to suffer, so you've got to take a decision whether, you know, you'll let the client know the other job's suffering basically. So, yeah, that's sort of the final decision'.³¹¹⁸ When asked further if he made the decision alone to obtain a cover price from a competitor, AW said, 'No I'd say after consultation with the various people who provide those services within the organisation. But obviously as MD at the end of the day you've got to make that decision'.³¹¹⁹

IV.605. JC, in his interview with the OFT, said that not wishing to upset a client by not submitting a tender figure was the fundamental reason for taking a cover price.

IV.606. JC said that if the tender was deemed '... not attractive...we'd look who the client was and if it was a client that we'd done a lot of work for...and didn't want to upset, we may then get involved and try to sort...a cover price out...if it was a client who's a complete one-off, say, a developer who'd just come into town, probably wasn't serious anyway and perhaps he's looking for a budget...we'd probably send it back with a sort of a lamish excuse, I suppose'.³¹²¹

- IV.607. Details of other undertakings were obtained by Sol from sub-contractors and suppliers and the Builders' Conference.³¹²²
- IV.608. AW said that the exchange of cover prices was '... normally done by telephone, and our Chief Estimator [JC] would normally deal with that aspect of it...'.³¹²³
- IV.609. When asked when he would contact a competitor for a cover price, JC confirmed that there would be an initial contact days or weeks before the tender deadline to arrange the cover price³¹²⁴ and that subsequently 'you couldn't get a cover price until they'd finished it, obviously...So, you'd be right up...It could be on the morning the tender was due in [that a cover price would be given by the competitor]'.³¹²⁵
- IV.610. When asked how he would record the taking of a cover price, JC replied, 'Well, you've seen it in my book, obviously. With a C'.³¹²⁶ AW said 'John normally put a little 'c' in his book, actually, which I think you've probably seen because you've seen that documentation' [the Tender Register]. He continued, 'Yeah, that's it and it's quite clear there that there's a 'c' against it actually. I mean it wasn't particularly hidden. It was a part of everyday life actually'.³¹²⁷
- IV.611. AT said that the letter 'C' next to a competitor's name on the Tender Summary sheet showed that a cover price had been obtained or given.³¹²⁸
- IV.612. When asked how Sol arrived at a cover price JC said, 'I just get a figure. I mean, the guy finishes up his tender, like me giving covers the same, and he'll just add on a percentage to put us well clear of the field and I'd take his, whatever figure he gave me, I'd take as read'.³¹²⁹

Sol giving cover prices

- IV.613. JC in interview stated that when giving a cover price to a competitor, the competitor would ring up and ask for a cover price. A 'C' would be put next to the competitor's name in the Competitors Box in the Tender Register and 'from Sol' written next to it.³¹³⁰
- IV.614. JC added that when giving out a cover price he would add a percentage to his own figure. 'I'd just give him a figure. That's what you want to go in at'.³¹³¹ When asked what percentage figure he used, JC said, '5 to 10 per cent I work on, obviously not making it an exact five or an exact six and stuff'.³¹³² When

IV.617. As part of its leniency application, Strata made available current employees and provided contact details for ex-employees to be interviewed. During these voluntary interviews the individuals were asked to give an explanation of Strata's involvement in cover pricing.

IV.618. Julian Kawecki ('JK'), started working for Strata in 1976 as Estimating Surveyor progressing to Estimating Director and finally Managing Director until leaving Strata's employment in August 2005. JK explained during interview that the tender process post 2000 was that on receipt of a tender 'It would be booked in, logged in, given a number, we would decide whether to price it or not'.³¹³⁶ The decision as to whether to price the project would then be made by 'the Managing Director, Estimating Director, Contracts Manager, Contracts Director'.³¹³⁷ JK went on to explain 'The Contract's Director was John McCready, the Commercial Director was Steve Marshall and the Planning Director was Norman Hudson. The Managing Director was Doug Page before I took over from Doug³¹³⁸ The decision whether to price a job was made at a weekly meeting and one of the estimators would be tasked with obtaining a cover for tenders on which the management had decided Strata would not be submitting a competitive tender.

IV.619. Paul Throssell ('PT'), an estimator at Strata employed since 1980 explained that a document referred to by Strata as the Estimating Tracking document (and previously called by Strata the 'Contracts in Hand sheet')³¹³⁹, *'tracks the work that we have coming in, Jane Bell an administration assistant produces this once it's come in and we have futures meetings, that's the heads of department and the directors... and then they track it through'. ... 'How it works is that, Paul Taylor gets involved, he's the marketing manager, ... the bid manager, the marketing manager, the directors, also put their bits of information as it comes in, and Jane types all the information into this document, that they produce for the futures meeting, and they go through the various different pieces of information that have come in, for the different jobs. I get a copy of this, but I don't have any involvement in actually producing it ...*³¹⁴⁰

IV.620. JK and one of the estimators would go through the Estimating Tracking document and JK would allocate the estimators work, including the task of obtaining a cover price for a tender. PT confirmed in interview that it was *'Usually me'*³¹⁴¹ who was tasked with obtaining a cover price. A document found on the OFT's visit under section 28 on 6 July 2005 set out the estimators' job roles, within which cover pricing is mentioned: 'covers, to/from where appropriate'.³¹⁴²

IV.621. PT explained that 'On what we would now call the tracking document, on the contracts in hand sheet that I mentioned earlier, where we listed down the jobs and when the jobs were due in, there'd be a C, if we were going to cover it, there'd be a C on that sheet against the job'.³¹⁴³ PT confirmed in interview that the presence of a 'C' in the estimator column on the tracking document would indicate that Strata obtained a cover price in relation to that tender.³¹⁴⁴

IV.622. JK said the estimators would find out who was pricing the tender, 'From subcontractors suppliers ringing around. You always got to find out the competition, everybody does'.³¹⁴⁵ JK also went on to explain that there were organisations they could approach to find out who was on a tender list. In reference to the Builders Conference JK said.... 'Yeah. People would ring in and say they are on the list they would tell you who was on the list'.³¹⁴⁶ JK also went on to state that Glennigans and Contract Journal also published tender lists.³¹⁴⁷

- IV.623. On tenders where Strata was taking a cover price PT explained 'If we were taking a cover, then we would ring them once we found out who was pricing it, we would ring them and ask them first if they were pricing it, and then if they could help us out, because we were struggling either with the amount of work we'd got in already, or meeting a tender date, that was the reason we did it' ... 'And then the day before the tender was due in, we'd ring them up and say, if they hadn't already contacted us, we'd ring them and say, you said you were going to give us a cover, can you tell me when we can have this price, so it was still, the tender was still delivered as a genuine tender, so it was still hand delivered'.³¹⁴⁸
- IV.624. Duncan Ironmonger ('DI'), employed as senior estimator in 1999 and subsequently Chief Estimator before he left Strata's employment in October 2004, was also involved in cover pricing. On the OFT's visit under section 28 on 6 July 2005 a document entitled 'Strata Chief Estimator Roll' was found. Item two on that list says 'Meet with Julian to decide what we are pricing, covering or returning'.³¹⁴⁹ DI explained how cover pricing worked in practice, *'You ring up the competition, are you pricing it. No matter who, you weren't bothered who, just as long as you didn't win the work, that's all that mattered. So, you'd ring up, we don't want it, can you give us a cover. Most of them would just say yes, obviously, because they know they're reducing ... their competition.'*³¹⁵⁰
- IV.625. DI also went on to explain that the receiving of a cover would almost always be pre-arranged. 'Usually, if we could, we'd find out in plenty of time because we had our fingers burnt ... there are times when you cant actually find out who else is pricing it' ... 'So unless you give yourself plenty of time, you can finish up quite embarrassed when it gets towards tender submission dates'.³¹⁵¹ On the majority of occasions a cover would be pre-arranged and the actual exchange of covers would be carried out at the last moment before the tender was due in.³¹⁵²
- IV.626. Once a cover price had been received PT explained, *'... I took a copy of the tender form, and I wrote in pencil on the top corner of the tender form who I'd taken a cover from, um, if I got the guy's name, I'd put his name on as well, and then we'd put a copy of the tender form into a ring binder ... '*³¹⁵³ An example of the ring binder PT refers to entitled 'Covers from Jan 2000 to Dec 2001' was found on the OFT's visit under section 28 on 6 July 2005.³¹⁵⁴ PT went on to say 'Every estimator had access to it Yeah [sic], it was just left to the individual, which was generally me or Duncan, ... and it was just left to us, we just updated it as and when we sorted a cover price out'.³¹⁵⁵
- IV.627. DI confirmed this version of events in interview and also made clear that a copy of the tender form was taken once it was completed and the comments were written by the estimators on the copy document prior to that document being inserted into the 'covers' file.³¹⁵⁶

IV.628. The OFT only found one of the 'covers' files during its visit on 6 July 2005. On 6 March 2006 the OFT received a telephone call from [.....] [C] of Herbert Smith LLP, acting on behalf of Strata. [...] [C] stated that 'several weeks before the OFT visited Strata in July 2005 a former employee of Strata's ... phoned an estimator in Strata to tell him that the OFT were conducting investigations and to be careful about leaving ... evidence around'.³¹⁵⁷ Consequently 'an administrative assistant ... decided to take the 2002-2004 covers file home and destroy it'.³¹⁵⁸ [...] [C] confirmed that there was no covers file for 2005.³¹⁵⁹

Strata giving cover prices

IV.629. On tenders where Strata was giving a cover price PT explained 'They would ring me up, ... and they'd say, ... we've got this job in, we can't manage to price it, we can't do it in time, we understand you're pricing it, can you help us out? I'd say yes, no problem, the tender's due in, such and such a date, ... we've got a tender adjudication meeting the day before, or two days before, generally the day before, once we'd had the adjudication meeting, and finalised our figure, then I would sort out what price I was going to give them and give them a ring. If I didn't ring them before they rang me, and that's how it worked'.³¹⁶⁰

IV.630. PT went on to explain how Strata would arrive at a figure to give a competitor '... considering who it was, and where they were, and where they'd been in relation to us on a previous tender, not going back through records or anything like that, just from results letters, ... we'd put in 5% or 6% up, something like that, and then I would put five in my calculation and then point, press a few buttons randomly, percent, comes up a figure addition, add that on to our figure and give them their figure'.³¹⁶¹

IV.631. In addition DI stated 'you'd always try and put them far enough away so that they didn't finish second. So, we tended to work on percentages. Don't put them 10% away but we can put them 5% away and there's usually someone in between you'.³¹⁶² DI continued, 'If you knew that there was only you and one other pricing, then you might go up 10% anyway. ... you weighed up, out, what the competition was on ... the particular job.' '... because obviously people who were taking covers did not want to be top of the list'.³¹⁶³ However, DI explained '... it's possible that on the, at the tender meeting we would come to a figure and I dish out a cover price and then the following morning I might get a cheaper mechanical pricing and we reduce our price. ... they obviously couldn't because they'll have already posted or agreed to send it off. So, that would finish up they'd be 10% out rather than 5% out, you know'.³¹⁶⁴

IV.632. PT explained how Strata kept a record of covers given. PT confirmed that the letter 'C' on the contract information sheet or BOB sheet, written alongside a competitor's name and a figure, shows that Strata gave that company a cover price.³¹⁶⁵ The figure recorded also shows the figure given by Strata as a cover figure.³¹⁶⁶ PT stated *'... there's a letter C in brackets ... that indicates that we're giving ... a cover ...'*³¹⁶⁷ PT confirmed that it would indicate Strata had given a cover price if '...there's a figure on our sheet, and there's a percentage, so that's obviously a figure that we've given, because we'd have no knowledge, if they'd taken cover from somebody else, we wouldn't have the figure ... because there's a figure and a percentage, that's why, that shows that we've given a cover'.³¹⁶⁸

IV.633. DI also explained that he would record covers given on the contract analysis or BOB sheet, 'the names on, on the front, we may have written on there the amount of cover that we'd given to the competition. I can't think of any other way that we recorded it'.³¹⁶⁹

T & C Williams

IV.635. As part of its leniency application, T & C Williams provided a general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. T & C Williams explained that 'The company has on occasion been involved in "cover bidding" in respect of contracts for which it was tendering, either by "giving a cover" to a competitor (i.e. giving some indication of the price that it intended to put forward in its tender) or by "receiving a cover" from a competitor (i.e. obtaining some indication of the price that its competitor intended to put forward). To the best of the knowledge of the Company's current officers and employees, this is the full extent of its contact with competitors during the course of the tendering process'.³¹⁷²

T & C Williams taking cover prices

IV.636. John Hardy ('JH'), an estimator at T & C Williams explained during interview that 'the enquiries would end up on my desk then I'd have a chat with Brian [Brian Barker ('BB'), Managing Director] and say what we doing with this certain job...or he'll come in to me and say I've seen such and such come in, get rid of it, I don't want it. It's not for us that or whatever. Occasionally...we would send a job back if it was an architect we didn't know or a QS that we didn't know...if it was someone that we worked for regularly and we wanted to keep on working for them that's when we would have...if we'd decided that we weren't going to price it at that stage that's when we'd just hang on to it and then at a later date before the tender would go in, we would see who was pricing it so that we could put a price in but not actually waste any time pricing it'.³¹⁷³ BB confirmed that 'generally speaking, I would make the decision as to whether and how keen we were on the work...John would carry out from there'.³¹⁷⁴

IV.637. T & C Williams explained how it would find out who else was tendering for the contract. 'Very rarely is the Company informed when in receipt of a tender of which other building contractors are on the same tender list. In a few cases, however, the Company has in the past been involved in contacts with other builders tendering for the same contract. Tenderers are sometimes able to ascertain one another's identities either by informed guess work or, where an invitation to tender specifies a given sub-contractor or supplier, by obtaining information from that party. In the few cases in question, the Company...has itself initiated contacted [sic] with other builder in order to find out in broad terms the price which that builder intends to quote (i.e. to take a cover)'.³¹⁷⁵

IV.638. T & C Williams explained that 'The [Tender] register records details of contracts for which the Company was invited to tender between January 2000 and March 2006. However, the register provides only an approximate record of the Company's tendering activities'.³¹⁷⁶ It continued 'Each row relates to a given contract and records details of the project, when the enquiry was received, when the tender was to be returned and so on. The final columns are reserved for "comments". In the case of some [...] [C] contracts of the 484 listed in the Register, the comments column contains a "C"...the Company has established that the inclusion of a "C" in the comments column of the Tender Register indicates that a cover was taken in respect of the contracts thus identified'.³¹⁷⁷

IV.639. BB confirmed that the exchange of cover prices was discussed at management meetings: 'there could be instances there where you would be discussing a particular job and you might have said then...we didn't go very hard for that one ... or indeed may have even said well we took a cover on that one'.³¹⁷⁸ At these meetings would have been 'senior staff...that's the directors and all the senior staff in the office'.³¹⁷⁹

IV.640. On tenders where T & C Williams was taking a cover price JH explained 'either myself or the buyer [Steve Potter], usually me, would see if we could find out who was pricing it, so we'd ring a...named electrician...and say...who else you pricing it for and then they'd give us 2 or 3 names ... and then I would ring one of those and say 'are you pricing it' and if he'd say yes then I'd say well we don't want to, can you help us'.³¹⁸⁰ JH confirmed that when referring to 'help' he meant provide a figure for a cover price.³¹⁸¹

IV.641. JH stated that he would contact another competitor by telephone 'probably 2 or 3 days before the tender was going in, it wouldn't be early because you'd be busy doing other jobs so they'd just get left on the side...it would be...relatively close to the tender date I would say'.³¹⁸² As for the actual exchange of cover prices, 'Quite often it would only be the morning that the tender was due in'.³¹⁸³

IV.642. JH confirmed that he would sometimes record the contact with competitors. JH stated 'You'd make a note sometimes on a piece of paper...if it was one where say I was going to get a cover then I'd maybe put a note on that such and such will give us a cover...that's as far as it went'.³¹⁸⁴ JH confirmed that if a 'C' was written in the tender book, 'it would be that we had taken a cover, if it was in the book'.³¹⁸⁵ T & C Williams stated in a 'Supplemental Corporate Statement', that 'no records are kept in relation to contracts not obtained; and that the recollections of those involved inevitably fade given the high volume of contracts processed, the manner in which covers are obtained on the basis of a brief telephone conversation, and the fact that covers have frequently been taken in relation to enquiries outside the Company's normal working area, from firms with which the Company is not familiar'.³¹⁸⁶

T & C Williams giving cover prices

IV.643. T & C Williams explained, 'In the few cases in question, the Company has...been contacted by another builder in respect of a given invitation to tender and has been asked to indicate in broad terms the price it intends to quote (i.e. to give a cover)'.³¹⁸⁷

IV.644. On tenders where T & C Williams was giving a cover price, JH explained that a typical conversation would go as follows, '...you get a phone call, - it's such and such from such and such, are you pricing a particular job? - yes - can you give me some help on it, I'm not gonna get it done in time, or I'm too busy I can't price that one'.³¹⁸⁸

IV.645. BB stated that when providing a figure to a competitor for a cover price there was 'No...laid down formula...you would use anything bar a fixed percentage because of course, it wouldn't take an Einstein to work out that one was 5% more than another one...would it?'.³¹⁸⁹

IV.646. T & C Williams explained that 'There was no equivalent code for indicating contracts in respect of which a cover was given. The Company has no written record of the giving of covers, which will usually involve only a single telephone call from another building firm'.³¹⁹⁰

IV.647. JH confirmed that he would sometimes record the contact with competitors. JH stated 'You'd make a note sometimes on a piece of paper...that somebody rang wanting help...but that's as far as it went'.³¹⁹¹

IV.648. T & C Williams also provided to the OFT a schedule 'listing the companies and (where known) the individuals within those companies with which the Company has had contact since January 2000 regarding cover pricing'. The list contained the following companies:³¹⁹²

Thomas Fish

IV.650. As part of its leniency application, Thomas Fish made available current directors and employees to be interviewed and also arranged availability for ex-employees to be interviewed. During these voluntary interviews the individuals were asked to give an explanation of Thomas Fish's involvement in cover pricing.

IV.651. Peter Woodhouse ('PW'), Director of Thomas Fish, formerly Managing Director from circa 2000, was responsible in that former role for the day-to-day activities of Thomas Fish. PW explained that the construction work carried out by Thomas Fish was split into two categories; major works and general works. Major works required a full construction team comprised of a contracts manager, site manager, surveyor and so on, whereas the general works were usually up to the value of about [...] [C] and were usually dealt with by one person who would prepare the estimate then manage the project.³¹⁹⁴

IV.652. PW was involved in the decision making process for how tenders were dealt with. He said 'On general works, I would...pass it in to the general works for them to do the tendering...And because the tenders generally were relatively low value, then they were left to their own devices, if you like...I used to oversee the work of general works, and used to guide them in terms of the sort of work they ought to put in for...And the values of projects, just to make sure that they weren't trying to carry out too much work at any time'.³¹⁹⁵ PW described how major works operated in a similar manner where tender documents would be passed to the estimator. He also commented that there would be a tender settlement meeting at the end of the estimating process, in which the attendees would look at issues such as risk and margin.³¹⁹⁶

IV.653. PW said that general works tenders would have been passed to Mark Thomas ('MT'), Peter Stone ('PS') and John Slade ('JS'). In respect of major works it was primarily Martin Lane ('ML'). PW said that he was part of the decision to tender along with contracts managers 'And, really, the estimator in terms of the work that he had got'.³¹⁹⁷ In regard to how he made the decision whether or not to bid for a tender, PW said 'It's a fairly complex basis. I mean, obviously, initially it was the workload that we'd got on...And are we looking for another project? Very interested in who the client was and, well, obviously whether they'd got the ability to pay us at the end of the project'.³¹⁹⁸ PW also commented that the professional team of quantity surveyors and the architects to be used influenced the decision whether or not to tender, along with the type of construction work involved as some types were more profitable than others.

IV.654. In relation to what documents were generated as part of the tendering process, PW described the tender meetings as 'ad hoc' and said that no formal record would be taken of the rationale behind deciding whether to tender or not to tender for a contract. PW described the main document generated as being the 'front sheet' which recorded all the details of the tender; however this was not used so much in the general works area. In regard to how Thomas Fish tracked pending tenders, PW said that 'on a weekly basis, a chart was drawn up showing the work that we got in to tender, showing the submission dates for the tender. Martin Lane on major contracts would have been involved with one of the secretarial staff in preparing that'. PW explained that some documents would be kept, even if they had been shelved for being over the client's budget, as there was the possibility that a job might come out for re-tender at a later time.³¹⁹⁹

IV.655. PW was asked what would happen if they considered a tender not to be attractive to Thomas Fish. He responded that 'On occasions, we would decline to tender. ... And I suppose it's at that point we would consider taking a cover price or seeking a cover price'.³²⁰⁰

IV.656. MT joined Thomas Fish circa 1999 as a surveyor/estimator working in the general works department with JS and PS, and was eventually promoted to general works manager. MT described his role in the tendering process, saying that 'I was given certain enquiries via one of my two colleagues, John Slade or Peter Stone...it was passed to me to estimate'.³²⁰¹ MT described how he would put the tender together and send it to the client but did not participate in the decision making process of whether to bid for a tender or not.

IV.657. MT described what documents would be generated or used in the tendering process. The main document where the details would be recorded was the general works tender book.³²⁰² MT would make some entries in this book; however he said the majority of this was done by PS and JS. MT was asked what documents would be retained, and for older tenders he said that documents would be deleted or put into an old file, and 'when that got too big, it would be just chucked away'.³²⁰³

IV.658. JS joined Thomas Fish circa 1999 and originally worked in the general works department, which he also referred to as 'small works'.³²⁰⁴ Subsequently he moved to the role of contracts manager within the major contracts department of Thomas Fish and left the company in July 2005. JS described his role by saying that 'You would pretty much do everything, you'd send enquiries out and price them, get subcontract quotations and the like'.³²⁰⁵ In regard to how decisions on whether to tender for a contract were made, JS said 'It was a pretty much joint thing...You could run out of time to price something and you decide you're not going to price it. You could also see that you've picked up other work in between time and you're not pricing it. Or alternatively you crack on and price on it'.³²⁰⁶

IV.659. PS joined Thomas Fish prior to 2000 and was employed as part of the general management in the general works department until leaving the company in 2004. PS described his role as 'managing the department. Overseeing projects within the department. We all had our own roles to play so it was a team...it was varied, but basically the management side and the estimating and...not all of the estimating'.³²⁰⁷

IV.660. PS said that tenders would probably first come in via PW or ML or the secretary and explained that the value of the tender also determined who would deal with it. PS said 'if it was [...] [C], the likelihood it may have drifted into ours [general works]'. PS also said that if ML looked at a tender and decided it was not one to be dealt with by the major works department, it would be left on PS's desk and would be dealt with by general works.³²⁰⁸

IV.661. PS described factors affecting whether Thomas Fish bid for a tender as being 'the capacity of people in the office ... whether we like the job or not'.³²⁰⁹ Asked what documents were produced, such as meeting notes and tender reports, PS said that 'Within our department we didn't really have any, we didn't have anything specific, there was nothing set down. We just made our own notes, if necessary or, you know, we built the tender up ourselves'. PS did however comment that tenders 'were put in a book and given a number. You know, for reference'.³²¹⁰

IV.662. Clive Simpson ('CS') was also interviewed concerning his time at Thomas Fish and involvement with tenders and cover pricing. CS said 'I joined Thomas Fish in 1989 as a quantity surveyor, promoted to a senior QS in 1998, and left the company in September 2006. So whilst primarily employed as a quantity surveyor, that role extended into estimating on an as and when basis, to meet the business requirements of Thomas Fish'.³²¹¹ CS described his role further by saying 'as a senior quantity surveyor, I was primarily involved in the post contract running of jobs, but due to my experience in that, I was seconded into estimating as and when. We didn't employ a full time estimator'.³²¹² CS explained that the surveying department, which at that time consisted of him and ML, would price the tenders and that he reported directly to ML, and PW above that.³²¹³

- IV.663. CS confirmed that 'no post arrived direct to an individual without it having gone across the director's desk first. So that would apply to tenders as well'. CS said that 'once tenders had been received...they would be looked at in terms of value, to decide whether they were, a job to be dealt with by a major contracts division, or more by the small works, or general works... division'. In the major works department, CS said everything went through ML because he was the sole estimator and surveying director. CS explained that 'Martin would generally price everything that we were interested in pricing, but if his workload was such, or there were two jobs in at once that we were keen in getting, then that's when I'd get dragged in to supplanting the resources'.³²¹⁴
- IV.664. CS stated that he did not make the decision as to whether or not to submit a bid for a tender. He said in respect of major contracts, 'That wasn't a decision I took, that decision had been made higher up the line by Peter Woodhouse or Martin Lane'.³²¹⁵
- IV.665. ML joined Thomas Fish in 1979 as a quantity surveyor and was subsequently promoted to Associate Director until he left Thomas Fish in 2006. ML said 'I was probably pricing most, 75%, 80% of major contracts works, or pricing, development work as well, and, doing the QS function on whatever I had to do at the time, as well'.³²¹⁶ ML said that 'the tender would land on my desk, so sometime in the next day or so I'd talk to Peter [PW], just go across to his desk and say, you know, we've got this job from Nottingham University, it looks good, you know, are we going to price it. He'd say yes or, you know, if we didn't need the work or whatever and it was a bad job, we'd say well, get some help on that and that would be it. Because it was never called covers, it was called help'.³²¹⁷
- IV.666. In relation to what documents were generated as part of the tender process, ML said 'if we were going to price a job, obviously we'd send out the whole job for pricing, as you would in a tender enquiry, subcontract enquiry...if we weren't going to price it, it would just lie on the desk, and wait for somebody either to phone up to see if we were on the list and did you want help, or, you know, you find out...if you couldn't find out who was on the list, there's always a way somehow you can find out via subcontractors. And so probably the last week before the job went in you'd phone around and try and find somebody pricing it. You'd always do a [site] visit though, whatever happened'.³²¹⁸ ML further said that 'there was a tender report done every week, and then, because I was in charge of estimating, that tender report, when we used to have the management meeting...the last Wednesday of every month, that week's tender report would form the basis of my report to the management meeting...I'd just run through...Prior to this one, it's half a million quid, and then that one, we're getting some help from whoever, or looking for help on it'.³²¹⁹
- IV.667. As part of its leniency application, Thomas Fish provided to the OFT a disclosure document of information relating to its involvement in cover pricing.

This document states 'We have been involved on a fairly regular basis in giving and receiving cover prices as part of the tender process...On making contact and expressing a wish to receive a cover price or help, the company giving the cover would then undertake to provide a figure to the company making the request, for that company to submit as it's tender price. Obviously the figure given would be above the figure being submitted by the genuine tenderer, but in this process at no time would we be aware of their tender figure or anyone elses. Equally if we were providing the cover price we would only know our figure and the cover figure we had provided. Our main reason for carrying out this procedure was to avoid returning tender opportunities, as it is a fact that if we do this on a regular basis then we reduce our future tender opportunities from the clients affected. We have kept no comprehensive records of this activity but it took place in both our Major Contracts section of the company and in General Works and probably more so in General Works in recent years'.³²²⁰

Thomas Fish taking cover prices

- IV.668. PW described how if a tender was not attractive and Thomas Fish was going to decline to tender, 'at that point we would consider taking a cover price or seeking a cover price'.³²²¹ PW said 'we were very much aware that if we kept declining work when we were asked to work, particularly as far as local authorities were concerned, then we would just slip down their select list'.³²²²
- IV.669. PW described the reasons for seeking a cover price and said it 'stems out of us having an enquiry for a project that we really are not interested in...So as not to disclose our lack of interest to the client, we seek a cover price on the basis that that price will be higher than the lowest tendered price. So we will then in theory be seen to have put in a bid, but in practice we know we are not going to win the project, because our tender will have been higher than the lowest tender'.³²²³ PW further said he had talked to clients and 'that really annoyed them, that they'd gone to the trouble of putting you on a select list of six or eight contractors, and if you declined to provide a tender for whatever reason, they seemed to take that as a slight'.³²²⁴
- IV.670. PW was asked how Thomas Fish would find out which competitors were bidding for a tender. He responded that 'The easiest way to find out is in the tender documentation there are usually specified certain items which can only be obtained from certain services, from certain sub-contractors, or items that are needed for work from certain suppliers...And therefore presumably, every contractor is going to contract those, contact those individuals to get a price...And so when we contacted those individuals, we would ask what contact they had from the contractors'.³²²⁵ PW further noted that these competitor details would be recorded on the computer entry for the tender and also by ML on the front sheet of the tender documents.
- IV.671. MT described cover pricing as follows: 'If we had a project that came through the door for a regular client, and we were far too busy...then we would ask for a price off somebody else that we thought was pricing it...and ask them just to give us a price just to put on the tender sheet and hand in, knowing that we didn't get it'.³²²⁶ MT said that his involvement in cover pricing was very limited but that to his knowledge the reason for seeking a cover price was 'mainly to keep the client...If you decide to turn round to the client and say, "No, I'm sorry, I'm not pricing that one"...and then they'll drop you off the tender list, and you'll not get any more inquiries from them'.³²²⁷ MT was asked if he knew of any occasion where Thomas Fish had been dropped by a client and replied 'I'm not aware of any'.³²²⁸

IV.672. JS was asked what would have happened if a tender was considered unattractive. He replied that *'If we felt we couldn't do the work we would try not to price it. If we knew early enough we'd send it back to the client...But I must admit we did try to avoid that because you've only got to do it once or twice and you'll be off the tender list'.³²²⁹ Asked if he could recall any times that Thomas Fish had been dropped from a tender list, JS replied 'I can't specifically, no'.³²³⁰ JS went on to describe the reasons for seeking a cover price by saying that, *'you can't always price everything all the time. You don't want to upset your clients who you work for regularly...So you would tend to try and get a figure from someone else to make sure a) you could get a price back, and b) not win the job'.³²³¹ JS further explained reasons for seeking a cover price by saying 'Generally it's you can't do the job for one or two reasons. It could be that it doesn't suit the workforce you've got so you can't really make a good job of it...It could be that you are overloaded with work. It could be that you've just run out of time to price it'.³²³²

IV.673. PS explained the reasons for Thomas Fish seeking a cover price, saying that, 'Generally speaking it was always down to last minute, prices not coming in from your sub-contractors. You just couldn't get a price together some time, so it was to save sending it back, generally speaking...I suppose you was always afraid of not getting more enquiries from the people. It was almost a system that you could use to, to make sure that you kept enquiries. Because it wasn't always that you wanted to send them back. You sometimes...it was...it was just a necessity, you know, that the work had built up. You may have won some projects during that week and you didn't necessarily want that work. So it was a way of, just making it easier to work with'.³²³³

IV.674. PS was asked who would have made the decision to take a cover price on a tender. He replied 'I guess the guy who is pricing it, so it could be myself, it could be a colleague, because you'd know at the point whether or not you could get the work done in the time that you could get the estimate together...occasionally you might decide that, because of the lack of information, you may decide early on that it was something that you wouldn't like as well, I mean it wasn't always last minute'.³²³⁴ PS recalled that he would have made decisions to take cover prices and when asked who that decision would have been communicated to within Thomas Fish he said that, 'we might have a meeting with Peter Woodhouse...But we didn't communicate that with anyone in particular. You know, there was no set regime for doing it, it was pretty much left up to yourself as to whether you could get the tender together or not'.³²³⁵

IV.675. PS was asked how he would know who to contact to obtain a cover price for a tender and responded that 'Very much, more often than not the subcontracts are, you know, if you've got M&E, a lot of people will give you a list of M&E, go to these three, so they will always know who is on the tender list anyway...Mechanical and electrical contractors. They are generally the ones, more than anyone else, or a specialist, maybe refrigeration...'.³²³⁶

IV.676. PS was further questioned on whether he considered the legal implications of seeking a cover price for a tender. He explained the activity, saying that, 'I think everyone knew, sort of, that, you know...you sort of knew that it was, well I didn't know it was illegal, but you knew it wasn't something that you broadcast...It had always been a bit secret society, I think...it was only when you get to a certain level that you...that you hear about it...obviously it was underhand a bit, but it was nothing [sighs]...you know, like being a lookout outside a supermarket while somebody was robbing, if you understand what I mean? It was, kind of, just, a...something that people didn't really talk about or make a fuss about'.³²³⁷

IV.677. CS was asked what documents were generated as part of the tender process and he replied that 'if we were taking a cover on a job, nothing was done unless, unless there was a feeling that a site visit was necessary, in which case, a site visit would be undertaken, so that the client, you cover your tracks so that the client wouldn't think, oh, there's only ever been two people come to visit the site, how could the other two possibly have priced it, so you went through the motions, but that was as far as it went'.³²³⁸

IV.678. CS gave an outline of the reasons why he believed Thomas Fish took cover prices. He said 'it could be either a job that we look at and say well, that's not appropriate, we can't accommodate it, we don't have the resources...Or we may look at it and think, well, maybe it's not a client particularly that we're going to want to work for or it's a tricky job'.³²³⁹ CS continued to say that 'The biggest thing behind it is...there's a fear that even though you can't price this current job, you haven't got the resources, that if you turn it down and send it back, you'll be precluded from being invited to price any further jobs'.³²⁴⁰ CS was asked if a client had ever told him that if Thomas Fish did not bid for a tender, it would not be invited to bid again and he replied 'I can't quote an example, no, but there's certainly a perception'.³²⁴¹

IV.679. CS also described the process involved in obtaining a cover price, and his involvement, saying that 'once the decision had been taken, as I say, at senior level, as to whether that job was being bid for or not, the mechanism of obtaining the cover price and everything else would fall on the estimating department, which would be in major contracts, first port of call would be generally Martin [ML]. My role in doing it was usually when Martin was on holiday'.³²⁴²

IV.680. In regard to how he would know which other companies were bidding for a tender and who to contact to obtain a cover price, CS said 'It would probably be someone you were familiar with, who you may have contacted in the past, or that you know an individual there...staff move around, and you then tend to know somebody at most of the other contractors...through the exchange of covers over the years, you build up a contact list of estimators, so you know who was estimator at that firm, so that would be first port of call. If it was a cold call, just ring and ask for the estimating department'.³²⁴³

IV.681. CS was asked whether the cover price Thomas Fish obtained would be recorded anywhere and replied 'it wouldn't necessarily have been recorded. We would then fill in the tender form with the figure that we were supplied with, sign it as though it was a bona fide tender, and submit it'.³²⁴⁴

IV.682. ML said 'help is, you know, it's a cover price, but it's the clandestine word for cover'.³²⁴⁵ ML was asked who made the decision to take a cover price for a tender and said 'well, it was part of my job'.³²⁴⁶

Thomas Fish giving cover prices

IV.683. For tenders where Thomas Fish was giving a cover price, PW said 'I may have been contacted or made aware that a particular contractor wanted a cover price...But I would pass that information to the estimator, and leave them to it'.³²⁴⁷

IV.684. CS was asked how a competitor would contact Thomas Fish to try and obtain a cover price. He said that 'most times the calls came through kind of cold and through the switchboard, somebody's been asking for the estimating department'.³²⁴⁸ He confirmed that Thomas Fish would 'never ring somebody asking them if they wanted to take a cover'.³²⁴⁹

IV.685. ML had previously said he would make the decision to obtain a cover price and confirmed that he too would decide to give a cover price to a competitor if requested. He said 'If I was pricing the job and somebody phoned up and said can I get...can you give me some help on pricing so and so, and you say yeah. Can you give me some help? Yeah, sure, you know'.³²⁵⁰ ML continued, 'they'd phone up and say...can I speak to the estimator who is pricing that, and the receptionist had a copy of the tender report as well, so she knew what estimator was pricing which job'.³²⁵¹

Compensation payments

IV.686. As part of its leniency application, Thomas Fish informed the OFT that it had been involved in arrangements where the winning contractor, on a particular tender, would reimburse the unsuccessful contractor or contractors a certain sum of money to offset their costs incurred in the preparation and submission of a bid for that tender. The details of these arrangements are set out in the description of the relevant particular Infringement, below.

Thomas Fish lists of competitors and contacts

IV.687. Thomas Fish also provided to the OFT, a list of competitors with individual contact names, telephone numbers and notes on their areas of activity. This list was originally kept by PS and on his departure from Thomas Fish it was passed on to MT.³²⁵² The list includes details of the following companies:

- [...] [C] [List of x Participant Companies]

IV.688. In addition to this, Thomas Fish also provided a document titled 'MARTIN LANES CONTACT LIST' which contains further names of competitors,

Thomas Vale

- IV.689. In its leniency application, Thomas Vale explained that its head office was in Stourport-on-Severn and that it employed staff in several regional offices and structured its operations into business divisions that addressed specific markets and client bases.³²⁵⁴ Operating divisions included Traditional, Building and Maintenance and Strategic Projects, all based at the head office; City & Interiors, based in Aston, Birmingham; and East Midlands, based outside Leicester (since relocated to Derbyshire).
- IV.690. Prior to the business being organised into separate divisions, the estimating function was based at the head office until 2000 under the management of Chief Estimator Chris Trickett ('CKT'). Thereafter, estimators worked for divisions under separate management and CKT become Commercial Manager with responsibility for the estimating function within Traditional division only.
- IV.691. Other personnel who provided explanations of their involvement in cover pricing worked in divisions as follows: estimators Ian Skyrms ('IS') and Robin Perks ('RP') worked for CKT in Traditional division; Simon Westwood ('SJW') worked for CKT as an estimator in Traditional, then moved to Strategic Projects division before becoming IT manager at the head office; and senior estimator Chris Duffy ('CD') also worked in Strategic Projects division.
- IV.692. Other estimating personnel with whom it was not possible to conduct interviews included the following: estimator Anthony (Tony) Allport ('AA') worked in Building and Maintenance division until emigrating to New Zealand in 2004 and Anthony (Tony) Bastable ('AJB') worked as an estimator in Strategic Projects division before leaving the company in 2005. Paul Kirk worked as an estimator in the East Midlands division until 2004.

Cover pricing – general and the use of the Tender Status spreadsheet

- IV.693. As part of its leniency application, Thomas Vale provided a general explanation of its participation in cover pricing and following interviews with staff, it was apparent that indications of a cover price were recorded in several ways. Most significantly, a spreadsheet entitled 'TENDER STATUS 2000 to 2006'³²⁵⁵, hereafter referred to as the 'Tender Status spreadsheet', was maintained and updated at Thomas Vale's head office by CKT. This detailed all tenders received at the head office by Thomas Vale for the period 2000-2006 for its separate divisions, i.e. Strategic Projects, Building and Maintenance and Traditional. The Tender Status spreadsheet also recorded tenders for the City & Interiors division until 2001 plus tenders for the East Midlands area until it became a separate division in 2002.

³²⁵³ Contact list extracts, OFT Document Reference 3976.

IV.694. CKT explained the creation of the Tender Status spreadsheet to the OFT in interview 'prior to 2000...I was responsible for the whole estimating function, so...I knew really what was going on in that whole discipline. Obviously when we were split down into divisions, to a certain extent that reduced my sort of knowledge of what was going on. And I got this set up so that all the estimators in all the divisions could actually...relate and talk to one another electronically, so somebody, somewhere in the building could, would know what was going on'.³²⁵⁶

IV.695. CKT went on to explain that all tenders, apart from those for City & Interiors from 2001 and those for East Midlands from 2002, were booked through him and went onto the Tender Status spreadsheet.³²⁵⁷ This recorded a sequential tender number, description of the project and client, approximate value, designated estimator and category. In interview, staff from Thomas Vale explained that category A indicated a contract that Thomas Vale was keen on, whereas category C was a less desirable project for which assistance from another contractor was sometimes sought. CKT said that 'C in those days, was, obviously, as it says, inferred as being a cover'.³²⁵⁸

IV.696. From January 2001, the use of category C tenders ceased and was replaced by category B although the meaning of the category remained the same in that it indicated a cover price. When asked about the decision to change from category C to B, CKT said 'I do vaguely remember that...I think that came from a discussion I perhaps had with Tony Hyde [managing director of Thomas Vale] and he thought that we didn't really need to have these three categories, particularly something that was indicating C, which was obvious to people perhaps what it meant. So we agreed at that point just to say, A for one we priced, and B for one that we probably didn't'.³²⁵⁹ The use of category B to indicate a cover price is borne out by the key to categorisation on the spreadsheet maintained by the Strategic Projects division, i.e. 'Cat A – Priced CAT B – Cover'.³²⁶⁰

IV.697. The Tender Status spreadsheet also recorded the tender return date, the amount of Thomas Vale's submitted bid, an indication of the result and a column entitled Tendering Contractors. Within this column, other contractors' names would often be recorded.

Thomas Vale taking cover prices

IV.698. With regard to taking a cover price, Thomas Vale stated 'As the purpose for taking a cover was to ensure that a contract would not be awarded, there was no need to either create or retain documentation' (emphasis added by Thomas Vale).³²⁶¹ It added 'in relation to taking a cover, the estimator may have categorised the tender as 'B' or 'C' on the Tender spreadsheet or Weekly Tender List and/or shown the competitor name in bold on the Tender spreadsheet'.³²⁶²

IV.699. Thomas Vale explained that that 'the decision on whether to take a cover price would generally be made by the General Manager, Director in Charge or Bid Manager in conjunction with the Chief Estimator (or equivalent)'.³²⁶³ In interview, CKT said that the decision not to competitively price a tender would always be referred to Thomas Vale's divisional directors who 'were always aware with the action and agreed with the action' taken by estimators.³²⁶⁴

IV.700. Thomas Vale said that there was no standard process as to who would be called for a cover price. Once a firm had been identified as being on the tender list, either from estimators' knowledge and experience or from trade publications or alternatively sub-contractors specified in the tender documentation, it would depend on whether Thomas Vale estimating staff had a relationship with an estimator at that firm.³²⁶⁵ When it was determined that a cover price would be sought from a competitor, a senior member of the estimating staff (usually the Chief Estimator or Estimating Manager) would undertake to call an estimating contact at the other firm.³²⁶⁶

IV.701. In interview, CKT said that *'most of the time and obviously it's highlighted in the records...I dealt mainly with the covers myself'*³²⁶⁷ and that the decision to take assistance on a tender was made 'pretty early on'.³²⁶⁸ He explained that he made initial contact with a competitor by telephone and then followed it up with another call just before the tender was due. When asked who he would contact, he said 'Well, obviously there were certain people within the network that you...obviously knew perhaps a little bit better than others. You may have worked with them, they may have worked with you, you may have had contact with them at other businesses somewhere or other, and you felt comfortable with these guys, you know, it was trust really...Generally, it was me who dealt with them, you know, because with respect you needed somebody who understood the other people as well, and the other personalities, so it was crucial that somebody who had reasonable experience was dealing with it'.³²⁶⁹

IV.702. CKT said that he had a *'little black book'*³²⁷⁰ of contacts, so that when seeking a cover price 'the number and the contact person was readily available to me'.³²⁷¹ As part of its leniency application, Thomas Vale provided CKT's list of contacts to the OFT.³²⁷² This contained an alphabetical list of contractors, contact names and telephone numbers.

- IV.703. CKT explained that when Thomas Vale was seeking a cover, usually on a Category B or C contract, the party that provided assistance would be highlighted in bold within the 'Tendering Contractors' column of the Tender Status spreadsheet.
- IV.704. CKT said 'the competitor who is in bold was an indication to me and obviously anyone else who had access to it, to whom we had actually gone to for a cover figure...and the reason, one of the reasons why it was in bold, obviously it was important to know who you had gone to, or talked to'.³²⁷³ CKT stated that all the other estimators understood the system of putting in bold the name of a competitor who had provided cover 'because I'd asked them, in fairness, you know, please if you do anything like this please let me know'.³²⁷⁴ He added 'because all the lads actually understood the reasons as to why we needed that sort of highlighted'.³²⁷⁵
- IV.705. This Tender Status spreadsheet, which was accessible electronically to estimating staff at the head office, would be updated with the name of the competitor that had provided cover, either by CKT or by the designated estimator. If dealt with by CKT, the highlighting in bold of the competitor would have been entered as soon as he had arranged the cover price, 'and then obviously that told other people that it was already set up'.³²⁷⁶ CKT explained that he usually dealt with the necessary telephone calls to obtain a cover price for his own division (Traditional) and he would update the spreadsheet himself. However, estimators in both Building and Maintenance and Special Projects divisions would have been fully aware of the system of recording covers on the Tender Status spreadsheet.³²⁷⁷ CKT said 'eighty per cent of the entries on there were actually inputted by myself...it may well be that on odd occasions other divisions, because they had access to this...they inputted the details themselves'.³²⁷⁸ CKT went on to explain that if the tender had been allocated to an estimator in a different division, the designated estimator would normally have arranged the cover price themselves.³²⁷⁹
- IV.706. CKT further explained that being Thomas Vale's Chief Estimator for the overall estimating function until 2000, all tenders continued to come through him, even for other divisions. On occasions, the Tender Status spreadsheet showed CKT to be the designated estimator for a tender allocated to a separate division, e.g. Special Projects. CKT explained that this would indicate that he dealt with the cover price in place of the normal estimator, 'it may well be that Tony Allport or whoever at that time was perhaps going out or on holiday and I dealt with it for him'.³²⁸⁰
- IV.707. On other occasions, CKT would not have known which estimator had been allocated to a tender in which case the estimator column would be left blank. This he said was purely a *'clerical oversight'*³²⁸¹ and if a competitor had been highlighted in bold, it would still indicate that the designated estimator would have dealt with the cover.

IV.708. Other estimating personnel were also interviewed about their knowledge of the Tender Status spreadsheet and how covers from other contractors were recorded internally at Thomas Vale. IS, who worked directly for CKT, was aware of the Tender Status spreadsheet, categorisation of tenders and the system of highlighting a competitor in bold to indicate covers. He said that although he had access to the spreadsheet, it would usually be up to CKT to update the report.³²⁸² IS added that CKT would know what to enter on the spreadsheet because 'it would be talked about after the tender, we'd talk about it before the tender went in...and it would be arranged either by Chris or myself...to get the cover price'.³²⁸³ RP, who joined Thomas Vale in 2002 and also worked directly for CKT, was not aware of the Tender Status spreadsheet at the time but understood the categorisation of B or C tenders and that any information about covers would be passed to CKT.³²⁸⁴

IV.709. CD, who worked in Strategic Projects division, said that he was aware that CKT maintained the Tender Status spreadsheet and that if a competitor was named in bold; this indicated that assistance had been sought from that company. CD said that if he had been personally aware of the cover price received from a competitor, he would make the entry in the spreadsheet himself at the end of the tender process.³²⁸⁵

IV.710. SJW was also interviewed and said that he created the Tender Status spreadsheet on behalf of CKT and was aware of its contents. He said that either he or CKT could have made or received telephone calls relating to cover prices but the decision to take a cover price 'came from director level'.³²⁸⁶ SJW said that either CKT or the designated estimator updated the Tender Status spreadsheet with the known competition and Thomas Vale's bid. In respect of updating the competitor who had provided a cover price in bold, SJW said 'that wasn't something that I did particularly, I don't think that was something that I did so perhaps that was Chris Trickett that...had done that'.³²⁸⁷

Thomas Vale giving cover prices

IV.711. In relation to giving a cover to a competitor, Thomas Vale explained that when submitting a genuine tender price for a project that it was interested in winning, estimating personnel would create a Tender Summary Sheet, also known as EST6 sheet and/or prelim book sheet. This form included a section headed Competition and Thomas Vale stated that 'personnel may have made some note in this section to indicate that cover was provided. This could be by annotating the other party who asked for cover in bold, or use of a ringed letter "C", and/or a figure, telephone number and contact name'.³²⁸⁸

IV.712. In interview CKT explained 'under the competitors' names we should accumulate it on that form; we probably may well write the figure, and indicate it was a cover from us to them'.³²⁸⁹

Other divisions at Head Office

IV.713. A similar spreadsheet to the Tender Status spreadsheet was retained in electronic format within the Strategic Projects division, entitled *'Strategic Projects Tender Report April 2002 – March 2005'*³²⁹⁰ containing largely identical information to that maintained by CKT; a sub-heading provides a key to categorisation of tenders as 'CAT A – Priced CAT B – Cover'.

IV.714. This spreadsheet was maintained and updated by Russell Burley, the former Bid Manager for that division. Again, tendering contractors that provided covers were highlighted in bold. On one contract, a ringed letter 'c' was annotated next to another contractor, which, according to SJW, indicated a cover price from Thomas Vale to that contractor.³²⁹¹

IV.715. Nick Galliers, ex-manager of Building and Maintenance division also kept a separate handwritten tender list (which duplicated entries held by CKT in his tender status report). CKT said that it appeared that Nick Galliers indicated the use of a cover price by marking a shaded triangle in the corner of the column marked 'value', adjacent to Thomas Vale's tender figure.³²⁹²

Other Thomas Vale offices

IV.716. The same categorisation codes of A, B and C were used in tender lists created by City & Interiors and East Midlands division. Nigel Stone, estimating manager in Birmingham kept a separate handwritten tender register and would indicate a cover taken by use of the word 'COVER' in the estimator column. Other spreadsheets for this division would also record whether Thomas Vale intended to submit a cover price by use of typed or handwritten use of B or C in the category column. Nigel Stone, in interview explained that City & Interiors had their own classification of incoming work, 'We had a three-scale sort of tier, which was, which was, ABC and A being an A, a grade A job, as we know, which is one that we're extremely keen on, B not so keen but, you know, could be of interest to us and C being we weren't interested and we would, in most cases, take a cover'.³²⁹³

IV.717. In its leniency application, Thomas Vale also provided contemporaneous handwritten notes of telephone communications, which indicated prices were sought from other contractors, showing the contact name of that contractor, telephone number and tender amount provided. The use of covers could, on occasions, also be clearly indicated in management reports or memos. For example, one tender report from a senior management managers' meeting has the following entry 'outside assistance being taken'.³²⁹⁴

IV.718. As part of its leniency application, W R Bloodworth provided a list of [...] [C] cover prices, both covers given and taken, since March 2000³²⁹⁵ and a list of 'Contacts for Cover Prices' in respect of competitor companies.³²⁹⁶ The following W R Bloodworth employees were interviewed by the OFT: Stuart Bloodworth ('SB'), Managing Director, and Michael Campbell ('MC'), estimator. The previous Managing Director, David Bloodworth ('DB'), retired in 2002.

Cover pricing - general

IV.719. W R Bloodworth staff confirmed in interview that it participated in both the giving and taking of cover prices. SB said that as W R Bloodworth was a small family firm, generally only MC and he would get involved in estimating.³²⁹⁷ MC explained that on receipt of a tender 'We'd have a look at it, see if it was a job that we thought we could do, see if it was a job we thought we could win and see how busy we were – if it was a job we needed, then decide if we're going to price it, and if we weren't going to price it to find out – well you pretty much knew – who was going to price and get some help from them. i.e. a cover price'.³²⁹⁸

IV.720. The OFT obtained two tender registers from the premises of W R Bloodworth during the visit under section 28 on 28 June 2005. MC explained in relation to the first register³²⁹⁹, that he would annotate with 'A tick if we won the job and a cross if we didn't'.³³⁰⁰ In relation to the second tender register³³⁰¹ where a number of letter 'C's have been added, MC explained that, 'where in the column in the last one I've put a tick or cross I've marked jobs up with a "C" this time where we've either given cover or cover taken to the best of my recollection'.³³⁰² MC also confirmed that he made these annotations at the time the tender was current, apparently in an effort to ensure that his records were more accurate and to find out what proportion of jobs involved cover pricing.³³⁰³

IV.721. SB explained how W R Bloodworth would find out who the competition was on a job, 'I mean [we] either heard from...sub-contractors or from ABI'.³³⁰⁴ SB also explained that on occasion he would also contact John Wholey of the Nottingham Builders' Guild³³⁰⁵ to ask who else was tendering for a job and then use that information to contact a competitor to obtain a cover price.³³⁰⁶ MC also explained that he would contact a competitor: *'Ring them up and ask for Estimating or a guy that I knew worked there.'*³³⁰⁷

IV.722. SB of W R Bloodworth confirmed that two contacts would take place, by telephone, with a competitor in respect of taking a cover price. One, when W R Bloodworth asked for help and then, secondly, on the day of the tender submission or the day before the tender submission, there would be a further contact to obtain the cover price.³³⁰⁸

W R Bloodworth giving cover prices

IV.723. MC explained that W R Bloodworth would always provide a cover price if approached by a competitor, otherwise 'chances are then if I needed a cover of[f] anybody then I wouldn't be able to get it'.³³⁰⁹ SB admitted that the purpose of a cover price was not to win the contract, but to give the client the appearance of competition.³³¹⁰

IV.724. In terms of arriving at a cover price to give to a competitor, MC said 'Well, I generally put 5% or 6% on...Because somebody would say to you, "Don't put me miles out because I won't get an enquiry anyway"'.³³¹¹

Contemporaneous documents

IV.725. The leniency application provided no additional contemporaneous documents to those obtained on the section 28 visit. This documentary evidence is discussed by the OFT in relation to each relevant specific tender.

Wildgoose

IV.726. As part of its leniency application, Wildgoose provided a general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. Wildgoose explained that '...the practice of giving cover bids in the construction industry at least as far as Wildgoose is concerned, arose from the inability of companies in the sector to submit properly priced tenders for every request received and their unwillingness to disappoint existing or potential customers by declining to submit a tender'.³³¹² Wildgoose stated that 'Whilst it is accepted that a company giving a cover price to another would pitch that price such that its own tender would not be undercut, the object of the exercise (at least so far as Wildgoose understood it) was not to determine the outcome of the tender process as a whole but rather to offer assistance to another company unable to find the resources to price a given job accurately - in the knowledge that such assistance could be reciprocated at a future date'.³³¹³

IV.727. In addition, Wildgoose also provided 'Draft Witness Statements' for various employees, including Bryan Bennett ('BB'), who started working for Wildgoose in 1995 as Senior Estimator before progressing to Estimating Director in 1999³³¹⁴, Graham Barber ('GB'), who joined Wildgoose in 1983 as a Project Manager before being appointed as Construction Director and finally Managing Director in 1997³³¹⁵, Arthur Paul Taylor ('APT'), a senior estimator at Wildgoose since 1996, and Ian Braime ('IB'), a senior estimator at Wildgoose from 2003.

- IV.728. The 'Draft Witness Statements' of BB and GB were subsequently replaced by 'Witness Statements' and signed, by BB on 11 December 2007, and by GB on 8 December 2007 and contain the following statement, 'This statement was provided to the Office of Fair Trading on 15 December 2004. I believe that it was true to the best of my knowledge and belief at that time. This statement does not include those facts or information that I have subsequently recalled or which have otherwise come to light since that date'.³³¹⁶ The 'Witness Statement' of APT was signed on 14 December 2007 and stated, 'This statement was provided to the Office of Fair Trading on 14 February 2005. I believe that it was true to the best of my knowledge, recollection and belief at that time. This statement does not include those facts or information that I have subsequently recalled or which have otherwise come to light since that date'.³³¹⁷ The 'Witness Statement' of IB was signed on 10 December 2007 and contains the following statement, 'This statement was provided to the Office of Fair Trading on 14 February 2005. I believe it was true to the best of my knowledge, recollection and belief at that time'.³³¹⁸
- IV.729. In the 'Witness Statement' prepared by BB, he explained the decision making process carried out when deciding to tender for a contract. 'When enquiries come in to Wildgoose they are logged in the Enquiry Register...by our estimating assistant, Nicola Hale...Then, a decision will be made as to whether we wish to "price" this particular work, i.e. submit a tender offer. The decision process is generally informal and is usually made initially between myself and the Managing Director, Graham Barber, or one or more of the other Directors'.³³¹⁹ In the 'Witness Statement' prepared by GB, he confirmed 'The tender selection process is dealt with by the Directors and the staff preparing tenders are not involved in this decision making process, although the estimator will know that a cover is to be taken...We will convene an ad hoc meeting and then make a decision between the Directors as to whether we will price a job or not'.³³²⁰
- IV.730. BB stated that 'A number of factors are taken into account when making the decision whether or not to tender for a particular project. These include: the type of work involved and its complexity; the procurement method...; the time scale...; the terms and conditions to be imposed by the client...the geographical location...; the particular client...; other professionals involved...; the likely competition...; and finally the resources within the company...'.³³²¹ BB stated 'If we cannot submit a tender, we would agree to submit a cover bid to avoid upsetting the client by returning the enquiry'.³³²² GB also confirmed that in the circumstances listed above, Wildgoose might have decided to obtain a cover price from a competitor.³³²³

IV.731. GB sent a memorandum to BB on 28 July 2003 setting out the circumstances in which Wildgoose would consider giving or taking a cover price. This memo states;³³²⁴

'In order to avoid a repeat of recent difficulties I propose that we adopt the following policies as discussed:

- If we seek assistance then we do not give assistance to others – to avoid “chain reactions”
- Final assistance should be dealt with at Director/Senior Estimator level and we should ensure that the price is comprehensive – i.e. includes M & E, Provisional Sums etc. – to avoid being lowest when assisted’.

Wildgoose taking cover prices

IV.732. BB explained *'If we decide to take a cover, we will insert “C” (for “Cover”) or “HR” (meaning “Help Required”) against that particular enquiry in the Enquiry Register. “HR” reflects the fact that a cover will be obtained...unless the initial decision is reviewed and we agree to seek assistance from a freelance estimator or possibly another department within the company’.*³³²⁵ In justification for using the abbreviation 'HR', BB stated *'“HR”, if viewed by a client is considered to be a better reference than “C” which they may perceive as either (1) on a scale of A-C, of low interest to us or (2) a possible reference to a cover’.*³³²⁶

IV.733. APT explained *'Those files on which covers are to be taken are placed on a table in the Estimating Department in date order. Once the file gets closer to the tender submission date it is removed and whoever is least busy will make the call or alternatively Bryan Bennett will allocate it to someone to do. This procedure is known to all the Directors at Wildgoose’.*³³²⁷ IB and BB also confirmed that once it was decided that a cover would be taken, the documents would have been put to one side on a work bench in the office.³³²⁸ IB stated that *'Nearer the deadline, one of the estimators would be instructed to make a call to one of the other tenderers in order to take a cover. If a project was aborted halfway through (i.e. a decision was made to submit a cover after all), the estimator would make the call to another contractor or Bryan Bennett would allocate it to someone to make this call’.*³³²⁹

IV.734. BB explained how Wildgoose would find out who else was pricing the tender, 'There are various means available to find out who the other contractors are. Many of the projects on which Wildgoose receives enquiries are published in the trade press, such as the “Contracts Journal”. Glenigans or The Builders Conference will provide this information. In addition, you can call a material supplier or sub-contractor and ask them if they have quoted on a particular project and usually they will tell you who else they have quoted to for that work. At times, additional tender information or adjustments received from architects, engineers and quantity surveyors, have contained the names of all the tendering contractors. Also sub-contractors’ and suppliers’ quotations can carry the names of other tenderers. On occasions, we have also received the initial tender enquiry posted to ourselves by the client, but with another contractor's name upon the enclosed tender invitation letter'.³³³⁰

IV.735. Wildgoose provided some additional information on the use of covers in the industry. Wildgoose stated 'Within Wildgoose, the tendency would have been for the estimator assigned to the task to ask another contractor company with whom he was familiar for assistance (i.e. a cover). This may be because clients can require further information such as costs analysis or a priced bill of quantities and it is easier to ask a contractor the estimator already knows for this assistance. For example, there are half a dozen companies in the Chesterfield area that Wildgoose would often tender against. Of these, we understand that [.....][C] all gave and received cover bids'.³³³¹ 'If Wildgoose required assistance on an enquiry, many competitors would be willing to provide it with a cover or if unable to help, would refer Wildgoose to someone else they knew to be pricing the job concerned. Some contractors would provide an exact cover figure to enter on the tender form and others might indicate that Wildgoose should price around a particular figure'.³³³²

IV.736. Wildgoose also stated that 'Companies would generally endeavour to provide the requesting contractor with a competitive figure as, if the figure was too high, it would make the party requesting the cover look ridiculous in the eyes of the client and that contractor would be reluctant to provide assistance in the future. Therefore, contractors would tend to provide a figure as close to their own figure as they felt comfortable with, usually around 4-5% above'.³³³³

IV.737. BB explained that 'for most covers all we are required to do is obtain the cover figure from one of the other contractors and fill in the tender form itself for submission'.³³³⁴

Wildgoose giving cover prices

IV.738. BB explained that for tenders which Wildgoose was competitively pricing, a tender finance statement was completed. The tender finance statement provided a summary of all the on-site costs, prelims, materials, sub-contractor and labour costs and resulted in a net estimate.³³³⁵

IV.739. In respect of covers given to competitors, BB stated '...we have also provided assistance to companies when they have called us and we have been pricing the work (i.e. giving a cover). If another company calls our reception, they would usually be referred to the person dealing with that particular tender or sometimes myself'.³³³⁶ BB continued, 'Companies unknown to myself and outside our direct geographic area will often ring for assistance, having obtained our name from the Yellow Pages or from other suppliers'.³³³⁷

IV.740. With regard to the actual figure given by Wildgoose as a cover price APT stated, 'When we provide covers, we would endeavour to provide the other contractor with a competitive figure as if it was too high it would make them look ridiculous in the eyes of the client; his figures would not look attractive and would create a feeling that that contractor did not want the job. Therefore, the idea is to keep the other contractor as close to your figure as you would feel comfortable with, usually around 4-5% above. We would not want it to be too close as it may mean that he is asked for further information by the client which we would then be obliged to supply'.³³³⁸

IV.741. In relation to the recording of covers given to competitors BB stated, 'The tender finance statements will sometimes provide details of our competitors when found out during the tender process by the estimator. Also, if contact had been made by any other company seeking assistance, this may also be recorded. This may be indicated by a "C" being written next to the competitor's name (although the presence of a "C" does not necessarily mean Wildgoose had been asked for a cover or indeed given one as this information could have been added post tender ... However, this information is not always detailed on the tender finance statement by the estimator, he may have made a mental note or noted it on a separate piece of paper to explain to the attendees of the [tender adjudication] meeting'.³³³⁹

York House

IV.743. As part of its leniency application, York House made available current employees to be interviewed. These were Robert Andrew Bruce ('RAB') Managing Director of York House and Arthur Richardson ('AR'), Estimating Director for York House. During these voluntary interviews the individuals were asked to give an explanation of York House's involvement in cover pricing.

York House taking cover prices

IV.744. During interview, RAB explained the criteria York House used to decide whether to tender for a contract. RAB stated 'It could be a location, it could be size, it could be the type of work, it could be the client'.³³⁴¹ AR explained that the decision to tender for a contract was a collective decision between, *'Basically myself as head of department and Andy as the Managing Director with the knowledge of the other directors...'*³³⁴² RAB confirmed that if York House decided not to tender for a particular contract, 'We'd probably decide that...depending on who was involved...so that we wouldn't upset anybody, we'd decide to take a cover'.³³⁴³

IV.745. AR explained how he would find out the identity of York House's competitors for a contract. AR stated 'generally your sub-contractors price for everybody...and most of the time you would find out via that route who your competitors were'.³³⁴⁴ RAB further explained 'we used to buy construction news and contracts journal used to publish lists of people who tender in there. Glenigans...ABI...you actually get a list of jobs which are in tender...and within there it would give you most of your competitors and then there used to be an organisation, it was called Builders Confederation...and they used to ring on a regular basis and say are you tendering for this job or that job and they'd tell you who was on the tender list and also sub-contractors would tell you'.³³⁴⁵

IV.746. AR explained that, on receipt of a tender 'I used to have a program when the job come in I would mark it on the program and you could see from the bar chart as to what we've got in on the workload'.³³⁴⁶ York House in its leniency application stated 'They [estimating programs] set out when a tender comes in and when it's due back. This process used to be done by hand. The program is updated (on average) on a weekly basis. It allows the company/estimators to keep an eye on when tenders are due back and lists all jobs currently in. When a job comes in it gets an estimate number and is inputted as a "program". It allows [AR] to allocate estimating resource and decide whether the company can or cannot price a tender'.³³⁴⁷

IV.747. RAB stated that he was aware of the practice of exchanging cover prices but in later years would not have been involved in the actual obtaining of a cover price, 'Arthur has probably done the cover...obtained the cover prices to be honest. But I will have obtained some cover prices before Arthur joined us [in February 2001]'.³³⁴⁸

IV.748. AR explained how the receiving of a cover price worked in practice. 'If you decided at some point along the line that you needed a cover obviously you have got to find out via your subcontractors who is on the list and you would look at the list and you would pick...somebody who is pricing the job to win it so again you don't look as though you haven't priced it'.³³⁴⁹ AR stated that contact with a competitor was carried out by telephone, 'Generally telephones I have never had a person meeting with anybody to discuss a cover ever'.³³⁵⁰

IV.749. AR explained that he would contact a competitor for a cover price maybe as 'a last minute decision and you may ring up a couple of days before the tender is due in ... but if you have a job that you have had in the office for a couple of weeks and you couldn't do anything with it because again you are too busy you generally make contact at the latter stages rather than in the early stages because you just don't want anybody knowing that you are not pricing the job'.³³⁵¹

IV.750. AR continued 'Covers are usually given out at the last minute the very last minute I mean we are all in the same boat we have all got to get the tender in on the same date, the same time and invariably nobody has a price ready until a day or two before it goes in even on the last day'.³³⁵²

IV.751. AR confirmed that the letters 'COV' written on the estimating programs indicate a cover price.³³⁵³

D. The Infringements

IV.752. This section sets out the specific evidence in respect of each Infringement, and the inferences and conclusions drawn by the OFT from that evidence. The Infringements are described in chronological order.

IV.753. For each Infringement, reference should be made not only to the particular part of this section setting out details of the Infringement, but also to the relevant part(s) of section C above detailing the cover pricing activities of any leniency Party(ies) involved in that Infringement, and in addition to the general comments on cover pricing and other bid rigging activities in section B, which precedes both of these sections.

IV.754. The OFT has included, in Annex A towards the end of this Decision, a Navigation Table, which details the paragraphs in which the case against each Party may be found in relation to each relevant Infringement. In the Navigation Table, the Parties are listed in alphabetical order and against each Party is listed the Infringements in which the OFT has found that Party engaged in bid rigging activities, together with references to the relevant paragraphs in this section describing that Infringement and the relevant paragraphs in section C describing the cover pricing activities of the leniency Party(ies) involved in that Infringement, where applicable.

Infringement 6: Conversion of Offices to Flats, 2 Water Lane, Leeds – 3 March 2000

Client: Waller & Partners Ltd

Parties: Strata (formerly known as Weaver) and Quarmby

IV.755. On 1 February 2000, Waller & Partners Ltd, on behalf of their client CPL FURB Ltd, sought tenders for conversion and refurbishment of a small four-storey riverside warehouse, formerly converted to offices, into flats.³³⁵⁴ The following five companies were invited to tender: Quarmby, Brenville Construction, Weaver, Jack Lunn and SHL.³³⁵⁵ The deadline for receipt of tenders was 3 March 2000.³³⁵⁶

IV.756. Waller & Partners Ltd received the following tender returns:³³⁵⁷

IV.757. Although Quarmby won the tender it was not awarded the contract as post tender the client scaled back the project and placed the contract with another contractor.³³⁵⁸

Evidence of agreement and/or concerted practice

Contemporaneous documentary evidence from leniency applicant Strata - Form of Tender

IV.758. During the OFT's search of Strata's premises a ring binder file marked 'Covers from Jan 2000 to Dec 2001' containing various documents, mostly copy Form of Tenders and result letters, was found. A Form of Tender found within this file contained the following handwritten entry on the top right hand corner:³³⁵⁹

'FROM QUARMBY CONSTRUCTION'

IV.759. The Form of Tender was signed by Duncan Ironmonger ('DI'), an estimator at Strata.³³⁶⁰ The Form of Tender also stated that Strata's tender figure was £848,512.³³⁶¹

IV.760. In its response to the Statement, Quarmby noted '...that the interview transcript of Duncan Ironmonger in fact identifies the file as being labelled "Strata Covers Jan 2000 - December 2001". [Quarmby] contends that this is an important discrepancy, particularly as the name "Strata" was not adopted until later than the alleged infringement.'³³⁶² However the contemporaneous tender return form for this tender had the correct company name 'Weaver Construction' (Strata's company name at the time of the Infringement) and tender date '3 March 2000' recorded on it.³³⁶³ The file is clearly headed 'Covers Jan 2000 - December 2001' which is handwritten on a pre-printed Strata label. The fact that the documents were re-filed or the file relabelled when the company had been renamed does not undermine the plain meaning of documents kept within it.

Evidence from leniency applicant - Strata

IV.761. As part of its leniency application, Strata provided to the OFT a list of covers compiled by reference to its contract information sheets, the file 'Covers from Jan 2000 – Dec 2001' and 'contracts in hand' documents. The entry for this tender stated as follows:³³⁶⁴

Date	Project	Strata ref no
03/03/2000	Conversion of Offices to Flats, 2 Water Lane, Leeds for CPL Furb Ltd	T19/00

Cover to	Cover from	Company Name	Company Address	Contract Secured
	✓ OFT:BXM/107	Quarmby Construction	Ilkley

IV.762. Following the issue of the Statement, Strata did not submit any written or oral representations specifically in respect of this Infringement.

Witness evidence from leniency applicant - Strata

IV.763. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, Strata's past and present employees provided further general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.617 to IV.634 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.764. Also during an interview with the OFT on 29 March 2007, conducted in connection with Strata's leniency application, DI provided further information regarding the tender for this contract. DI was shown the Form of Tender³³⁶⁵ for the conversion of offices to flats, 2 Water Lane, Leeds. DI stated '... my initial involvement would be going to Julian...and saying, are we pricing it...no we'll take a cover and then I wouldn't do anything more on it until I found out who the competition was'.³³⁶⁶ During the interview DI laughed, an employee of the OFT asked 'for the benefit of the tape, Mr Ironmonger, you, looked at the, that form of tender, and something caught your eye and you laughed. Could you just explain what you were laughing at please?'.³³⁶⁷ DI replied 'Yeah. I'd written in the top right-hand corner who we'd received a cover from ... Quarmby Construction'.³³⁶⁸ DI confirmed that he put the Form of Tender for a contract on which Strata had taken a cover into a file marked 'covers'.³³⁶⁹ DI also stated 'So, I take it from this I've dropped a few companies in the [unclear]'.³³⁷⁰

IV.765. In its response to the Statement, Quarmby also suggested that the OFT '... has failed to consider other reasonable explanations for such annotation (i.e. 'FROM QUARMBY CONSTRUCTION') such as post-tender discussion. Duncan Ironmonger and Julian Kawecki admit generally to engaging in post-tender discussions on a routine basis in respect of bids that they had not won'.³³⁷¹ The OFT is satisfied that the explanation it has received for the annotation is correct. The document was kept in a file marked 'Covers...', which DI has confirmed to be the file in which Strata kept records of covers it had taken.³³⁷² Further, DI confirmed that 'We wouldn't do it on every one but I seem to recall on certain ones I'd write on the top who we'd got it [the cover] from'.³³⁷³ The OFT considers the explanation of DI, who along with Paul Throssell, was responsible for populating this file, for the annotations he has written to be sufficient for it to be satisfied that the annotations relate to the taking of covers, not to post-tender discussions. Further, the references made at interview by DI and Julian Kawecki to post-tender discussions were not made in connection with the annotations in question.³³⁷⁴

Evidence from other companies – Quarmby

IV.766. The OFT wrote to Quarmby on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender in return for an admission that Quarmby had participated in bid rigging on this tender. The OFT rang the Managing Director of Quarmby on 6 June 2007 to inform him that due to Quarmby's lack of response to the OFT's letter dated 22 March 2007, the OFT were treating this as a rejection of the OFT's Fast Track Offer. The Managing Director confirmed this.³³⁷⁵

IV.767. The OFT subsequently wrote to Quarmby's ultimate parent company at the time of this Infringement, St James Securities, on 6 November 2007, asking it to comment on Quarmby's response to the OFT's Fast Track Offer, given that the OFT intended to hold St James Securities jointly and severally liable for any infringements committed by Quarmby in respect of which the OFT ultimately decided to impose financial penalties. In response to this letter, St James Securities stated that it did not intend to respond to the matters referred to in the OFT's letter.³³⁷⁶

IV.768. Following the issue of the Statement, St James Securities did not submit any written or oral representations in respect of this Infringement.

IV.769. In its response to the Statement, Quarmby noted that the allegations against it do not include the taking of cover prices, only the giving. This is stated to be 'important circumstantial evidence in support of OCC's contention that it has not and does not give cover prices...to merely give cover prices would be to confer on one's competitors a benefit without any advantage to oneself and consequently would be commercially inexplicable and irrational'.³³⁷⁷

³³⁷⁶ Response from St James Securities, OFT Document Reference 14098.

³³⁷⁷ Written representations of Quarmby, 27 June 2008, paragraph 2.7.

IV.770. First, the OFT notes that only three Alleged Infringements were pursued against each non-leniency Party, out of a wider pool of evidence available to the OFT³³⁷⁸ and so the fact that the three allegations in the Statement regarding Quarmby related only to the giving of cover cannot be taken as meaningful evidence of Quarmby's pattern of behaviour. Second, the OFT does not accept that the giving of cover confers a benefit on competitors without any benefit to the firm in question. Indeed, DI explained that when Strata rang competitors to ask them to give cover 'Most of them would just say yes, obviously, because they know they're reducing... their competition'.³³⁷⁹

IV.771. Moreover, the OFT notes that in addition to the evidence from Strata relating to it taking cover from Quarmby on this tender, the OFT also has strong and compelling evidence relating to Admiral taking cover from Quarmby (Infringement 214) and York House taking cover from Quarmby (Infringement 233). The OFT considers it highly improbable that all three of these companies would have mistakenly identified Quarmby as a participant in cover pricing if indeed Quarmby never gave cover prices.

IV.772. In its response to the Statement, Quarmby asserted that it neither gave nor took cover prices as a matter of its corporate policy, and provided witness evidence in support of this assertion.³³⁸⁰ The OFT notes in this regard the evidence of Roger Nelson, Quarmby's Commercial Director, who described becoming aware of the illegality of cover pricing in 2004, and went on to state:

'David Jones [Quarmby's Managing Director] and I agreed that even though we thought it highly unlikely cover price had occurred or was occurring at QCC (because it was not our practice to do so) we should take measures to reinforce the message that no-one within QCC was engaged in the practice of cover pricing or would be in future'.³³⁸¹

IV.773. The OFT takes from this evidence that despite Quarmby's stated policy of not engaging in cover pricing activities, the Commercial Director and Managing Director were not certain that staff were not engaging in cover pricing, but only thought that it was 'highly unlikely' and that this uncertainty justified taking further action to prevent Quarmby's engagement in cover bidding. The OFT therefore considers that any such policy held by Quarmby does not undermine the evidence presented in relation to the giving of cover by Quarmby in this instance.

IV.774. In its response to the Statement, Quarmby stated that its commercial director Roger Nelson recalled '... that this tender was a design and build project as cited in [Quarmby's] tender book ... A design and build tender requires much more detailed information to be submitted to the tenderee as the tenderee essentially scores the tenderer's proposals for "best value" which usually incorporates factors other than price ... As a design and build tender does not consist of the contractor merely pricing a bill of quantities, but providing detailed information to the tenderee, it is unfeasible that a cover price was submitted by Strata for this tender'.³³⁸²

³³⁷⁸ See paragraph II.1470 of Section II (The OFT's Investigation).

³³⁸² Written representations of Quarmby, 27 June 2008, paragraph 2.11(a)(iii); also witness statement of Roger Nelson, paragraphs 16 to 19.

IV.775. The OFT accepts that a company submitting a bid based on a cover price, where the procurement criteria is not only 'lowest price' but also 'most economically advantageous' or 'best value', runs a greater risk of winning the contract, and that if the bid were to consist merely of a price it would be likely to be non-compliant. However, in this instance the OFT does not consider this undermines its conclusion that Quarmby provided a cover price to Strata. First, Strata has admitted to having sought and obtained a cover price from Quarmby. Second, the bid submitted by Strata did contain the level of detail required to render the bid compliant (including a total tender price, a cost of removing lift for re-use sum, a contract period, an earliest start date and two other provisional sums)³³⁸³, notwithstanding that Strata, on its evidence, had taken a cover price. Third, in this tender price was ranked as the most important criteria if not the only one.³³⁸⁴ On balance, therefore, the OFT does not consider the nature of the project and the form of tender required to be evidence negating the possibility of Strata having tendered on the basis of a cover price.

IV.776. By way of alternative argument, Quarmby also stated in its response to the Statement that '[t]he infringement is alleged to have occurred on the 3rd March 2000, the OFT has adduced no evidence that the cover price was given on the 3rd March 2000, save that this was the submission deadline for the tender. [Quarmby] contends that the OFT has not adduced "strong and compelling evidence" in respect of the date on which the alleged infringement is said to have occurred and, specifically, that the alleged infringement occurred after the Competition Act 1998 (the "Act") came into force on 1 March 2000'.³³⁸⁵ Quarmby further stated '[i]t would be the date of that arrangement [the cover pricing agreement/concerted practice arrangement] which would be the relevant date, for competition law purposes. The date of the tender itself would be irrelevant, save to the extent that it provides circumstantial evidence that if the cover price, was given at all (which is denied), it is likely to have been given before 1 March 2000, when the Competition Act 1998 came into effect...'.³³⁸⁶

IV.777. The OFT does not accept Quarmby's assertion that the cover price is likely to have been given before 1 March 2000 since, as PT explained in interview, and as outlined in IV.623 above, Strata would generally tend to obtain cover prices 'the day before the tender was due in'. The OFT is therefore satisfied that on the balance of probabilities the cover price was provided after 1 March 2000.

The OFT's analysis of the evidence and finding

IV.778. From the evidence and arguments presented above, and having taken into account the representations made by the Parties, the OFT draws the following conclusions.

IV.779. Strata and Quarmby each accepted an invitation to tender for this contract.

IV.780. Strata was unable to submit a tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this contract.

³³⁸³ Form of Tender, OFT Document Reference 3504.

³³⁸⁵ Written representations of Quarmby, 27 June 2008, paragraph 2.11(b)(ii).

³³⁸⁶ Written representations of Quarmby, 27 June 2008, paragraph 2.11(b)(ii).

IV.781. Quarmby completed the estimating process for the tender for this contract and it appears that it submitted a bid with the hope of winning the work. This is shown by the price submitted by Quarmby being the lowest received and that it won the contract.

IV.782. Strata's Form of Tender records 'From Quarmby Construction', handwritten in the top right hand corner. Strata and DI confirmed that this shows that it received a cover price from the company noted. This Form of Tender was also found in the file marked 'Covers from Jan 2000 to Dec 2001', which Strata and DI confirmed contained documents and records of covers taken. The OFT considers in the light of the contemporaneous evidence from Strata and DI's admission and explanation of the contemporaneous evidence that Quarmby supplied Strata with a cover price for this tender.

IV.783. The OFT further notes that the tender submitted by Strata was higher than the tender submitted by Quarmby, the pattern consistent with a cover price having been provided.

IV.784. In addition the OFT notes that Quarmby's tender figure is the only figure below Strata's tender figure, and the OFT is therefore satisfied that Strata could only have received a cover figure from Quarmby.

IV.785. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between Strata and Quarmby. The OFT also concludes that Quarmby supplied a figure to Strata for a cover bid.

IV.786. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.758 to IV.785 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.³³⁸⁷ In particular:

- (a) the provision of a figure for a cover bid from Quarmby to Strata was not unilateral³³⁸⁸, and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;³³⁸⁹
- (b) Strata can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from Quarmby (i.e. the cover price) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process;³³⁹⁰ and
- (c) Quarmby can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from Strata (i.e. that Strata did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its conduct in the tendering process.³³⁹¹

IV.787. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that an agreement and/or concerted practice was in place between Quarmby and Strata, in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the contract for the conversion of offices to flats, 2 Water Lane, Leeds, tender deadline 3 March 2000.

³³⁹¹ See paragraphs III.58, III.95 to III.96, and III.125 of the Legal Background section.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.788. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.789. In respect of this tender, the OFT became aware of bid rigging activities by virtue of the information obtained during the visit under section 28 on 6 and 7 July 2005. Strata will not therefore receive 100 per cent immunity in respect of this tender. However, in accordance with paragraph VI.386 of Section VI (Enforcement), the OFT is not imposing any financial penalty on Strata in respect of this Infringement.

Infringement 7: Guiseley School, Fieldhead Road, Guiseley, Leeds – 8 March 2000
Client: Leeds City Council
Parties: Strata and C J Ellmore

IV.790. On 19 January 2000, Leeds City Council sought tenders for a formation of new multi-functional hall at Guiseley School, Fieldhead Road, Guiseley, Leeds.³³⁹² The following five companies were invited to tender: Harlow & Milner, A Ryall & Son (Contractors) Ltd, C J Ellmore, Pullan Construction Ltd and Strata.³³⁹³ The deadline for receipt of tenders was 12:00 noon on 8 March 2000.³³⁹⁴

IV.791. Leeds City Council received the following tender returns.³³⁹⁵

Company	Time & Date tender received	Amount of tender	Awarded contract
Harlow & Milner	Before 12:00 noon on 8 March 2000	£232,942.00
A Ryall & Son (Contractors) Ltd	Before 12:00 noon on 8 March 2000	£232,528.91
C J Ellmore	Before 12:00 noon on 8 March 2000	£218,748.00	Yes
Pullan Construction Ltd	No Tender Returned	N/A
Strata	Before 12:00 noon on 8 March 2000	£229,847.00

IV.792. The tenders received were over budget and the work had to be re-tendered.³³⁹⁶

Evidence of agreement and/or concerted practice

Contemporaneous documentary evidence from leniency applicant Strata – Form of Tender of Tenders and result letters, was found. A Form of Tender found within this file contained the following handwritten entry on the top right hand corner:³³⁹⁷

'FROM ELLMORE CONSTRUCTION'

- IV.794. The Form of Tender was signed by Duncan Ironmonger ('DI'), an estimator at Strata, on 8 March 2000.³³⁹⁸ The Form of Tender also stated that Strata's figure was £229,847.00.³³⁹⁹
- IV.795. In its response to the Statement, C J Ellmore stated that there was a 'complete absence of many of the contemporaneous documents which the witnesses would have been expected to see'.³⁴⁰⁰ Although various documents which might have been available had Strata been awarded the contract were not available to put to DI, as noted in paragraphs IV.122 to IV.127 above, it is common that unsuccessful tenderers do not have such documentary records. The OFT does not consider this undermines the strength of the Form of Tender evidence which was available.
- IV.796. In its response to the Statement, C J Ellmore referred to the destruction by an employee at Strata of the 2002 to 2004 file of Strata's collection of cover price documents and proceeded to assert in respect of this Infringement that '...where there is a complete absence of many of the contemporaneous documents which the witnesses would have expected to see, the destruction of a very important exhibit undermines the reliability of the evidence provided by Strata'.³⁴⁰¹ The OFT does not accept this assertion. The contemporaneous cover price file document is available, and the OFT considers this to be good evidence of Strata taking a cover price from C J Ellmore in respect of this tender. The destruction of documents relating to covers provided in 2002-2004 does not bear upon the credibility of the documents which remain available in respect of covers provided in 2000, and which the OFT recovered independently during a search of Strata's premises.

Evidence from leniency applicant – Strata

- IV.797. As part of its leniency application, Strata provided to the OFT a list of covers compiled by reference to its contract information sheets, the file 'Covers from Jan 2000 – Dec 2001' and 'contracts in hand' documents. The entry for this tender states as follows:³⁴⁰²

IV.798. Following the issue of the Statement, Strata did not submit any written or oral representations specifically in respect of this Infringement.

Witness evidence from leniency applicant - Strata

IV.799. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, Strata's past and present employees provided further general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.617 to IV.634 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.800. Also during an interview with the OFT on 29 March 2007, conducted in connection with Strata's leniency application, DI provided further information regarding the tender for this contract. DI was shown the Form of Tender³⁴⁰³ for the works at Guiseley School, Fieldhead Road, Guiseley and asked how the document indicates the company from whom Strata received a cover figure. DI stated 'Ah, top right-hand corner, front of the form of tender, from Ellmore Construction is what I used to write on to say who we'd receive the cover from'.³⁴⁰⁴ DI confirmed that he put the Form of Tender into a file marked 'covers'.³⁴⁰⁵

Evidence from other companies – C J Ellmore

IV.801. The OFT wrote to C J Ellmore on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that C J Ellmore had participated in bid rigging on this tender. The OFT received an email from Keeble Hawson, representing C J Ellmore, on 4 May 2007 stating '... we are not in a position to advise our client ... without disclosure'.³⁴⁰⁶ The OFT noted C J Ellmore's rejection of the OFT's Fast Track Offer.

IV.802. C J Ellmore provided a witness statement from its Managing Director, Stephen Ellmore ('SE'), which stated that 'I am aware that Ellmores has been approached to give cover prices on occasions in the past and that cover pricing has gone on in some form within the industry. It is Ellmores' policy however not to give or receive cover prices or engage in any other anti-competitive behaviour. This policy was first put in writing in March 2005 but it has always been Ellmores' policy to comply with the law in all respects'.³⁴⁰⁷ The witness statement further stated that the estimator at C J Ellmore responsible for this tender was Andrew Ellmore, who left the firm in or around 2005.³⁴⁰⁸

IV.803. The OFT considers that this evidence of C J Ellmore's company policy regarding cover pricing, which was not in writing at the time of this tender, does not serve to establish that cover pricing did not take place in relation to this tender, in breach of that policy. Although SE was 'involved in estimating from 1987 to 2002' it remains possible that other members of the estimating team, including Andrew Ellmore, may have given cover prices to competitors, including Strata, without the knowledge of SE.

IV.804. In its response to the Statement, C J Ellmore stated that its '...case is that [the] evidence produced in respect of this infringement is not sufficiently strong or compelling'.³⁴⁰⁹ The OFT does not accept C J Ellmore's assertion that it has not satisfied the requisite burden of proof in respect of this Infringement. The OFT notes, as outlined in III.98 to III.105 above, that in price-fixing cases a single item of evidence, or wholly circumstantial evidence may be sufficient to meet the required standard of proof. The OFT considers the contemporaneous documentary evidence and the explanatory witness evidence to be strong and compelling proof of this Infringement. The OFT also considers that the fact the tender was not awarded is irrelevant to the finding of an infringement for the reasons set out in paragraph III.14 of the Legal Background section.

IV.805. In its response to the Statement, C J Ellmore also stated that the *'... OFT infers, from the fact the tender submitted by Strata was higher, that this was consistent with a cover price having been provided. It is submitted that it would be equally consistent with ... Strata having received information from other sources about the amount of money that C J Ellmore was due to tender at.'*³⁴¹⁰ In its response to the Statement, C J Ellmore asked the OFT to consider the possibility that a contractor (A) bidding for a contract could have provided a subcontractor with its full bid price, perfectly legitimately, and for that subcontractor to inform another contractor (B) bidding for the same contract of the full bid price of contractor (A).³⁴¹¹ The OFT does not consider this theoretical alternative explanation provided by C J Ellmore to be at all plausible. There is no evidence that Strata obtained the cover price from other sources in the conduct of this Infringement, but there is evidence from DI that Strata obtained the cover price direct from C J Ellmore.

IV.806. In its response to the Statement, C J Ellmore further stated that the '...OFT infers, from the fact that C J Ellmore's tender figure is the only figure below Strata's tender figure, that Strata could only have received the cover figure from C J Ellmore. It is submitted that this too is equally consistent with information having been supplied to Strata from other sources'.³⁴¹² Again, the OFT does not consider this alternative explanation provided by C J Ellmore to be at all plausible for the same reasons.

IV.807. In its response to the Statement, C J Ellmore also asserted '...[e]ven had there been an agreement or concerted practice, on the facts of [this Infringement], ³⁴⁰⁸ Witness statement of Stephen Ellmore, 26 June 2008, paragraphs 11 to 12.

*the Chapter prohibition [sic] would not have been breached.*³⁴¹³ The OFT does not accept C J Ellmore's assertion that its provision of a cover price to Strata did not breach competition law. The OFT's analysis as to why agreements or concerted practices to provide and/or receive cover prices infringe the Chapter I prohibition is set out in Section III (Legal Background).

The OFT's analysis of the evidence and finding

- IV.808. From the evidence and arguments presented above, and having taken into account the representations made by the Parties, the OFT draws the following conclusions.
- IV.809. Strata and C J Ellmore each accepted an invitation to tender for the contract for works at Guiseley School, Guiseley, Leeds.
- IV.810. Strata was unable to submit a tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this contract.
- IV.811. C J Ellmore completed the estimating process for the tender for this contract and it appears that it submitted a bid with the hope of winning the work. This is shown by the price submitted by C J Ellmore being the lowest received and that it won the contract.
- IV.812. Strata's Form of Tender records 'FROM ELLMORE CONSTRUCTION' handwritten in the top right hand corner. Strata and DI confirmed that this shows that it received a cover price from the company noted. This Form of Tender was also found in the file marked 'Covers from Jan 2000 to Dec 2001', which Strata and DI confirmed contained documents and records of covers taken. The OFT considers in the light of the contemporaneous documentary evidence from Strata, and Strata's admission of taking cover, and DI's explanation of the contemporaneous evidence that C J Ellmore supplied Strata with a cover price for this tender.
- IV.813. The OFT further notes that the tender submitted by Strata was higher than the tender submitted by C J Ellmore, the pattern consistent with a cover price having been provided.
- IV.814. In addition the OFT notes that C J Ellmore's tender figure is the only figure below Strata's tender figure, and the OFT is therefore satisfied that Strata could only have received a cover figure from C J Ellmore.
- IV.815. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between Strata and C J Ellmore. The OFT also concludes that C J Ellmore supplied a figure to Strata for a cover bid.
- IV.816. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.793 to IV.815 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.³⁴¹⁴ In particular:

³⁴¹³ Written representations of C J Ellmore, 25 June 2008, paragraph 35(d).

³⁴¹⁴ See paragraphs III.3 and III.89 to III.126 of the Legal Background section.

- (a) the provision of a figure for a cover bid from C J Ellmore to Strata was not unilateral³⁴¹⁵, and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;³⁴¹⁶
- (b) Strata can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from C J Ellmore (i.e. the cover price) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process;³⁴¹⁷ and
- (c) C J Ellmore can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from Strata (i.e. that Strata did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its conduct in the tendering process.³⁴¹⁸

IV.817. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that an agreement and/or concerted practice was in place between C J Ellmore and Strata, in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the contract for works at Guiseley School, Guiseley, Leeds, tender deadline 8 March 2000.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.818. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.819. In respect of this tender, the OFT became aware of bid rigging activities by virtue of the information obtained during the visit under section 28 on 6 and 7 July 2005. Strata will not therefore receive 100 per cent immunity in respect of this tender. However, in accordance with paragraph VI.386 of Section VI (Enforcement), the OFT is not imposing any financial penalty on Strata in respect of this Infringement.

Infringement 8: Four Flats at Viking Way, Kiveton Park – 14 March 2000
Client: Rotherham Metropolitan Borough Council
Parties: Strata (formerly known as Weaver) and J J & A R Jackson

IV.820. On 11 February 2000, Rotherham Metropolitan Borough Council sought tenders for the construction of four flats at Viking Way, Kiveton Park, Rotherham.³⁴¹⁹ The following six companies were invited to tender: Weaver, Bramall, RMBC Building Works Department, J J & A R Jackson, George Hurst & Sons Ltd, William & Wood (Wath) Limited.³⁴²⁰ The deadline for receipt of tenders was 11:00 am on 14 March 2000.³⁴²¹

IV.823. The Form of Tender was signed by John Slack, an ex-estimator at Strata³⁴²⁴ on 13 March 2000.³⁴²⁵ The Form of Tender also stated that Strata's figure was £175,563.³⁴²⁶

IV.826. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, Strata's past and present employees provided further general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.617 to IV.634 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.827. Also during an interview with the OFT on 29 March 2007, conducted in connection with Strata's leniency application, Duncan Ironmonger ('DI'), an estimator at Strata, provided further information regarding the tender for this contract. DI was shown the Form of Tender³⁴²⁸ for the construction of four flats at Viking Way, Kiveton Park and asked how the document shows the company from whom Strata received a cover figure. DI stated 'Ah, yet again by the name in the top right-hand corner. Cover from Jacksons's ...'.³⁴²⁹ DI confirmed that John Slack was tasked to get a cover price for this contract, because the tender was 'too small' for Strata.³⁴³⁰ DI explained 'it'd be a new build and we weren't into building new houses or flats at that time, particularly of a four number'.³⁴³¹

Evidence from other companies – J J & A R Jackson

IV.828. The OFT wrote to J J & A R Jackson on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that J J & A R Jackson had participated in bid rigging on this tender. In response to this letter J J & A R Jackson admitted 'We provided a cover price to Weaver Building Ltd of Doncaster. We did not win the job'.³⁴³²

IV.829. Following the issue of the Statement, J J & A R Jackson did not submit any written or oral representations.

The OFT's analysis of the evidence and finding

IV.830. From the evidence presented above, the OFT draws the following conclusions.

IV.831. Strata and J J & A R Jackson each accepted an invitation to tender for the contract for the construction of four flats at Viking Way, Kiveton Park.

IV.832. Strata was unable to submit a tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this contract.

IV.833. Strata's Form of Tender records 'Cover from Jacksons', handwritten in the top right hand corner. Strata and DI confirmed that this shows that it received a cover price from the company noted. This Form of Tender was also found in the file marked 'Covers from Jan 2000 to Dec 2001', which Strata and DI confirmed contained documents and records of covers taken. The OFT considers in the light of the contemporaneous evidence from Strata and DI's admission and explanation of the contemporaneous evidence, and J J & A R

Jackson's admission that they gave a cover price to Weaver, that J J & A R Jackson supplied Strata with a cover price for this tender.

IV.834. The OFT further notes that the tender submitted by Strata was higher than the tender submitted by J J & A R Jackson, the pattern consistent with a cover price having been provided.

IV.835. Both companies have admitted to bid rigging in relation to this tender. The OFT notes that J J & A R Jackson admitted that the party with whom it engaged in bid rigging was 'Weaver', without being shown the OFT's evidence that Strata was involved. This provides additional independent corroboration of the OFT's evidence in respect of this tender.

IV.836. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between Strata and J J & A R Jackson. The OFT also concludes that J J & A R Jackson supplied a figure to Strata for a cover bid.

IV.837. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.822 to IV.836 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.³⁴³³ In particular:

- (a) the provision of a figure for a cover bid from J J & A R Jackson to Strata was not unilateral³⁴³⁴, and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;³⁴³⁵
- (b) Strata can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from J J & A R Jackson (i.e. the cover price) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process;³⁴³⁶ and
- (c) J J & A R Jackson can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from Strata (i.e. that Strata did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its conduct in the tendering process.³⁴³⁷

IV.838. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that an agreement and/or concerted practice was in place between J J & A R Jackson and Strata, in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the contract for the construction of four flats at Viking Way, Kiveton Park, tender deadline 14 March 2000.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.839. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

³⁴³⁷ See paragraphs III.58, III.95 to III.96, and III.125 of the Legal Background section.

IV.840. In respect of this tender, the OFT became aware of bid rigging activities by virtue of the information obtained during the visit under section 28 on 6 and 7 July 2005. Strata will not therefore receive 100 per cent immunity in respect of this tender. However, in accordance with paragraph VI.386 of Section VI (Enforcement), the OFT is not imposing any financial penalty on Strata in respect of this Infringement.

Infringement 9: Residential Training Centre, Ollerton – 11 April 2000
Client: Nottinghamshire County Council
Parties: ARG and J J & A R Jackson

IV.841. On 24 March 2000, Nottinghamshire County Council sought tenders for conversion of a first-floor flat for office use, Ollerton residential unit.³⁴³⁸ The following six companies were invited to tender: Carmalor, Robert Woodhead, J J & A R Jackson, Greenwood, ARG and N.C.C. Building Direct.³⁴³⁹ The tender deadline was 10:00 am on 11 April 2000.³⁴⁴⁰

IV.842. Nottinghamshire County Council received the following tender returns:³⁴⁴¹

Evidence from leniency applicant - ARG

IV.844. As part of its leniency application, ARG provided to the OFT 'a table listing the contracts since January 2000 where ARG has been involved in cover pricing, including the names of the companies involved, the individuals within those companies that ARG has been in contact with in respect of cover pricing, together with details of dates and any supporting documentary evidence which ARG is able to provide'.³⁴⁴³ The table contained the following entry for this contract:³⁴⁴⁴

IV.845. In its response to the Statement, ARG confirmed that it had '...admitted cover pricing in relation to this tender but they are unable to recollect any details. They can only assume that they used a cover price due to a high level of work at the time and would therefore, have been unable to carry out the works had they been successful'.³⁴⁴⁵

Witness evidence from leniency applicant – ARG

- IV.846. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, ARG's past and present employees provided further general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.174 to IV.181 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.
- IV.847. During a telephone interview conducted on 27 September 2007 with Jackie Gregory ('JG') of ARG, the OFT pointed out that the figure ARG submitted was higher than the figure submitted by J J & A R Jackson for this contract, as confirmed by the client and J J & A R Jackson. Therefore, the OFT could not understand how ARG could have given J J & A R Jackson a cover price lower than its own tender figure as stated in ARG's table. JG explained that ARG had made a genuine mistake when compiling its leniency schedule and had interpreted the entry, 'C. JACKSONS 83,614-00' in the estimate value column on the estimate schedule to mean that ARG had given J J & A R Jackson a cover price. However, after consultation with Allan Gregory ('AG') Managing Director of ARG, JG confirmed that although neither AG nor JG had any specific recollection with regard to the exchanging of a cover price in relation to this tender, ARG did accept on the basis of the tender figures submitted that ARG did receive a cover price from J J & A R Jackson.³⁴⁴⁶

- IV.848. The OFT wrote to J J & A R Jackson on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that J J & A R Jackson had participated in bid rigging on this tender. In response to this letter J J & A R Jackson admitted 'We provided a cover price to ARG Mansfield Ltd of Mansfield. We did not win the job'.³⁴⁴⁷
- IV.849. Following the issue of the Statement, JJ & AR Jackson did not submit any written or oral representations.

The OFT's analysis of the evidence and finding

- IV.850. From the evidence presented above, the OFT draws the following conclusions.
- IV.851. ARG and J J & A R Jackson each accepted an invitation to tender for internal alterations to a residential training centre at Ollerton.
- IV.852. Both companies submitted a tender. ARG was unable to submit a competitive tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this contract.
- IV.853. An entry on the Estimate Schedule and Chase Control sheet found at ARG records 'C. JACKSONS 83,614-00' in the estimate value column. JG on behalf of AG confirmed that the handwritten entry could mean that ARG either gave or received a cover price to/from J J & A R Jackson. However, on the basis that the tender figure submitted by ARG was higher than the tender submitted by J J & A R Jackson, as confirmed by the client, JG and AG accepted that ARG received a cover price from J J & A R Jackson.

³⁴⁴⁶ Telephone interview, OFT Document Reference 14364.

- IV.854. J J & A R Jackson admitted that it gave a cover price to ARG, in response to the OFT's letter of 22 March 2007.
- IV.855. The OFT considers in the light of the contemporaneous evidence from ARG, JG's and AG's admissions and explanations of that contemporaneous evidence, and J J & A R Jackson's admission that it gave a cover price to ARG, that J J & A R Jackson supplied ARG with a cover price for this tender.
- IV.856. Both companies have admitted to bid rigging in relation to this tender. The OFT notes that J J & A R Jackson admitted that the party with whom it engaged in bid rigging was ARG, without being shown the OFT's evidence that ARG was involved. This provides additional independent corroboration of the OFT's evidence in respect of this tender.
- IV.857. The OFT further notes that the tender submitted by ARG was higher than the tender submitted by J J & A R Jackson, the pattern consistent with a cover price having been provided.
- IV.858. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between ARG and J J & A R Jackson. The OFT also concludes that J J & A R Jackson supplied a figure to ARG for a cover bid.
- IV.859. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.843 to IV.858 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.³⁴⁴⁸ In particular:
- (a) the provision of a figure for a cover bid from J J & A R Jackson to ARG was not unilateral³⁴⁴⁹, and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;³⁴⁵⁰
 - (b) ARG can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from J J & A R Jackson (i.e. the cover price) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process;³⁴⁵¹ and
 - (c) J J & A R Jackson can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from ARG (i.e. that ARG did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its conduct in the tendering process.³⁴⁵²
- IV.860. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that an agreement and/or concerted practice was in place between ARG and J J & A R Jackson, in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the tender for internal alterations to a residential training centre at Ollerton, tender deadline 11 April 2000.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.861. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.862. In respect of this tender, the OFT became aware of bid rigging activities by virtue of the information obtained during the visit to ARG under section 28 on 28 June 2005. ARG will not therefore receive 100 per cent immunity in respect of this tender. However, ARG will receive its normal leniency percentage reduction from the fine that the OFT is imposing in respect of this tender.

Parties: Irwins and GMI

IV.863. F R Evans (Leeds) Ltd sought tenders for an office development at Lancaster Park, York. The following six companies were invited to tender: Guilford Construction, GMI, Stainforth, Irwins, Oldfield Watson and Kier Northern.³⁴⁵³ The deadline for receipt of tenders was 12:00 noon on 12 June 2000.

IV.864. F R Evans (Leeds) Ltd received the following tender returns.³⁴⁵⁴

Evidence of agreement and/or concerted practice

Contemporaneous documentary evidence from leniency applicant Irwins – Tender Register and Form of Tender

IV.865. During the OFT's search of Irwins' premises a Tender Register was found. The Tender Register contained the following entries in respect of this tender:³⁴⁵⁵

Tender no and date Received	Project	Client	Type of Works, % Diff	Amount tendered
0500053 24 May 640	Proposed Offices Development Lancaster Park York	F R Evans (Leeds) Ltd Richard Boothroyd Associates Kilmartin Plowman & Partners	B Q Cover	1248669

Date tender Due	Estimator	Competition
Fri 9 June	IPN	G.M.I

IV.866. Irwins also provided to the OFT its Form of Tender for this contract.³⁴⁵⁶ This Form of Tender states that it was for a proposed office development at Lancaster Park York for F.R. Evans (Leeds) Limited. In the top left hand corner is handwritten 'GMI.'.³⁴⁵⁷ The Form of Tender was signed on 12 June 2000 and the figure Irwins submitted was £1,248,669.00.³⁴⁵⁸

IV.867. In its response to the Statement, GMI suggested that the extract from Irwins' Tender Register set out above does not constitute adequate contemporaneous evidence in respect of this Infringement, citing a number of reasons.

IV.868. First, GMI suggested that Irwins did not have a consistent method by which it recorded the taking of cover prices.³⁴⁵⁹ The OFT considers that it is irrelevant if Irwins did not record all of the cover prices that it took, or all of the details (such as name of competitor) for cover prices that it took, providing that the entries that were made in its Tender Register accurately recorded the taking of a cover price, and GMI has not produced any evidence to suggest that this is not the case in respect of this Infringement.

IV.869. The OFT notes that in relation to a different, and arguably less explicit, entry in Irwin's Tender Register in respect of a tender for an office construction contract at Centurion Park in York on 22 March 2002³⁴⁶⁰, GMI confirmed that for the tender in question Irwins did submit a price provided to it by GMI.³⁴⁶¹ Moreover, the accuracy of entries in Irwin's Tender Register has also been confirmed by other Parties' admissions of cover pricing in relation to Infringements 62, 157 and 165.

IV.870. Secondly, while discussing this Infringement GMI made a number of suggestions regarding entries in the Tender Register that comprised either 'c' or a number of companies in the 'Competition' column.³⁴⁶² Neither of these situations applies here where there is an explicit reference to 'Cover' and only one firm, in this case GMI, named as competition.

IV.871. Thirdly, GMI suggested that Irwins might have amended the Tender Register after the commencement of the OFT's investigation as part of a strategy to cooperate with the OFT and implicate its competitors.³⁴⁶³ This suggestion is clearly without any foundation, given that the Tender Register was found by the OFT at Irwins' premises during its visit and before Irwins' application for leniency, as described in the Statement and at paragraph IV.865 above. The OFT took the copy of this document during its search of Irwins' premises and can confirm that it is a faithful facsimile of the original document, so the OFT also considers it irrelevant that GMI has been unable to obtain an original of the Tender Register from Irwins.³⁴⁶⁴

Evidence from leniency applicant – Irwins

IV.872. As part of its leniency application, Irwins' legal representatives provided a general explanation of its participation in cover pricing.³⁴⁶⁵ This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.408 to IV.419 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.873. In addition to its leniency application, Irwins provided to the OFT two schedules, one each for 'Covers Taken' and 'Covers Given', which detail projects/contracts identified by the company during the course of an internal investigation conducted by Ivan Peter Nelson ('IPN'), Estimating Director at Irwins into potential cover prices. At number 19 of the 'Covers Taken' schedule is the following entry:³⁴⁶⁶

John Naylor

IV.874. Irwins also provided to the OFT a schedule listing its competitors' contact details. The name of GMI appears on the list and 'John Naylor' is named as the contact, with a telephone number of [...] [C].³⁴⁶⁷

IV.875. Following the issue of the Statement, Irwins did not submit any written or oral representations specifically in respect of this Infringement.

IV.876. GMI alleged that the two schedules provided by Irwins were liable to be inaccurate because they had been compiled after the commencement of the OFT's investigation and would have been affected by Irwins' desire to reduce its penalties by cooperating with the OFT.³⁴⁶⁸ The OFT does not consider that the mere fact that a document has been compiled by a leniency applicant cooperating with the OFT under the leniency programme calls into question the veracity of that document. While the OFT is not according the same evidential weight to Irwins' schedules provided under leniency as it is to contemporaneous documents and witness testimony, the OFT considers these documents provide evidence of Irwins' position as to its engagement in cover pricing on this tender, and as such constitutes evidence additional to the available contemporaneous records and witness evidence.

Witness evidence from leniency applicant Irwins

IV.877. During an interview with the OFT on 8 March 2007, conducted in connection with Irwins' leniency application, IPN provided further general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.408 to IV.419 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.878. Also during this interview, IPN was shown the 'Tender Register'³⁴⁶⁹ and in particular the reference to the entry for proposed office development at Lancaster Park, York and was asked if he could recall anything about that contract. IPN replied 'Yeah. This, will be one that we have absolutely no chance whatever of getting it...'.³⁴⁷⁰ The OFT asked why there was no chance of Irwins securing this contract, IPN replied 'I would say that GMI would get that, without even trying. They get 90% of Evans work'.³⁴⁷¹ IPN confirmed that the presence of the handwritten word 'Cover' in the fourth column on the tender register shows that Irwins took a cover in relation to that contract, 'I'm getting a bit more explicit there ... pretty obvious...'.³⁴⁷² IPN was then shown the Form of Tender for this contract, and asked about the significance of the reference to 'GMI' handwritten in the top left hand corner.³⁴⁷³ IPN replied 'There you go, yeah'.³⁴⁷⁴ IPN confirmed that this shows a cover price was received from GMI.³⁴⁷⁵

IV.879. In its response to the Statement, GMI suggested that IPN's evidence was undermined by some form of grudge against GMI and by doubts over his ability to remember events that happened several years previously.³⁴⁷⁶ The OFT considers that IPN's recollection in interview was clear. The interview with IPN is not the only piece of evidence upon which the OFT relies; on the contrary, the OFT relies on two pieces of contemporaneous evidence for this Infringement which are explained by IPN's witness evidence. IPN's interview was carried out with the agreement of his employers who were legally represented and any suggestion that either IPN or Irwins sought to obtain an advantage by fabricating evidence cannot be sustained and has not been supported by any contemporaneous evidence contradicting the OFT's case. On the contrary, similar evidence from IPN in relation to other Parties has been confirmed by their admissions of Infringements 62, 157 and 165.

IV.880. GMI also suggested that the unreliability of IPN's evidence was also shown by his suggestion that GMI obtained 90 per cent of Evans' work.³⁴⁷⁷ In order to contradict this suggestion, GMI provided evidence that between July 1999 and August 2002 it obtained only one project from Evans, although without any information as to the number of contracts which Evans put to tender during that period. However, the OFT first notes that this tender took place in June 2000, early in that three year period. At that time IPN may well have had a perception that GMI won a lot of work from Evans. Secondly, this perception would have been strengthened if GMI had won a lot of work from Evans in the preceding years – in this connection, the OFT notes that by GMI's own admission it has a 'strong and trusting relationship' with Evans lasting for 24 years.³⁴⁷⁸ Thirdly, even if IPN was mistaken as to the amount of Evans' work obtained by GMI, such mistaken perception may nonetheless have led him to take a cover price and therefore even if GMI did less work for Evans in the preceding years the OFT does not consider that this undermines the reliability of IPN's evidence as a whole.

Evidence from other companies – GMI

IV.881. The OFT wrote to GMI on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that GMI had participated in bid rigging on this tender. The OFT received a call from [...] [C] of Addleshaw Goddard, who were then representing GMI, on 16 May 2007, confirming that GMI had rejected the OFT's Fast Track Offer.³⁴⁷⁹

³⁴⁷⁸ Written representations of GMI, 24 June 2008, paragraph 51.2.

³⁴⁷⁹ File note of telephone conversation, OFT Document Reference 10355.

IV.882. In its response to the Statement, GMI claimed there was no reason for it to participate in cover pricing as it clearly had a policy of declining tenders where, for whatever reason, it felt unable to submit a tender, noting that an example of this can be found in the description of Infringement 211 where GMI was an invited bidder but declined to tender.³⁴⁸⁰ The OFT notes that the present Infringement relates to the provision of a cover price, not the acceptance of one, which is compatible with a policy of declining tenders. Though the OFT has found, in paragraph IV.73 above, that a common motive for providing cover prices was reciprocity, it notes that the undertaking concerned may have other motives, such as facilitating the reduction in competitive bids for a tender which it wishes to win. Therefore, any evidence of GMI declining tenders has no bearing on the finding that it gave a cover price to a competitor.

The OFT's analysis of the evidence and finding

IV.883. From the evidence and arguments presented above, and having taken into account the representations made by the Parties, the OFT draws the following conclusions.

IV.884. Irwins and GMI each accepted an invitation to tender for the contract for an office development at Lancaster Park, York. Irwins was unable to submit a tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this contract.

IV.885. GMI appears to have completed the estimating process for the tender for this contract and came second lowest in the tender process.

IV.886. Irwins' Tender Register recorded 'G.M.I.' handwritten in the final column. Also 'GMI.' was handwritten on the Form of Tender. No other competitors were written in respect of this tender either on Irwins' Tender Register or on its Form of Tender. IPN confirmed that he received a cover price from GMI.

IV.887. In addition 'cover' was handwritten in the type of work/ percentage difference column on Irwins' Tender Register. IPN confirmed that 'cover' handwritten in this column shows that Irwins sought a cover price in relation to this contract. The OFT considers in the light of the contemporaneous evidence from Irwins and IPN's admission and explanation of the contemporaneous evidence, that GMI supplied Irwins with a cover price for this tender.

IV.888. The OFT notes that the tender submitted by Irwins was higher than the tender submitted by GMI, the pattern consistent with a cover price having been provided.

IV.889. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between Irwins and GMI. The OFT also concludes that GMI supplied a figure to Irwins for a cover bid.

IV.890. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.865 to IV.889 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.³⁴⁸¹ In particular:

³⁴⁸⁰ Written representations of GMI, 24 June 2008, paragraphs 68 to 71.

³⁴⁸¹ See paragraphs III.3 and III.89 to III.126 of the Legal Background section.

- (a) the provision of a figure for a cover bid from GMI to Irwins was not unilateral³⁴⁸², and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;³⁴⁸³
- (b) Irwins can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from GMI (i.e. the cover price) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process;³⁴⁸⁴ and
- (c) GMI can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from Irwins (i.e. that Irwins did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its conduct in the tendering process.³⁴⁸⁵

IV.891. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that an agreement and/or concerted practice was in place between Irwins and GMI, in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the tender for an office development at Lancaster Park, York, tender deadline 12 June 2000.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.892. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.893. In respect of this tender, the OFT became aware of bid rigging activities by virtue of the information obtained during the visit under section 28 on 21 March 2006. Irwins will not therefore receive 100 per cent immunity in respect of this tender. However, in accordance with paragraph VI.386 of Section VI (Enforcement), the OFT is not imposing any financial penalty on Irwins in respect of this Infringement.

Alleged Infringement 16: Not included in the Decision

Infringement 17: Internal Redecoration of King Edward Court, Nottingham – 2 August 2000

Client: Crown Prosecution Service

Parties: Bodill and Thorndyke

IV.894. On 11 July 2000, the Crown Prosecution Service sought tenders for the internal redecoration of King Edward Court, Nottingham. The return date for the tender was 2 August 2000 and four companies were invited to tender: Thorndyke, Loach, Abbey Construction (Nottingham) Limited and Bodill.³⁴⁸⁶

IV.895. The Crown Prosecution Service received the following tender returns by 2 August 2000:³⁴⁸⁷

Company	Time and date tender received	Amount of tender	Awarded the tender
Thorndyke	09:00 1 August 2000	£12,367.00	Yes
Loach	Declined to tender
Abbey Construction (Nottingham) Limited	09:00 2 August 2000	£29,185.90
Bodill	09:00 1 August 2000	£14,161.00

Evidence of agreement and/or concerted practice

Contemporaneous documentary evidence from leniency applicant Bodill – tender sheet

IV.896. In Bodill's tender sheet for this tender, provided to the OFT as part of its leniency application, under the section headed 'Tenderers', the following entries have been made, all of which are handwritten:³⁴⁸⁸

1. BODILL
 2. LOACH. "SENT BACK "
 3. *THORNDYKE. Mr. GOODE
- [...] [C] Tel [...] [C] Ringing US'

IV.897. The tender sheet states that Bodill's submitted price was £14,161 and has a © in the top right hand corner.³⁴⁸⁹

Evidence from leniency applicant Bodill

IV.898. As part of its leniency application, Bodill provided a general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.229 to IV.242 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.899. In particular, Bodill provided to the OFT an analysis of its tender sheets since March 2000 and explained that when a '*' is written against a contractor's name it means that it gave Bodill a cover price.³⁴⁹⁰ In respect of this tender, Bodill confirmed that it received a cover price from Thorndyke³⁴⁹¹ and that it submitted a token tender.³⁴⁹²

Witness evidence from leniency applicant Bodill

IV.900. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, Bodill's employees provided further general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.229 to IV.242 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

Evidence from other companies – Thorndyke

IV.901. The OFT wrote to Price Waterhouse Coopers LLP, the appointed liquidator for Thorndyke, on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that Thorndyke had participated in bid rigging on this tender. The OFT received no response to that letter, and in a follow-up call Pricewaterhouse Coopers LLP confirmed that they understood that the OFT would treat the absence of a response as a rejection of its offer.³⁴⁹³

IV.902. Following the issue of the Statement, Thorndyke did not submit any written or oral representations.

The OFT's analysis of the evidence and finding

IV.904. Bodill and Thorndyke each accepted an invitation to tender for this contract.

IV.905. Bodill was unable to submit a tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this tender. It appears that Thorndyke completed the estimating process for this contract and that it submitted a tender with the hope of winning the work. This is shown by the facts that it submitted the lowest price and that it won the tender.

IV.906. In regard to Thorndyke, Bodill's tender sheet records '*0860 0780 807126 THORNDYKE. Mr. GOODE Tel [.....] [C] Ringing US'. Bodill has confirmed that this shows that it received a cover price from Thorndyke. The OFT considers that this also shows more specifically that Bodill was expecting a telephone call from Thorndyke before the date for submitting its tender, in order to obtain its cover price. Bodill recorded on the tender sheet the figure £14,161 as the tender figure and this was the exact figure that Bodill submitted.

IV.907. Bodill's tender sheet records the name of a Thorndyke estimator, 'Mr Goode', and the telephone number '[.....] [C]'. Company information for Thorndyke shows that the telephone number '[.....] [C]' is Thorndyke's.³⁴⁹⁴

IV.908. Although Thorndyke has not admitted engaging in this bid rigging activity, the OFT considers that the contemporaneous evidence from Bodill together with Bodill's admission and explanation of that evidence, demonstrates that Thorndyke did in fact engage in bid rigging activity on this tender.

³⁴⁹³ File note of telephone conversation, OFT Document Reference 10889.

³⁴⁹⁴ FAME report, OFT Document Reference 12552, page 15.

- IV.910. The OFT also notes that the tender submitted by Bodill was higher than the tender submitted by Thorndyke, a pattern consistent with a cover price having been provided.
- IV.911. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between Thorndyke and Bodill. The OFT also concludes that Thorndyke supplied a figure to Bodill for a cover bid.
- IV.912. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.896 to IV.911 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.³⁴⁹⁵ In particular:
- (a) the provision of a figure for a cover bid from Thorndyke to Bodill was not unilateral³⁴⁹⁶, and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;³⁴⁹⁷
 - (b) Bodill can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from Thorndyke (i.e. the cover price) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process;³⁴⁹⁸ and
 - (c) Thorndyke can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from Bodill (i.e. that Bodill did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its conduct in the tendering process.³⁴⁹⁹
- IV.913. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that an agreement and/or concerted practice was in place between Bodill and Thorndyke, in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the tender for the internal redecoration of King Edward Court, Nottingham, tender deadline 2 August 2000.

Immunity and leniency assessment

- IV.914. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.
- IV.915. Bodill informed the OFT of the bid rigging activities in respect of this tender before the OFT became aware of these activities from any other source. Bodill will therefore receive 100 per cent immunity from the fine that the OFT is imposing in respect of this tender.

Infringement 18: Superstore, Retail Units and Petrol Filling Station, St Andrew's Retail Park, Small Heath, Birmingham – 11 August 2000
Client: William Morrison Supermarkets plc
Parties: Sol and Bowmer & Kirkland

IV.916. On 14 July 2000, William Morrison Supermarkets plc ('WMS') sought tenders for the construction of a superstore, retail units and petrol filling station at St Andrew's Retail Park, Small Heath, Birmingham. The following six companies were invited to tender: Sol, Carillion Building, Laing Ltd, Sir Robert McAlpine, Kier³⁵⁰⁰ and Bowmer & Kirkland. The closing date for return of tender was 11 August 2000 by 12:00 noon.³⁵⁰¹

IV.917. WMS received the following tender returns:³⁵⁰²

Company	Date Tender Received	Amount of Tender	Awarded Tender
Sol	11 August 2000	£8,545,179	Yes
Carillion Building	11 August 2000	£8,884,535
Laing Ltd	11 August 2000	£8,887,495
Sir Robert McAlpine	11 August 2000	£8,912,083
Kier	11 August 2000	£8,940,644
Bowmer & Kirkland	11 August 2000	£8,992,604

Evidence of agreement and/or concerted practice

Contemporaneous evidence from leniency applicant Sol – Tender Register

IV.918. During the OFT visit to Sol's premises under section 27 on 18 January 2006 a copy of Sol's Tender Register was obtained.³⁵⁰³ This contained the following entry for this tender:³⁵⁰⁴

³⁵⁰⁰ The client information for this tender lists Kier Construction as tendering for this contract. In a letter to the OFT following the issue of the Statement, however, Kier informed the OFT that the company which submitted this tender was Kier Regional, i.e. Kier, not Kier Construction (letter from Kier, 28 April 2008, page 2).

Evidence from leniency applicant Sol

IV.919. As part of its leniency application, Sol provided a general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.593 to IV.616 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.920. In particular, Sol provided the OFT with an analysis of its tender sheets since March 2000. In respect of this tender Sol confirmed that it gave a cover price to Bowmer & Kirkland.

IV.921. It is response to the Statement, Sol confirmed '[a]s can be seen from the extract from Sol's tender register [in the Statement] Sol gave a cover price on this job to Bowmer & Kirkland. The cover was requested by Bowmer & Kirkland...'.³⁵⁰⁵

Witness evidence from leniency applicant Sol

IV.922. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, Sol's employees provided further general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.593 to IV.616 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.923. When interviewed about this tender, John Cummings ('JC'), Chief Estimator at Sol³⁵⁰⁶, identified the writing in the Tender Register³⁵⁰⁷ as his. When asked if the figure in the 'Tender Sum' column³⁵⁰⁸ was the figure Sol tendered he said, 'Yeah'.³⁵⁰⁹ He was asked if the entries in the 'Competition' column were in his handwriting and what the source of that information had been. He replied, 'That is my handwriting, yeah... again, you know, subcontractors, um, Builders' Conference occasionally, occasionally just looking at Contracts Journal. You know, you can look and see the list of tenders'.³⁵¹⁰ When asked to explain the entry 'B&K 'C' FROM SOL' in the 'COMPETITION' column he replied 'That's cover from Sol... we gave them a cover. We priced that and won the job, actually, as it was, that one. But B&K rang me up and we gave them cover, Roger Walker....'.³⁵¹¹ JC was asked who Roger Walker was. He said, 'He's a senior estimator at B&K'³⁵¹² and added, 'He probably rang me four weeks before....[the tender deadline]'.³⁵¹³ JC confirmed that in the alternative, the cover price may have been given to Richard Bacon at Bowmer & Kirkland.³⁵¹⁴

Evidence from other companies – Bowmer & Kirkland

IV.924. The OFT wrote to Bowmer & Kirkland on 22 March 2007, offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty it might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that Bowmer & Kirkland had participated in bid rigging on this tender. In response to this letter Bowmer & Kirkland did not admit that it had engaged in bid rigging on this particular tender.³⁵¹⁵

IV.925. Following the issue of the Statement, the OFT received a letter from Dickinson Dees LLP, representing Bowmer & Kirkland, which stated 'Our client is content to make an admission in relation to Alleged Infringement 18'.³⁵¹⁶

IV.926. In its response to the Statement, Bowmer & Kirkland stated in respect of this Infringement '...on the scant information provided to B&K on 22 March 2007, B&K was then unable to form a view. After examination of the [Statement] and the evidence supporting the allegation that B&K sought and obtained a cover price, the allegation appears to be credible ... The facts are now admitted'.³⁵¹⁷

IV.927. In its oral representations on the Statement, Bowmer & Kirkland stated in respect of this Infringement '..... one of our estimators decided to tender and, and, and took a cover on this particular job'.³⁵¹⁸

The OFT's analysis of the evidence and finding

³⁵⁰⁸ Two figures appear in the Tender Sum Column. 32 wks [weeks] £8,748,953 and 37 wks [weeks], £8,549,179. Neither of these is the figure Sol submitted for this tender to the client. JC was not asked to explain this anomaly.

³⁵¹⁷ Written representations of Bowmer & Kirkland, 4 July 2008, paragraph 7.

- IV.929. Sol and Bowmer & Kirkland each accepted an invitation to tender for this contract. It appears that Sol completed the estimating process for the tender for this contract. This is shown by the fact that Sol submitted the lowest bid and won the contract. Bowmer & Kirkland was unable to submit a tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this contract.
- IV.930. The Tender Register entry for this tender shows that Sol provided Roger Walker or Richard Bacon at Bowmer & Kirkland with a cover price, indicated by the entry 'B&K 'C' FROM SOL' in the 'COMPETITION' column and 'RING ROGER WALKER/RICHARD BACON' in the 'RESULTS & COMMENTS' column of the Tender Register. Sol confirmed that this meant that it gave a cover price to Bowmer & Kirkland for this tender. Specifically, the OFT considers that this entry shows that Sol had registered the fact that Bowmer & Kirkland wanted a cover price and had arranged to phone Bowmer & Kirkland nearer to the deadline for the tender with that cover price.
- IV.931. JC of Sol confirmed in interview that he provided Roger Walker, or in the alternative Richard Bacon, at Bowmer & Kirkland with a cover price for this tender. JC confirmed that Roger Walker was a 'senior estimator at B&K', whilst Herbert Baggaley provided a list of 'construction companies giving or receiving covers' which included the name of Richard Bacon at Bowmer & Kirkland.³⁵¹⁹
- IV.932. In connection with its application for leniency, Sol provided the OFT with a list of undertakings with whom it had exchanged cover prices. Among these was the name of Roger Walker at Bowmer & Kirkland.
- IV.933. The tender figure of £8,992,604 submitted by Bowmer & Kirkland is in keeping with a cover price being sufficiently higher than the winning bid to remain credible while also ensuring that the undertaking lost the tender.
- IV.934. The OFT notes that both Parties have now admitted their involvement in cover pricing in respect of this Infringement.
- IV.935. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between Sol and Bowmer & Kirkland. The OFT also concludes that Sol supplied a figure to Bowmer & Kirkland for a cover bid.
- IV.936. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.918 to IV.935 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.³⁵²⁰ In particular:
- (a) the provision of a figure for a cover bid from Sol to Bowmer & Kirkland was not unilateral³⁵²¹, and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;³⁵²²
 - (b) Bowmer & Kirkland can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from Sol (i.e. the cover price) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process;³⁵²³ and

³⁵²⁰ See paragraphs III.3 and III.89 to III.126 of the Legal Background section.

³⁵²¹ See paragraph IV.73 of the General comments on cover pricing section.

³⁵²² See paragraphs III.48 to III.51 and III.93 to III.94 of the Legal Background section.

³⁵²³ See paragraphs III.58, III.95 to III.96, and III.125 of the Legal Background section.

- (c) Sol can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from Bowmer & Kirkland (i.e. that Bowmer & Kirkland did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its conduct in the tendering process.³⁵²⁴

IV.937. In its response to the Statement, Sol refuted the 'OFT assertion... that it took account of its knowledge that Bowmer & Kirkland were not submitting a competitive bid when determining its own conduct in the tender process'.³⁵²⁵

IV.938. The OFT notes that the presumption that an undertaking involved in an exchange of information with a competitor and who acts on the market, for example by submitting a tender, is a legal presumption³⁵²⁶ and that therefore the OFT is not required to adduce evidence in support of this. The OFT does not consider that Sol has rebutted the application of the presumption in this case. An undertaking may 'take account' of the information it receives from a competitor in a number of ways when determining its conduct in relation to this or future tenders, so even if the OFT were to accept Sol's assertion that the cover pricing did not affect its actual price submitted (which is not the case), that would be insufficient to demonstrate that the conduct fell short of an agreement and/or concerted practice in breach of the Chapter I prohibition. To the extent that Sol submits that this infringement should not be treated as serious because no effects have been shown, this point is addressed in step 1 of Section VI (Enforcement) below.

IV.939. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that an agreement and/or concerted practice was in place between Sol and Bowmer & Kirkland in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the contract for the superstore, retail units, petrol filling station at St Andrew's Retail Park, Small Heath, Birmingham, date of tender 11 August 2000.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.940. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.941. Sol did not inform the OFT of the bid rigging activities in respect of this tender before the OFT became aware of these activities during the visit by the OFT under section 27 to Sol's premises on 18 January 2006. Sol will not therefore receive 100 per cent immunity in respect of this tender. However, Sol will receive its normal leniency percentage reduction from the fine that the OFT is imposing in respect of this tender.

Infringement 20: Mason House, Shirley – 18 August 2000
Client: The Sir Josiah Mason Trust
Parties: Thomas Vale and Greswolde

IV.942. On 25 July 2000, The Sir Josiah Mason Trust sought tenders for the construction of a new wing to Mason House, Shirley, Birmingham. The following seven companies were invited to tender: Greswolde, Thomas Vale, Baldwin Construction, Piper, Weaver plc, William Sapcote and Spicers.³⁵²⁷ The deadline for the receipt of tenders was 12:00 noon on 18 August 2000.

IV.943. The Sir Josiah Mason Trust received the following tender returns:³⁵²⁸

Company	Date tender received	Amount of tender	Awarded tender
Greswolde	18 August 2000	£548,660 (later revised to £523,660)	Yes
Thomas Vale	18 August 2000	£570,327
Baldwin Construction	18 August 2000	£597,417
Piper	18 August 2000	£606,777

Evidence of agreement and/or concerted practice

Contemporaneous documentary evidence from leniency applicant Thomas Vale – Tender Status spreadsheet

IV.944. As part of its leniency application, Thomas Vale provided a contemporaneous Tender Status spreadsheet, which contained the following entry:³⁵²⁹

The Tender Status spreadsheet was maintained at Thomas Vale's head office by Christopher Keith Trickett ('CKT'), Chief Estimator at Thomas Vale, who kept a *'little black book'*³⁵³⁰ of contacts, the use of which is referred to in the general explanation of cover pricing at paragraphs IV.689 to IV.717 above.

Evidence from leniency applicant Thomas Vale

IV.946. As part of its leniency application, Thomas Vale provided a general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence and, in particular, the use of the Tender Status spreadsheet is set out in paragraphs IV.689 to IV.717 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.947. At Annex 14³⁵³² of its leniency application, Thomas Vale's legal representatives compiled a schedule setting out all tenders from 2000 to 2005 in respect of which Thomas Vale had either given or taken a cover price in the West Midlands region. The information on the schedule was based on all available tender and miscellaneous documentation indicating cover prices had been given or received, plus the recollections of staff. At page 60 of the schedule under Annex 14 and within the section for 2000 tenders is the following entry:³⁵³³

Tender No	Date	Client	Comments	Cover Given/Taken	Evidence
T4533	18 August	Sir Josiah Mason Trust	Extension to Mason House, Shirley	Taken (Greswolde)	Yes (Tender Spreadsheet)

IV.948. The Tender Spreadsheet in the last column is the Tender Status spreadsheet referred to in the general explanation of cover pricing at paragraphs IV.689 to IV.717 above.

IV.949. Thomas Vale also provided to the OFT a schedule listing key competitors with whom Thomas Vale frequently dealt in relation to cover pricing at Annex 5 of its leniency application.³⁵³⁴ The name 'Greswold' appears on this list.

IV.950. Following the issue of the Statement, Thomas Vale did not submit any written or oral representations specifically in respect of this Infringement.

Witness evidence from leniency applicant Thomas Vale

IV.951. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, Thomas Vale's employees provided further general explanation of its participation in and recording of cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.689 to IV.717 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender. In particular, CKT gave a detailed explanation of the use of the Tender Status spreadsheet to record cover prices from its competitors.

IV.952. CKT admitted that the initials 'CKT', which appear in the estimator column for this tender, were his own and that the letter 'B', which appears in the column marked 'DIV', stands for Building Division (also known as Traditional), for which

CKT was the estimating manager.³⁵³⁵ In interview, CKT could not recall this tender but referring to the relevant entry in the Tender Status spreadsheet, he said 'I would have made that entry, it would have been booked in as our internal tender number T4533; the division would have been our building division as it was called in those days. The client, as you stated, is the Sir Josiah Mason Trust, it's an extension to Mason house in Shirley, West Midlands that is, there's an approximate value of £400,000, CKT is the estimator that's responsible for that tender, category C would indicate that at that time it was the category for a cover figure. The tender return date was 18/8/2000 at noon. Thomas Vale's submitted tender was £570,327 and the names of the contractors listed on the right hand side, Greswolde is in bold letters which indicates that a cover figure was obtained from Greswolde construction'.³⁵³⁶ When asked who he would have contacted from Greswolde for cover prices, CKT referred to the entry in his contact book and stated 'almost certainly I would have spoken to somebody called Richard Ferris'.³⁵³⁷

Evidence from other companies – Greswolde

IV.953. The OFT wrote to Greswolde on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that Greswolde had participated in bid rigging on this tender. In response Greswolde, through its legal representatives, admitted engaging 'in bid rigging activities on this tender with THOMAS VALE CONSTRUCTION'.³⁵³⁸

IV.954. The OFT subsequently wrote to Greswolde's ultimate parent company at the time of this Infringement, Mantisson, on 5 November 2007, asking it to comment on Greswolde's response to the OFT's Fast Track Offer, given that the OFT intended to hold Mantisson jointly and severally liable for any infringements committed by Greswolde in respect of which the OFT ultimately decided to impose financial penalties. In response to this letter, Mantisson did not make any comment.³⁵³⁹

IV.955. In their response to the Statement, Greswolde and Mantisson stated 'Greswolde is not...challenging the OFT's substantive allegations in relation to each of the Alleged Infringements and maintains its acceptance of the terms of the Fast Track Offer'.³⁵⁴⁰

IV.957. Thomas Vale and Greswolde each accepted an invitation to tender for an extension to Mason House, Shirley, Birmingham.

IV.958. Thomas Vale was unable to submit a tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this contract. Thomas Vale categorised this as a Category C tender, which, as CKT stated in interview 'in those days, was, obviously, as it says, inferred as being a cover'.³⁵⁴¹

- IV.959. Greswolde completed the estimating process for the tender for this contract and it appears that it submitted a bid with the hope of winning the work. This is shown by the price submitted by Greswolde being the lowest received and the fact that it won the contract.
- IV.960. Thomas Vale's contemporaneous Tender Status spreadsheet, maintained in electronic format by Chief Estimator CKT, records five competitors who were also invited to tender for this contract, namely 'Sapcote, Greswolde, Piper, Baldwin' [and] 'Weaver'. Greswolde is marked in bold lettering which Thomas Vale has confirmed shows that a cover price was received from that company and that the spreadsheet would have been updated as soon as the cover price had been arranged by CKT. Thomas Vale's bid to the client on the Tender Status spreadsheet is recorded as £570,327, matching that recorded by the client.
- IV.961. The Sir Josiah Mason Trust also received a tendered amount of £548,660 from Greswolde. Greswolde's bid was the lowest received by the client with Thomas Vale's bid second lowest. This fits into the pattern consistent with a cover price having been provided from Greswolde to Thomas Vale. The OFT notes that Greswolde is the only company whose figure is below that of Thomas Vale and so Thomas Vale could only have received cover from Greswolde.
- IV.962. The OFT notes that although five competitors have been recorded on the Tender Status spreadsheet, only one of these is highlighted in bold, i.e. Greswolde. This indicates that a conscious decision was made to differentiate Greswolde from the other four competitors. In addition, the fact that the tender had been allocated to CKT, who was responsible for the maintenance of the spreadsheet, means that it is likely that the entry was accurate and that CKT had personal knowledge of the decision to receive a cover price and make contact with Greswolde at the time. It also indicates that CKT himself made contact with Greswolde.
- IV.963. Thomas Vale admitted that Greswolde was one of the 'key competitors' with whom it engaged in cover pricing activity. In interview, CKT confirmed that the entry in the Tender Status spreadsheet shows that a cover price had been received from Greswolde. He also named Richard Ferris as someone he would 'almost certainly' have contacted for a cover price. There is an entry for Richard Ferris in a contact book he used to telephone other contractors for the purpose of obtaining cover prices.
- IV.964. Both companies have admitted to bid rigging in relation to this tender. The OFT notes that Greswolde admitted that the party with whom it engaged in bid rigging was Thomas Vale, without being shown the OFT's evidence that Thomas Vale was involved. This provides additional independent corroboration of the OFT's evidence in respect of this tender.
- IV.965. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between Thomas Vale and Greswolde and that Greswolde supplied a figure to Thomas Vale in order that it could submit a bid to the client that was not intended to win the contract.

IV.966. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.944 to IV.965 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.³⁵⁴² In particular:

- (a) the provision of a figure for a cover bid from Greswolde to Thomas Vale was not unilateral³⁵⁴³, and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;³⁵⁴⁴
- (b) Thomas Vale can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from Greswolde (i.e. the cover price) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process;³⁵⁴⁵ and
- (c) Greswolde can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from Thomas Vale (i.e. that Thomas Vale did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process.³⁵⁴⁶

IV.967. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that an agreement and/or concerted practice was in place between Thomas Vale and Greswolde in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the contract for Mason House, Shirley, Birmingham, tender deadline 18 August 2000.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.968. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.969. Thomas Vale informed the OFT of the bid rigging activities in respect of this tender before the OFT became aware of these activities from any other source. Thomas Vale will therefore receive 100 per cent immunity from the fine that the OFT is imposing in respect of this tender.

Infringement 21: Proposed St Vincent's Parish Centre at Crookes, Sheffield – 25 August 2000

Client: Diocese of Hallam

Parties: Strata (formerly known as Weaver) and Stainforth

IV.970. On 27 July 2000, the Diocese of Hallam sought tenders for works at St Vincent's Parish Centre at Crookes, Sheffield.³⁵⁴⁷ The following three companies were invited to tender: Stainforth, Weaver and Ackroyd & Abbott.³⁵⁴⁸ The deadline for receipt of tenders was 12:00 noon on 25 August 2000.³⁵⁴⁹

IV.971. The Diocese of Hallam received the following tender returns:³⁵⁵⁰

Company	Date tender received	Amount of tender	Awarded contract
Stainforth	25 August 2000	£516,767.69	Yes
Weaver [Strata]	25 August 2000	£539,220.00
Ackroyd & Abbott	25 August 2000	£649,159.00

Evidence of agreement and/or concerted practice

Contemporaneous documentary evidence from leniency applicant Strata- Form of Tender

IV.972. During the OFT's search of Strata's premises a ring binder file marked 'Covers from Jan 2000 to Dec 2001', containing various documents mostly copy Form of Tenders and result letters, was found. A Form of Tender found within this file contained the following handwritten entry on the top right hand corner:³⁵⁵¹

'FROM STAINFORTH'

IV.973. The Form of Tender was signed by Duncan Ironmonger ('DI'), an estimator at Strata, on 24 August 2000.³⁵⁵² The Form of Tender also stated that Strata's figure was £539,220.00.³⁵⁵³

Evidence from leniency applicant – Strata

IV.974. As part of its leniency application, Strata provided to the OFT a list of covers³⁵⁵⁴, compiled by reference to its contract information sheets, the file 'Covers from Jan 2000 – Dec 2001' and 'contracts in hand' documents. The entry for this tender stated as follows:³⁵⁵⁵

Date	Project	Strata ref no
24/08/2000	St Vincent's Parish Centre, Crookes, Sheffield	T105/00

Cover to	Cover from	Company Name	Company Address	Contract Secured

Witness evidence from leniency applicant - Strata

IV.976. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, Strata's past and present employees provided further general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.617 to IV.634 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

Evidence from other companies – Stainforth

IV.977. The OFT wrote to Stainforth on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that Stainforth had participated in bid rigging on this tender. In response to this letter the OFT received an email on 26 April 2007 from Stainforth's legal representatives, Gordons LLP stating 'we formally confirm that our Client will not be accepting your offer...'.³⁵⁵⁶

IV.978. However, in its response to the Statement, Stainforth accepted '...that it provided a cover price to Strata [in respect of this Infringement].'³⁵⁵⁷

The OFT's analysis of the evidence and finding

IV.979. From the evidence presented above, the OFT draws the following conclusions.

IV.980. Strata and Stainforth each accepted an invitation to tender for the contract for works at St Vincent's Parish Centre, Crookes, Sheffield.

IV.981. Strata was unable to submit a tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this contract.

IV.982. Strata's Form of Tender records 'FROM STAINFORTH', handwritten in the top right hand corner. Strata confirmed that this shows that it received a cover price from the company noted. This Form of Tender was also found in the file marked 'Covers from Jan 2000 to Dec 2001', which Strata confirmed contained documents and records of covers taken. The OFT considers in the light of the contemporaneous evidence from Strata and Strata's admission and explanation of the contemporaneous evidence that Stainforth supplied Strata with a cover price for this tender.

IV.983. The OFT further notes that the tender submitted by Strata was higher than the tender submitted by Stainforth, the pattern consistent with a cover price having been provided.

IV.985. The OFT notes that both Parties have now admitted their involvement in cover pricing in respect of this Infringement.

³⁵⁵⁶ Response from Stainforth, OFT Document Reference 10862.

³⁵⁵⁷ Written representations of Stainforth, 27 June 2008, paragraph 2.35(b).

IV.986. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between Strata and Stainforth. The OFT also concludes that Stainforth supplied a figure to Strata for a cover bid.

IV.987. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.972 to IV.986 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.³⁵⁵⁸ In particular:

- (a) the provision of a figure for a cover bid from Stainforth to Strata was not unilateral³⁵⁵⁹, and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;³⁵⁶⁰
- (b) Strata can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from Stainforth (i.e the cover price) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process;³⁵⁶¹ and
- (c) Stainforth can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from Strata (i.e. that Strata did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its conduct in the tendering process.³⁵⁶²

IV.988. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that an agreement and/or concerted practice was in place between Stainforth and Strata, in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the contract for the works at St Vincent's Parish Centre, Crookes, Sheffield, tender deadline 25 August 2000.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.989. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.990. In respect of this tender, the OFT became aware of bid rigging activities by virtue of the information obtained during the visit to Strata under section 28 on 6 and 7 July 2005. Strata will not therefore receive 100 per cent immunity in respect of this tender. However, in accordance with paragraph VI.386 of Section VI (Enforcement), the OFT is not imposing any financial penalty on Strata in respect of this infringement.

Infringement 22: Refurbishment 73 Wates Houses, Windsor – 7 September 2000

IV.991. In July 2000, Windsor & District Housing Association ('Windsor Housing'), part of the Radian group³⁵⁶³, sought tenders for refurbishment works, Wates House, Windsor.³⁵⁶⁴ The following five companies were invited to tender: Borrás Construction, Connaught, Formbridge Construction, Leadbitter Construction and Mansell. The date and time of tender return was 31 August 2000 at noon.³⁵⁶⁵

IV.992. Windsor Housing received the following tender returns:³⁵⁶⁶

Company	Date tender received	Amount of tender	Awarded contract
Connaught	Before deadline	£1,718,486.56	YES
Leadbitter Construction	Before deadline	£2,143,191.00
Borrás Construction	Before deadline	£2,089,852.00
Formbridge Construction	Before deadline	£2,235,096.79
Mansell	Before deadline	£1,886,255.00

Evidence of agreement and/or concerted practice

Contemporaneous documentary evidence from leniency applicant Mansell – tender spreadsheets

IV.993. As part of its leniency application, Mansell's legal representatives provided Barry Russ's ('BR'), a Mansell managing estimator, workload reports. The 2000 workload report for major projects contained the following entry:³⁵⁶⁷

Evidence from leniency applicant Mansell

IV.994. As part of its leniency application, Mansell's legal representatives provided a general explanation of its part in the process of cover pricing.³⁵⁶⁸ This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.470 to IV.502 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.995. Mansell's legal representatives also provided to the OFT a table showing information relating to tendering activities in which a calculated competitive bid was not submitted, for the Thames Valley Region ('TVR'), which includes this tender. In respect of this tender the table shows that Mansell received a cover price from Connaught and that this cover price was taken due to 'insufficient tender period: resource' at Mansell.³⁵⁶⁹

Witness evidence from leniency applicant Mansell

IV.996. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, BR provided further general explanation of Mansell's participation in cover pricing in the TVR. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.481 to IV.489 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.997. During an interview with the OFT on 1 May 2007, BR advised how he would record when Mansell had taken a cover as detailed in paragraphs IV.482 to IV.485 above. In relation to this tender BR explained that roofing contracts would have specialist contractors and stated *'looking at the name [Connaught] that we went to [for a cover price], they are a specialist contractor of that sort of work...'*³⁵⁷⁰ In its response to the Statement, Mansell clarified that BR's admission was based on the contemporaneous evidence rather than on independent recollection of taking the cover price.³⁵⁷¹

Evidence from other companies – Connaught plc

IV.998. The OFT wrote to Connaught plc on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that Connaught had participated in bid rigging on this tender. In response to this letter Connaught plc stated that it was unable to accept the OFT's Fast Track Offer.³⁵⁷²

IV.999. In their response to the Statement, however, Connaught stated *'Connaught does not dispute the facts alleged against it'*³⁵⁷³ in respect of this Infringement.

The OFT's analysis of the evidence and finding

IV.1001. Mansell and Connaught each accepted an invitation to tender for this contract.

IV.1002. Both companies submitted a tender. Mansell was unable to submit a tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this contract. It appears that Connaught completed the estimating process for this tender and that they submitted a bid with the hope of winning the work. This is shown by the price submitted by Connaught being the lowest received and that they won the contract.

IV.1003. Mansell's 2000 workload report records 'Cover from Connaught', in the Remarks column. Mansell confirmed that this shows that it took a cover price from the company noted. In addition, Mansell has confirmed that the lack of figures in the margin and percentage columns would also indicate a cover price had been taken.

IV.1004. The OFT further notes that the tender submitted by Mansell was higher than the tender submitted by Connaught, the pattern consistent with a cover price having been provided.

IV.1006. Connaught has stated that it does not dispute the facts alleged against it, and confirmed that it 'has no material to set against the evidence obtained by the OFT'.³⁵⁷⁴

IV.1007. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between Mansell and Connaught. The OFT also concludes that Connaught supplied a figure to Mansell for a cover bid.

IV.1008. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.993 to IV.1007 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.³⁵⁷⁵ In particular:

- (a) the provision of a figure for a cover bid from Connaught to Mansell was not unilateral³⁵⁷⁶, and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;³⁵⁷⁷
- (b) Mansell can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from Connaught (i.e. the cover price) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process;³⁵⁷⁸ and
- (c) Connaught can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from Mansell (i.e. that Mansell did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its conduct in the tendering process.³⁵⁷⁹

IV.1009. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that an agreement and/or concerted practice was in place between Mansell and Connaught in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the tender for refurbishment works, Wates Houses, tender deadline 7 September 2000.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.1010. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.1011. Mansell informed the OFT of the bid rigging activities in respect of this tender before the OFT became aware of these activities from any other source. Mansell will therefore receive 100 per cent immunity from the fine that the OFT is imposing in respect of this tender.

Infringement 23: New Pavilion and Facilities, Pole Lane, Unsworth Cricket Club – 15 September 2000
Client: Unsworth Cricket and Tennis Club Ltd
Parties: Strata (formerly known as Weaver) and G & J Seddon

IV.1012. On 16 August 2000, Unsworth Cricket and Tennis Club Ltd sought tenders for a new pavilion and facilities, Pole Lane, Unsworth Cricket Club.³⁵⁸⁰ The following seven companies were invited to tender: Tilbury Douglas (now known as Interserve), G & J Seddon, PLP Construction, Diamond Construction, Jackson, Jackson & Sons, Weaver (now known as Strata), Lawlor Construction.³⁵⁸¹ The deadline for receipt of tenders was 12:00 noon on 15 September 2000.³⁵⁸²

IV.1013. Unsworth Cricket and Tennis Club received the following tender returns:³⁵⁸³

Company	Date tender received	Amount of tender	Awarded contract
Tilbury Douglas	15 September 2000	£758,354
G & J Seddon	15 September 2000	£691,198	Yes

Witness evidence from leniency applicant - Strata

IV.1018. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, Strata's past and present employees provided further general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.617 to IV.634 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

Evidence from other companies – Seddon

IV.1019. The OFT wrote to Seddon on 22 March 2007, offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that Seddon had participated in bid rigging on this tender. In response to this letter, G & J Seddon responded, admitting 'We engaged in bid rigging activities on this tender with Weaver Construction Limited'.³⁵⁸⁹ G & J Seddon added in its covering letter that it gave a cover price on this tender.³⁵⁹⁰

IV.1020. The OFT subsequently wrote again to G & J Seddon's ultimate parent company at the time of this Infringement, Seddon, on 5 November 2007, asking it to comment on G & J Seddon's response to the OFT's Fast Track Offer, given that the OFT intended to hold Seddon jointly and severally liable for any infringements committed by G & J Seddon in respect of which the OFT ultimately decided to impose financial penalties. In response to this letter Seddon said 'We confirm that Seddon Group Limited ("SGL") support and adopt G&J Seddon Limited ("G&JS") acceptance of the reduction of penalty offer and that SGL does not intend to comment upon matters ... or to make any submissions on this case at the present time'.³⁵⁹¹

IV.1021. In its response to the Statement, G & J Seddon confirmed in respect of this Infringement that they '... has accepted the OFT's Fast Track Offer and does not contest the OFT's findings of Infringement'.³⁵⁹²

The OFT's analysis of the evidence and finding

IV.1022. From the evidence presented above, the OFT draws the following conclusions.

IV.1023. Strata and G & J Seddon each accepted an invitation to tender for the contract for a new pavilion and facilities at Pole Lane, Unsworth Cricket Club.

IV.1024. Strata was unable to submit a tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this contract.

IV.1025. G & J Seddon completed the estimating process for the tender for this contract and it appears they submitted a bid with the hope of winning the work. This is shown by the price submitted by G & J Seddon being the lowest received and that they won the contract.

IV.1026. Strata's Form of Tender records 'FROM SEDDON', handwritten in the top right hand corner. Strata confirmed that this shows that it received a cover price from the company noted. This Form of Tender was also found in the file marked 'Covers from Jan 2000 to Dec 2001', which Strata confirmed contained documents and records of covers taken. The OFT considers in the light of the contemporaneous evidence from Strata and Strata's admission and explanation of the contemporaneous evidence, and G & J Seddon's admission that it gave a cover price to Weaver, that G & J Seddon supplied Strata with a cover price for this tender.

IV.1027. The OFT further notes that the tender submitted by Strata was higher than the tender submitted by G & J Seddon, the pattern consistent with a cover price having been provided.

IV.1028. In addition the OFT notes that G & J Seddon's tender figure is the only figure below Strata's tender figure, and the OFT is therefore satisfied that Strata could only have received a cover figure from G & J Seddon.

IV.1029. Both companies have admitted to bid rigging in relation to this tender. The OFT notes that G & J Seddon admitted that the party with whom it engaged in bid rigging was 'Weaver', without being shown the OFT's evidence that Strata was involved. This provides additional independent corroboration of the OFT's evidence in respect of this tender.

IV.1030. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between Strata and G & J Seddon. The OFT also concludes that G & J Seddon supplied a figure to Strata for a cover bid.

³⁵⁹¹ Response from Seddon, OFT Document Reference 14027.

³⁵⁹² Written representations of G & J Seddon, 27 June 2008, paragraph 6.

IV.1031. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.1014 to IV.1030 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.³⁵⁹³ In particular:

- (a) the provision of a figure for a cover bid from G & J Seddon to Strata was not unilateral³⁵⁹⁴, and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;³⁵⁹⁵
- (b) Strata can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from G & J Seddon (i.e. the cover price) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process;³⁵⁹⁶ and
- (c) G & J Seddon can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from Strata (i.e. that Strata did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its conduct in the tendering process.³⁵⁹⁷

IV.1032. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that an agreement and/or concerted practice was in place between G & J Seddon and Strata, in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the contract for a new pavilion and facilities at Unsworth Cricket Club, Bury, tender deadline 15 September 2000.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.1033. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.1034. In respect of this tender, the OFT became aware of bid rigging activities by virtue of the information obtained during the visit to Strata under section 28 on 6 and 7 July 2005. Strata will not therefore receive 100 per cent immunity in respect of this tender. However, in accordance with paragraph VI.386 of Section VI (Enforcement), the OFT is not imposing any financial penalty on Strata in respect of this Infringement.

Infringement 27: Proposed Police Station, Spennymoor – 16 October 2000
Client: Durham Police Authority
Parties: Mowlem and Interserve (formerly known as Tilbury Douglas)

IV.1035. On 11 September 2000, Durham Police Authority sought tenders for a new build, Spennymoor Police Station.³⁵⁹⁸ The following seven companies were invited to tender: Ballast, Tilbury Douglas, Kier, M J Gleeson, Miller Construction, Mowlem and Shepherd Construction. The date and time of tender return was 16 October 2000 at 4:00 pm.³⁵⁹⁹

IV.1036. Durham Police Authority received the following tender returns:³⁶⁰⁰

Company	Date & time tender received	Amount of tender	Awarded contract
Mowlem	16 October 2000 4:00 pm	£2,338,500
Kier	16 October 2000 4:00 pm	£2,337,823	YES
Miller Construction	Declined to submit
M J Gleeson	16 October 2000 4:00 pm	£2,605,708
Ballast	16 October 2000 4:00 pm	£2,393,314
Shepherd Construction	16 October 2000 4:00 pm	£2,484,551
Tilbury Douglas [Interserve]	16 October 2000 4:00 pm	£2,503,240

Evidence of agreement and/or concerted practice

Contemporaneous documentary evidence from leniency applicant Carillion³⁶⁰¹ – Tender Settlement form

IV.1037. As part of its leniency application, Carillion’s legal representatives provided a Tender Details and Summary document for this tender. On the second page under the section headed ‘Competition’, the following entries have been made:³⁶⁰²

‘Competition

1.)Shepherd
2.)Ballast Wiltshire
3.)Gleeson
4.)Tilbury Douglas (C)
5.)Kier
6.)Mowlem

Evidence from leniency applicant Carillion

IV.1038. Carillion’s legal representatives also provided to the OFT a table headed ‘Tenders where Cover given’, which includes this tender. In respect of this tender the table states that a cover was given to ‘Tilbury Douglas’ (Interserve).³⁶⁰³

IV.1039. In its response to the Statement, Mowlem stated that it '... does not contest that certain employees (and/or former employees) participated in each of the three Relevant Alleged Infringements nor does it contest its liability...'.³⁶⁰⁴

Witness evidence from leniency applicant Carillion

IV.1040. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, a Carillion employee from the Gateshead office provided further general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.506 to IV.510 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.1041. During an interview with the OFT on 11 April 2007, Ian Parsons ('IP'), a senior estimator at Carillion, advised how he would record when Mowlem had given a cover as detailed in paragraphs IV.506 to IV.510 above. In relation to this tender, IP confirmed that he completed the Tender Details and Summary sheet and when asked what the '(C)' meant, stated 'That means we give Tilbury Douglas a cover in that instance'.³⁶⁰⁵ When asked whether this was a contract Mowlem wanted to win IP stated 'yes, it was something we were looking to [win], I think we'd done one or two police stations in Northumberland. I think it was something we, we actually targeted to win'.³⁶⁰⁶

Evidence from other companies – Interserve

IV.1042. The OFT wrote to Interserve on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that Interserve had participated in bid rigging on this tender. In response to this letter Interserve made no admission in respect of this tender and stated 'Where no admission has been made, this is because either: Interserve believes no cover price was given or taken; or is due to a lack of available relevant information'.³⁶⁰⁷ Interserve did advise that 'There was limited documentation but this may simply reflect the fact that in general documentation relating to tender opportunities that are not won is disposed of after a short period. It appears that we did tender for this job and that we did not win the tender'.³⁶⁰⁸

IV.1043. In its response to the Statement, Interserve confirmed that it was not proposing to contest the OFT's decision on liability in respect of this Infringement. It also said that it was not proposing to challenge the evidence in relation to this Infringement³⁶⁰⁹ and it has not done so.

The OFT's analysis of the evidence and finding

IV.1045. Mowlem and Interserve each accepted an invitation to tender for this contract.

³⁶⁰⁴ Written representations of Mowlem, 27 June 2008, paragraph 1.4.

IV.1046. Both companies submitted a tender. Interserve was unable to submit a tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this contract. It appears that Mowlem completed the estimating process for this tender and that it submitted a bid with the hope of winning the work.

IV.1047. Mowlem's Tender Summary and Details sheet for this tender records 'Tilbury Douglas (C)', under the heading 'Competition'. Mowlem confirmed that this shows that it gave a cover price to the company noted.

IV.1048. The OFT further notes that the tender submitted by Interserve was higher than the tender submitted by Mowlem, the pattern consistent with a cover price having been provided.

IV.1049. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between Mowlem and Interserve. The OFT also concludes that Mowlem supplied a figure to Interserve for a cover bid.

IV.1050. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.1037 to IV.1049 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.³⁶¹⁰ In particular:

- (a) the provision of a figure for a cover bid from Mowlem to Interserve was not unilateral³⁶¹¹, and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;³⁶¹²
- (b) Interserve can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from Mowlem (i.e. the cover price) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process;³⁶¹³ and
- (c) Mowlem can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from Interserve (i.e. that Interserve did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its conduct in the tendering process.³⁶¹⁴

IV.1051. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that an agreement and/or concerted practice was in place between Mowlem and Interserve in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the tender for the proposed police station, Spennymoor, tender deadline 16 October 2000.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.1052. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

³⁶¹⁴ See paragraphs III.58, III.95 to III.96, and III.125 of the Legal Background section.

IV.1053. Carillion informed the OFT of the bid rigging activities in respect of this tender before the OFT became aware of these activities from any other source. Mowlem will therefore receive 100 per cent immunity from the fine that the OFT is imposing in respect of this tender.

Alleged Infringement 28: Not included in the Decision

Infringement 29: Refurbishment of a House, 143 Sneinton Dale, Sneinton, Nottingham – 8 November 2000
Client: Allan Joyce Architects
Parties: Greenwood and E Taylor (trading as Carmalor)

IV.1054. On 18 October 2000, Allan Joyce Architects sought tenders for the refurbishment of a house, 143 Sneinton Dale, Sneinton, Nottingham. The return date for the tender was 8 November 2000 and four companies were invited to tender: E Taylor (trading as Carmalor)³⁶¹⁵, Craig Wells, Greenwood and NCBW.³⁶¹⁶

IV.1055. Allan Joyce Architects received the following tender returns:³⁶¹⁷

Company	Date Tender Received	Amount of tender	Awarded contract
Carmalor [E Taylor]	8 November 2000	£23,789	Yes
Craig Wells	8 November 2000	£28,612

IV.1056. During the OFT's visit to Greenwood's premises under section 27 on 19 November 2004, a Tender/Enquiry List was obtained and the following entry relates to this tender:³⁶¹⁸

³⁶¹⁵ In its description and analysis of this Infringement, for consistency with the available documentary and witness evidence, the OFT has referred to 'Carmalor' but notes that this is a trading name for E Taylor, which is accordingly the responsible legal entity.

IV.1057. During the OFT's search of Greenwood's premises under section 28 on 15 June 2005, a number of tender documents with a post-it note attached were found. The post-it note attached to the tender documents for this tender contained the following handwritten note:³⁶¹⁹

IV.1058. An invitation to tender for this contract was also found at Greenwood.³⁶²⁰ The following amount was handwritten on the front page of the invitation to tender:

IV.1059. A completed Form of Tender for this contract was also found at Greenwood. The Form of Tender shows that Greenwood tendered £24866.00 for this contract.³⁶²¹

Witness Evidence from Greenwood

IV.1060. During an interview conducted on 12 October 2006, Chris Stendall ('CS'), an ex-estimator for Greenwood, commented in general terms on Greenwood's participation in bid rigging activities. He asked the OFT 'Why don't you ask me if we've taken a cover or given a cover ... of course I have done that and I believe that probably every other contractor in the country has probably done that on certain occasions'.³⁶²² CS explained, '... the only reason for doing that is to make sure you're tender ... a figure goes into the client and that you're kept in the loop for next time'.³⁶²³

IV.1061. CS confirmed that the exchange of cover prices was always carried out by telephone.³⁶²⁴ At Greenwood the exchange of cover prices usually occurred 'towards the end, I suppose when I, you know they realise you couldn't do something or they wanted help'.³⁶²⁵ CS stated that if he received a cover price he would record it '... in a notebook and then, it would go onto the tender sheet'.³⁶²⁶ During interview CS confirmed that when referring to a 'notebook' he actually was referring to a post-it note.³⁶²⁷

IV.1062. CS was interviewed for a second time on 28 February 2007 and was shown the tender documents and post-it note found during the OFT's search of Greenwood's premises in relation to this tender. CS confirmed that this tender was dealt with by Andrew Boam, an ex-estimator at Greenwood. On being shown by the OFT the handwritten notes on the post-it note CS said that the notes meant 'That somebody has rung Carmalor and that there is their number and that's the figure they have given us I would have thought'.³⁶²⁸ CS confirmed that the cover price provided by Carmalor was then used as Greenwood's tender figure as shown on the Form of Tender.³⁶²⁹ During the interview conducted on 12 October 2006, CS confirmed that Andrew Boam was involved in the process of cover pricing at Greenwood.³⁶³⁰

Evidence from other companies – Greenwood

IV.1063. The OFT wrote to Greenwood on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that Greenwood had participated in bid rigging on this tender. A response was received from Begbies Traynor informing the OFT that '... we have now ceased to act as administrators pursuant to the provisions of paragraph 84 of schedule B1 of the Insolvency Act 1986 which facilitates the ending of an administration order by dissolution of the company. ... As we have ceased to act as administrators of the company we are not in a position to enter into any agreement on its behalf'.³⁶³¹ The OFT has not been able to establish any successor party to Greenwood with undertaking identity in respect of this tender. The OFT will not therefore be pursuing either Greenwood or any successor company to Greenwood in respect of this tender.

Evidence from other companies – E Taylor

IV.1064. The OFT wrote to E Taylor on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that E Taylor had participated in bid rigging on this tender. In response to this letter, E Taylor said that after consideration it felt unable to accept the OFT's Fast Track Offer.³⁶³²

IV.1065. During the OFT section 27 visit at E Taylor's premises on 19 January 2006, Mark Brown, the Managing Director of E Taylor, confirmed that Wayne Creed was employed as an estimator.³⁶³³

³⁶³² Response from E Taylor, OFT Document Reference 11006.

³⁶³³ Filenote, OFT Document Reference 5826.

IV.1066. In its response to the Statement, E Taylor stated 'Having reviewed the relevant sections of the SO that relate to ourselves, and most particularly the 3rd party evidence referred to, we have a degree of empathy with the OFT as to why they have reached the conclusion that Carmalor were involved in cover pricing. Unfortunately, as a result of the death of [the former Managing Director]... and the departure of [former Estimating Director] Steve Fowkes... our ability to defend our position is significantly prejudiced by the fact that we have no access to contemporaneous documentary evidence. Nor can we offer any meaningful personal testimony from those allegedly involved in the practice, that would act as a legally adequate defence. Thus, we find ourselves in "no man's land" neither able to admit, nor adequately defend the allegations levelled at us'.³⁶³⁴

IV.1067. However, E Taylor submitted a statement from Wayne Creed ('WC'), the only person named in the Statement still employed by E Taylor, with its response to the Statement. WC stated that 'I recall being asked to provide a price on this job...I have never heard of Andrew Boam... I do not recall ever having had a conversation with Mr. Boam either in person or by telephone. ... I have no recollection whatsoever of making any call to Greenwoods such that this post-it note might be a record of that call'.³⁶³⁵

IV.1068. The OFT appreciates that a company would not often keep a record of giving a cover price, and in that instance recognises the need to assess the quality of evidence implicating the accused party. The OFT also recognises that where a cover price was given by a sole employee, other employees or directors of that company may not be aware whether or not such conduct took place.

IV.1069. The OFT notes the direct contradiction between this witness evidence and the contemporaneous evidence and overall explanation provided by CS. On balance, the OFT considers the latter to be more compelling. CS's evidence is consistent with the contents of the post-it note attached to the contemporaneous tender documents. Further, in relation to Infringements 118 and 133 in this Decision, the contents of similar post-it notes obtained from Greenwood indicating that cover prices have been provided/accepted have been confirmed to be correct by evidence from other Parties. The OFT also notes that although WC states that he does not recall making a call to Greenwoods, he does not actually state that he did not do so, or that it would have been in any way contrary to the prevailing practice within E Taylor at the time to have done so. In light of those factors, the OFT considers that the contemporaneous evidence and explanation of CS should be preferred to that of WC.

The OFT's analysis of the evidence and finding

IV.1071. Greenwood and Carmalor each accepted an invitation to tender for this contract.

IV.1072. Greenwood was unable to submit a tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this tender. It appears that Carmalor completed the estimating process for this contract and that it submitted a tender with the hope of winning the work. This is shown by the fact that it submitted the lowest price and that it won the tender.

IV.1073. A post-it note found at Greenwood records '143 SNEINTON DALE COVER FROM CARMALOUR WAYNE [.....] [C] 24866.00'. CS confirmed that the note records that Greenwood received a cover figure of £24,866 from Carmalor. The telephone number '[.....] [C]' is a number of E Taylor.³⁶³⁶ In addition E Taylor confirmed that Wayne Creed was employed as an estimator.

IV.1074. The OFT notes that the figure provided by Carmalor to Greenwood as its cover price, '24866.00', and recorded by Greenwood on the post-it note, was identical to the tender that Greenwood submitted for the work.

IV.1075. The OFT considers in the light of the contemporaneous evidence from Greenwood, and the admission and explanation by CS of that contemporaneous evidence, that Carmalor gave a cover price to Greenwood for this tender.

IV.1076. The OFT further notes that the tender submitted by Greenwood was higher than the tender submitted by Carmalor, a pattern consistent with a cover price having been provided.

IV.1077. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between Carmalor and Greenwood. The OFT also concludes that Carmalor supplied a figure to Greenwood for a cover bid.

IV.1078. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.1056 to IV.1077 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.³⁶³⁷ In particular:

- (a) the provision of a figure for a cover bid from Carmalor to Greenwood was not unilateral³⁶³⁸, and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;³⁶³⁹
- (b) Greenwood can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from Carmalor (i.e. the cover price) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process;³⁶⁴⁰
- (c) Carmalor can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from Greenwood (i.e. that Greenwood did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its conduct in the tendering process.³⁶⁴¹

IV.1079. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that an agreement and/or concerted practice was in place between Carmalor and Greenwood, in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the tender for the refurbishment of a

Infringement 30: Environmental Improvements, Pearmain Drive, Nottingham – 24 November 2000
Client: Nottingham City Council
Parties: Bodill, Mansell, Thomas Vale and Thomas Long

IV.1080. On 26 October 2000, Nottingham City Council sought tenders for environmental improvements, Pearmain Drive, Nottingham.³⁶⁴² The following six companies were invited to tender: Allenbuild, Bodill, Mansell, Nottingham City Building Works, Thomas Long and Thomas Vale. The date and time of tender return was 24 November 2000 at 12:00 noon.³⁶⁴³

IV.1081. Nottingham City Council received the following tender returns:³⁶⁴⁴

Company	Date tender received	Amount of tender	Awarded contract
Bodill	Prior to expiry date and time	£457,730

Evidence from leniency applicant Bodill

IV.1083. As part of its leniency application, Bodill provided a general explanation of its participation in the process of cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.229 to IV.242 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.1084. In particular, Bodill provided to the OFT an analysis of its tender sheets since March 2000.³⁶⁴⁶ In respect of this tender, Bodill confirmed that it gave cover prices to Thomas Long, Thomas Vale and Mansell.³⁶⁴⁷

IV.1085. Following the issue of the Statement, Bodill did not submit any written or oral representations specifically in respect of this Infringement.

Witness evidence from leniency applicant Bodill

IV.1086. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, Bodill's employees provided further general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.229 to IV.242 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

Contemporaneous documentary evidence from leniency applicant Thomas Vale – tender status spreadsheet

IV.1087. As part of its leniency application, Thomas Vale provided a contemporaneous Tender Status spreadsheet, which contained the following entry:³⁶⁴⁸

TENDER NO	DIV	CLIENT	DESCRIPTION	Approx £
T4637	B	City of Nottingham	Pearmain Drive Estate Improvements, Nottingham

EST	CAT	DUE	Tender Figure	Tender Status	Tendering Contractors	Successful Contractor
CKT	C	24/11/2000 Noon	489,950	-	Bodill, Thos Long,

IV.1088. The Tender Status spreadsheet was maintained at Thomas Vale's head office by Chris Trickett ('CKT'), Chief Estimator at Thomas Vale, who kept a *'little black book'*³⁶⁴⁹ of contacts, the use of which is referred to in the general explanation of cover pricing at paragraphs IV.689 to IV.717 above. Within this contact list, there is an entry for Bodill plus names and a telephone number and an entry for Thomas Long with the name Dirk Manning.³⁶⁵⁰

Evidence from leniency applicant Thomas Vale

IV.1089. As part of its leniency application, Thomas Vale provided a general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence and, in particular, the use of the Tender Status spreadsheet is set out in paragraphs IV.689 to IV.717 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.1090. At Annex 13³⁶⁵¹ of its leniency application, Thomas Vale’s legal representatives compiled a schedule setting out all tenders from 2000 to 2005 in respect of which Thomas Vale had either given or taken a cover price in the East Midlands region. The information on the schedule was based on all available tender and miscellaneous documentation indicating cover prices had been given or received, plus the recollections of staff. At page nine of the schedule under Annex 13 and within the section for 2000 tenders is the following entry:³⁶⁵²

Tab.	Tender No.	Date	Client	Comments
35	T4637	24 November	City of Nottingham	Pearmain Drive Estate Improvements, Nottingham

Cover Given/Taken	Evidence
Taken (Bodill)	Yes (Tender Spreadsheet)

IV.1091. In its response to the Statement, Thomas Vale did not submit any representations specifically in respect of this Infringement, save as to the level of detriment to the final consumer. To the extent that Thomas Vale submitted that this infringement should not be treated as serious because no effects have been shown, this point is addressed in Step 1 of Section VI (Enforcement) below.

Witness evidence from leniency applicant Thomas Vale

IV.1092. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, Thomas Vale’s employees provided further general explanation of its participation in and recording of cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.689 to IV.717 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender. In particular, CKT gave a detailed explanation of the use of the Tender Status spreadsheet to record cover prices from its competitors.

IV.1093. CKT admitted that the initials ‘CKT’, which appear in the estimator column for this tender, were his own and that the letter ‘B’, which appears in the column marked ‘DIV’, stands for Building Division (also known as Traditional), for which CKT was the estimating manager.³⁶⁵³ In interview CKT explained that he had dealt with the tender and in respect of the entry in the Tender Status spreadsheet, stated ‘The job, CKT myself, who dealt with it. C was the cover, a figure I’ve inputted there of £489,950’ and ‘it indicates that Bodill Construction gave me a cover on that job’.³⁶⁵⁴ When shown the Bodill tender sheet, described above, CKT confirmed that the telephone number [...] [C] was the main switchboard number for Thomas Vale’s Stourport office.³⁶⁵⁵

IV.1094. Following the issue of the Statement, Mansell did not submit any written or oral representations specifically in respect of this Infringement.

Witness evidence from leniency applicant Mansell

IV.1095. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, an employee of Mansell and an ex-employee from the Nottingham office provided further general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.470 to IV.502 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.1096. During an interview with the OFT on 18 April 2007, Kenneth Lockwood ('KL'), who was a Chief Estimator in the Nottingham office, was shown the Bodill tender sheet described above. In respect of this document KL stated 'I would suspect that that's who we'd gone to, Bodill, again a company I knew we would take cover, give a cover from'.³⁶⁵⁶

Evidence from other companies – Thomas Long

IV.1097. The OFT wrote to Thomas Long on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that Thomas Long had participated in bid rigging on this tender. In response to this letter Thomas Long admitted 'We engaged in bid rigging activities on this tender but cannot recall details of the other party/parties involved'.³⁶⁵⁷

IV.1098. In its response to the Statement, Thomas Long '...confirmed that it took a cover price in relation to this tender'.³⁶⁵⁸ in respect of this Infringement.

IV.1099. In its response to the Statement, Thomas Long also stated that 'Thomas Long believes that the cover price would have been taken by the estimator Mark Phillips rather than Richard Manning who was a Director for Thomas Long at the time'.³⁶⁵⁹ However, Thomas Long did not provide any supporting evidence of this, and indeed appeared to contradict itself elsewhere in its written representations when it stated that 'No Director of Thomas Long was involved in the Alleged Infringements other than Richard Manning who is a former Director in relation to AI. 30'.³⁶⁶⁰ The OFT considers that the contemporaneous document from Bodill provides sufficiently strong and compelling evidence that Richard Manning at Thomas Long was involved in this Infringement, as it is a record of a request for a cover price from Thomas Long, and Bodill would have had no reason to insert Richard Manning's name unless he had either made the request or been designated as a recipient for a follow up return call. In either case he would have known about Thomas Long taking a cover price on this tender.

The OFT's analysis of the evidence and finding

IV.1101. Bodill, Mansell, Thomas Vale and Thomas Long each accepted an invitation to tender for this contract.

IV.1102. All four companies submitted a tender. It appears that Bodill completed the estimating process for this tender and that it submitted a bid with the hope of winning the work.

IV.1103. Mansell, Thomas Vale and Thomas Long were unable to submit a tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this contract.

IV.1104. In regard to Thomas Vale, Bodill's tender sheet records 'THOMAS VALE. C. TRICKETT [.....] [C] © US FROM' and a figure '£489950'. Bodill confirmed that this shows that it gave a cover price to the company noted. The tender sheet also has the number '②' recorded against Thomas Vale to show that Thomas Vale was the second party to be given cover by or to request cover from Bodill. Bodill has confirmed that these numbers show the order in which Bodill was approached by other companies for a cover price and that the first to approach would get the lowest price and so on. The OFT notes that Thomas Vale's bid was indeed the second lowest of the bids above Bodill's figure.

IV.1105. In addition, the telephone number set out in Bodill's tender sheet, [.....] [C], is the main switchboard number for Thomas Vale's Stourport office and CKT is confirmed by Thomas Vale as being the person who dealt with this tender. Furthermore, the figure that Bodill recorded on the tender sheet against Thomas Vale was identical to the figure that Thomas Vale submitted for the tender.

IV.1106. In addition, Thomas Vale's Tender Status spreadsheet shows this tender as a Category C, and Thomas Vale has admitted that it received a cover price from Bodill on this tender. Of the two competitors listed on Thomas Vale's tender sheet, Bodill is highlighted in bold. This indicates that a conscious decision was made to differentiate Bodill from the other competitor.

IV.1107. In regard to Mansell, Bodill's tender sheet records 'MANSELL. © ' and a figure '£496411'. Bodill confirmed that this shows that it gave a cover price to the company noted. The tender sheet also has the number '②' recorded against Mansell to show that Mansell was the third party to be given cover by or to request cover from Bodill. Bodill has confirmed that these numbers show the order in which Bodill was approached by other companies for a cover price and that the first to approach would get the lowest price and so on. The OFT notes that Mansell's bid was indeed the third lowest of the bids above Bodill's figure.

IV.1108. In addition, Mansell has admitted on the basis of this document that it is likely that it received a cover price from Bodill. Furthermore, the figure that Bodill recorded on the tender sheet against Mansell was identical to the figure that Mansell submitted for the tender.

IV.1109. In regard to Thomas Long, Bodill's tender sheet records 'T. LONG. D. MANNING. © FROM US' and a figure '£482900'. Bodill confirmed that this shows that it gave a cover price to the company noted. The tender sheet also has the number '①' recorded against Thomas Long to show that Thomas Long was the first party to be given cover by or to request cover from Bodill. Bodill has confirmed that these numbers show the order in which Bodill was approached by other companies for a cover price and that the first to approach would get the lowest price and so on. The OFT notes that Thomas Long's bid was indeed the lowest of the bids above Bodill's figure.

IV.1110. In addition, the contacts list provided by Thomas Vale, which CKT confirmed was used to contact competitors when seeking a cover price, has an entry for Thomas Long with the name Dirk Manning. Thomas Long has confirmed that Richard Manning was a director of Thomas Long at the time of the Infringement. Furthermore, the figure that Bodill recorded on the tender sheet against Thomas Long was identical to the figure that Thomas Long submitted for the tender.

IV.1111. In addition, Thomas Long has admitted engaging in bid rigging activities on this tender, in response to the OFT's letter of 22 March 2007.

IV.1112. The OFT further notes that the tenders submitted by Mansell, Thomas Vale and Thomas Long were all higher than the tender submitted by Bodill, the pattern consistent with cover prices having been provided.

IV.1113. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between Bodill and Mansell, between Bodill and Thomas Vale, and between Bodill and Thomas Long. The OFT also concludes that Bodill supplied figures to each of Mansell, Thomas Vale and Thomas Long for cover bids.

IV.1114. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.1082 to IV.1113 above amount in law to agreements and/or concerted practices contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.³⁶⁶¹ In particular:

- (a) the provision of figures for cover bids from Bodill to each of Mansell, Thomas Vale and Thomas Long was not unilateral³⁶⁶², and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;³⁶⁶³
- (b) Mansell, Thomas Vale and Thomas Long can each be presumed to have taken account of the information received from Bodill (i.e. the respective cover prices) when determining their own conduct in the tendering process,³⁶⁶⁴ and
- (c) Bodill can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from Mansell, Thomas Vale and Thomas Long (i.e. that none of them intended to submit competitive bids) when determining its conduct in the tendering process.³⁶⁶⁵

IV.1115. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that agreements and/or concerted practices were in place between Bodill and Mansell, between Bodill and Thomas Vale, and between Bodill and Thomas Long in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, each of which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the tender for environmental improvements, Pearmain Drive, Nottingham tender deadline 24 November 2000.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.1116. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.1117. Bodill informed the OFT of the bid rigging activities in respect of this tender before the OFT became aware of these activities from any other source. Bodill will therefore receive 100 per cent immunity from the fine that the OFT is imposing in respect of this tender.

IV.1118. In respect of this tender, the OFT became aware of bid rigging activities by virtue of the information provided by leniency party Bodill. Mansell will not therefore receive 100 per cent immunity in respect of this tender. However, in accordance with paragraph VI.386 of Section VI (Enforcement), the OFT is not imposing any financial penalty on Mansell in respect of this Infringement.

IV.1119. In respect of this tender, the OFT became aware of bid rigging activities by virtue of the information provided by leniency party Bodill. Thomas Vale will not therefore receive 100 per cent immunity in respect of this tender. However, Thomas Vale will receive its normal leniency percentage reduction from the fine that the OFT is imposing in respect of this tender.

Infringement 31: New Church Blacker Road – 27 November 2000
Client: Staincross Methodist Church
Parties: Strata (formerly known as Weaver) and Holroyd

IV.1120. On 29 September 2000, Staincross Methodist Church sought tenders for a new build, Methodist Church Hall and Rooms.³⁶⁶⁶ The following seven companies were invited to tender: Saul Construction, George Booth & Sons, Torpoint, Wildgoose, Weaver, Roberts and Holroyd.³⁶⁶⁷ The deadline for receipt of tenders was 12:00 noon on 27 November 2000.³⁶⁶⁸

IV.1121. Staincross Methodist Church received the following tender returns:³⁶⁶⁹

Evidence of agreement and/or concerted practice

Contemporaneous documentary evidence from leniency applicant Strata - Form of Tender

IV.1122. During the OFT's search of Strata's premises a ring binder file marked 'Covers from Jan 2000 to Dec 2001' containing various documents, mostly Form of Tenders and result letters, was found. A Form of Tender found within this file contained the following handwritten entry on the top right hand corner:³⁶⁷⁰

'Holroyd. Andrew Waldren'

IV.1123. The Form of Tender also stated that Strata's figure was £715,479.³⁶⁷¹

Evidence from leniency applicant - Strata

IV.1124. As part of its leniency application, Strata provided to the OFT a list of covers prepared by reference to its contract information sheets, the file 'Covers from Jan 2000 – Dec 2001' and 'contracts in hand' documents. The entry for this tender stated as follows:³⁶⁷²

Date	Project	Strata ref no
27/11/2000	New Church, Mapplewell for Staincross Methodist Church	T154/00

Cover to	Cover from	Company Name	Company Address	Contract Secured
	✓ OFT:BXM/107	Holroyd	Wetherby

IV.1125. Also as part of Strata's leniency application, it provided the OFT with a schedule which the estimator would have used when making contact with other contractors regarding the giving and receiving of cover prices.³⁶⁷³ The schedule contains the entry 'Holroyd, Wetherby, [.....] [C], Andrew Waldren'.³⁶⁷⁴ This confirms that Andrew Waldren of Holroyd was known to the estimators at Strata as someone to contact when seeking a cover price.

IV.1126. Following the issue of the Statement, Strata did not submit any written or oral representations specifically in respect of this Infringement.

Witness evidence from leniency applicant - Strata

IV.1127. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, Strata's past and present employees provided further general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.617 to IV.634 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

Evidence from other companies – Holroyd

IV.1128. The OFT wrote to Holroyd on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that Holroyd had participated in bid rigging on this tender. Holroyd did not respond to this letter and on 8 May 2007 the OFT informed the Managing Director of Holroyd that a failure to respond to the Fast Track letter denoted a rejection. The Managing Director of Holroyd confirmed that Holroyd had rejected the OFT's Fast Track Offer.³⁶⁷⁵

IV.1129. The OFT subsequently wrote to Holroyd's ultimate parent company at the time of this Infringement, Holderness, on 6 November 2007, asking it to comment on Holroyd's response to the OFT's Fast Track Offer, given that the OFT intended to hold Holderness jointly and severally liable for any infringements committed by Holroyd in respect of which the OFT ultimately decided to impose financial penalties. In response to this letter Holderness stated 'the company is unable to comment'.³⁶⁷⁶

IV.1130. Following the issue of the Statement, Holroyd did not submit any written or oral representations.

The OFT's analysis of the evidence and finding

IV.1131. From the evidence presented above, the OFT draws the following conclusions.

IV.1132. Strata and Holroyd each accepted an invitation to tender for this contract.

IV.1133. Both companies submitted a tender. Strata was unable to submit a tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this contract.

IV.1134. Strata's Form of Tender records 'Holroyd, Andrew Waldren' handwritten in the top right hand corner. Strata confirmed that this indicates that it received a cover price from the company and more specifically the individual, if noted as in this case. This Form of Tender was also found in the file marked 'Covers from Jan 2000 to Dec 2001', which Strata confirmed contained documents and records of covers taken.

³⁶⁷⁵ File note of telephone conversation, OFT Document Reference 10412.

³⁶⁷⁶ Response from Holderness, OFT Document Reference 14227.

IV.1135. In addition the OFT notes that the tender submitted by Strata was higher than the tender submitted by Holroyd, the pattern consistent with a cover price having been provided.

IV.1136. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between Strata and Holroyd. The OFT also concludes that Holroyd and more specifically Andrew Waldren of Holroyd supplied a figure to Strata for a cover bid.

IV.1137. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.1122 to IV.1136 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.³⁶⁷⁷ In particular:

- (a) the provision of a figure for a cover bid from Holroyd to Strata was not unilateral³⁶⁷⁸, and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;³⁶⁷⁹
- (b) Strata can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from Holroyd (i.e the cover price) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process;³⁶⁸⁰ and
- (c) Holroyd can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from Strata (i.e. that Strata did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its conduct in the tendering process.³⁶⁸¹

IV.1138. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that an agreement and/or concerted practice was in place between Holroyd and Strata, in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the contract for the new church, Blacker Road, tender deadline 27 November 2000.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.1139. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.1140. In respect of this tender, the OFT became aware of bid rigging activities by virtue of the information obtained during the visit to Strata under section 28 on 6 and 7 July 2005. Strata will not therefore receive 100 per cent immunity in respect of this tender. However, in accordance with paragraph VI.386 of Section VI (Enforcement), the OFT is not imposing any financial penalty on Strata in respect of this infringement.

Infringement 32: Alterations to Reception at King Edward Court, Nottingham – 27 November 2000
Client: Crown Prosecution Service
Parties: Bodill and Thorndyke

IV.1141. On 11 November 2000, the Crown Prosecution Service sought tenders for alterations to reception at King Edward Court, Nottingham. The return date for the tender was 27 November 2000 and four companies were invited to tender: Thorndyke, Bodill, Hill and Abbey Construction (Nottingham) Limited.³⁶⁸²

IV.1142. The Crown Prosecution Service received the following tender returns on 27 November 2000:³⁶⁸³

Company	Time and date tender received	Amount of tender	Awarded the tender
Thorndyke	11:21 am 27 November 2000	£14,970
Bodill	11:35 am 27 November 2000	£16,059	Yes
Hill	No return
Abbey Construction (Nottingham) Limited	Declined on 15 November 2000

Evidence of agreement and/or concerted practice

Contemporaneous documentary evidence from leniency applicant Bodill – tender sheet

IV.1143. In Bodill’s tender sheet for this tender, provided to the OFT as part of its leniency application, under the section headed ‘Tenderers’, the following entries have been made, all of which are handwritten:³⁶⁸⁴

- 1. BODILL
- * 2. THORNDYKE Mr. I THORNDYKE
Tel [...] [C]
- 3. HILLS’

IV.1144. The tender sheet states that Bodill’s submitted price was £16,059.00 and has a © in the top right hand corner.³⁶⁸⁵

IV.1145. Juris Rozentals ('JR'), Chief Estimator at Bodill, kept a diary for 2000 which contains an entry for this tender on 27 November which reads ‘12.00 CPS RECEP. (C)’.³⁶⁸⁶ JR explained in interview with the OFT that when a tender is written in his diary with a 'C' in brackets, ‘It means we’re looking for some help, a cover, a cover price’.³⁶⁸⁷

Evidence from leniency applicant Bodill

IV.1146. As part of its leniency application, Bodill provided a general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.229 to IV.242 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.1147. In particular, Bodill provided to the OFT an analysis of its tender sheets since March 2000 and explained that when a ‘*’ is written against a contractor's name it means that it gave Bodill a cover price.³⁶⁸⁸ In respect of this tender, Bodill confirmed that it received a cover price from Thorndyke³⁶⁸⁹, that it submitted a token tender and that it won this tender.³⁶⁹⁰

IV.1148. Bodill separately confirmed in respect of this tender, via its legal representatives, that it did carry out the job 2566, comprising the reception alterations at King Edward Court, Nottingham, following the submission of the cover price on 27 November 2000. The work was completed by April 2002.³⁶⁹¹

IV.1149. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, Bodill's employees provided further general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.229 to IV.242 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

Evidence from other companies – Thorndyke

IV.1150. The OFT wrote to Pricewaterhouse Coopers LLP, the appointed liquidator for Thorndyke, on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that Thorndyke had participated in bid rigging on this tender. The OFT received no response to that letter, and in a follow-up call Pricewaterhouse Coopers LLP confirmed that they understood that the OFT would treat the absence of a response as a rejection of its offer.³⁶⁹²

IV.1151. Following the issue of the Statement, Thorndyke did not submit any written or oral representations.

The OFT's analysis of the evidence and finding

IV.1153. Bodill and Thorndyke each accepted an invitation to tender for this contract.

IV.1154. Bodill was unable to submit a tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this tender. It appears that Thorndyke completed the estimating process for this contract and that it submitted a tender with the hope of winning the work. This is shown by the fact that it submitted the lowest price.

³⁶⁹¹ File note, OFT Document Reference 14367a.

IV.1155. The OFT notes that although Bodill on this occasion was actually awarded the work, it has admitted that it engaged in bid rigging activity on this tender by submitting a cover price.

IV.1156. In regard to Thorndyke, Bodill's tender sheet records THORNDYKE Mr. / THORNDYKE Tel [.....] [C]*'. It also has a '©' in the top right hand corner. Bodill has confirmed that this shows that it received a cover price from Thorndyke. The OFT considers that this also shows more specifically that Bodill was expecting a telephone call from Thorndyke before the date for submitting its tender, in order to obtain its cover price. Bodill recorded on the tender sheet the figure £16,059.00 as the tender figure and this was the exact figure that Bodill submitted.

IV.1157. Bodill's tender sheet records the name of a Thorndyke estimator, 'Mr. / THORNDYKE', and the telephone number '[.....] [C]'. Company information for Thorndyke shows that the telephone number [...] [C] is Thorndyke's.³⁶⁹³

IV.1158. In addition, JR's diary entry for the tender return date contains a 'C' in brackets against the name of this tender. JR explained in interview that this type of entry meant that Bodill was looking for a cover price.

IV.1159. Although Thorndyke has not admitted engaging in this bid rigging activity, the OFT considers that the contemporaneous evidence from Bodill together with Bodill's admission and explanation of that evidence, demonstrates that Thorndyke did in fact engage in bid rigging activity on this tender.

IV.1160. The OFT notes in addition that Thorndyke's tender figure was the only figure below Bodill's tender figure, and the OFT is therefore satisfied that Bodill could only have received a cover figure from Thorndyke. The OFT also notes that the tender submitted by Bodill was higher than the tender submitted by Thorndyke, a pattern consistent with a cover price having been provided. The client only received two bids for this work, both of which were the subject of bid rigging.

IV.1161. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between Thorndyke and Bodill. The OFT also concludes that Thorndyke supplied a figure to Bodill for a cover bid.

IV.1162. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.1143 to IV.1161 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.³⁶⁹⁴ In particular:

- (a) the provision of a figure for a cover bid from Thorndyke to Bodill was not unilateral³⁶⁹⁵, and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;³⁶⁹⁶
- (b) Bodill can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from Thorndyke (i.e. the cover price) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process;³⁶⁹⁷ and ³⁶⁹³ FAME report, OFT Document Reference 12552, page 15.

³⁶⁹⁴ See paragraphs III.3 and III.89 to III.126 of the Legal Background section.

³⁶⁹⁵ See paragraph IV.73 of the General comments on cover pricing section.

³⁶⁹⁶ See paragraphs III.48 to III.51 and III.93 to III.94 of the Legal Background section.

- (c) Thorndyke can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from Bodill (i.e. that Bodill did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its conduct in the tendering process.³⁶⁹⁸

IV.1163. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that an agreement and/or concerted practice was in place between Bodill and Thorndyke, in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the tender for alterations to reception at King Edward Court, Nottingham, tender deadline 27 November 2000.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.1164. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.1165. In respect of this tender, the OFT became aware of the bid rigging activities by virtue of the information obtained during the visit under section 27 to Bodill on 19 November 2004. Bodill will not therefore receive 100 per cent immunity in respect of this tender. However, in accordance with paragraph VI.386 of Section VI (Enforcement), the OFT is not imposing any financial penalty on Bodill in respect of this Infringement.

IV.1166. In its response to the Statement, Bodill stated that 'so far as Bodill is aware, the OFT had no knowledge of these Alleged Infringements and those contractors who had participated in them until 21 January 2005 and then only as a result of the evidence supplied by Bodill'.³⁶⁹⁹ The OFT first became aware of this tender as a result of the entry in a document obtained during a section 27 visit to Bodill on 19 November 2004³⁷⁰⁰, which gave the OFT reasonable grounds to suspect cover pricing activity in respect of this tender prior to Bodill's leniency application being made. Nevertheless, as stated in paragraph IV.1165 above, the OFT is not imposing any financial penalty on Bodill in respect of this Infringement.

Alleged Infringement 33: Not included in the Decision

Infringement 34: Civic Accommodation, County Hall, Nottingham – 5 December 2000
Client: Nottinghamshire County Council
Parties: Bodill, Loach, Beaufort, K J Bryan

IV.1167. In 10 November 2000, Nottinghamshire County Council ('Nottinghamshire CC') sought tenders for refurbishment work of civic accommodation at County Hall, Nottingham. The return deadline for the tender was 10:00 on Tuesday 5

³⁶⁹⁷ See paragraphs III.58, III.95 to III.96, and III.125 of the Legal Background section.

December 2000 and six companies were invited to tender: Bodill, Beaufort, Loach, K J Bryan, William Woodsend and Robert Woodhead.³⁷⁰¹

IV.1168. Nottinghamshire CC received the following tender returns by 10:00 on 5 December 2000:³⁷⁰²

Company	Date tender received	Time tender received	Amount of tender	Awarded the contract
Robert Woodhead	5 December 2000	10:00	£271,678
Loach	5 December 2000	10:00	£291,703
Bodill	5 December 2000	10:00	£269,347	Yes
William Woodsend	5 December 2000	10:00	£276,600
Beaufort	5 December 2000	10:00	£303,295
K J Bryan	5 December 2000	10:00	£312,173

Evidence of agreement and/or concerted practice

Contemporaneous documentary evidence from Bodill – tender sheet

IV.1169. In Bodill's original tender sheet for the refurbishment of civic accommodation, County Hall, Nottingham, provided to the OFT as part of its leniency application, under the section headed 'Tenderers', the following handwritten entries have been made:³⁷⁰³

- 1. Bodill
 - £291703 2. Loach © from us 1
 - 3. Woodsend
 - £303284 4. Beaufort © from us 2

 - £312173 5. KJ Bryan © from us 3
Will ring us Tues AM
 - 6. ? DLO'

IV.1170. The tender sheet for this tender states that Bodill's tender was £269,347.³⁷⁰⁴

Contemporaneous documentary evidence from Loach – tender spreadsheets

IV.1171. During the OFT's search of Loach's premises, two printed spreadsheets were found. The first spreadsheet³⁷⁰⁵ was headed 'Small Works Tenders' and contained the following entry:

³⁷⁰¹ Information from client, OFT Document Reference 9458.

³⁷⁰² Information from client, OFT Document Reference 9458.

IV.1172. A second, similar but untitled, spreadsheet showed the same entries as those set out above, in the columns headed 'Contract', 'Sum', 'Note' and 'Opposition'.³⁷⁰⁶

Evidence from leniency applicant Bodill

IV.1173. As part of its leniency application, Bodill provided a general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.229 to IV.242 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.1174. In particular, Bodill provided to the OFT an analysis of its tender sheets since March 2000.³⁷⁰⁷ In respect of the tender for civic accommodation, County Hall, Nottingham, Bodill confirmed that it gave cover prices to Loach, Beaufort and K J Bryan.³⁷⁰⁸

IV.1175. Following the issue of the Statement, Bodill did not submit any written or oral representations specifically in respect of this Infringement.

Witness evidence from leniency applicant Bodill

IV.1176. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, Bodill's employees provided further general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.229 to IV.242 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

Evidence from leniency applicant Loach

IV.1177. As part of its leniency application, Loach's legal representatives provided a general explanation of its participation in cover pricing.³⁷⁰⁹ This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.453 to IV.469 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.1178. In its response to the Statement, Loach stated 'Loach took a cover from Bodills on this tender due to a lack of estimating resources and the inability to return the tender for future marketing considerations'³⁷¹⁰ in respect of this Infringement.

Witness evidence from leniency applicant Loach

IV.1179. During an interview conducted on 19 April 2007 in connection with its leniency application, Andrew Arbon-Davies ('AA'), Chief Estimator at Loach at the time of this tender, admitted that Loach took a cover price from Bodill for this tender. When shown the Bodill tender sheet he said, 'I am happy that that means that they've given us a cover. Yes'.³⁷¹¹

Evidence from other companies – Beaufort

IV.1180. During the OFT's visit to Beaufort under section 28 on 29 June 2005, no information was found in relation to this tender. The OFT wrote to Beaufort on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty it might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender in return for an admission that Beaufort had participated in bid rigging on this tender. In response to this letter, Beaufort admitted 'We engaged in bid rigging activities on this tender but cannot recall details of the other party / parties involved'.³⁷¹²

IV.1181. The OFT subsequently wrote to Beaufort's ultimate parent company at the time of this Infringement, Beaufort Holdings, on 5 November 2007, asking it to comment on Beaufort's response to the OFT's Fast Track Offer, given that the OFT intended to hold Beaufort Holdings jointly and severally liable for any infringements committed by Beaufort in respect of which the OFT ultimately decided to impose financial penalties. In response to this letter, Beaufort Holdings' legal representatives Elliott Mather LLP said 'The company confirms that it shall not be making any comments on either its subsidiary, Beaufort Construction (S-IN-A) Limited's response to the reduced penalty offer, nor your proposed actions'.³⁷¹³

IV.1182. In their response to the Statement, Beaufort and Beaufort Holdings confirmed their acceptance of the OFT's Fast Track Offer.³⁷¹⁴

Evidence from other companies – K J Bryan

IV.1183. During the OFT's visit to K J Bryan under section 27 on 19 January 2006, no information was produced in relation to this tender.

IV.1184. The OFT wrote to K J Bryan on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty it might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender in return for an admission that K J Bryan had participated in bid rigging on this tender. In response to this letter, K J Bryan's legal representatives stated 'In view of the lack of physical records to refresh memories and the significant period of time that has passed since the events in question our client's officers and members of staff have difficulty in trying to recollect the circumstances concerning the contracts in question...our client does not feel it appropriate to accept the offer...'.³⁷¹⁵ The OFT notes that

K J Bryan's officers and staff were able to recollect, and respond in respect of, two of the five contracts covered by the OFT's Fast Track Offer.

IV.1185. In its response to the Statement, K J Bryan neither expressly admitted, nor contested its involvement in this Infringement, stating *'There was only a very small and limited number of infringements'*³⁷¹⁶ and 'KJB accepts that the Cover Scheme is illegal... KJB in mitigation submits that it when historically using the Scheme was not aware that it was illegal... and on finding out the scheme was illegal took immediate action to ensure it was not and has not been involved in use of the same again'.³⁷¹⁷ The response further stated that 'Bodill's had already given cover figures to both Loach and Beaufort Construction before on Bodill's own evidence a cover was given to K J Bryan'.³⁷¹⁸

IV.1187. Bodill, Loach, Beaufort and K J Bryan each accepted an invitation to tender for the tender for the refurbishment work of civic accommodation at County Hall, Nottingham.

IV.1188. Bodill completed the estimating process for the tender for this contract. Bodill wanted to win the tender for this contract and submitted a bid with hope of winning the work.

IV.1189. Loach, Beaufort and K J Bryan were unable to submit a tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this contract.

IV.1190. In respect of Loach, Bodill's tender sheet records '© from us' against Loach. Bodill has confirmed that this indicates that it gave the company in question a cover price. The tender sheet also has the number '1' recorded against Loach to indicate that Loach was the first party to be given cover by or to request cover from Bodill. Bodill has confirmed that these numbers indicate the order in which Bodill was approached by other companies for a cover price and that the first to approach would get the lowest price and so on. Furthermore, Bodill recorded on the tender sheet the figure £291,703 against Loach, a figure that was identical to the tender that Loach submitted for the work.

IV.1191. Loach's contemporaneous tender spreadsheets also record the word 'Cover' and a '©' against Bodill. Although Loach has stated generally that this is evidence only that both Loach and Bodill were involved in cover pricing on this tender (i.e. not necessarily with each other), the OFT considers in the light of the contemporaneous evidence from Bodill and Bodill's admission and explanation of that contemporaneous evidence, that the tender spreadsheet from Loach provides corroborating evidence that Bodill supplied Loach with a cover price for this tender. When the specific evidence from Bodill in relation to this tender was put to AA of Loach in interview, he admitted that Loach took a cover from Bodill, as described in paragraph IV.1179 above.

IV.1192. In respect of Beaufort, Bodill's tender sheet records '© from us' against Beaufort. Bodill has confirmed that this indicates that it gave the company in question a cover price. The tender sheet also has the number '2' recorded against Beaufort to indicate that Beaufort was the second party to be given cover by or to request cover from Bodill. Bodill has confirmed that these numbers indicate the order in which Bodill was approached by other companies for a cover price and that the first to approach would get the lowest price and so on. Furthermore, Bodill recorded on the tender sheet the figure £303,284 against Beaufort, a figure that was only £11 different from the tender that Beaufort submitted for the work. Bodill's tender sheet also records the name and telephone number of a Beaufort estimator, providing further evidence that contact was made between the two parties.

IV.1193. Finally, Beaufort admitted engaging in bid rigging activities on this tender, in response to the OFT's letter of 21 March 2007.

IV.1194. In respect of K J Bryan, Bodill's tender sheet records '© from us' against K J Bryan. Bodill has confirmed that this indicates that it gave the company in question a cover price. The tender sheet also has the number '3' recorded against K J Bryan to indicate that K J Bryan was the third party to be given cover by or to request cover from Bodill. Bodill has confirmed that these numbers indicate the order in which Bodill was approached by other companies for a cover price and that the first to approach would get the lowest price and so on. Furthermore, Bodill recorded on the tender sheet the figure £312,173 against K J Bryan, a figure that was identical to the tender that K J Bryan submitted for the work. Bodill's tender sheet also recorded that K J Bryan was due to telephone Bodill on Tuesday morning. The OFT takes this to mean the morning of Tuesday 5 December 2000, the date for return of tenders, and notes that this is consistent with the pattern of cover pricing (with transmission of figures frequently taking place at the last minute).

IV.1195. The OFT considers that the admission by the other parties of engaging in bid rigging activities for this tender, supports the OFT's interpretation of Bodill's tender sheet as indicating that KJ Bryan too was provided with a cover price.

IV.1196. The OFT notes that whilst K J Bryan has not admitted engaging in cover pricing in relation to this specific Infringement, it has accepted that it engaged in cover pricing more generally, and did not put forward any evidence that calls into question the OFT's analysis of the evidence in relation to this Infringement.

IV.1197. The OFT notes in addition that the tenders submitted by Loach, Beaufort and K J Bryan were all higher than the tender submitted by Bodill, a pattern consistent with cover prices having been provided by Bodill.

IV.1198. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between Loach and Bodill, between Beaufort and Bodill, and between K J Bryan and Bodill. The OFT also concludes that Bodill supplied figures to each of Loach, Beaufort and K J Bryan for cover bids

IV.1199. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.1169 to IV.1198 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.³⁷¹⁹ In particular:

³⁷¹⁹ See paragraphs III.3 and III.89 to III.126 of the Legal Background section.

- (a) the provision of figures for cover bids from Bodill to each of Loach, Beaufort and K J Bryan was not unilateral³⁷²⁰, and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;³⁷²¹
- (b) Loach, Beaufort and K J Bryan can each be presumed to have taken account of the information received from Bodill (i.e. the respective cover prices) when determining their own respective conduct in the tendering process;³⁷²² and
- (c) Bodill can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from Loach, Beaufort and K J Bryan (i.e. that none of them intended to submit competitive bids) when determining its conduct in the tendering process.³⁷²³

IV.1200. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that agreements and/or concerted practices were in place between Loach and Bodill, between Beaufort and Bodill, and between K J Bryan and Bodill, in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, each of which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the tender for the refurbishment work of civic accommodation at County Hall, Nottingham, tender deadline 5 December 2000.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.1201. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.1202. Bodill informed the OFT of the bid rigging activities in respect of this tender before the OFT became aware of these activities from any other source. Bodill will therefore receive 100 per cent immunity from the fine that the OFT is imposing in respect of this tender.

IV.1203. In respect of this tender, the OFT became aware of the bid rigging activities by virtue of the information provided by Bodill. Loach will not therefore receive 100 per cent immunity in respect of this tender. However, in accordance with paragraph VI.386 of Section VI (Enforcement), the OFT is not imposing any financial penalty on Loach in respect of this infringement.

Infringement 35: Proposed Extension, Milford Sports Club – 8 December 2000
Client: Allen Todd Architecture
Parties: Strata (formerly known as Weaver) and Caddick

IV.1204. On 18 November 2000, Allen Todd Architecture sought tenders for a new build sports club, pavilion and changing facilities at Milford Sports Club, Kirkstall, Leeds.³⁷²⁴ The following seven companies were invited to tender:

³⁷²⁰ See paragraph IV.73 of the General comments on cover pricing section.

³⁷²¹ See paragraphs III.48 to III.51 and III.93 to III.94 of the Legal Background section.

³⁷²² See paragraphs III.58, III.95 to III.96, and III.125 of the Legal Background section.

Termrim, Irwins, Weaver, C J Ellmore, P S Turner, Clayfield and Caddick.³⁷²⁵
 The deadline for receipt of tenders was 12:00 noon on 8 December 2000.³⁷²⁶

IV.1205. Allen Todd Architects received the following tender returns:³⁷²⁷

Company	Time & Date tender received	Amount of tender	Awarded contract
Termrim	12:00 noon on 8 December 2000	£1,023,540
Irwins	12:00 noon on 8 December 2000	£889,969
Weaver [Strata]	12:00 noon on 8 December 2000	£1,005,726
C J Ellmore	12:00 noon on 8 December 2000	£896,840	Yes
P S Turner	12:00 noon on 8 December 2000	£910,818
Clayfield	12:00 noon on 8 December 2000	£920,223
Caddick	12:00 noon on 8 December 2000	£979,133

Evidence of agreement and/or concerted practice

Contemporaneous documentary evidence from leniency applicant Strata - Form of Tender

IV.1206. During the OFT's search of Strata's premises a ring binder file marked 'Covers from Jan 2000 to Dec 2001' containing various documents – mostly Form of Tenders and result letters – was found. A Form of Tender found within this file contained the following handwritten entry on the top right hand corner:³⁷²⁸

'Caddicks'

IV.1207. The Form of Tender also stated that Strata's figure was £1,005,726.³⁷²⁹

Evidence from leniency applicant Strata

IV.1208. As part of its leniency application, Strata provided to the OFT a list of covers prepared by reference to its contract information sheets, the file 'Covers from Jan 2000 to Dec 2001' and 'contracts in hand' documents. The entry for this tender stated as follows:³⁷³⁰

IV.1209. Following the issue of the Statement, Strata did not submit any written or oral representations specifically in respect of this Infringement.

Witness evidence from leniency applicant - Strata

IV.1210. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, Strata's past and present employees provided further general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.617 to IV.634 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

Evidence from other companies – Caddick

IV.1211. The OFT wrote to Caddick on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that Caddick had participated in bid rigging on this tender. In response to this letter Caddick admitted 'We engaged in bid rigging (cover pricing) activities with this tender but cannot recall details of the other party involved'.³⁷³¹

IV.1212. The OFT subsequently wrote to Caddick's ultimate parent company at the time of this Infringement, Caddick Group, on 5 November 2007, asking it to comment on Caddick's response to the OFT's Fast Track Offer, given that the OFT intended to hold Caddick Group jointly and severally liable for any infringements committed by Caddick in respect of which the OFT ultimately decided to impose financial penalties. In response to this letter Caddick Group stated in a telephone call to the OFT on 6 December 2007 that it had no issues to raise.³⁷³²

IV.1213. In their response to the Statement, Caddick confirmed '...that it provided a cover price [in respect of this tender] because it reacted to a request by Weaver (Strata)'.³⁷³³

The OFT's analysis of the evidence and finding

IV.1214. From the evidence presented above, the OFT draws the following conclusions.

IV.1215. Strata and Caddick each accepted an invitation to tender for this contract.

IV.1216. Both companies submitted a tender. Strata was unable to submit a competitive tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this contract.

IV.1217. Strata's Form of Tender records 'Caddicks', handwritten in the top right hand corner. Strata confirmed that this indicates that it received a cover price from the company noted. This Form of Tender was also found in the file marked 'Covers from Jan 2000 to Dec 2001', which Strata confirmed contained documents and records of covers taken. The OFT considers in the light of the contemporaneous evidence from Strata and Strata's admission and explanation of the contemporaneous evidence that Caddick supplied Strata with a cover price for this tender.

³⁷³³ Written representations of Caddick, 24 June 2008, paragraph 6.4(a)(iii).

- IV.1218. In addition, Caddick has admitted engaging in bid rigging activities on this tender, in response to the OFT's letter of 22 March 2007.
- IV.1219. The OFT further notes that the tender submitted by Strata was higher than the tender submitted by Caddick, the pattern consistent with a cover price having been provided.
- IV.1220. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between Strata and Caddick. The OFT also concludes that Caddick supplied a figure to Strata for a cover bid.
- IV.1221. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.1206 to IV.1220 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.³⁷³⁴ In particular:
- (a) the provision of a figure for a cover bid from Caddick to Strata was not unilateral³⁷³⁵, and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;³⁷³⁶
 - (b) Strata can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from Caddick (i.e the cover price) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process;³⁷³⁷ and
 - (c) Caddick can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from Strata (i.e. that Strata did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its conduct in the tendering process.³⁷³⁸
- IV.1222. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that an agreement and/or concerted practice was in place between Caddick and Strata, in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the tender for a new build sports club, pavilion and changing facilities at Milford Sports Club, Kirkstall, Leeds, tender deadline 8 December 2000.

Immunity and leniency assessment

- IV.1223. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.
- IV.1224. In respect of this tender, the OFT became aware of bid rigging activities by virtue of the information obtained during the visit to Strata under section 28 on 6 and 7 July 2005. Strata will not therefore receive 100 per cent immunity in respect of this tender. However, in accordance with paragraph VI.386 of Section VI (Enforcement), the OFT is not imposing any financial penalty on Strata in respect of this infringement.

Infringement 36: Summerhill Terrace, Birmingham – 8 December 2000
Client: Crosby Homes
Parties: BBCL³⁷³⁹ and Interserve (formerly known as Tilbury Douglas)

IV.1225. On 14 October 2000 Crosby Homes sought tenders for construction of an apartment block, Summerhill Terrace, Birmingham.³⁷⁴⁰ The following five companies were invited to tender: Balfour Beatty³⁷⁴¹, Benson, Tilbury Douglas, Kendrick and Willmott Dixon. The date of tender return was 8 December 2000 at noon.³⁷⁴²

IV.1226. Crosby Homes received the following tender returns:³⁷⁴³

Company	Date tender received	Amount of tender	Awarded contract
Balfour Beatty	8 December 2000	£7,793,329
Kendrick	8 December 2000	£6,745,493
Benson	8 December 2000	£5,903,654	YES
Willmott Dixon	8 December 2000	£7,434,105
Tilbury Douglas [Interserve]	8 December 2000	£7,930,464

IV.1227. Crosby Homes has advised that the work subject of the tender was not carried out as 'tenders were over budget' but that 'a contract was subsequently negotiated for shell & core work with the lowest tenderer'.³⁷⁴⁴

Evidence of agreement and/or concerted practice

Contemporaneous documentary evidence from leniency applicant Balfour Beatty – handwritten notes on Interserve letter

IV.1228. As part of its leniency application, Balfour Beatty's legal representatives provided a letter from Interserve to Stannah Lifts dated 30 October 2000, relating to this tender, on which are handwritten notes including: 'JOHN STOT ESTIMATOR T. DOUGLAS' and 'ASKED FOR AN EXTENSION. NOT KEEN ON PROJECT' and finally 'COVER £7,930,000'.³⁷⁴⁵

Evidence from leniency applicant Balfour Beatty

IV.1229. Balfour Beatty's legal representatives also provided to the OFT a schedule setting out instances of cover pricing uncovered or suspected within BBCL, ³⁷³⁹ Information from client, OFT Document Reference 10045.

³⁷⁴⁰ Information from client, OFT Document Reference 7523.

³⁷⁴¹ The OFT notes that the client's response records 'Balfour Beatty' as tendering for this contract. Although it is possible that the company involved in this Infringement was BBRL, for convenience the OFT generally refers to BBCL throughout the description of this Infringement since this is how the participant company was described by Balfour Beatty in its leniency application. For the avoidance of doubt, therefore, where BBCL appears in the description of this Infringement and the OFT's consequent findings, this should be taken to mean BBRL if it was the participant company. In any event, BBCL and BBRL form part of the same undertaking, and the Party as defined in paragraphs II.133 to II.182 above would therefore be liable for their actions.

where covers were given. In respect of this tender the schedule contains the following entry:³⁷⁴⁶

Internal Ref/Job No	Project name/client	Project type	Submission Date	Tender Value	Firm to whom cover was given
3016 (MP*)	Summer Hill Terrace / Crosby Homes	Design & Build	8/12/00	7,793,329	Tilbury Douglas

Other Bidders of which BBCL was aware	Who won the contract (if known)?	Reasons for seeking cover price (if known)	What information was disclosed other than/in addition to inflated pricing data?
Kendrick Willmott Dixon Benson	Not known	BBCL believes that Tilbury Douglas asked for a time extension and was not keen on the project.	None

IV.1230. It appears that BBCL obtained the names of these other companies competing for this tender ('Other Bidders...' in the above schedule extract) in the course of discussions regarding a possible extension to the tender period (see handwritten notes³⁷⁴⁷ which appear to be a note of such conversations). However the OFT has no evidence to suggest that any of these other companies were involved in bid rigging on this tender.

Witness evidence from leniency applicant Balfour Beatty

IV.1231. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, Balfour Beatty employees and ex-employees provided further general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.189 to IV.203 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.1232. During an interview with the OFT on 30 March 2007, Martyn Etheridge ('ME'), a senior estimator at BBCL, advised what would happen when a competitor asked for a cover price from BBCL as detailed in paragraphs IV.195 to IV.198 above. ME advised that his role was 'to estimate and, and win building contracts for the south-east which includes Birmingham ... as well as the London office'.³⁷⁴⁸ In respect of the letter from Interserve to Stannah Lifts, ME stated '... it's an enquiry letter to Stannah³⁷⁴⁹ Lifts, asking them for a price for providing this for that project. I also sent Stannah Lifts an enquiry for that project for lifts. When I got their quote back ... also contained in there was ... Tilbury Douglas's enquiry letter'.³⁷⁵⁰

IV.1233. In relation to the handwritten notes ME stated 'That's my handwriting. Looking at that, basically what it is, is that, John Stot obviously approached me, and asked for an extension ... of time firstly, and he was not keen on the project, so I just wrote those two notes down. And then, we had problems with it, so I think we asked for an extension. I can't remember if we got an extension or not; I think we most probably did ... and then obviously later on he most probably came back to me and asked me if I could help him out with a price 'cos he wasn't keen on it. And that's the number I most probably gave him'.³⁷⁵¹

IV.1234. The OFT wrote to Interserve on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participating in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that Interserve had participated in bid rigging on this tender. In response to this letter Interserve admitted 'We engaged in bid rigging activities on this tender but cannot recall details of the other party/parties involved. Although a cover was taken, the tender was properly priced and was for a sum in excess of the cover price'.³⁷⁵²

IV.1235. In its response to the Statement, Interserve stated *'In accordance with the terms of the Fast Track Offer, Interserve Group is not proposing to withdraw this admission'*³⁷⁵³ in relation to this Infringement.

The OFT's analysis of the evidence and finding

IV.1237. BBCL and Interserve each accepted an invitation to tender for this contract.

IV.1238. Both companies submitted a tender. Interserve was unable to submit a tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this contract. It appears that BBCL completed the estimating process for this tender and that it submitted a bid with the hope of winning the work.

IV.1239. Handwritten notes on a letter provided by Balfour Beatty's legal representatives for this tender show 'JOHN STOT ESTIMATOR T. DOUGLAS', 'ASKED FOR AN EXTENSION. NOT KEEN ON PROJECT', and 'COVER £7,930,000'. Balfour Beatty confirmed that this shows that it gave a cover price to the company noted of the amount shown. The OFT notes that Interserve's bid was very close to, and higher than, this figure.

IV.1240. In addition, Interserve has admitted engaging in bid rigging activities on this tender, in response to the OFT's letter of 22 March 2007. Interserve stated that it submitted a tender for a sum in excess of the cover price, and this matches the information provided by Crosby Homes and Balfour Beatty. The cover price provided was £7,930,000, while the tender submitted was £7,930,464.

IV.1241. The OFT notes that the tender submitted by Interserve was higher than the tender submitted by BBCL, the pattern consistent with a cover price having been provided. The OFT further notes that Interserve's tender figure was the only one above that of BBCL, and that BBCL could not therefore have provided cover to anyone other than Interserve, for this tender.

IV.1242. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between BBCL and Interserve. The OFT also concludes that BBCL supplied a figure to Interserve for a cover bid.

IV.1243. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.1228 to IV.1242 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.³⁷⁵⁴ In particular:

- (a) the provision of a figure for a cover bid from BBCL to Interserve was not unilateral³⁷⁵⁵, and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;³⁷⁵⁶
- (b) Interserve can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from BBCL (i.e. the cover price) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process;³⁷⁵⁷ and
- (c) BBCL can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from Interserve (i.e. that Interserve did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its conduct in the tendering process.³⁷⁵⁸

IV.1244. In its response to the Statement, Balfour Beatty stated 'The OFT has adduced no evidence that the giving of a cover was taken into account by Balfour Beatty and Mansell when pricing its tenders nor is there any evidence that the giving of a cover had any effect on these parties' pricing of the tender'.³⁷⁵⁹ The OFT notes that the presumption that an undertaking involved in an exchange of information with a competitor and who acts on the market, for example by submitting a tender, is a legal presumption³⁷⁶⁰ and that therefore the OFT is not required to adduce evidence in support of this. The OFT does not consider that Balfour Beatty has rebutted the application of the presumption in this case. An undertaking may 'take account' of the information it receives from a competitor in a number of ways when determining its conduct in relation to this or future tenders, so even if the OFT were to accept Balfour Beatty's assertion that the cover pricing did not affect its actual price submitted (which is not the case), that would be insufficient to demonstrate that the conduct fell short of an agreement and/or concerted practice in breach of the Chapter I prohibition. To the extent that Balfour Beatty submitted that this Infringement should not be treated as serious because no effects have been shown, this point is addressed in step 1 of Section VI (Enforcement).

IV.1245. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that an agreement and/or concerted practice was in place between BBCL and Interserve in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the tender for Summerhill Terrace, Birmingham, tender deadline 8 December 2000.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.1246. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.1247. Balfour Beatty informed the OFT of the bid rigging activities in respect of this tender before the OFT became aware of these activities from any other source. Balfour Beatty will therefore receive 100 per cent immunity from the fine that the OFT is imposing in respect of this tender.

Infringement 37: Extension to Vermuyden School Centenary Road, Goole – 13 December 2000
Client: East Riding of Yorkshire Council
Parties: Strata (formerly known as Weaver) and Lindum Group

IV.1248. On 16 November 2000, East Riding of Yorkshire Council sought tenders for a new science block, Vermuyden School, Goole.³⁷⁶¹ The following seven companies were invited to tender: Hobson & Porter, Weaver, Quibell & Sons (Hull) Ltd, Holroyd, Lindum Group, Robinson & Sawdon and Geo Houlton.³⁷⁶² The deadline for receipt of tenders was 12:00 noon on 13 December 2000.³⁷⁶³

IV.1249. East Riding of Yorkshire Council received the following tender returns:³⁷⁶⁴

Company	Time & Date tender received	Amount of tender	Awarded contract
Hobson & Porter	11:30 am on 13 December 2000	£704,466	Yes
Weaver [Strata]	11:40 am on 13 December 2000	£716,493
Quibell & Sons (Hull) Ltd	11:50 am on 13 December 2000	£725,449
Holroyd	10:28 am on 13 December 2000	£732,529
Lindum Group	11:16 am on 13 December 2000	£743,323
Robinson & Sawdon	11:11 am on 13 December 2000	£776,777
Geo Houlton	11:23 am on 13 December 2000	£807,242

Evidence of agreement and/or concerted practice

Contemporaneous documentary evidence from leniency applicant Strata – Contract Information Sheet (BOB sheet)

IV.1250. During the OFT's search of Strata's premises a contract information sheet, or BOB sheet, was found.³⁷⁶⁵ The BOB sheet contained the following entries typed in the tender results box:³⁷⁶⁶

Evidence from leniency applicant - Strata

IV.1251. As part of its leniency application, Strata provided to the OFT a list of covers prepared by reference to its contract information sheets, the file 'Covers from Jan 2000 – Dec 2001' and 'contracts in hand' documents. This list contained the following entry:³⁷⁶⁷

IV.1252. Following the issue of the Statement, Strata did not submit any written or oral representations specifically in respect of this Infringement.

Witness evidence from leniency applicant - Strata

IV.1253. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, Strata's past and present employees provided further general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.617 to IV.634 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

Evidence from other companies – Lindum Group

IV.1254. The OFT wrote to Lindum Group on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that Lindum Group had participated in bid rigging on this tender. In response to this letter Lindum Group admitted 'We engaged, cannot recall full details'.³⁷⁶⁸

IV.1255. Lindum Group added in a separate annex 'A tender for Lindum Construction, which was neither requested, nor accepted. Our marketing lady, Zoe Johnson, had sent information to them about Lindum in general. We have never worked for East Riding Council, nor wished to, so it was, effectively, a marketing error. It is not our geography and we do not know the construction/supply etc market there. We had not been invited to tender, we just received the tender. The tender should have been quietly returned. However, I understand that we believe we took a cover, using Glenigans as a list for who was tendering. The job was too complicated to square foot in the time and especially so as was Christmas time, when very pressured on jobs. We cannot recall which company that gave the cover to us. We may recall more if we investigated further with Glenigans, which we have not done. YES, COVER RECEIVED, but cannot recall who from'.³⁷⁶⁹

IV.1256. In its response to the Statement, Lindum Group confirmed that it '...does not contest the fact of the infringements [including this Infringement] ... [f]ollowing the OFT's inspections at the premises of the Lindum companies on 26 January 2006, Lindum Group conducted internal investigations into the alleged conduct and admitted to the OFT, so far as possible, infringements of the Chapter I prohibition...'.³⁷⁷⁰

IV.1258. Strata and Lindum Group each accepted an invitation to tender for the contract for a new science block, Vermuyden School, Goole.

IV.1259. Both companies submitted a tender. Strata completed the estimating process for the tender for this contract and submitted a bid with the hope of winning the work.

IV.1260. Lindum Group did not have the time to complete the estimating process and it did not want to win the contract.

IV.1261. Strata's contract information sheet records '6.2117997 LINDUM (C) 761000' typed in the tender results box. Paul Throssell ('PT'), an estimator at Strata confirmed that a '(C)' written next to a competitor's name alongside a figure and a percentage difference shows that Strata gave a cover price to the company noted, as in this case. The OFT considers in the light of the contemporaneous evidence from Strata, PT's explanation of how covers given were recorded and Lindum Group's admission that it received a cover price, that Strata supplied Lindum Group with a cover price for this tender.

IV.1262. In addition the OFT notes that the tender submitted by Lindum Group was higher than the tender submitted by Strata, the pattern consistent with a cover price having been provided. The OFT does not consider it significant that the figure eventually submitted by Lindum Group, £743,323, differs from the amount shown against Lindum Group, £761,000, on Strata's BOB sheet. It is likely that Lindum Group was made aware by Strata of the amount Strata intended to bid, and that Lindum Group selected its own figure for a cover bid that differed from Strata's recommended amount but was still comfortably above Strata's bid.

IV.1263. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between Strata and Lindum Group. The OFT also concludes that Strata supplied a figure to Lindum Group for a cover bid.

³⁷⁷⁰ Written representations of Lindum Group, 27 June 2008, paragraph 3.

IV.1264. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.1250 to IV.1263 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.³⁷⁷¹ In particular:

- (a) the provision of a figure for a cover bid from Strata to Lindum Group was not unilateral³⁷⁷², and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;³⁷⁷³
- (b) Lindum Group can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from Strata (i.e the cover price) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process;³⁷⁷⁴ and
- (c) Strata can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from Lindum Group (i.e. that Lindum Group did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its conduct in the tendering process.³⁷⁷⁵

IV.1265. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that an agreement and/or concerted practice was in place between Lindum Group and Strata, in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the contract for the new science block, Vermuyden School, Goole, tender deadline 13 December 2000.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.1266. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.1267. In respect of this tender, the OFT became aware of bid rigging activities by virtue of the information obtained during the visit to Strata under section 28 on 6 and 7 July 2005. Strata will not therefore receive 100 per cent immunity in respect of this tender. However, in accordance with paragraph VI.386 of Section VI (Enforcement), the OFT is not imposing any financial penalty on Strata in respect of this Infringement.

Infringement 38: Fresh Start Phase 5, River Leen School, Bulwell, Nottingham – 15 December 2000

Client: Nottingham City Council

Parties: Bodill and K J Bryan

IV.1268. In November/December 2000, Nottingham City Council ('NCC') sought tenders for gymnasium, changing room and toilet refurbishment, and the construction of a new ramped area at the River Leen School, Hucknall Lane³⁷⁷⁶, together known as Phase 5. The following six companies were invited to tender: Allenbuild,

Evidence of agreement and/or concerted practice

Contemporaneous documentary evidence from leniency applicant Bodill – tender sheet

IV.1270. Bodill's original tender sheet³⁷⁷⁹ relating to River Leen School, Phase 5, provided to the OFT as part of its leniency application, has under the section headed 'Tenderers', the following entries, all of which are handwritten with the exception of the name 'Bodill'.

1. BODILL
2. T LONG.
3. LOACH.
4. ~~S W DICKINSON~~ SIMONS.
5. K. J. BRYAN © FROM US'

£344138

IV.1271. The tender sheet states that Bodill's submitted figure was £318,218.

IV.1272. David Wraith ('DW'), whose role is to provide estimating support at Bodill, has indicated that the handwritten annotations 'SIMONS', '£344138', and '© FROM US' were made by him.³⁷⁸⁰ DW also confirmed that these annotations were made before Bodill's tender was submitted, as explained in paragraphs IV.233 to IV.234 above.

Evidence from leniency applicant Bodill

IV.1273. As part of its leniency application, Bodill provided a general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.229 to IV.242 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.1274. In particular, Bodill provided to the OFT a 'Tender Analysis Schedule of Covers taken & given [since] March 2000'³⁷⁸¹, which records that Bodill gave out a cover price on this tender. Bodill also provided to the OFT a 'Tender Analysis -

IV.1275. The *'Explanatory Note of Tender Sheet'*³⁷⁸³ provided by Bodill in its leniency application explains notations used on its tender sheets. The '©' and 'FROM US' against a contractor's name show that Bodill supplied that contractor with a cover price. The figure/cover price given is written on the tender sheet against their name.³⁷⁸⁴

IV.1276. Following the issue of the Statement, Bodill did not submit any written or oral representations specifically in respect of this Infringement.

Witness evidence from leniency applicant Bodill

IV.1277. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, Bodill's employees provided further general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.229 to IV.242 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.1287. The OFT wrote to K J Bryan on 22 March 2007, offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that K J Bryan had participated in bid rigging on this tender. In response to this letter, K J Bryan's legal representatives stated 'In view of the lack of physical records to refresh memories and the significant period of time that has passed since the events in question our client's officers and members of staff have difficulty in trying to recollect the circumstances concerning the contracts in question...our client does not feel it appropriate to accept the offer...'.³⁷⁹⁴ The OFT notes that K J Bryan's officers and staff were able to recollect, and respond in respect of, two of the five contracts covered by the OFT's Fast Track Offer.

IV.1288. In its response to the Statement, K J Bryan neither expressly admitted, nor contested its involvement in this Infringement, stating *'There was only a very small and limited number of infringements'*³⁷⁹⁵ and 'KJB accepts that the Cover Scheme is illegal... KJB in mitigation submits that it when historically using the Scheme was not aware that it was illegal... and on finding out the scheme was illegal took immediate action to ensure it was not and has not been involved in use of the same again'.³⁷⁹⁶ The response further stated that 'this is a case where Bodhill's [sic] supplied a tender to KJB – KJB were not the instigator or leader of use of the Cover Scheme and had not knowledge of what other covers have been given'.³⁷⁹⁷

IV.1293. Bodill, [.....] [C] K J Bryan, and [.....] [C] each accepted an invitation to tender for this contract.

³⁷⁹⁹ [...] [C]

- IV.1294. It appears that Bodill [.....] [C] completed the estimating process for this tender and submitted bids with the hope of winning the work.
- IV.1295. K J Bryan [.....] [C] were unable to submit a tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this tender.
- IV.1296. With regard to K J Bryan, Bodill's tender sheet³⁸⁰⁰ records under 'Tenderers' and against K J Bryan '£ 344138 (C) from us'. Bodill has admitted to providing a cover price to K J Bryan for this tender. K J Bryan did submit a price of £344,138.00³⁸⁰¹, a figure identical to that recorded on Bodill's tender sheet. K J Bryan's bid was also higher than Bodill's, a pattern consistent with a cover price having been provided.
- IV.1297. The OFT considers in the light of the contemporaneous evidence and Bodill's admission and explanation of that evidence, that Bodill provided K J Bryan with a cover price for this tender. The OFT notes that whilst K J Bryan has not admitted engaging in cover pricing in relation to this specific Infringement, it has accepted that it engaged in cover pricing more generally, and did not put forward any evidence that calls into question the OFT's analysis of the evidence in relation to this Infringement.
- IV.1298. [...] [C]³⁸⁰²
- IV.1299. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between K J Bryan and Bodill and that Bodill supplied a figure to K J Bryan for a cover bid.
- IV.1300. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.1270 to IV.1299 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.³⁸⁰³ In particular:
- (a) the provision of a figure for a cover bid from Bodill to K J Bryan was not unilateral³⁸⁰⁴, and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;³⁸⁰⁵
 - (b) K J Bryan can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from Bodill (i.e. the cover price) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process;³⁸⁰⁶ and
 - (c) Bodill can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from K J Bryan (i.e. that K J Bryan did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process.³⁸⁰⁷

IV.1301. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that an agreement and/or concerted practice was in place between Bodill and K J Bryan, in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the tender for Phase 5 at the River Leen School, Hucknall Lane, Bulwell, Nottingham, tender deadline 15 December 2000.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.1302. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.1303. Bodill informed the OFT of the bid rigging activities in respect of this tender before the OFT became aware of these activities from any other source. Bodill will therefore receive 100 per cent immunity from the fine that the OFT is imposing in respect of this tender.

Infringement 39: Saxton Gardens Phase 2 – 20 December 2000
Client: Leeds City Council
Parties: Henry Boot, Bullock, Mowlem and G & J Seddon

IV.1304. On 8 November 2000, Leeds City Council sought tenders for Saxton Gardens Phase 2, refurbishment works to 112 flats.³⁸⁰⁸ The following six companies were invited to tender: Bullock, Frank Haslam Milan, G & J Seddon, Henry Boot, Lovell and Mowlem, the date and time of tender return was 20 December 2000 at 12:00 noon.³⁸⁰⁹

IV.1305. Leeds City Council received the following tender returns:³⁸¹⁰

Company	Date tender received	Amount of tender	Awarded contract
Henry Boot	Prior to deadline	£4,103,013	YES

Evidence of agreement and/or concerted practice

Contemporaneous documentary evidence from leniency applicant Henry Boot – ‘Sheet 28’

IV.1306. As part of its leniency application, Henry Boot’s legal representatives provided a ‘Sheet 28’ (tender build-up) for this tender on which, under the section headed ‘Competition’, the following handwritten entries have been made:³⁸¹¹

*‘CARILLION HOUSING
FRANK HASLAM MILAN
SEDDON Ⓢ from HBC 4321874
BULLOCK Ⓢ from HBC 4265641
MOWLEM Ⓢ “ “ 4297416’*

Evidence from leniency applicant Henry Boot

IV.1307. Henry Boot’s legal representatives also provided to the OFT a table headed ‘Overall Schedule for the Main Estimating Department’³⁸¹², which includes this tender. In respect of this tender the table shows comments made by those reviewing the tender documents, which confirm that a cover price was given to Bullock, Mowlem and G & J Seddon, as follows. Ian Bayston (‘IPB’), a Chief Estimator at Henry Boot, stated, ‘I don’t think there’s any doubt about this one: we have clearly given covers to 3 of our competitors – (which competitors - - check the sheet 28 in the estimator’s file). HBC (UK) [Henry Boot] properly priced it though’, while Duncan Abraham (‘DA’), an estimator at Henry Boot, stated, ‘It is clear from the documentation that Seddon, Bullock and Mowlem all took a cover from us on this one. The writing on the file appears to be John Dawson’s’.³⁸¹³

Witness evidence from leniency applicant Henry Boot

IV.1308. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, Henry Boot employees and ex-employees provided general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.363 to IV.374 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.1309. During an interview with the OFT on 23 March 2007, John Dawson (‘JD’), a retired Chief Estimator at Henry Boot, confirmed how he would record when Henry Boot had given a cover as detailed in paragraphs IV.374 above. In relation to this tender JD confirmed that he completed the ‘Sheet 28’ and when asked what ‘Ⓢ’ indicated stated ‘...that indicates that 3 competitors which is very unusual, asked us for help on this job, being Seddon, Bullock and Mowlem’ and ‘the figures that are to the right of it are the figures that obviously I decided to give them once we’d arrived at our figure of 4.10’’.³⁸¹⁴

IV.1310. During an interview with the OFT on 22 March 2007, Michael Mosley (‘MM’), Managing Director of Henry Boot, confirmed that cover was provided to Evidence from leniency applicant Carillion³⁸¹⁶

IV.1311. As part of its leniency application, Carillion's legal representatives advised '[Carillion] is unable to confirm positively whether or not a cover was taken by Mowlem in respect of the Contract. However, it is acknowledged that the document [Henry Boot 'Sheet 28'] and the explanation provided by Henry Boot Construction (UK) Ltd suggest that this was the case and Carillion has no grounds for contradicting that explanation'.³⁸¹⁷

IV.1312. In its response to the Statement, Mowlem stated that it '... does not contest that certain employees (and/or former employees) participated in each of the three Relevant Alleged Infringements nor does it contest its liability...'.³⁸¹⁸

Evidence from other companies – Bullock

IV.1313. The OFT wrote to Bullock on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that Bullock had participated in bid rigging on this tender. In response to this letter Bullock admitted 'We engaged in bid rigging activities on this tender but cannot recall details of the other party/parties involved'.³⁸¹⁹

IV.1314. The OFT subsequently wrote to Bullock's ultimate parent company at the time of this Infringement, Renew, on 6 November 2007, asking it to comment on Bullock's response to the OFT's Fast Track Offer, given that the OFT intended to hold Renew jointly and severally liable for any infringements committed by Bullock in respect of which the OFT ultimately decided to impose financial penalties. In response to this letter Renew stated '... [Renew] is unable to make any comment on the agreements entered into by either company [Allenbuild or Bullock]'.³⁸²⁰

IV.1315. In its response to the Statement, Bullock stated that it '...has admitted its participation in bid rigging activities (i.e. cover pricing) by corroborating the OFT's claims in respect of the tenders listed in the Fast Track Offer...'.³⁸²¹

IV.1316. The OFT wrote to Seddon on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participating in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that Seddon had participated in bid rigging on this tender. In response to this letter, G & J Seddon responded, admitting 'We engaged in bid rigging activities on this

IV.1317. The OFT subsequently wrote again to G & J Seddon's ultimate parent company at the time of this Infringement, Seddon, on 5 November 2007, asking it to comment on G & J Seddon's response to the OFT's Fast Track Offer, given that the OFT intended to hold Seddon jointly and severally liable for any infringements committed by G & J Seddon in respect of which the OFT ultimately decided to impose financial penalties. In response to this letter Seddon said 'We confirm that Seddon Group Limited ("SGL") support and adopt G&J Seddon Limited ("G&JS") acceptance of the reduction of penalty offer and that SGL does not intend to comment upon matters ... or to make any submissions on this case at the present time'.³⁸²⁴

IV.1318. In its response to the Statement, G & J Seddon confirmed in respect of this Infringement that it '... has accepted the OFT's Fast Track Offer and does not contest the OFT's findings of Infringement'.³⁸²⁵

The OFT's analysis of the evidence and finding

IV.1320. Henry Boot, Bullock, Mowlem and G & J Seddon each accepted an invitation to tender for this contract.

IV.1321. All companies submitted a tender. It appears that Henry Boot completed the estimating process for this tender and that it submitted a bid with the hope of winning the work.

IV.1322. Bullock, Mowlem and G & J Seddon were all unable to submit a tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this contract.

IV.1323. In regard to Mowlem, Henry Boot's 'Sheet 28' for this tender records 'MOWLEM... © " " ... 4297416', under the heading 'Competition'. Henry Boot confirmed that this shows that it gave a cover price of the figure shown to the company noted. Furthermore, the figure Henry Boot recorded on the 'Sheet 28' against Mowlem was identical to the figure that Mowlem submitted for the tender.

IV.1324. In addition, Carillion has acknowledged that the facts suggest that it took a cover price from Henry Boot on this tender, and that it has no grounds for contradicting this explanation of the facts.

IV.1325. In regard to Bullock, Henry Boot's 'Sheet 28' for this tender records 'BULLOCK... © from HBC ... 4265641', under the heading 'Competition'. Henry Boot confirmed that this shows that it gave a cover price of the figure shown to the company noted. Furthermore, the figure Henry Boot recorded on the 'Sheet

28' against Bullock was identical to the figure that Bullock submitted for the tender.

IV.1326. In addition, Bullock has admitted engaging in bid rigging activities on this tender, in response to the OFT's letter of 22 March 2007.

IV.1327. In regard to G & J Seddon, Henry Boot's 'Sheet 28' for this tender records 'SEDDON... © from us ... 4321874', under the heading 'Competition'. Henry Boot confirmed that this shows that it gave a cover price of the figure shown to the company noted. Furthermore, the figure Henry Boot recorded on the 'Sheet 28' against G & J Seddon was only £101 less than the figure that G & J Seddon submitted for the tender. The OFT considers that G & J Seddon chose a figure to submit that was close to the cover price provided by Henry Boot.

IV.1328. In addition, G & J Seddon has admitted taking a cover price on this tender, in response to the OFT's letter of 22 March 2007.

IV.1329. The OFT notes in addition that the tenders submitted by Bullock, Mowlem and G & J Seddon were all higher than the tender submitted by Henry Boot, the pattern consistent with cover prices having been provided.

IV.1330. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between Henry Boot and Bullock, between Henry Boot and Mowlem, and between Henry Boot and G & J Seddon. The OFT also concludes that Henry Boot supplied figures to each of Bullock, Mowlem and G & J Seddon for cover bids.

IV.1331. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.1306 to IV.1330 above amount in law to agreements and/or concerted practices contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.³⁸²⁶ In particular:

- (a) the provision of figures for cover bids from Henry Boot to each of Bullock, Mowlem and G & J Seddon was not unilateral³⁸²⁷, and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;³⁸²⁸
- (b) Bullock, Mowlem and G & J Seddon can each be presumed to have taken account of the information received from Henry Boot (i.e. the respective cover prices) when determining their own conduct in the tendering process,³⁸²⁹ and
- (c) Henry Boot can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from each of Bullock, Mowlem and G & J Seddon (i.e. that none of them intended to submit competitive bids) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process.³⁸³⁰

IV.1332. In its response to the Statement, Henry Boot stated in respect of this Infringement that it 'denies that its knowledge of Bullock, Mowlem and G & J Seddon taking cover prices affected its own conduct in the tendering process. Henry Boot calculated its tender price in isolation from its knowledge of the *intentions of other contractors*³⁸³¹ and 'Henry Boot was not aware of the intentions of all the tenderers and Henry Boot genuinely wanted to be awarded this tender, it was clearly in Henry Boot's interests to tender competitively'.³⁸³²

The OFT notes that the presumption that an undertaking involved in an exchange of information with a competitor and who acts on the market, for example by submitting a tender, is a legal presumption³⁸³³ and that therefore the OFT is not required to adduce evidence in support of this. The OFT does not consider that Henry Boot has rebutted the application of the presumption in this case. An undertaking may 'take account' of the information it receives from a competitor in a number of ways when determining its conduct in relation to this or future tenders, so even if the OFT were to accept Henry Boot's assertion that the cover pricing did not affect its actual price submitted (which is not the case), that would be insufficient to demonstrate that the conduct fell short of an agreement and/or concerted practice in breach of the Chapter I prohibition.

IV.1333. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that agreements and/or concerted practices were in place between Henry Boot and Bullock, between Henry Boot and Mowlem, and between Henry Boot and G & J Seddon in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the tender for Saxton Gardens Phase 2, tender deadline 20 December 2000.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.1334. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.1335. Henry Boot informed the OFT of the bid rigging activities in respect of this tender before the OFT became aware of these activities from any other source. Henry Boot will therefore receive 100 per cent immunity from the fine that the OFT is imposing in respect of this tender.

IV.1336. In respect of this tender, the OFT became aware of bid rigging activities by virtue of information provided by leniency party Henry Boot. Mowlem will not therefore receive 100 per cent immunity in respect of this tender. However, Mowlem will receive its normal leniency percentage reduction from the fine that the OFT is imposing in respect of this tender.

Infringement 40: Upgrade of Six Gregory Flats, Phase 4, Kipling Close, Worksop, Notts – 21 December 2000
Client: Bassetlaw District Council
Parties: Bodill and G Hurst³⁸³⁴

IV.1337. On 28 November 2000, Bassetlaw District Council ('Bassetlaw D C') sought tenders for upgrade of six Gregory Flats, Phase 4, Kipling Close, Worksop, Notts. The return date for the tender was 14:15 on 21 December 2000 and thirteen companies were invited to tender: Bassetlaw D C – DLO, Bodill, D J Atkinson Ltd, Baggaley & Jenkins, J J & A R Jackson, G Hurst, Hewitt and Maughan Ltd, JE & WE Odlin, G G Middleton, SHL Ltd, Leronimo Ltd, Beaufort and Connaught.³⁸³⁵

IV.1338. Bassetlaw D C received the following tender returns by 21 December 2000:³⁸³⁶

Company	Date tender received	Time tender received	Amount of tender	Awarded the tender
Bassetlaw D C – DLO	19 December 2000	11:20	£60,812.03	Yes
Bodill	21 December 2000	11:35	£85,269.00
D J Atkinson Ltd	21 December 2000	11:50	£72,672.00
Baggaley & Jenkins	21 December 2000	12:07	£82,785.00
J J & A R Jackson	21 December 2000	13:30	£78,842.00
G Hurst	21 December 2000	13:40	£72,666.00

IV.1339. The seven other companies declined to tender on or by 28 November 2000.

Evidence of agreement and/or concerted practice

Contemporaneous documentary evidence from leniency applicant Bodill – tender sheet

IV.1340. In Bodill's tender sheet for this tender, provided to the OFT as part of its leniency application, under the section headed 'Tenderers', the following entries have been made, all of which are handwritten:³⁸³⁷

1. BODILL
2. JACKSONS
3. B & J
- * 4. G HURST GRAHAM [...] [C]
WILL RING US THURS A.M.'

³⁸³⁴ The information from the client (OFT Document Reference 7142) states that the G Hurst subsidiary tendering for this contract was PDH, which was at the time named G Hurst & Sons (Contractors) Limited. Other than in the subsection 'Evidence from other companies – PDH', references in this Infringement to 'G Hurst' are therefore references to Participant Company PDH.

³⁸³⁵ Information from client, OFT Document Reference 7142.

³⁸³⁶ Information from client, OFT Document Reference 7142.

³⁸³⁷ Leniency application, OFT Document Reference 0524.

IV.1341. The tender sheet for this tender also contains a ringed letter 'C' in the top right hand corner of the tender sheet and at the foot of the sheet it states that Bodill's submitted price was £85,269.00.³⁸³⁸

Evidence from leniency applicant Bodill

IV.1342. As part of its leniency application, Bodill provided a general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.229 to IV.242 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.1343. In particular, Bodill provided to the OFT an analysis of its tender sheets since March 2000.³⁸³⁹ In respect of this tender, Bodill confirmed that it received a cover price from G Hurst³⁸⁴⁰ and that it submitted a 'token tender'.³⁸⁴¹

IV.1344. Following the issue of the Statement, Bodill did not submit any written or oral representations specifically in respect of this Infringement.

Witness evidence from leniency applicant Bodill

IV.1345. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, Bodill's employees provided further general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.229 to IV.242 above and is applicable to this tender.

Evidence from other companies – G Hurst

IV.1346. The OFT wrote to PDH on 27 April 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that PDH had participated in bid rigging on this tender. In response to this letter David Hurst, Managing Director of PDH, in a telephone call on 15 June 2007 confirmed that PDH was rejecting the OFT's Fast Track Offer.³⁸⁴²

IV.1347. The OFT subsequently wrote to PDH's ultimate parent company at the time of this Infringement, G Hurst, on 6 November 2007, asking it to comment on PDH's response to the OFT's Fast Track Offer, given that the OFT intended to hold G Hurst jointly and severally liable for any infringements committed by PDH in respect of which the OFT ultimately decided to impose financial penalties. In response to this letter, G Hurst said it was '...not aware of and do not believe there has been any contravention of the Competition Act 1998 by this Company'.³⁸⁴³

IV.1348. The telephone number set out in Bodill's tender sheet, [.....] [C], was the PDH telephone number, indicating that Bodill contacted PDH in respect of this tender.³⁸⁴⁴

IV.1349. In their responses to the Statement, G Hurst and PDH each stated 'The company believes that this evidence is not conclusive that the G Hurst [sic] cooperated with Bodills' in respect of this Infringement.³⁸⁴⁵ G Hurst and PDH further noted that Graham Rye, the director of PDH with responsibility for estimating and the submission of tenders had not been part of the management structure since 30 April 2004. The companies therefore noted that the current Managing Director was 'unable to defend or comment further on any alleged action of a former Director of the company'.³⁸⁴⁶

IV.1350. The OFT considers that the information as set out in the Statement together with the evidence from the OFT's file provided with the Statement was sufficient for G Hurst and PDH to review their records and/or contact relevant individuals and locate the necessary information for its own defence. It appears that to the extent that G Hurst and PDH are unable to adduce evidence in their defence this results from management changes and/or not having kept records in respect of this tender, rather than the OFT's case being insufficient. However, the absence of documentary records or direct access to witnesses cannot of itself exculpate G Hurst from an Infringement where other evidence is available which the OFT considers implicates it, and indeed is sufficient to substantiate its involvement.

The OFT's analysis of the evidence and finding

IV.1351. From the evidence and arguments presented above, and having taken into account the representations made by the Parties, the OFT draws the following conclusions.

IV.1352. Bodill and G Hurst each accepted an invitation to tender for this contract.

IV.1353. G Hurst completed the estimating process for the tender for this contract and it appears they submitted a bid with the hope of winning the work.

IV.1354. Bodill was unable to submit a tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this tender.

IV.1355. In regard to G Hurst, Bodill's tender sheet records 'G HURST GRAHAM [.....] [C] WILL RING US THURS A.M.' and there is a ringed letter 'C' in the top right hand corner of the tender sheet. Bodill has confirmed that this shows that it received a cover price from G Hurst. Bodill recorded on the tender sheet the figure £85,269.00 as the tender figure and this was the figure that Bodill submitted. Furthermore, the telephone number set out in Bodill's tender sheet, [.....] [C], is the G Hurst telephone number, indicating that Bodill contacted G Hurst in respect of this tender on the Thursday morning, the day that the tender submission was due.

IV.1356. The OFT notes in addition that the tender submitted by Bodill was higher than the tender submitted by G Hurst, a pattern consistent with a cover price having been provided.

³⁸⁴⁶ Written representations of G Hurst & Sons, 27 May 2008, page 3; and written representations of PDH, 27 May 2008, page 3.

IV.1357. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between G Hurst and Bodill. The OFT also concludes that G Hurst supplied a figure to Bodill for a cover bid.

IV.1358. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.1340 to IV.1357 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.³⁸⁴⁷ In particular:

- (a) the provision of a figure for a cover bid from G Hurst to Bodill was not unilateral³⁸⁴⁸, and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;³⁸⁴⁹
- (b) Bodill can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from G Hurst (i.e. the cover price) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process;³⁸⁵⁰ and
- (c) G Hurst can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from Bodill (i.e. that Bodill did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its conduct in the tendering process.³⁸⁵¹

IV.1359. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that an agreement and/or concerted practice was in place between Bodill and G Hurst, in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the tender for upgrade of six Gregory Flats, Phase 4, Kipling Close, Worksop, Notts, tender deadline 21 December 2000.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.1360. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.1361. Bodill informed the OFT of the bid rigging activities in respect of this tender before the OFT became aware of these activities from any other source. Bodill will therefore receive 100 per cent immunity from the fine that the OFT is imposing in respect of this tender.

Evidence from leniency applicant Sol

IV.1366. As part of its leniency application, Sol provided a general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.593 to IV.616 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.1367. In particular, Sol provided the OFT with an analysis of its tender sheets since March 2000. In respect of the tender for the Chilwell T.A. Centre Garage and Workshop, dated 11 January 2001, Sol confirmed that it took a cover price from a 'Ken Orde'³⁸⁵⁶ at Ballast because 'Project too small but a Client we have carried out a number of projects for'.³⁸⁵⁷

IV.1368. In its response to the Statement, Sol confirmed in respect of this Infringement that it '...considers EMRFCA to be a valued and established client. Sol had previously undertaken 4 other jobs for EMRFCA. The Chilwell job carried a value circa £660,000 which Sol, deemed to [sic] small for it. Allowing for inflation this can be shown by the comparison of the value of this job with the previous jobs Sol had carried out for EMRFCA ... Sol did not wish to offend EMRFCA and therefore sought a cover price from Ballast, which was duly provided'.³⁸⁵⁸

IV.1369. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, Sol's employees provided further general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.593 to IV.616 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.1370. When interviewed in connection with this tender, John Cummings ('JC'), Chief Estimator of Sol, identified the handwriting in the Tender Register as his, with the exception of that in the 'Competition' column which he identified as that of estimators' assistant Shirley Peters. He was asked when the entries had been made. He replied, '...when the tender... arrived...when the tender sum, which would have been, you know, a day or half a day before the tender was due ³⁸⁵⁶ The same individual was referred to in John Cummings' interview as Ken Orpe (see paragraph IV.1371). The OFT does not consider this discrepancy to be material and notes that no Party has made representations to the contrary.

³⁸⁵⁸ Written representations of Sol, 27 June 2008, Annex 2, Detailed Explanation, paragraphs 1 and 2.

in'.³⁸⁵⁹ He was asked what 'C' in the 'Estimator' column meant. He replied, 'The 'C' means cover'.³⁸⁶⁰ He was asked to explain what the names in the 'Competition' column denoted. JC said, 'Yeah, they're competitors, yeah. I mean, some of them I'm more familiar with than others. Obviously out here, you know, Conrad Construction, no, it doesn't ring any loud bells but all the others do'.³⁸⁶¹

IV.1371. JC confirmed, 'I had a cover from Ballast Wiltshire'³⁸⁶², and confirmed that this would have been based on his recollection. He said that 'the guy who gave' him the cover price, Ken Orpe, had worked with him for ten years.³⁸⁶³

IV.1372. JC said that the entry 'BALLAST WILTSHIRE BOQ CALLED' would have been made post-tender, when the client requested Ballast's Bill of Quantities.³⁸⁶⁴

IV.1373. In connection with the EBR, JC was asked what the 'C' in the 'Estimator' column meant. He replied, 'Cover'. He was further asked what the 'Tender Value' of '649,982' was. He replied, 'That's the, you know, the cover price I got'.³⁸⁶⁵

Evidence from other companies – Ballast

IV.1374. The OFT wrote to Ballast on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that Ballast had participated in bid rigging on this tender. In response to this letter the OFT received information that Ballast had been dissolved.³⁸⁶⁶

IV.1375. The OFT subsequently wrote to Ballast's ultimate parent company at the time of this Infringement, Ballast Nedam, on 8 November 2007, asking it to comment on the letter sent Ballast on 22 March 2007 in respect of the OFT's Fast Track Offer, given that the OFT intended to hold Ballast Nedam jointly and severally liable for any infringements committed by Ballast in respect of which the OFT ultimately decided to impose financial penalties. In response to this letter Ballast Nedam admitted 'Ballast PLC engaged in bid rigging activities on this tender but Ballast Nedam NV cannot recall details of the other party/parties involved'.³⁸⁶⁷

IV.1376. In its response to the Statement, Ballast Nedam confirmed that this Infringement '...relates to a call for tender for the construction of the Chilwell T.A. Centre. According to the [Statement], Ballast plc gave a cover price to a company called Sol which apparently had indicated that it did not want to win the contract as it considered it to be too small. Ballast plc won the contract

However Ballast Nedam confirmed in its response to the Statement, that it did not have an office in Chilwell (written representations of Ballast Nedam, 26 September 2008, footnote 5).

over four competitors (excluding Sol). There is no indication or suggestion that Ballast plc attempted to give cover prices to the other four participants in the tender. The value of the contract amounted to £617,677'.³⁸⁶⁸ Ballast Nedam's response goes on to make remarks in mitigation '[w]ithout contesting the evidence and facts presented in the SO'.³⁸⁶⁹

IV.1378. Sol and Ballast each accepted an invitation to tender for this contract. It appears that Ballast completed the estimating process for the tender for this contract. This is shown by the fact that it submitted the lowest bid and won the contract.

IV.1379. Sol was unable to submit a tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this contract.

IV.1380. Sol's Tender Register entry for this contract shows that Sol submitted the sum of £649,982 and entered 'C' in the 'Estimator' column of the same document. This indicates that Sol did not appoint an estimator for this tender but instead sought a cover price. Sol has confirmed in its leniency application that it took a cover price from Ballast because the project was too small.

IV.1381. In interview, JC of Sol confirmed that, based upon his recollection, he obtained a cover price from Ken Orpe at Ballast.

IV.1382. Sol's EBR for this tender shows that the figure £649,982 in the 'Tender Sum' column was the same as that recorded in the 'Tender Register'. JC of Sol confirmed in interview that this figure was the cover price he obtained for this tender. There is no entry in the 'Margin' [profits and overheads] column and a 'C' is entered in the 'Estimator' column of the EBR. These indicate that JC reported the figure of £649,982 to Sol's Board as its tender submission price for this tender and that this figure was a cover price. It was, therefore, unnecessary to appoint an estimator to produce any preliminary figures.

IV.1383. The tender figure of £649,982 submitted by Sol is in keeping with a cover price being sufficiently higher than the winning bid to remain credible while also ensuring that the undertaking lost the tender.

IV.1384. The OFT notes that of the companies that submitted bids for this tender, only two submitted bids below Sol's, and that only Ballast's bid was significantly below that of Sol. It is therefore highly unlikely that Sol obtained a cover price from anyone other than Ballast for this tender. The OFT also notes that the only other company below Sol, Dean & Dyball, was not named in Sol's list of companies with whom it engaged in cover pricing.³⁸⁷⁰

IV.1385. The OFT notes that both companies have admitted to engaging in bid rigging in respect of this tender.

³⁸⁶⁸ Written representations of Ballast Nedam, 26 September 2008, paragraph 23.

³⁸⁶⁹ Written representations of Ballast Nedam, 26 September 2008, paragraph 26.

³⁸⁷⁰ Cover Prices – Company and Contact Person, OFT Document Reference 4361.

IV.1386. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between Sol and Ballast. The OFT also concludes that Ballast supplied a figure to Sol for a cover bid.

IV.1387. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.1364 to IV.1386 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.³⁸⁷¹ In particular:

- (a) The provision of a figure for a cover bid from Ballast to Sol was not unilateral³⁸⁷², and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;³⁸⁷³
- (b) Sol can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from Ballast (i.e. the cover price) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process;³⁸⁷⁴ and
- (c) Ballast can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from Sol (i.e. that Sol did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its conduct in the tendering process.³⁸⁷⁵

IV.1388. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that an agreement and/or concerted practice was in place between Ballast and Sol in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the contract for refurbishment work at Chilwell T. A. Centre, Foresters House, Chilwell date of tender 11 January 2001.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.1389. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.1390. Sol did not inform the OFT of the bid rigging activities in respect of this tender before the OFT became aware of these activities during the visit by the OFT under section 27 to Sol's premises on 18 January 2006. Sol will not therefore receive 100 per cent immunity in respect of this tender. However, in accordance with paragraph VI.386 of Section VI (Enforcement), the OFT is not imposing any financial penalty on Sol in respect of this Infringement.

Client: Uxbridge College
Parties: Mansell and Try Accord³⁸⁷⁶

IV.1392. Uxbridge College received the following tender returns:³⁸⁷⁹

Company	Date & time tender received	Amount of tender	Awarded contract
Bickerton Construction Ltd	12 January 2001 before 12:00 noon	£5,004,638
Haymills	12 January 2001 before 12:00 noon	£5,096,995
Leadbitter Construction	12 January 2001 before 12:00 noon	£4,741,000

Try Accord	12 January 2001 before 12:00 noon	£3,837,611	YES

IV.1393. In its response to the Statement, Galliford Try stated 'The tender commenced as a Traditional Tender, and Try Accord actually submitted a tender price of approximately £4,450,000, having given a cover price to Mansell of £4,722,693. The price set out in the SO (£3,837,611) is the contract price, i.e. the price for which Try Accord ultimately agreed to undertake a different scope of work ... Effectively, this was a negotiated contract'.³⁸⁸⁰

Evidence of agreement and/or concerted practice

Contemporaneous documentary evidence from leniency applicant Mansell – tender spreadsheet

IV.1394. As part of its leniency application, Mansell's legal representatives provided Barry Russ's ('BR'), a Mansell managing estimator, workload reports. The 2001 workload report for major projects contained the following entry:³⁸⁸¹

Evidence from leniency applicant Mansell

IV.1395. As part of its leniency application, Mansell's legal representatives provided a general explanation of its part in the process of cover pricing.³⁸⁸² This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.470 to IV.502 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.1396. Mansell's legal representatives also provided to the OFT a table showing information relating to tendering activities in which a calculated competitive bid was not submitted for the Thames Valley Region ('TVR'), which includes this tender. In respect of this tender the table shows that Mansell received a cover price from Try Accord and that this cover price was taken due to 'insufficient tender period: resource' at Mansell.³⁸⁸³

IV.1397. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, BR provided further general explanation of Mansell's participation in cover pricing in the TVR. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.481 to IV.489 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.1398. During an interview with the OFT on 1 May 2007, BR advised how he would record when Mansell had taken a cover as detailed in paragraphs IV.482 to IV.485 above. In relation to this tender BR stated '...that's the company I, I actually received that ... cover from'.³⁸⁸⁴ In its response to the Statement, Mansell clarified that BR's admission was based on the contemporaneous evidence rather than on independent recollection of taking the cover price.³⁸⁸⁵

Evidence from other companies – Galliford Try

IV.1399. The OFT wrote to Galliford Try on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that Galliford Try had participated in bid rigging on this tender. In response to this letter Galliford Try admitted 'We engaged in bid rigging activities on this tender but cannot recall details of the other party / parties involved'.³⁸⁸⁶

IV.1400. In its response to the Statement, Galliford Try stated *'Galliford Try has decided not to withdraw its acceptance of the Fast Track Offer Letter'*³⁸⁸⁷ in respect of this Infringement.

The OFT's analysis of the evidence and finding

IV.1402. Mansell and Try Accord each accepted an invitation to tender for this contract.

IV.1403. Both companies submitted a tender. Mansell was unable to submit a tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this contract. It appears that Try Accord completed the estimating process for this tender and that it submitted a bid with the hope of winning the work. This is shown by the price submitted by Try Accord being the lowest received and the fact that it won the contract.

IV.1404. Mansell's 2001 workload report records '(Try Accord)', in the Remarks column. Mansell confirmed that this shows that it took a cover price from the company noted. In addition, Mansell has confirmed that the lack of figures in the margin and percentage columns would also indicate a cover price had been taken.

IV.1405. In addition, Galliford Try has admitted engaging in bid rigging activities on this tender, in response to the OFT's letter of 22 March 2007.

IV.1406. The OFT further notes that the tender submitted by Mansell was higher than the tender submitted by Try Accord, the pattern consistent with a cover price having been provided.

IV.1407. In addition the OFT notes that Try Accord's tender figure is the only figure below Mansell's tender figure, and the OFT is therefore satisfied that Mansell could only have received a cover figure from Try Accord.

IV.1408. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between Mansell and Try Accord. The OFT also concludes that Try Accord supplied a figure to Mansell for a cover bid.

IV.1409. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.1394 to IV.1408 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.³⁸⁸⁸ In particular:

- (a) the provision of a figure for a cover bid from Try Accord to Mansell was not unilateral³⁸⁸⁹, and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;³⁸⁹⁰
- (b) Mansell can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from Try Accord (i.e. the cover price) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process;³⁸⁹¹ and
- (c) Try Accord can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from Mansell (i.e. that Mansell did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its conduct in the tendering process.³⁸⁹²

IV.1410. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that an agreement and/or concerted practice was in place between Mansell and Try Accord in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the tender for Uxbridge College, Academy Building, tender deadline 12 January 2001.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.1411. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.1412. Mansell informed the OFT of the bid rigging activities in respect of this tender before the OFT became aware of these activities from any other source. Mansell will therefore receive 100 per cent immunity from the fine that the OFT is imposing in respect of this tender.

Evidence of agreement and/or concerted practice

Contemporaneous documentary evidence from leniency applicant Mansell – tender spreadsheet

IV.1415. As part of its leniency application, Mansell's legal representatives provided Barry Russ's ('BR'), a Mansell managing estimator, workload reports. The 2001 workload report for major projects contained the following entry:³⁸⁹⁷

Evidence from leniency applicant Mansell

IV.1416. As part of its leniency application, Mansell's legal representatives provided a general explanation of its part in the process of cover pricing.³⁸⁹⁸ This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.470 to IV.502 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.1417. Mansell's legal representatives also provided to the OFT a table showing information relating to tendering activities in which a calculated competitive bid was not submitted for the Thames Valley Region ('TVR'), which includes this tender. In respect of this tender the table shows that Mansell received a cover price from J J McGinley and that this cover price was taken due to 'insufficient tender period: resource' at Mansell.³⁸⁹⁹

IV.1418. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, BR provided further general explanation of Mansell's participation in cover pricing in the TVR. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.481 to IV.489 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.1419. During an interview with the OFT on 1 May 2007, BR advised how he would record when Mansell had taken a cover as detailed in paragraphs IV.482 to IV.485 above. In relation to this tender, when asked what J J McGinley in brackets indicated, BR stated 'That I would have gone to them [to get a cover price]'.³⁹⁰⁰ BR also stated that J J McGinley 'tend to do that sort of work'.³⁹⁰¹ In its response to the Statement, Mansell clarified that BR's admission was based on the contemporaneous evidence rather than on independent recollection of taking the cover price.³⁹⁰²

Evidence from other companies – J J McGinley

IV.1420. The OFT wrote to [.....] [C] on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that [.....] [C] had participated in bid rigging on this tender. The OFT received a response to this letter from the legal representatives of J J McGinley who in this letter stated that J J McGinley admitted 'We engaged in cover pricing activities on this tender with Mansell'.³⁹⁰³

IV.1421. The OFT subsequently wrote to J J McGinley's ultimate parent company at the time of this Infringement, McGinley Holdings, on 6 November 2007, asking it to comment on J J McGinley's response to the OFT's Fast Track Offer, given that the OFT intended to hold McGinley Holdings jointly and severally liable for any infringements committed by J J McGinley in respect of which the OFT ultimately decided to impose financial penalties. In response to this letter, McGinley Holdings' legal representatives stated 'Our client is not able to

IV.1422. In its response to the Statement, J J McGinley confirmed that *'it appears that [J J] McGinley engaged in cover pricing with Mansell'*³⁹⁰⁵ in respect of this Infringement. Although McGinley Holdings responded to the Statement, it did not make any specific comment with regard to this Infringement, other than to draw attention to 'factual matters' which included that 'Mansell sought from JJM a cover price' and 'Mansell submitted a cover price'.³⁹⁰⁶

IV.1424. Mansell and J J McGinley each accepted an invitation to tender for this contract.

IV.1425. Both companies submitted a tender. Mansell was unable to submit a tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this contract.

IV.1426. Mansell's 2001 workload report records '(JJ McGinley)', in the Remarks column. Mansell confirmed that this shows that it took a cover price from the company noted. In addition, Mansell has confirmed that the lack of figures in the margin and percentage columns would also indicate a cover price had been taken.

IV.1427. In addition, J J McGinley has admitted engaging in bid rigging activities on this tender, in response to the OFT's letter of 22 March 2007.

IV.1428. Both companies have admitted to bid rigging in relation to this tender. The OFT notes that J J McGinley admitted that the party with whom it engaged in bid rigging was Mansell, without being shown the OFT's evidence that Mansell was involved. This provides additional independent corroboration of the OFT's evidence in respect of this tender.

IV.1429. The OFT further notes that the tender submitted by Mansell was higher than the tender submitted by J J McGinley, the pattern consistent with a cover price having been provided.

IV.1430. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between Mansell and J J McGinley. The OFT also concludes that J J McGinley supplied a figure to Mansell for a cover bid.

IV.1431. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.1415 to IV.1430 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.³⁹⁰⁷ In particular:

³⁹⁰⁴ Response from McGinley Holdings, OFT Document Reference 14194.

³⁹⁰⁵ Written representations of J J McGinley, 27 June 2008 paragraph 7.

³⁹⁰⁶ Written representations of McGinley Holdings, 27 June 2008, paragraph 32.

³⁹⁰⁷ See paragraphs III.3 and III.89 to III.126 of the Legal Background section.

- (a) the provision of a figure for a cover bid from J J McGinley to Mansell was not unilateral³⁹⁰⁸, and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;³⁹⁰⁹
- (b) Mansell can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from J J McGinley (i.e. the cover price) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process;³⁹¹⁰ and
- (c) J J McGinley can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from Mansell (i.e. that Mansell did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its conduct in the tendering process.³⁹¹¹

IV.1432. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that an agreement and/or concerted practice was in place between Mansell and J J McGinley in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the tender for Prebendal Estates, Phase 3, 52 housing refurbishments, tender deadline 17 January 2001.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.1433. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.1434. Mansell informed the OFT of the bid rigging activities in respect of this tender before the OFT became aware of these activities from any other source. Mansell will therefore receive 100 per cent immunity from the fine that the OFT is imposing in respect of this tender.

Infringement 44: Hospital Street, Dudley Road – 19 January 2001
Client: The City Hospital NHS Trust
Parties: Thomas Vale and Shaylor

IV.1435. On 20 December 2000, The City Hospital NHS Trust ('City Hospital NHS'), now known as Sandwell and West Birmingham Hospitals NHS Trust, sought tenders for the upgrade of Hospital Street, Dudley Road, Birmingham. The following six companies were invited to tender: Wygar, Shaylor³⁹¹², Mansell, Thomas Vale, G F Tomlinson and Chase Norton.³⁹¹³ The deadline for the receipt of tenders was 12:00 noon on 19 January 2001.

IV.1436. City Hospital NHS received the following tender returns:³⁹¹⁴

Evidence of agreement and/or concerted practice

Contemporaneous documentary evidence from leniency applicant Thomas Vale – Tender Status spreadsheet

IV.1437. As part of its leniency application, Thomas Vale provided a contemporaneous Tender Status spreadsheet, which contained the following entry:³⁹¹⁵

TENDER NO	DIV	CLIENT	DESCRIPTION	Approx £	EST
T4697	BM	The City Hospital NHS Trust	Upgrading of Hospital Street, Dudley Road, Birmingham		AA

CAT	DUE	Tender Figure	Tender Status	Tendering Contractors	Successful Contractor
B	19/01/2001 Noon	303,380		Wygar, Mansell, Kilroe, Shaylor

IV.1438. The Tender Status spreadsheet was maintained at Thomas Vale’s head office by Christopher Keith Trickett (‘CKT’), Chief Estimator at Thomas Vale, who kept a ‘little black book’³⁹¹⁶ of contacts, the use of which is referred to in the general explanation of cover pricing at paragraphs IV.689 to IV.717 above. Within this contact list, there is an entry for Shaylor plus names and a telephone number.³⁹¹⁷

Evidence from leniency applicant Thomas Vale

IV.1439. At Annex 14³⁹¹⁸ of its leniency application, Thomas Vale’s legal representatives compiled a schedule setting out all tenders from 2000 to 2005 in respect of which Thomas Vale had either given or taken a cover price in the West Midlands region. The information on the schedule was based on all available tender and miscellaneous documentation indicating cover prices had been given or received, plus the recollections of staff. At page 53 of the schedule under Annex 14 and within the section for 2000 tenders is the following entry:³⁹¹⁹

Tender No	Date	Client	Comments	Cover Given/Taken	Evidence
T4697	19 January	The City Hospital NHS Trust	Upgrading of Hospital Street, Dudley Road, Birmingham	Taken (Shaylor)	Yes (Tender Spreadsheet)

IV.1440. The Tender Spreadsheet in the last column is the Tender Status spreadsheet referred to in the general explanation of cover pricing at paragraphs IV.689 to IV.717 above.

IV.1441. Thomas Vale also provided to the OFT a schedule listing key competitors with whom Thomas Vale frequently dealt in relation to cover pricing at Annex 5 of its leniency application³⁹²⁰ and Shaylor appears on this list.

IV.1442. Following the issue of the Statement, Thomas Vale did not submit any written or oral representations specifically in respect of this Infringement.

Witness evidence from leniency applicant Thomas Vale

IV.1443. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, Thomas Vale's employees provided further general explanation of its participation in and recording of cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.689 to IV.717 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender. In particular, CKT gave a detailed explanation of the use of the Tender Status spreadsheet to record cover prices from its competitors.

IV.1444. CKT said that the initials 'AA' which appear in the estimator column for this tender were for Anthony (Tony) Allport ('AA')³⁹²¹ and that the letters 'BM', which appear in the column marked 'DIV', stand for Building and Maintenance Division, based at Thomas Vale's head office.³⁹²² CKT said that AA was Building and Maintenance Division's 'main estimator'³⁹²³ until he emigrated to New Zealand in 2004. In interview, CKT referred to the entry in the Tender Status spreadsheet for this tender as follows: 'Well Tony Allport - AA is the estimator, category B is the category which indicated at that time that it probably was a cover. Thomas Vale's figure was £303,380, the tender return date the 19th of January 2001 and Shaylors are highlighted in the box which indicates Shaylors was a cover figure'.³⁹²⁴ CKT confirmed that the Tender Status spreadsheet would have been updated at the time by AA and that Richard Shaylor, director of Shaylor, would have been contacted by Thomas Vale for a cover price.

IV.1445. In its response to the Statement, Shaylor noted that Richard Shaylor could not recall a specific contact from Thomas Vale in relation to this tender and suggested that it was more likely that contact was made with Shaylor's estimator responsible for the tender.³⁹²⁵ This is not significant to the OFT's finding of an infringement and the OFT is not imposing any form of uplift at step 4 of Shaylor's penalty calculation for director involvement for this Infringement. Richard Shaylor was not listed as a director at Companies House at the time of this Infringement.

Evidence from other companies – Shaylor

IV.1446. The OFT wrote to Shaylor on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that Shaylor had participated in bid rigging on this tender. In response, Shaylor wrote to the OFT on 27 April 2007³⁹²⁶ and admitted that it engaged in cover pricing on this tender but 'cannot recall details of the other party/parties involved'. In its response to the OFT's Fast Track Offer, Shaylor stated it had not made admissions where it believed no cover had been given or taken or where there was a lack of information.³⁹²⁷ The OFT infers from this that where an admission was made, Shaylor had some form of information or evidential support for that admission.

IV.1447. In its response to the Statement, Shaylor stated 'Shaylor is not withdrawing any of these admissions or proposing to challenge the evidence in relation to any of the three alleged infringements'.³⁹²⁸

The OFT's analysis of the evidence and finding

IV.1449. Thomas Vale and Shaylor each accepted an invitation to tender for the upgrade to Hospital Street, Dudley Road, Birmingham.

IV.1450. Shaylor completed the estimating process for the tender and it appears that it submitted a bid with the hope of winning the work. This is shown by the price submitted by Shaylor being the lowest received and the fact that it won the contract.

IV.1451. Thomas Vale was unable to submit a tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this contract. Thomas Vale categorised this as a Category B tender, which indicated that this was a cover price.

IV.1452. Thomas Vale's contemporaneous Tender Status spreadsheet, maintained in electronic format by Chief Estimator CKT, records four competitors who were also invited to tender for this contract, namely Wygar, Mansell, Kilroe and Shaylor. Shaylor is marked in bold lettering which Thomas Vale has confirmed shows that a cover price was received from that company and that the spreadsheet would have been updated as soon as the cover price had been arranged. Thomas Vale's bid to the client on the Tender Status spreadsheet is '£303,380.00' which matches the amount recorded by the client City Hospital NHS.

IV.1453. City Hospital NHS also received a tendered amount of £289,346 from Shaylor, which is lower than the amount tendered by Thomas Vale. This fits into the pattern consistent with a cover price having been provided from Shaylor to

³⁹²⁸ Oral representations of Shaylor, 29 July 2008, pages 2 and 3.

Thomas Vale. Shaylor is the only company whose figure is below that of Thomas Vale and so Thomas Vale could only have received cover from Shaylor.

IV.1454. The OFT notes that although four competitors have been recorded on the Tender Status spreadsheet, only one of these is highlighted in bold, i.e. Shaylor. This indicates that a conscious decision was made to differentiate Shaylor from the other known competitors. In addition, the designated estimator for this tender was AA who was said by CKT to be one of those who could be depended upon to update the Tender Status spreadsheet reliably. CKT said that AA was 'quite good at this, to be honest. He was probably the one guy [other than CKT] who did keep it up to date'.³⁹²⁹ CKT added 'he was quite disciplined and able to sort of update it'.³⁹³⁰

IV.1455. Thomas Vale admitted that Shaylor was one of the key competitors with whom it engaged in cover pricing activity. In interview, CKT confirmed that the entry in the Tender Status spreadsheet shows that a cover price had been received by Thomas Vale from Shaylor.

IV.1456. Finally, both parties admit to bid rigging activities on this tender. In response to the OFT's letter of 22 March 2007, Shaylor admitted to giving a cover price on this tender, but did not recall the other party/parties involved.

IV.1457. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between Thomas Vale and Shaylor. The OFT also concludes that Shaylor supplied a figure to Thomas Vale for a cover bid.

IV.1458. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.1437 to IV.1457 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.³⁹³¹ In particular:

- (a) the provision of a figure for a cover bid from Shaylor to Thomas Vale was not unilateral³⁹³², and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;³⁹³³
- (b) Thomas Vale can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from Shaylor (i.e. the cover price) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process;³⁹³⁴ and
- (c) Shaylor can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from Thomas Vale (i.e. that Thomas Vale did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process.³⁹³⁵

IV.1459. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that an agreement and/or concerted practice was in place between Thomas Vale and Shaylor in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the contract for the upgrade to Hospital Street, Dudley Road, Birmingham, tender deadline 19 January 2001.

IV.1465. The tender sheet for this tender states that Bodill's submitted figure was £179,371.³⁹³⁹

IV.1466. Andrew Bodill ('AB'), an estimator at Bodill, priced this tender and therefore, as explained in paragraphs IV.237 to IV.241 above, he made a copy of the original tender sheet. AB's copy tender sheet was also provided to the OFT. The annotations under the section headed 'Tenderers' are identical on both copies, demonstrating that AB's copy is an exact photocopy of the original. AB has indicated that the handwritten annotations '£206092.00p. © Peter Baines [.....] [C]', under the section headed 'Tenderers' were made by him.³⁹⁴⁰ AB also confirmed that these annotations were made before Bodill's tender was submitted, as explained in paragraphs IV.233 to IV.234 above.

Evidence from leniency applicant Bodill

IV.1467. As part of its leniency application, Bodill provided a general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.229 to IV.242 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.1468. In particular, Bodill provided to the OFT an analysis of its tender sheets since March 2000.³⁹⁴¹ In respect of this tender, Bodill confirmed that it gave a cover price to Peter Baines.³⁹⁴²

IV.1469. Following the issue of the Statement, Bodill did not submit any written or oral representations specifically in respect of this Infringement.

Witness evidence from leniency applicant Bodill

IV.1470. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, Bodill's employees provided further general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.229 to IV.242 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

Evidence from other companies – Peter Baines

IV.1471. The OFT wrote to Peter Baines on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that Peter Baines had participated in bid rigging on this tender. In response to this letter, Peter Baines admitted 'We engaged in bid rigging activities on this tender but cannot recall details of the other party involved'.³⁹⁴³

The OFT's analysis of the evidence and finding

IV.1474. Bodill and Peter Baines each accepted an invitation to tender for this contract.

IV.1475. Bodill completed the estimating process for the tender for this contract and they submitted a bid with the hope of winning the work.

IV.1476. Peter Baines were unable to submit a tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this tender.

IV.1477. In regard to Peter Baines, Bodill's tender sheet records '£206092.00p. ©3. Peter Baines [.....] [C]'. Bodill has confirmed that this indicates that it gave the company in question a cover price. Bodill recorded on the tender sheet the figure £206,092 against Peter Baines, a figure that was identical other than the reversal of two of the figures, to the tender price that Peter Baines submitted, which was £206,902. Furthermore, the telephone number set out in Bodill's tender sheet, '[.....] [C]', is a telephone number for Peter Baines³⁹⁴⁵, indicating that Bodill contacted Peter Baines in respect of this tender.

IV.1478. The OFT notes in addition that the tender submitted by Peter Baines was higher than the tender submitted by Bodill, the pattern consistent with a cover price having been provided. Furthermore, the OFT also notes that Peter Baines has admitted to bid rigging in relation to this tender.

IV.1479. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between Peter Baines and Bodill. The OFT also concludes that Bodill supplied a figure to Peter Baines for a cover bid.

IV.1480. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.1464 to IV.1479 above amount in law to an agreement and/or concerted practice contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.³⁹⁴⁶ In particular:

- (a) the provision of a figure for a cover bid from Bodill to Peter Baines was not unilateral³⁹⁴⁷, and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;³⁹⁴⁸
- (b) Peter Baines can be presumed to have taken account of the information received from Bodill (i.e. the cover price) when determining its own conduct in the tendering process;³⁹⁴⁹ and
- (c) Bodill can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from Peter Baines (i.e. that Peter Baines did not intend to submit a competitive bid) when determining its conduct in the tendering process.³⁹⁵⁰

IV.1481. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that an agreement and/or concerted practice was in place between Peter Baines and Bodill, in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the tender for the repair of storm-damaged roofs at Rock City, Talbot Street, Nottingham, tender deadline 19 January 2001.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.1482. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.1483. Bodill informed the OFT of the bid rigging activities in respect of this tender before the OFT became aware of these activities from any other source. Bodill will therefore receive 100 per cent immunity from the fine that the OFT is imposing in respect of this tender.

Infringement 46: New House at Western Terrace, The Park, Nottingham – 22 January 2001
Client: Marsh & Grochowski
Parties: Bodill, G F Tomlinson, North Midland and Robert Woodhead

IV.1484. On 13 December 2000, Marsh & Grochowski sought tenders for a new house at Western Terrace, The Park, Nottingham. The return date for the tender was 22 January 2001 and six companies were invited to tender: William Woodsend, Robert Woodhead, North Midland, Craske, Bodill and G F Tomlinson.³⁹⁵¹

IV.1485. Marsh & Grochowski received the following tender returns on 22 January 2001:³⁹⁵²

Company	Date tender received	Amount of tender	Awarded the tender
William Woodsend	22 January 2001	£329,200
Robert Woodhead	22 January 2001	£324,015
North Midland	22 January 2001	£319,988

Evidence of agreement and/or concerted practice

Contemporaneous documentary evidence from leniency applicant Bodill – tender sheet

IV.1486. In Bodill’s original tender sheet for this tender, provided to the OFT as part of its leniency application, under the section headed ‘Tenderers’, the following entries have been made, all of which are handwritten:³⁹⁵³

IV.1487. The tender sheet states that Bodill's submitted figure was £286,395.³⁹⁵⁴

IV.1488. Juris Rozentals ('JR'), Chief Estimator at Bodill, priced this tender and has indicated that the handwritten annotations '£310400 ① 26 Wks', '£319999 ② 24 Wks NORTH MIDS CONST © FROM US [.....] [C] CHRIS WHEELHOUSE', '£324015 ③ 26 Wks Ben Hunter', '£329107 TBA' and 'CRASKE' under the section headed 'Tenderers' were made by him.³⁹⁵⁵ JR also confirmed that these annotations were made before Bodill's tender was submitted, as explained in paragraphs IV.233 to IV.234 above.

IV.1489. David Wraith ('DW'), whose role is to provide estimating support at Bodill, has indicated that the handwritten annotations '© FROM US Mr. THOMPSON', '© FROM US [.....] [C] BOB JOHNSON' and '©? FROM US' under the section headed 'Tenderers' were made by him.³⁹⁵⁶ DW also confirmed that these annotations were made before Bodill's tender was submitted, as explained in paragraphs IV.233 to IV.234 above.

IV.1490. In its response to the Statement, North Midland suggested that the handwritten notes on the tender sheet were not reliable because they included the name of Frudd, which did not tender for this contract.³⁹⁵⁷ The OFT does not consider this undermines the accuracy of the remainder of the notes on the tender sheet. The OFT considers it entirely possible that Bodill initially recorded a list of companies whom it believed, or had been informed, were tendering for the project. That list subsequently proved not to be entirely accurate, but was still used in the meantime (as the fact that Frudd was not tendering for this contract may not have become apparent to Bodill until after the tender deadline) for annotating those companies which did tender and to whom a cover was provided. The OFT notes that there is no indication on the tender sheet that any contact was made with Frudd, and therefore does not consider that the presence of Frudd's name on the list in any way undermines its conclusions that contact was made with other companies on the tender sheet, as indicated by the annotation '©' on that sheet.

IV.1491. North Midland also suggested that if Chris Wheelhouse ('CW'), North Midland's estimator for this contract, had contacted Bodill for a cover price he would have left his direct number instead of North Midland's switchboard number.³⁹⁵⁸ The OFT does not consider that the fact that Bodill recorded a switchboard number on its tender sheet, rather than CW's direct line telephone number, undermines the OFT's case that CW requested a cover price from Bodill on this tender. Bodill has recorded a contact number for North Midland, which North Midland has itself identified as its switchboard number, and the contemporaneous evidence further notes CW's name, whom North Midland has confirmed was the estimator on this tender. Not leaving a direct telephone number is in no way incompatible with requesting a cover price. CW may have chosen for any number of reasons to leave the switchboard number, or indeed may have not left a number at all such that Bodill had to contact him via the central number.

Evidence from leniency applicant Bodill

IV.1492. As part of its leniency application, Bodill provided a general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.229 to IV.242 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.1493. In particular, Bodill provided to the OFT an analysis of its tender sheets since March 2000.³⁹⁵⁹ In respect of this tender, Bodill confirmed that it gave cover prices to G F Tomlinson, North Midland, Robert Woodhead and William Woodsend.³⁹⁶⁰

IV.1494. Following the issue of the Statement, Bodill did not submit any written or oral representations specifically in respect of this Infringement.

Witness evidence from leniency applicant Bodill

IV.1495. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, Bodill's employees provided further general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.229 to IV.242 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

Evidence from other companies – G F Tomlinson

IV.1496. The OFT wrote to G F Tomlinson on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that G F Tomlinson had participated in bid rigging on this tender. In response to this letter, G F Tomlinson admitted 'We engaged in bid rigging activities on this tender but cannot recall details of the other party/parties involved'.³⁹⁶¹

IV.1497. The OFT subsequently wrote to G F Tomlinson's ultimate parent company at the time of this Infringement, G F Tomlinson Group, on 5 November 2007, asking it to comment on G F Tomlinson's response to the OFT's Fast Track Offer, given that the OFT intended to hold G F Tomlinson Group jointly and severally liable for any infringements committed by G F Tomlinson in respect of which the OFT ultimately decided to impose financial penalties. In response to this letter, G F Tomlinson Group said it did not wish to comment on the response from its subsidiary G F Tomlinson.³⁹⁶²

IV.1498. In their response to the Statement, G F Tomlinson and G F Tomlinson Group stated *'Tomlinson has accepted the OFT's Fast Track Offer and does not contest the OFT's findings of infringement'*³⁹⁶³ in respect of this Infringement.

Evidence from other companies – Robert Woodhead

IV.1499. The OFT wrote to Robert Woodhead on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that Robert Woodhead had participated in bid rigging on this tender. In response to this letter, Robert Woodhead admitted 'We engaged in bid rigging activities on this tender but cannot recall details of the other party/parties involved'.³⁹⁶⁴

IV.1500. The OFT subsequently wrote to Robert Woodhead's ultimate parent company at the time of this Infringement, Woodhead Holdings, on 4 March 2008, asking it to comment on Robert Woodhead's response to the OFT's Fast Track Offer, given that the OFT intended to hold Woodhead Holdings jointly and severally liable for any infringements committed by Robert Woodhead in respect of which the OFT ultimately decided to impose financial penalties. In response to this letter, Woodhead Holdings stated 'Whilst not accepting that Robert Woodhead Holdings Ltd could have any liability in this case, the company is aware of the agreement reached between Robert Woodhead Ltd and the OFT, and would adopt the same position as Robert Woodhead Ltd'.³⁹⁶⁵

IV.1501. In its response to the Statement, Robert Woodhead reiterated its acceptance of the OFT's Fast Track Offer and its admission in respect of this Infringement.³⁹⁶⁶

Evidence from other companies – North Midland

IV.1502. The OFT wrote to North Midland on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that North Midland had participated in bid rigging on this tender. In response to this letter, North Midland said 'NMC [North Midland] bid for this contract. It bid to win and is not aware of the occurrence of any attempted or actual bid rigging or cover pricing in the context of this tender.³⁹⁶⁷

IV.1503. In its response to the Statement, North Midland stated that it submitted a genuine bid for this contract.³⁹⁶⁸ CW, North Midland's estimator for this contract, stated that he recalled preparing a bill of quantities and attending site visits and did not recall taking a cover price on this project.³⁹⁶⁹ North Midland also provided a letter from a subcontractor which recalled that North Midland had contacted it to price one aspect of this contract.³⁹⁷⁰

IV.1504. The OFT has given this evidence full and careful consideration. On balance, however, it remains unpersuaded that this is sufficient to displace the evidence of the contemporaneous documents and witness explanations thereof, which do indicate that a cover price was taken by North Midlands in respect of this tender. The OFT notes that there may be many reasons why a company may start to price a contract but then closer to the submission deadline decide to take a cover. That North Midland began pricing the contract, and contacted a sub-contractor to this end, are not incompatible with it having decided later on that it could not complete the pricing process or that it did not wish to win the contract after all. The OFT does not therefore consider that the evidence from North Midland counters the contemporaneous documents and witness explanations to the effect that a cover was taken.

IV.1505. In its response to the Statement, North Midland suggested that the entry in Bodill's tender sheet '£319999 @ 24 Wks NORTH MIDS CONST @ FROM US [.....] [C] CHRIS WHEELHOUSE' was 'consistent with post tender information exchange'.³⁹⁷¹ The OFT does not consider that this alternative explanation is credible. First, if Bodill was recording the results of the tender the OFT cannot see why it would have noted a price that was different from the price that was actually submitted by North Midland (even if the difference is small), whereas it was common practice when taking a cover price to alter the price received from the competitor before submitting it. Secondly, the alternative explanation of post-tender information exchange does not explain and is seemingly inconsistent with the inclusion of the annotation '@ FROM US'. This is particularly so given that the same annotation is used in connection with two other firms on the tender sheet, both of which have confirmed that they engaged in bid-rigging.³⁹⁷² Thirdly, while North Midland has suggested that 'there is no reason why this information (the contract length of 24 weeks) would be exchanged pre-tender in the context of cover pricing'³⁹⁷³, the OFT notes that on the contrary, it was not uncommon for a contractor to provide contract length at the same time as the cover price to its competitor in order to prevent the taker of the cover price from accidentally winning the contract by submitting the cover price along with a short, attractive contract length – see, for example, Infringements 126, 139 and 239. In summary, North Midland's assertions are not credible when examined alongside the contemporaneous evidence and the witness explanations provided in support.

The OFT's analysis of the evidence and finding

IV.1508. From the evidence and arguments presented above, and having taken into account the representations made by the Parties, the OFT draws the following conclusions.

IV.1509. Bodill, G F Tomlinson, North Midland and Robert Woodhead each accepted an invitation to tender for this contract.

IV.1510. It appears that Bodill completed the estimating process for the tender for this contract and that it submitted a bid with the hope of winning the work.

IV.1511. In regard to G F Tomlinson, Bodill's tender sheet records '£310400 ① TOMLINSON © FROM US Mr. THOMPSON' against G F Tomlinson. Bodill has confirmed that this shows that it gave the company in question a cover price. The tender sheet also has the number ① recorded against G F Tomlinson to show that G F Tomlinson was the first party to be given cover by or to request cover from Bodill. Bodill has confirmed that these numbers show the order in which Bodill was approached by other companies for a cover price and that the first to approach would get the lowest price and so on. The OFT notes that G F Tomlinson submitted a lower tender figure than the second and third companies to be given a cover price, North Midland and Robert Woodhead. Furthermore, Bodill recorded on the tender sheet the figure £310,400 against G F Tomlinson, a figure that was only £83 lower than the tender price that G F Tomlinson submitted for the work.

IV.1512. Bodill's tender sheet also recorded the name of a G F Tomlinson employee, 'Mr. THOMPSON', providing further evidence that contact was made between the two parties. This is corroborated by information obtained from W R Bloodworth, a list of contacts for cover prices, which names 'Brian Thompson [...] [C]' at G F Tomlinson.³⁹⁷⁵

IV.1513. The OFT also notes that both Bodill and G F Tomlinson have admitted to bid rigging in relation to this tender.

IV.1514. In regard to Robert Woodhead, Bodill's tender sheet records '£324015 ③ R. WOODHEAD © FROM US' against Robert Woodhead. Bodill has confirmed that this shows that it gave the company in question a cover price. The tender sheet also has the number ③ recorded against Robert Woodhead to show that Robert Woodhead was the third company to be given cover by or to request cover from Bodill. Bodill has confirmed that these numbers show the order in which Bodill was approached by other companies for a cover price and that the first to approach would get the lowest price and so on. The OFT notes that Robert Woodhead submitted a higher tender figure than the first and second companies to be given a cover price, G F Tomlinson and North Midland. Furthermore, Bodill recorded on the tender sheet the figure £324,015 against Robert Woodhead, a figure that was identical to the tender that Robert Woodhead submitted for the work.

IV.1515. Bodill's tender sheet also recorded the telephone number of '[.....] [C]', against Robert Woodhead providing further evidence that contact was made between the two parties. This is corroborated by company information for Robert Woodhead which lists its telephone number as '[...] [C]'.³⁹⁷⁶

IV.1516. The OFT also notes that both Bodill and Robert Woodhead have admitted to bid rigging in relation to this tender.

IV.1517. In regard to North Midland, Bodill's tender sheet records '£319999 ② NORTH MIDS CONST © FROM US' against North Midland. Bodill has confirmed that this shows that it gave the company in question a cover price. The tender sheet also has the number ② recorded against North Midland to show that North Midland was the second company to be given cover by or to request cover from Bodill. Bodill has confirmed that these numbers show the order in which Bodill was approached by other companies for a cover price and that the first to approach would get the lowest price and so on. The OFT notes that North Midland submitted a higher tender figure than the first company to be given a cover price, G F Tomlinson, and a lower tender figure than the third company to be given a cover price, Robert Woodhead. Furthermore, Bodill recorded on the tender sheet the figure £319999 against North Midland, a figure that was only £11 higher than the tender that North Midland submitted for the work.

IV.1518. This entry in Bodill's tender sheet also records the name 'CHRIS WHEELHOUSE', whom North Midland have confirmed was their estimator for this tender. Bodill's tender sheet also recorded the telephone number of '[...] [C]', against North Midland providing further evidence that contact was made between the two parties. This is corroborated by company information for North Midland which lists its telephone number as '[...] [C]'.³⁹⁷⁷

IV.1519. Although North Midland has not admitted engaging in this bid rigging activity, the OFT considers that the admission by the other parties of engaging in bid rigging activities for this tender, supports the OFT's interpretation of Bodill's tender sheet as indicating that North Midland too was provided with a cover price. Additionally, information obtained from Wildgoose, a list of contacts, names North Midland with the identical telephone contact number to that on Bodill's tender sheet.

IV.1520. The OFT notes in addition that the tenders submitted by G F Tomlinson, North Midland and Robert Woodhead were higher than the tender submitted by Bodill, a pattern consistent with a cover price having been provided.

IV.1521. [...] [C]

IV.1522. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between G F Tomlinson and Bodill, between North Midland and Bodill, and between Robert Woodhead and Bodill. The OFT also concludes that Bodill supplied figures to each of G F Tomlinson, North Midland and Robert Woodhead for cover bids.

IV.1523. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.1486 to IV.1522 above amount in law to agreements and/or concerted practices contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.³⁹⁷⁸ In particular:

- (a) the provision of figures for cover bids from Bodill to each of G F Tomlinson, North Midland and Robert Woodhead was not unilateral³⁹⁷⁹, and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;³⁹⁸⁰
- (b) G F Tomlinson, North Midland and Robert Woodhead can each be presumed to have taken account of the information received from Bodill (i.e. the respective cover prices) when determining their own conduct in the tendering process,³⁹⁸¹ and
- (c) Bodill can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from each of G F Tomlinson, North Midland and Robert Woodhead (i.e. that none of them intended to submit competitive bids) when determining its conduct in the tendering process.³⁹⁸²

IV.1524. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that agreements and/or concerted practices were in place between G F Tomlinson and Bodill, between North Midland and Bodill, and between Robert Woodhead and Bodill, in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, each of which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the tender for a new

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.1525. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.1526. Bodill informed the OFT of the bid rigging activities in respect of this tender before the OFT became aware of these activities from any other source. Bodill will therefore receive 100 per cent immunity from the fine that the OFT is imposing in respect of this tender.

Infringement 47: Environmental Works at Burley Lodge, Leeds – 31 January 2001
Client: Leeds City Council
Parties: Strata (formerly known as Weaver), Ackroyd & Abbott, Ballast and Henry Boot

IV.1527. On 20 December 2000, Leeds City Council sought tenders for environmental works at Burley Lodge, Leeds. The following seven companies were invited to tender: Strata, Frank Haslam Milan, Ackroyd & Abbott, Lovell, Henry Boot, Connaught and Ballast.³⁹⁸³ The deadline for receipt of tenders was 12:00 noon on 31 January 2001.

IV.1528. Leeds City Council received the following tender returns:³⁹⁸⁴

Company	Date tender received	Amount of tender	Awarded contract
Strata	Received before tender deadline	£1,841,751.00
Frank Haslam Milan	Received before tender deadline	£1,613,999.00	Yes

IV.1534. In its response to the Statement, Henry Boot stated *‘Henry Boot accepts the OFT’s description of events’*³⁹⁹⁰ in respect of this Infringement.

Witness evidence from leniency applicant - Strata

IV.1535. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, Strata’s past and present employees provided further general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.617 to IV.634 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

Witness evidence from leniency applicant - Henry Boot

IV.1536. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, Henry Boot’s past and present employees provided further general explanation of its participation in cover pricing. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.363 to IV.374 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.1537. During an interview with the OFT on 22 March 2007, Ian Bayston (‘IB’), Chief Estimator at Henry Boot, explained that he was the estimator allocated the tender.³⁹⁹¹ IB confirmed that although he had no recollection regarding this tender, he accepted that on the basis of the documentary evidence put to him (i.e. the entry on Strata’s BOB sheet and the fact that the figure Strata recorded was the same as the figure Henry Boot submitted), it showed that Strata gave Henry Boot a figure for a cover price for this contract.³⁹⁹² IB stated that either

Evidence from other companies – Ackroyd & Abbott

IV.1540. The OFT wrote to Ackroyd & Abbott on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that Ackroyd & Abbott had participated in bid rigging on this tender. In response to this letter Ackroyd & Abbott did not admit cover pricing in relation to this tender.³⁹⁹⁷ Ackroyd & Abbott stated '*... we have interviewed Peter Horsepool (Chairman and Managing Director), Richard Abbott (Chief Estimator, 1995-2006), John Parkins (Senior Estimator, 2000-2006); and Chris Taylor (Estimator, 2003-2006). We have also reviewed with these individuals the documents that were seized by the OFT during its Section 28 visit. Evidence from other companies – Ballast

IV.1542. The OFT wrote to Ballast on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that Ballast had participated in bid rigging on this tender. In response to this letter the OFT received information that Ballast had been dissolved.⁴⁰⁰⁰

IV.1543. The OFT subsequently wrote to Ballast's ultimate parent company at the time of this Infringement, Ballast Nedam, on 8 November 2007, asking it to comment on the letter sent Ballast on 22 March 2007 in respect of the OFT's Fast Track Offer, given that the OFT intended to hold Ballast Nedam jointly and severally liable for any infringements committed by Ballast in respect of which the OFT ultimately decided to impose financial penalties. In response to this letter Ballast Nedam admitted 'Ballast PLC engaged in bid rigging activities on this tender but Ballast Nedam NV cannot recall details of the other party/parties involved'.⁴⁰⁰¹

IV.1544. In its response to the Statement, Ballast Nedam stated 'According to the SO, Ballast plc received a cover price from a company called Strata along with two other competitors'.⁴⁰⁰² Ballast Nedam's response goes on to make remarks in mitigation '[w]ithout contesting the evidence and facts presented in the SO'.⁴⁰⁰³

IV.1546. Strata, Ackroyd & Abbott, Henry Boot and Ballast each accepted an invitation to tender for environmental works at Burley Lodge, Leeds.

IV.1547. Strata completed the estimating process for the tender for this contract. It appears that Strata wanted to win the tender for this contract and submitted a bid with hope of winning the work.

IV.1548. Ackroyd & Abbott, Ballast and Henry Boot were unable to submit a tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this contract.

IV.1549. In regard to Henry Boot, Strata's BOB sheet records '4.1996092 H BOOT (C) 1919077' typed in the tender results box. DI confirmed that a '(C)' written next to a competitor's name alongside a figure and a percentage difference shows that Strata gave a cover price to the company noted, as in this case. Furthermore, the figure noted on Strata's BOB sheet is the exact figure submitted by Henry Boot. The OFT considers in the light of the contemporaneous evidence from Strata and both Strata's and IB's admissions and explanations of that contemporaneous evidence, that Strata supplied Henry Boot with a cover price for this tender.

IV.1550. In regard to Ballast, Strata's BOB sheet records '5.1085365 BALLAST (C) 1935817' typed in the tender results box. DI confirmed that a '(C)' written next to a competitor's name alongside a figure and a percentage difference shows that Strata gave a cover price to the company noted, as in this case. Furthermore, the figure noted on Strata's BOB sheet is the exact figure submitted by Ballast. The OFT considers in the light of the contemporaneous evidence from Strata and DI's admission and explanation of the contemporaneous evidence, that Strata supplied Ballast with a cover price for this tender.

IV.1551. In regard to Ackroyd & Abbott, Strata's BOB sheet records '7.0115826 A & A (C) 1970866' typed in the tender results box. DI confirmed that a '(C)' written next to a competitor's name alongside a figure and a percentage difference shows that Strata gave a cover price to the company noted, as in this case. Furthermore, the figure noted on Strata's BOB sheet is the exact figure submitted by Ackroyd & Abbott. The OFT considers in the light of the contemporaneous evidence from Strata, and DI's admission and explanation of the contemporaneous evidence, that Strata supplied Ackroyd & Abbott with a cover price for this tender.

IV.1552. The OFT notes that the tenders submitted by Ackroyd & Abbott, Ballast and Henry Boot were higher than the tender submitted by Strata, the pattern consistent with cover prices having been provided.

IV.1553. The OFT notes that all of the Parties have now admitted that they participated in this Infringement.

IV.1554. The OFT therefore concludes that contact took place between Strata and Ackroyd & Abbott, between Strata and Ballast and between Strata and Henry Boot. The OFT also concludes that Strata supplied figures to each of Ackroyd & Abbott, Ballast and Henry Boot for cover bids.

IV.1555. The OFT is satisfied that the facts set out in paragraphs IV.1529 to IV.1554 above amount in law to agreements and/or concerted practices contrary to the Chapter I prohibition.⁴⁰⁰⁴ In particular:

- (a) the provision of figures for cover bids from Strata to each of Ackroyd & Abbott, Ballast and Henry Boot was not unilateral⁴⁰⁰⁵, and contravenes the principle against direct or indirect contact between competitors;⁴⁰⁰⁶
- (b) Ackroyd & Abbott, Ballast and Henry Boot can each be presumed to have taken account of the information received from Strata (i.e. the

- respective cover prices) when determining their own respective conduct in the tendering process;⁴⁰⁰⁷ and
- (c) Strata can be presumed to have taken account of the information it received from Ackroyd & Abbott, Ballast and Henry Boot (i.e. that neither Ackroyd & Abbott, Ballast nor Henry Boot intended to submit a competitive bid) when determining its conduct in the tendering process.⁴⁰⁰⁸

IV.1556. Accordingly, the OFT concludes that the totality of the evidence as set out above establishes that agreements and/or concerted practices were in place between Strata and Ackroyd & Abbott, between Strata and Ballast and between Strata and Henry Boot in breach of the Chapter I prohibition, each of which had the object of bid rigging in relation to the tender for environmental works at Burley Lodge, Leeds, tender deadline 31 January 2001.

Immunity and leniency assessment

IV.1557. As explained in paragraphs II.1475 to II.1476 above, where the OFT would not have been aware of the bid rigging activities in relation to a particular tender but for the information provided by a leniency party, that party shall have 100 per cent immunity from any fine that the OFT may eventually impose in respect of that tender.

IV.1558. In respect of this tender, the OFT became aware of bid rigging activities by virtue of the information obtained during the visit under section 28 on 6 and 7 July 2005. Strata will not therefore receive 100 per cent immunity in respect of this tender. However, in accordance with paragraph VI.386 of Section VI (Enforcement), the OFT is not imposing any financial penalty on Strata in respect of this Infringement.

IV.1559. In addition, as the OFT was already aware of the bid rigging activities by virtue of the information found at Strata, Henry Boot will not receive 100 per cent immunity in respect of this tender. However, Henry Boot will receive its normal leniency percentage reduction from the fine that the OFT is imposing in respect of this tender.

Evidence of agreement and/or concerted practice

Contemporaneous documentary evidence from leniency applicant Mansell – tender summary

IV.1562. As part of its leniency application, Mansell’s legal representatives provided a tender summary sheet for this tender, which shows the tender figure Mansell submitted for this tender ‘395,795’ and at the bottom is handwritten ‘© Ballast Construction £426K’.⁴⁰¹²

Evidence from leniency applicant Mansell

IV.1563. As part of its leniency application, Mansell’s legal representatives provided a general explanation of its part in the process of cover pricing.⁴⁰¹³ This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.470 to IV.502 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.1564. Mansell’s legal representatives also provided to the OFT a table showing information relating to tendering activities in which a calculated competitive bid was not submitted, for the Thames Valley Region (‘TVR’), which includes this tender. In respect of this tender the table shows that Mansell gave a cover price to Ballast.⁴⁰¹⁴

IV.1565. During interviews conducted in connection with its leniency application, Barry Russ (‘BR’), a Mansell managing estimator, provided further general explanation of Mansell’s participation in cover pricing in the TVR. This evidence is set out in paragraphs IV.481 to IV.489 above and is relied upon by the OFT in relation to this tender.

IV.1566. During an interview with the OFT on 1 May 2007, BR advised what would happen when a competitor asked for a cover price from Mansell as detailed in paragraphs IV.486 to IV.488 above. In relation to this tender BR stated ‘... it is our tender adjudication sheet, so you know ... it’s the bid we put in at 395, and by virtue of having this little C in brackets there ... that’s the figure I would have given to Ballast Construction’ and ‘... Ballast would have put in a figure not lower than that, I would suggest ... of 426, so they may have added something to it or rounded it up.⁴⁰¹⁵ In its response to the Statement, Mansell clarified that BR's admission was based on the contemporaneous evidence rather than on independent recollection of taking the cover price.⁴⁰¹⁶

IV.1567. The OFT wrote to Ballast on 22 March 2007 offering this party a 25 per cent reduction of any financial penalty the OFT might impose in respect of its alleged participation in bid rigging on this tender, in return for an admission that Ballast had participated in bid rigging on this tender. In response to this letter the OFT received information that Ballast had been dissolved.⁴⁰¹⁷

IV.1568. The OFT subsequently wrote to Ballast's ultimate parent company at the time of this Infringement, Ballast Nedam, on 8 November 2007, asking it to comment on the letter sent Ballast on 22 March 2007 in respect of the OFT's Fast Track Offer, given that the OFT intended to hold Ballast Nedam jointly and severally liable for any infringements committed by Ballast in respect of which the OFT ultimately decided to impose financial penalties. In response to this letter Ballast Nedam admitted 'Ballast PLC engaged in bid rigging activities on this tender but Ballast Nedam NV cannot recall details of the other party/parties involved'.⁴⁰¹⁸

IV.1569. In its response to the Statement, Ballast Nedam stated 'According to the SO, Ballast plc received a cover price from a company called Mansell for this tender'.⁴⁰¹⁹ Ballast Nedam's response goes on to make remarks in mitigation '[w]ithout contesting the evidence and facts presented in the SO'.⁴⁰²⁰

IV.1571. Mansell and Ballast each accepted an invitation to tender for this contract.

IV.1572. Both companies submitted a tender. Ballast was unable to submit a tender by the return date and/or did not want to win this contract.

IV.1573. Mansell's tender summary for this tender shows '© Ballast Construction £426K'. Mansell confirmed that this shows that it gave a cover price to Ballast. In interview, BR of Mansell confirmed that he would have given a cover price to the company noted of the amount shown. The OFT notes that Ballast's bid was very close to this figure and that it was occasionally the case that a company provided with a rounded cover price (such as £426K) would submit a tender that was less rounded (such as £425,634.00 in this instance) in order to make the tender look more genuine.
